[13] The first member of this sentence is a proverbial expression for the character of a person, who, when he is engaged in a work of importance, allows his attention to be distracted by things foreign to his business.—CAMPBELL.

49 ¶ And John answered and said, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name; and we forbade him, because he followeth not with us.

50 And Jesus said unto him, Forbid him not: [s]for he that is not against us is for us.

51 ¶ And it came to pass, when the time was come that he should be received up, he steadfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem, 52 And [d]sent messengers before his face: and they went, and entered into a village of the Samaritans, to make ready for him.

53 And they did not receive him,[11] because his face was as though he would go to Jerusalem.

54 And when his disciples James and John saw this, they said, Lord, [h]wilt thou that we command [i]fire to come down from heaven, and consume them, even as Elias did?

55 But he turned, and rebuked them, and said, [l]Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of.

56 For the Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them.[12] And they went to another village.

57 ¶ And it came to pass, that, as they went in the way, a certain man said unto him, Lord, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest.

58 And Jesus said unto him, Foxes have holes, and birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head.

59 And he said unto another, Follow me. But he said, Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father.

60 Jesus said unto him, [t]Let the dead bury their dead; [u]but go thou and preach the kingdom of God.

61 And another also said, Lord, I will follow thee: but let me first go bid them farewell which are at home at my house.

62 And Jesus said unto him, No man, having put his hand to the plough,[13] and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God.

AFTER these things the Lord appointed other seventy also,[1] and sent them two and two before his face into every city and place whither he himself would come.

2 Therefore said he unto them, [e]The harvest truly is great, but [f]the labourers are few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth labourers into his harvest.

3 Go your ways: behold, [k]I send you forth as lambs among wolves.

4 Carry neither purse, nor scrip, nor shoes; and salute no man by the way.

him," nor suffer him to bait in their town, though his way lay through it. Observe here, 1. How civil he was to them; "He sent messengers before his face," some of his disciples, that went to take up lodgings, and to know whether he might have leave to accommodate himself and his company among them; for he would not come, to give offence, or if they took any umbrage at the number of his followers. He sent some, to "make ready" for him, not for state, but convenience, and that his coming might be no surprise. 2. How uncivil they were to him. They did not "receive him," would not suffer him to come into their village, but ordered their watch to keep him out. He would have paid for all he bespoke, and been a generous Guest among them, would have done them good, and preached the gospel to them, as he had done some time ago to another city of the Samaritans, John iv. 41. He would have been, if they pleased, the greatest Blessing that ever came to their village, and yet they forbid him entrance. Such treatment his gospel and ministers have often met with. Now the reason was, "because his face was as though he would go to Jerusalem;" they observed, by his motions, that he was steering his course that way. The great controversy between the Jews and the Samaritans was about the place of worship—whether Jerusalem or mount Gerizim near Sychar; see John iv. 20. And so hot was the controversy between them, that the "Jews would have no dealings with the Samaritans," nor they with them, John iv. 9. Yet we may suppose that they did not deny other Jews lodging among them, no not when they went up to the feasts, for if that had been their constant practice, Christ would not have attempted it; and it would have been a great way about for some of the Galileans to go to Jerusalem, any other way than through Samaria. But they were particularly incensed against Christ, who was a celebrated Teacher, for owning and adhering to the temple at Jerusalem, when the priests of that temple were such bitter enemies to him, which, they hoped, would have driven him to come and worship at their temple, and bring that into reputation; but when they saw that he would go forward to Jerusalem, notwithstanding this, they would not show him the common civility, which, probably, they used formerly to show him in his journey thither.

SINFUL EXCUSES.—Ver. 57—62. Observe, 1. The excuse he made; "'Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father.' I have an aged father at home, who cannot live long, and will need me while he does live; let me go and attend to him, until he is dead, and I have performed my last office of love to him, and then I will do any thing." We may here see three temptations, by which we are in danger of being drawn and kept from following Christ; which therefore we should guard against. (1.) We are tempted to rest in a discipleship at large, in which we may be at a loose end, and not to come close, and give up ourselves to be strict and constant. 2. We are tempted to defer the doing of that which we know to be our duty, and to put it off to some other time. When we have got clear of such a care and difficulty, when we have despatched such a business, raised an estate to such a pitch, then we will begin to think of being religious; and so we are cozened of all our time, by being cozened of the present time. (3.) We are tempted to think that our duty to our relations will excuse us from our duty to Christ; it is a plausible excuse indeed, "'Let me go, and bury my father;' let me take care of my family, and provide for my children, and then I will think of serving Christ;" whereas the "kingdom of God and the righteousness thereof" must be sought and minded "in the first place." 2. Christ's answer to it; "'Let the dead bury their dead.' Suppose (which is not likely) that there were none but the dead to bury their dead, or none but those who are themselves aged and dying, who are as good as dead, and fit for no other service, yet thou hast other work to do; 'go though, and preach the kingdom of God.'" Not that Christ would have his followers or his ministers to be unnatural; our religion teaches us to be kind and good in every relation, to show piety at home, and to requite our parents. But we must not make these offices an excuse from our duty to God. If the nearest and dearest relation we have in the world stand in our way to keep us from Christ, it is necessary that we have a zeal that will make us forget "father and mother," as Levi did, Deut. xxxiii. 9. This disciple was called to be a minister, and therefore must not "entangle himself" with the "affairs of this world," 2 Tim. ii. 4. And it is a rule, that, whenever Christ calls to any duty, we must not "consult with flesh and blood," Gal. i. 15, 16. No excuses must be admitted against a present obedience to the call of Christ. Here is another that is willing to follow Christ, but he must have a little time to talk with his friends about it. Observe, 1. His request for a dispensation. He said, "'Lord, I will follow thee;' I design no other, I am determined to do it; but 'let me first go bid them farewell that are at home.'" This seemed reasonable; it was what Elisha desired when Elijah called him, "Let me kiss my father and my mother;" and it was allowed him: but the ministry of the gospel is preferable, and the service of it more urgent than that of the prophets; and therefore here it would not be allowed.—Henry.

CHAP. X. MISSION OF THE SEVENTY DISCIPLES.—Ver. 1. Observe, Their number; they were seventy. As in the choice of twelve apostles Christ had an eye to the twelve patriarchs, the twelve tribes, and the twelve princes of those tribes, so here he seems to have an eye to the "seventy" elders of Israel. So many went up with Moses and Aaron to the mount, and "saw the glory of the God of Israel;" Exod. xxiv. 1, 9, and so many were afterward chosen to be assisting to Moses in the government, in order to which, the Spirit of prophecy came unto them, Numb. xi. 24, 25. The "twelve wells of water,"

5 And into whatsoever house ye enter, first say, Peace be to this house.

6 And if [p]the son of peace[2] be there, your peace shall rest upon it: if not, it shall turn to you again.

7 And in the same house remain, eating and drinking such things as they give: [s]for the labourer is worthy of his hire. Go not from house to house.

8 And into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you, eat such things as are set before you;

9 And heal the sick that are therein; and say unto them, [y]The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you.

10 But into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you not, go your ways out into the streets of the same, and say,

11 Even the very dust of your city, which cleaveth on us, we do wipe off against you: notwithstanding, be ye sure of this, that the kingdom of God is come nigh unto you.

12 But I say unto you, [b]That it shall be more tolerable in that day for Sodom, than for that city.

13 ¶ Woe [c]unto thee, Chorazin! woe unto thee, Bethsaida! [d]for if the mighty works had been done in Tyre and Sidon which have been done in you, they had a great while ago [g]repented, sitting in sackcloth and ashes.

14 But it shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the judgment, than for you.

15 And thou, Capernaum, which art exalted to heaven, shalt be thrust down to hell.

16 He that [m]heareth you, heareth me; and he that despiseth you, despiseth me; and he that despiseth me, despiseth him that sent me.

17 ¶ And the seventy returned again with joy, saying, Lord, even the devils are subject unto us through thy name.[3]

18 And he said unto them, [q]I beheld Satan as lightning fall from heaven.

19 Behold, [r]I give unto you power to tread on serpents and scorpions,[4] and over all the power of the enemy; [s]and nothing shall by any means hurt you.

20 Notwithstanding, [t]in this rejoice not, that the spirits are subject unto you; but rather rejoice, because [u]your names are written in heaven.

21 ¶ In that hour [x]Jesus rejoiced in spirit, and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes: even so, Father; for so it seemed good in thy sight.

22 *All [d]things are delivered to me of my Father: [c]and no man knoweth who the Son is, but the Father; and who the Father is, but the Son, and he to whom the Son will reveal him.

23 ¶ And he turned him unto his disciples, and said privately, [f]Blessed are the eyes which see the things that ye see:

24 For I tell you, That many prophets and kings have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them.

25 ¶ And, behold, a certain lawyer stood up, and tempted him, saying, Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?

26 He said unto him, What is written in the law? how readest thou?

27 And he, answering, said, [l]Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; [m]and thy neighbour as thyself.

28 And he said unto him, Thou hast answered right: [o]this do, and thou shalt live.

29 But he, willing to justify himself, said unto Jesus, [q]And who is my neighbour?

30 And Jesus, answering, said, A certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho,[5] and fell among thieves, which stripped him of his raiment, and wounded him, and departed, leaving him half dead.

31 And [s]by chance there came down a certain priest that way; and when he saw him, he passed by on the other side.

32 And likewise a Levite, when he was at the place, came and looked on him, and passed by on the other side.

33 But a certain Samaritan, as he journeyed, came where he was: and when he saw him, [z]he had compassion on him,

34 And went to him, and [b]bound up his wounds, pouring in oil and wine,[6] and set him on his own beast, and brought him to an inn, and took care of him.

35 And on the morrow, when he departed, he took out two pence,[7] and gave them to the host, and said unto him, Take care of him: and whatsoever thou spendest more, when I come again, I will repay thee.

36 Which now of these three, thinkest thou, was neighbour unto him that fell among the thieves?

37 And he said, [h]He that shewed mercy on him. Then said Jesus unto him, [i]Go, and do thou likewise.

38 ¶ Now it came to pass, as they went, that he entered into a certain village:[8] and a certain woman, named Martha, received him into her house.

39 And she had a sister called Mary, [m]which also sat at Jesus' feet, and heard his word.

40 But Martha was cumbered about much serving, and came to him, and said, Lord, dost and the "seventy palm-trees" that were at Elim, were a figure of the "twelve apostles" and the "seventy disciples," Exod. xv. 27. They were seventy elders of the Jews, that were employed by Ptolemy, king of Egypt, in turning the Old Testament into Greek, whose translation is thence called the Septuagint. The great Sanhedrim consisted of this number. Now, 1. We are glad to find that Christ had so many followers fit to be sent forth; his labour was not altogether in vain, though he met with much opposition. Note, Christ's interest is a growing interest, and his followers, like Israel in Egypt, though afflicted shall multiply. These "seventy," though they did not attend him so closely and constantly as the "twelve" did, yet they were the constant hearers of his doctrine, and witnesses of his miracles, and believed in him. Those three mentioned in the close of the foregoing chapter, might have been of these seventy, if they would have applied themselves in good earnest to their business. These seventy were those whom Peter speaks of as "the men which companied with us all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among us," and were part of the one hundred and twenty there spoken of, Acts i. 15, 21. Many of those that were the companions of the apostles, whom we read of in the Acts and the Epistles, we may suppose, were of these seventy disciples. 2. We are glad to find there was work for so many ministers, hearers for so many preachers: thus the grain of mustard-seed began to grow, and the savour of the leaven to diffuse itself in the meal, in order to the leavening of the whole.—Henry.

PARABLE OF THE GOOD SAMARITAN.—Ver. 30—37. This has generally been called a parable, but it is related as a fact, and probably was so. It is said that a great number of priests and Levites resided at Jericho, who would frequently journey to Jerusalem, and back again; and as the road lay through a desert, it was greatly infested by robbers. Now a certain man, supposed to be a Jew, being on the road to Jericho, fell into the hands of these plunderers, who stripped and wounded him, and left him half-dead. Whilst he lay in this deplorable condition, a priest happened to be going on the road; yet neither natural compassion, nor regard to the duties of religion, induced him to assist his countryman, who lay perishing for want of help: but, either pretending urgent business, or fearing lest he too should fall among the thieves, he passed by on the other side, regardless of his groans and misery. A Levite also, who travelled that way, came indeed and looked on him, but gave him no help. At length a Samaritan in his journey came to the place; and when he saw the poor man's perilous and pitiable case, he forgot his strong national and religious prejudices, as well as the contempt and hatred with which the Jews in general treated the Samaritans. Being moved with compassion, he disregarded the hinderance, trouble, danger, and expense that must be incurred by helping him; he poured the wine and oil, that he carried for his own refreshment, into his bleeding wounds, and bound them up with such linen as he had about him: having then placed him on the beast on which he rode, he conveyed him to an inn; and there took care of him during the night, as his surgeon and nurse, even as if he had been his friend and brother; and on the morrow, when his business required him to depart, he gave the host what money he could spare, and promised to repay him whatever he should further expend in taking care of him. The direct scope of this parable, or narrative, is evidently fixed by the context; it is a beautiful illustration of the law of loving our neighbour as ourselves without regard to nation, party, or any other distinction. The Samaritan alone had acted according to the commandment; and the whole was admirably suited to lead the scribe to understand the subject. Had a Jew been introduced as thus relieving a distressed Samaritan, prejudice might have prevented his cordial approbation: but his feelings were so interested in the case of the Jew, that he could not but allow, that "he who showed mercy on him" was neighbour to him, and fulfilled the duty of that relation. Our Lord then sent him to imitate the Samaritan's conduct; and this conclusion was calculated, by showing him the extent and spirituality of the law, to convince him that he could not in this way obtain eternal life, as well as to direct his subsequent conduct.—Scott.

FAMILY OF BETHANY.—See John chap. xi.

THE ONE THING NEEDFUL.—Ver. 42. Christ reproves Martha, both for the intenseness of her care, thou art "careful and troubled, divided" and "disturbed," by thy care; and for the extensiveness of it, "about 'many things;' thou dost grasp at many enjoyments, and so art troubled at many disappointments. Poor Martha, thou hast many things to fret at, and that puts thee out of humour, whereas less ado would serve." Note, Inordinate care and trouble about many things in this world are a common fault among Christ's disciples; they are very displeasing to Christ, and that for which they often come under the rebukes of Providence. If they fret for no just cause, it is just with him to order something to fret at. That which aggravated the sin and folly of her care was, that "but one thing is needful." It is a low construction which some put upon this, that, whereas Martha was in care to provide "many" dishes of meat, there was occasion but for one: one would be enough. "There is need but of one thing." If we take it so, it furnishes us with a rule of temperance, not to affect varieties and dainties, but to be content to sit down to "one" dish of meat, to "half of one," Prov. xxiii. 1—3. It is a forced construction which some of the ancients put upon it. "But oneness is needful," in opposition to distractions. There is need of "one heart" to attend upon the word, not divided and hurried to and fro, as Martha's was at this time. "The one thing needful" is certainly meant of that which Mary made her choice—"sitting at" Christ's feet,

CHAP. XI.

Christ teacheth to pray, 2. He casteth out a dumb devil, 14. He reproveth the Pharisees, scribes, and lawyers, 37.

AND it came to pass, that, as he was praying in a certain place, when he ceased, one of his disciples said unto him, Lord, [b]teach us to pray, as John also taught his disciples.

2 And he said unto them, When ye pray, say, Our Father, [c]which art in heaven, [d]Hallowed be thy name. [e]Thy kingdom come. [h]Thy will be done, as in heaven, so in earth.

3 [i]Give us *day by day our daily bread.

4 And [k]forgive us our sins; [l]for we also forgive every one that is indebted to us.[1] And [m]lead us not into temptation; [n]but deliver us from evil.

5 And he said unto them, Which of you shall have a friend, and shall go unto him at midnight, and say unto him, Friend, lend me three loaves:

6 For a friend of mine [†]in his journey is come to me, and I have nothing to set before him?

7 And he from within shall answer and say, Trouble me not: the door is now shut, and my children are with me in bed;[2] I cannot rise and give thee.

8 I say unto you, Though he will not rise and give him, because he is his friend, yet because of his importunity he will rise and give him as many as he needeth.

9 And I say unto you, [t]Ask, and it shall be given you; [u]seek, and ye shall find; [x]knock, and it shall be opened unto you.

10 For every one that asketh, receiveth; and he that seeketh, findeth; and to him that knocketh, it shall be opened.

11 If a son shall ask bread of any of you that is a father, will he give him a stone? or if he ask a fish, will he for a fish give him a serpent?

12 Or if he shall ask an egg, will he [‡]offer him a scorpion?[3]

13 If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children; how much more shall your heavenly Father [f]give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him?

14 ¶ And he was casting out a devil, and it was dumb. And it came to pass, when the devil was gone out, the dumb spake; and the people wondered.

15 But some of them said, [h]He casteth out devils through [§]Beelzebub the chief of the devils.

16 And others, tempting him, sought of him a sign from heaven.

17 But he, [k]knowing their thoughts, said unto them, [l]Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation; and a house divided against a house falleth.

18 If Satan also be divided against himself, how shall his kingdom stand? because ye say that I cast out devils through Beelzebub.

19 And if I by Beelzebub cast out devils, [o]by whom do your sons cast them out? therefore [p]shall they be your judges.

20 But if I with [q]the finger of God[4] cast out devils, no doubt [r]the kingdom of God is come upon you.

21 When a strong man armed keepeth his palace, his goods are in peace:

22 But when a stronger than he shall come upon him, and overcome him, he taketh from him all his armour wherein he trusted, and divideth his spoils.

23 He [u]that is not with me is against me; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth.

24 When [x]the unclean spirit is gone out of a man, [y]he walketh through dry places, seeking rest; and finding none, he saith, I will return unto my house whence I came out.

25 And when he cometh, [c]he findeth it swept and garnished.

26 Then goeth he, and taketh to him seven other spirits more wicked than himself; and they enter in, and dwell there; [d]and the last state of that man is worse than the first.

27 ¶ And it came to pass, as he spake these things, a certain woman of the company lifted up her voice, and said unto him, [f]Blessed is the womb[5] that bare thee, and the paps which thou hast sucked.

28 But he said, [g]Yea, rather, blessed are they that hear the word of God, and keep it.

29 ¶ And when the people were gathered thick together, he began to say, [l]This is an evil generation: they seek a sign; and there shall no sign be given it, but the sign of Jonas the prophet.

30 For [l]as Jonas was a sign unto the Ninevites, so shall also the Son of man be to this generation.

31 The [m]queen of the south shall [n]rise up in the judgment with the men of this generation, and condemn them: for she came from the utmost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and, behold, [o]a greater than Solomon is here.[6] to hear his word. She was troubled about "many things," when she should have applied herself to one; godliness unites the heart, which the world had divided.—Henry.

CHAP. XI. Request of the Disciples. Ver. 1. Now, 1. Their request is, "'Lord, teach us to pray;' give us a rule or model by which to go in praying, and put words into our mouths." Note, It becomes the disciples of Christ to apply themselves to him for instruction in prayer. "Lord, teach us to pray," is itself a good prayer, and a very needful one, for it is a hard thing to pray well; and it is Jesus Christ only that can teach us, by his word and Spirit, how to pray. "Lord, teach me what it is to pray; Lord, excite and quicken me to the duty; Lord, direct me what to pray for; Lord, give me praying graces, that I may serve God acceptably in prayer; Lord, teach me to pray in proper words: give me a mouth and wisdom in prayer, that I may speak as I ought; 'teach me what I shall say.'" 2. Their plea is, "'As John also taught his disciples.' He took care to instruct his disciples in this necessary duty, and we would be taught as they were, for we have a better Master than they had." Dr. Lightfoot's notion of this, is, that, whereas the Jews' prayers were generally adorations, and praises of God, and doxologies, John taught his disciples such prayers as were more filled with petitions and requests; for it is said of them that they did make prayers, Luke v. 33. The word signifies such prayers as are properly petitionary. "Now, Lord, teach us those, to be added to those benedictions of the name of God, which we have been accustomed to from our childhood." According to this sense, Christ did there teach them a prayer consisting wholly of petitions, and even omitting the doxology which had been affixed; and the Amen which was usually said in the "giving of thanks," 1 Cor. xiv. 16, and in the Psalms, is added to doxologies only. This disciple needed not to have urged John Baptist's example: Christ was more ready to teach than ever John Baptist was, and particularly taught to pray better than John did, or could, teach his disciples.

Hypocrisy and its Results.—Ver. 24—26. Here we have, 1. The condition of a formal hypocrite, his bright side, and his dark side; his heart still remains the Devil's house, he calls it his own, and he retains his interest in it; and yet, (1.) The "unclean spirit is gone out." He was not driven out by the power of converting grace, there was none of that violence which the kingdom of heaven suffers; but he went out, withdrew for a time, so that the man suspected not to be under the power of Satan as formerly, nor so followed with temptations. Satan is gone, or has "turned himself into an angel of light." 2. The "house is swept" from common pollutions, by a forced confession of sin, as Pharaoh's; a feigned contrition for it, as Ahab's; and a partial reformation, as Herod's. There are those that have "escaped the pollutions of the world," and yet are still under the power of the "god of this world," 2 Pet. ii. 20. The house is swept, but it is not washed; and Christ hath said, "If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me;" the house must be washed, or it is "none of his." Sweeping takes off only the loose dirt, while the sin that besets the sinner, the beloved sin, is untouched. It is swept from the filth that lies open to the eye of the world, but it is not searched and ransacked for secret filthiness, Matt. xxiii. 25. It is swept, but the "leprosy is in the wall," and will be till something more be done. 3. The house is garnished with common gifts and graces. It is not furnished with any true grace, but garnished with the pictures of all graces. Simon Magus was garnished with faith: Balaam with good desires; Herod with respect for John; the Pharisees with many external performances. It is garnished, but is like a "potsherd covered with silver dross," it is all paint and varnish, not real, not lasting. The house is garnished, but the property is not altered; it was never surrendered to Christ, nor inhabited by the Spirit. Let us therefore take heed of resting in that which a man may have, and yet come short. 2. Here is the condition of a final apostate, into whom the devil returns after he had gone out. "Then goes he and takes seven other spirits more wicked than himself;" a certain number for an uncertain, as "seven devils" are said to be cast out of Mary Magdalene: "seven wicked spirits" are opposed to the "seven Spirits of God," Rev. iii. 1; these are said to be more wicked than himself. It seems, even devils are not all alike wicked; probably, the degrees of their wickedness, now that they are fallen, are as the degrees of their holiness were, while they stood. When the devil would do mischief most effectually, he employs those that are more mischievous than himself. These enter in without any difficulty or opposition, they are welcomed, and they dwell there, where they work, there they rule; and the "last state of that man is worse than the first." Note, (1.) Hypocrisy is the high road to apostacy. If the heart remains in the interest of sin and Satan, the shows and shadows will "come to nothing;" those that have not set that right, will not long be steadfast; where secret haunts of sin are kept up under the cloak of a visible profession, conscience is debauched; God is provoked to withdraw his restraining grace, and the close hypocrite commonly proves an open apostate. (2.) The last state of such is "worse than the first," in respect both of sin and punishment. Apostates are usually the worst of men, the most vain and profligate, the most bold and daring.

The Single Eye.—Ver. 34. If this eye of the soul be single, if it see clear, see things as they are, and judge impartially concerning them, if it aim at truth only, and seek it for its own sake, and have not any sinister by-looks and intentions, the [illegible]

32 The men of Nineveh shall rise up in the judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: for they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and, behold, [q]a greater than Jonas is here.

33 No man, when he hath lighted a candle, putteth it in a secret place, neither under [t]a bushel, but on a candlestick, that they which come in may see the light.

34 The [u]light of the body is the eye: therefore when thine eye is single, thy whole body also is full of light; but when thine eye is evil, thy body also is full of darkness.

35 Take [y]heed therefore that the light which is in thee be not darkness.

36 If thy whole body therefore be full of light, having no part dark, the whole shall be full of light, as when *the bright shining of a candle doth give thee light.

37 ¶ And as he spake, a certain Pharisee besought him to dine with him;[7] and he went in, and sat down to meat.

38 And when the Pharisee saw it, [b]he marvelled that he had not first washed before dinner.

39 And the Lord said unto him, [c]Now do ye Pharisees make clean the outside of the cup and the platter; [d]but your inward part is full of ravening and wickedness.

40 Ye fools, [e]did not he that made that which is without make that which is within also?

41 But rather give alms [f]of such things as ye have; and, behold, [g]all things are clean unto you.

42 But woe unto you, Pharisees! for ye tithe mint[8] and rue, and all manner of herbs, [m]and pass over judgment and the love of God: these ought ye to have done, [n]and not to leave the other undone.

43 Woe unto you, Pharisees! for ye love the uppermost seats in the synagogues, and greetings in the markets.

44 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye are as graves which appear not, and the men that walk over them are not aware of them.

45 Then answered one of the lawyers, and said unto him, Master, thus saying thou reproachest us also.

46 And he said, [r]Woe unto you also, ye lawyers! for ye lade men with burdens grievous to be borne, and ye yourselves touch not the burdens with one of your fingers.

47 Woe unto you! for ye build the sepulchres of the prophets, and your fathers killed them.

48 Truly ye bear witness that ye allow the deeds of your fathers: [u]for they indeed killed them, and ye build their sepulchres.

49 Therefore also said [x]the wisdom[9] of God, I will send them prophets and apostles, [z]and some of them they shall slay and persecute;

50 That [a]the blood of all the prophets, which was shed from the foundation of the world, may be required of this generation;

51 From the blood of Abel, unto the blood of Zacharias, which perished between the altar and the temple: verily I say unto you, It shall be required of this generation.

52 Woe unto you, lawyers! [c]for ye have taken away the key of knowledge:[10] ye enter not in yourselves, and them that were entering in ye [‡]hindered.

53 And as he said these things unto them, the scribes and the Pharisees began [f]to urge him vehemently, and to provoke him to speak of many things;

54 Laying wait for him, and seeking to catch something out of his mouth, that they might accuse him.

CHAP. XII.

To avoid hypocrisy and fearfulness in publishing Christ's doctrine, 1. To beware of covetousness, 13, and overcarefulness, 22. The faithful and wise steward, 41.

IN the mean time, when there were gathered together an innumerable multitude of people, insomuch that they trode one upon another, he began to say unto his disciples first of all, [d]Beware ye of the leaven of the Pharisees, which is hypocrisy.

2 For [f]there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed; neither hid, that shall not be known.

3 Therefore, [g]whatsoever ye have spoken in darkness shall be heard in the light; and that which ye have spoken in the ear in closets shall be proclaimed upon the house-tops.

4 And I say unto you, my friends, [k]Be not afraid of them that kill the body, and after that have no more that they can do.

5 But I will forewarn you whom ye shall fear: [m]Fear him, which after he hath killed, hath [n]power to cast into hell; yea, I say unto you, Fear him.

6 Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings,[1] [p]and not one of them is forgotten before God?

7 But [q]even the very hairs of your head are all numbered. Fear not therefore: ye are of more value than many sparrows.

8 Also I say unto you, [s]Whosoever shall confess me before men, him shall the Son of man also [t]confess before the angels of God.

9 But [u]he that denieth me before men, [x]shall be denied before the angels of God.

10 And whosoever shall speak a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him: but unto him that blasphemeth against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven.

that is, the whole soul, is "full of light," it receives and entertains the gospel, which will bring along with it into the soul both knowledge and joy; this denotes the same thing with that of the good ground, "receiving the word," and "understanding" it. If our understanding admit the gospel in its full light, it fills the soul, and it has enough to fill it. And if the soul be thus filled with the light of the gospel, "having no part dark;" if all its powers and faculties be subjected to the government and influence of the gospel, and none left unsanctified, then "the whole soul shall be full of light," full of holiness and comfort; "it was darkness" itself, but is now light in the Lord, "as when the bright shining of a candle doth give thee light," ver. 36. Note, The gospel will come into those souls whose doors and windows are thrown open to receive it; and where it comes it will bring light with it.

FOLLY OF MERE PROFESSION.—Ver. 40. Now observe here the absurdity they were guilty of, "'Ye Pharisees make clean the outside' only, ye wash your hands with water, but do not "wash your hearts from wickedness;" those are full of covetousness and malice, covetousness of men's goods, and malice against good men." Those would never be reckoned cleanly servants, that wash only "the outside of the cup" their master drinks out of, or "the platter" he eats out of, and takes no care to make the inside clean, which immediately affects the meat and drink, and mingles with them all the filth that may adhere. The frame and temper of the mind in every religious service are the inside of the cup and platter; the impurity of that infects the services, and therefore to keep ourselves free from scandalous enormities, and yet to live under the dominion of spiritual wickedness, is as great an affront to God, as it would be for a servant that gives the cup into his master's hand, clean wiped from all the dust on the outside, but within full of cobwebs and spiders. "Ravening" and "wickedness," that is, reigning worldliness and reigning spitefulness, which men think they can find some cloak and cover for, are the dangerous, damning sins of many who have made the "outside of the cup" clean from the more gross, and scandalous, and inexcusable sins of whoredom and drunkenness. A particular instance or the absurdity of it; "'Ye fools, did not he that made that which is without, make that which is within also?' Did not that God who in the law of Moses appointed divers ceremonial washings with which you justify yourselves in these practices and impositions, appoint also that ye should cleanse and purify your hearts? He who made laws for that which is without, did not he even in those laws further intend something within, and by other laws show how little he regarded the "purifying of the flesh," and the "putting away of the filth" of that, if the heart be not made clean?—Henry.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.—It is a great mercy to be made so sensible of our indigence and dependence on God, as to desire to pray; and so aware of our own ignorance and of the difficulty of praying aright, as to seek for instruction in this respect. When we are thus led to beseech the Lord Jesus to teach us to pray, we use a very proper introduction to all our subsequent devotions: but he will do it, in a far superior manner to John, or any other of his servants. He will lead us into an acquaintance with our own wants and the promises of God, and excite in our hearts correspondent desires and affections; and thus he will teach us to pray in humility, reverence, faith, expectation, and earnestness: he will give us "the Spirit of adoption," that we may come with confidence to God, as "our Father, who is in heaven;" and from love to him and zeal for his glory, as well as from good-will to men, to pray "that his name may be hallowed, his kingdom advanced, and his will done on earth as in heaven."—Scott.

CHAP. XII. GOD'S PROVIDENCE.—Ver. 6. The lives of good Christians and good ministers are the particular care of the Divine Providence. To encourage us in times of difficulty and danger, we must have recourse to our first principles, and build upon them; now a firm belief of the doctrine of God's universal providence, and the extent of it, would be satisfying to us, when at any time we are in peril, and would encourage us to trust to God in the way of duty. 1. Providence takes cognizance of the "meanest creatures," even of "the sparrows." "Though they are of such small account, that 'five' of them are sold for 'two farthings,' yet not one of them is 'forgotten of God,' but is provided for, and notice is taken of its death. Now, 'ye are of more value than many sparrows,' and therefore ye may be sure ye 'are not forgotten,' though imprisoned, though banished, though forgotten by your friends; much more 'precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of saints' than the death of sparrows." 2. Providence takes cognizance of the meanest interest of the disciples of Christ. "'Even the very hairs of your head are all numbered;' much more are your sighs and tears numbered, and the drops of your blood, which ye shed for Christ's name-sake. An account is kept of all your losses, that they may be, and without doubt they shall be, recompensed unspeakably to your advantage."—Henry.

SIN AGAINST THE HOLY GHOST.—See Matt. xii. 31.

CONSUMMATE FOLLY OF WORLDLINESS.—Ver. 13—21. "Then 'I will say to my soul,' upon the credit of this security, whether God say it or no, 'Soul,' mark what I say, 'thou hast much goods laid up for many years' in these barns; now 'take thine ease, enjoy thyself, 'eat, drink, and be merry.'" Here also appears his folly, as much in the enjoyment of his wealth as in the pursuit of it. 1. It was folly for him to put off his comfort in his abundance, till he had compassed his projects concerning it. When he

11 And when they bring you unto the synagogues, and unto magistrates, and powers, take ye no thought how or what thing ye shall answer, or what ye shall say:

12 For [a]the Holy Ghost shall teach you in the same hour what ye ought to say.

13 ¶ And one of the company said unto him, Master, speak to my brother, that he divide the inheritance with me.

14 And he said unto him, [c]Man, [d]who made me a judge or a divider over you?[2]

15 And he said unto them, [e]Take heed, and beware of covetousness: [f]for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth.

16 And he spake a parable unto them, saying, [g]The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully:

17 And he thought within himself, saying, What shall I do, because I have no room where to bestow my fruits?

18 And he said, This will I do: I will pull down my barns, and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods.

19 And I will say to my soul, [i]Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; [n]take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry.

20 But God said unto him, [p] Thou fool, this night [*]thy soul shall be required of thee: [q]then whose shall those things be which thou hast provided?

21 So is [r]he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not [s]rich toward God.

22 ¶ And he said unto his disciples, Therefore I say unto you, [t]Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat; neither for the body, what ye shall put on.

23 The [u]life is more than meat, and the body is more than raiment.

24 Consider the ravens: for they neither sow nor reap; which neither have storehouse nor barn; and God feedeth them. [y]How much more are ye better than the fowls?

25 And [z]which of you, with taking thought, can add to his stature one cubit?[3]

26 If ye then be not able to do that thing which is least, [a]why take ye thought for the rest?

27 Consider the lilies, how they grow: they toil not, they spin not; and yet I say unto you, [c]that Solomon, in all his glory, was not arrayed like one of these.

28 If then God so clothe the grass, [d]which is to-day in the field, and to-morrow is cast into the oven; how much more will he clothe you, [*]O ye of little faith?

29 And seek not ye what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink, neither [†]be ye of doubtful mind.

30 For all these things do the nations of the world seek after: and [b]your Father knoweth that ye have need of these things.

31 But [i]rather seek ye the kingdom of God; and all these things shall be added unto you.

32 Fear not, [k]little flock; for it is your Father's [l]good pleasure to give you the kingdom.

33 Sell that ye have, and give alms;[4] [o]provide yourselves bags which wax not old, a treasure in the heavens that faileth not, where no thief approacheth, neither moth corrupteth.

34 For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.

35 Let your loins be girded about, and [r] your lights burning;

36 And ye yourselves like unto [s]men that wait for their Lord, when he will return from the wedding; that, when he cometh and knocketh, they may open unto him immediately.

37 [x]Blessed are those servants, whom the Lord, when he cometh, shall find watching: verily I say unto you, That he shall gird himself, and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them.

38 And if he shall come in the second watch,[5] or come in the third watch, and find them so, blessed are those servants.

39 And this know, that if the goodman of the house had known what hour the thief would come, he would have watched, and not have suffered his house to be broken through.

40 Be [b]ye therefore ready also: for the Son of man cometh at an hour when ye think not.

41 ¶ Then Peter said unto him, [c]Lord, speakest thou this parable unto us, or even to all?

42 And the Lord said, [d]Who then is that faithful and wise steward, whom his lord shall make [f]ruler over his household, [g]to give them their portion of meat in due season?

43 Blessed is that servant, [i]whom his lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing.

44 Of a truth I say unto you, [k]That he will make him ruler over all that he hath.

45 But and if that servant say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming; and shall begin to beat the men-servants and maidens,[6] [n]and to eat and drink, and to be drunken;

46 The [c]lord of that servant will come in a day when he looketh not for him, and at an hour when he is not aware, and will [‡]cut him in sunder, [p]and will appoint him his portion with the unbelievers.

has built bigger barns, and filled them, (which will be a work of time,) then he will take his ease: and might he not as well have done that now? Grotius here quotes the story of Pyrrhus, who was projecting to make himself master of Sicilly, Africa, and other places, in the prosecution of his victories: Well, saith his friend Cyneas, and what must we do then? Postea vivemus, saith he, Then we will live: At hoc jam licet, saith Cyneas, We may live now, if we please. 2. It was folly for him to be confident that his goods were "laid up for many years," as if his bigger barns would be safer than those he had; whereas in an hour's time they might be burnt to the ground, perhaps by lightning, which there is no defence against, and all that was laid up in them. A few years may make a great change; "moth and rust may corrupt, or thieves break through and steal." 3. It was folly for him to count upon certain "ease," when he had laid up abundance of the wealth of this world, whereas there are many things that may make people uneasy in the midst of their greatest abundance. One dead fly may spoil a whole pot of precious ointment; and one thorn a whole bed of down. Pain and sickness of body, disagreeableness of relations, and especially a guilty conscience, may rob a man of his ease, who has ever so much of the wealth of this world. 4. It was folly for him to think of making no other use of his plenty than to "eat" and "drink," and to be "merry;" to indulge the flesh, and gratify the sensual appetite, without any thought of doing good to others, and being put thereby into a better capacity of serving God and his generation; as if we lived to eat, and did not eat to live, and the happiness of man consisted in nothing else but in having all the gratifications of sense wound up to the height of pleasurableness. 5. It was the greatest folly of all to say all this to his "soul." If he had said, Body, "take thine ease, for thou hast goods laid up for many years," there had been sense in it; but the soul, considered as an immortal spirit, separable from the body, was no way interested in a barn full of corn, or a bag full of gold. If he had had the soul of a swine, he might have blessed it with the satisfaction of eating and drinking; but what is this to the "soul of a man," that has exigencies and desires which these things will in no ways satisfy? It is the great absurdity which the children of this world are guilty of, that they portion their souls in the wealth of the world and the pleasures of sense.

Sinfulness of Undue Anxiety.—Ver. 22—30. God, who provides for the inferior creatures, may be depended upon to provide for good Christians. "Trust God for meat, for he 'feeds the ravens;' they 'neither sow nor reap,' they take neither care nor pains beforehand to provide for themselves, and yet they are fed, and never perish for want. Now consider 'how much better ye are than the fowls,' than the ravens. Trust God for clothing, for he clothes the lilies; they make no preparation for their own clothing, they 'toil not,' they 'spin not,' the root in the ground is a naked thing, and without ornament, and yet, as the flower grows up, it appears wonderfully beautified. Now, if God has so clothed the flowers, which are fading, perishing things, 'shall he not much more clothe' you with such clothing as is fit for you, and with clothing suited to your nature, as theirs is?" When God fed Israel with "manna" in the wilderness, he also took care for their clothing; for though he did not furnish them with new clothes, yet (which came all to one) he provided that those they had should not "wax old upon them," Deut. viii. 4. Thus will he clothe his spiritual Israel; but then let not them be of "little faith." Note, Our inordinate cares are owing to the weakness of our faith; for a powerful practical belief of the all-sufficiency of God, his covenant relation to us as a Father, and especially his precious promises, relating both to this life and that to come, would be mighty, through God, to the pulling down of the strong holds of these disquieting, perplexing imaginations. Our cares are fruitless, vain, and insignificant, and therefore it is folly to indulge them; they will not gain us our wishes, and therefore ought not to hinder our repose. "'Which of you by taking thought' can 'add to his stature one cubit,' or one inch; can add to 'his age' one year, or one hour? Now if ye be 'not able to do that which is least,' if it be not in your power to alter your statures, why should you perplex yourselves about other things, which are as much out of your power, and about which it is as necessary that we refer ourselves to the providence of God?" Note, As in our stature, so in our state, it is our wisdom to take it as it is, and make the best of it; for fretting and vexing, carping, and caring, will not mend it. An inordinate solicitous pursuit of the things of this world, even necessary things, very ill becomes the disciples of Christ; "Whatever others do, 'seek not ye what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink;' do not ye afflict yourselves with perplexing cares, nor weary yourselves with constant toils; do not ye hurry hither and thither with inquiries, 'what ye shall eat or drink,' as David's enemies that 'wandered up and down for meat,' Ps. lix. 15, or as the eagle that 'seeks the prey afar off,' Job xxxix. 29. Let not the disciples of Christ thus 'seek' their food, but ask it of God day by day."—Henry.

Sayings of Christ.—Ver 49—53. The introduction of the gospel would resemble the kindling of a fire, which should occasion very destructive and wide-spreading desolations. Not that this is the tendency of Christianity, which is most pure, peaceable and loving; but it would be the effect of the opposition raised against it by the pride and lusts of men, and of the abuses which many would make of it. Hence would arise furious persecutions, bitter contentions, and multiplied divisions, usurpations, and oppressions; and these things, with the resistance made to them, would diffuse manifold calamities and evils all over the earth.—Infidels have studiously adduced these texts

52 For from henceforth there shall be five in one house divided, three against two, and two against three.

53 The father shall be divided against the son, and the son against the father; the mother against the daughter, and the daughter against the mother: the mother-in-law against her daughter-in-law, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law.

54 ¶ And he said also to the people, [c]When ye see a cloud rise out of the west, straightway ye say, There cometh a shower: and so it is.

CHAP. XIII.

Christ preacheth repentance upon the punishment of the Galileans and others, 1. The parable of the fruitless fig-tree, 6. The strait gate, 22.

THERE were present at that season some that told him of [a]the Galileans, whose blood Pilate had mingled with their sacrifices.

2 And Jesus, answering, said unto them, [c]Suppose ye that these Galileans were sinners above all the Galileans, because they suffered such things?

3 I tell you, Nay: but, [d]except ye repent, [e]ye shall all likewise perish.

4 Or those eighteen, upon whom the tower in Siloam fell, and slew them, think ye that they were *sinners above all men that dwelt in Jerusalem?

5 I tell you, Nay: but, except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish.

6 ¶ He spake also this parable: A certain man had a fig-tree planted in his vineyard: and he came [k]and sought fruit thereon, and found none.

7 Then said he unto the dresser of his vineyard, Behold, these [l]three years I come seeking fruit on this fig-tree, and find none: [m]cut it down; [n]why cumbereth it the ground?

8 And he, answering, said unto him, Lord, let it alone this year also, till I shall dig about it, and dung it:

9 And if it bear fruit, well: and if not, then after that thou shalt cut it down.

10 ¶ And [q]he was teaching in one of the synagogues on the sabbath:

11 And, behold, there was a woman which had [r]a spirit of infirmity[1] [s]eighteen years, and was [t]bowed together, and could in no wise lift up herself.

12 And when Jesus saw her, he called her to him, and said unto her, Woman, thou art [x]loosed from thine infirmity.

13 And he laid his hands on her: [z]and immediately she was made straight, and glorified God.

14 And the ruler of the synagogue answered [b]with indignation, because that Jesus had healed on the sabbath-day, and said unto the people, [c]There are six days in which men ought to work: in them therefore come and be healed, and not on the sabbath-day.

15 The Lord then answered him, and said, [c]Thou hypocrite, [f]doth not each one of you on the sabbath loose his ox or his ass from the stall, and lead him away to watering?

16 And ought not this woman, [g]being a daughter of Abraham, [h]whom Satan hath bound, lo, these eighteen years, [i]be loosed from this bond on the sabbath-day?

17 And when he had said these things, [k]all his adversaries were ashamed: [l]and all the people rejoiced for all the glorious things that were done by him.

18 ¶ Then said he, [m]Unto what is the kingdom of God like? and whereunto shall I resemble it?

19 It is like a grain of mustard-seed, which a man took, and cast into his garden; and it grew, and waxed a great tree; and the fowls of the air lodged in the branches of it.

20 ¶ And again he said, Whereunto shall I liken the kingdom of God?

21 It is like leaven, which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened.

22 And he went through the cities and villages, teaching, and journeying towards Jerusalem.

23 ¶ Then said one unto him, Lord, [y]are there few[2] that be saved? And he said unto them, as so many objections to its divine original; wilfully forgetting that "thus it was written, and thus it must be." The prediction of these effects, which a superficial observer would never have expected from so benign a religion, forms an additional demonstration that it is from God; and every man, who is experimentally acquainted with the human heart, will readily account for them, without charging the least blame on the gospel; nay, he will see that they are occasioned by its excellency, and must follow from it, whilst men continue proud, carnal, selfish, and alienated from God.—To this prediction our Lord added, "and what will I, if it be already kindled?" This seems to refer to the malignant opposition of the Scribes and Pharisees, and the ferment that his ministry had excited; but though the fire was indeed already kindled, did he wish that he had not been so open in his instructions, and sharp in his reproofs? Did they suppose that he was disappointed or disconcerted? Did they imagine that he meant to desist? This was by no means the case: on the contrary, he earnestly desired that this fire should be more completely kindled, by the full and extensive publication of his gospel. But before that could take place, "He had a baptism to be baptized with," far different from that of water, and of the Holy Spirit, by which he had been admitted to the exercise of his prophetical office; for he must endure the most extreme sufferings, shed his blood, and pour out his soul unto death, before he could enter upon his work within the veil, as the High Priest of his church, and be put in possession of the mediatorial throne. "But how was he straitened till this was accomplished!" It did not consist with the plan laid down for the performance of this work, to preach the gospel more openly or extensively, till this baptism was completed: in the mean time he was exceedingly straitened and limited in the exercise of his ardent love and zeal; and even longed for that awful and important crisis.—Scott.

This matter was much disputed among their doctors, so that, perhaps, the question was not captiously proposed, but for the real satisfaction of the inquirer.—WHITBY.

CHAP. XIII. PRESENT PROVIDENCES NOT THE TEST OF PIETY.—Ver. 1—5. "Now suppose ye that 'those eighteen' who met with their death from the tower of Siloam, while perhaps they were expecting their cure from the pool of Siloam, were 'debtors' to divine justice 'above all men that dwelt at Jerusalem? I tell you nay.'" Whether it made for us or against us, we must abide by this rule, that we cannot judge of men's "sins" by their "sufferings" in this world; for many are thrown into the furnace as gold, to be purified, not as dross and chaff, to be consumed. We must therefore not be harsh in our censures of those that are afflicted more than their neighbours, as Job's friends were in their censures of him, lest we add sorrow to the sorrowful; nay, "lest we condemn the generation of the righteous," Ps. lxxiii. 14. If we will be judging, we have enough to do to judge ourselves; nor indeed can we "know love or hatred by all that is before us" because "all things come alike to all," Ecc. ix. 1, 2. And we might as justly conclude that the "oppressors," and Pilate among the rest, "on whose side are power" and success, are the greatest saints, as that the "oppressed," and those Galileans among the rest, who are all in tears, and they have no comforter, no, not the priests and Levites that attended the altar, are the "greatest sinners." Let us, in our censures of others, do as we would be done by; for as we do we shall be done by; "Judge not, that ye be not judged," Matt vii. 1.

QUESTION AS TO THE NUMBER OF THE SAVED.—Ver. 23. We have here, 1. A question put to our Lord Jesus; who it was that put it we are not told, whether a friend or a foe; for he gave both a great liberty of questioning him, and returned answers to the thoughts and intents of the heart. The question was, "Are there few that be saved?" ver. 23. "'If the saved be few?' Master, I have heard thou shouldest say so; Is it true?" (1.) Perhaps it was a captious question; he put it to him, tempting him, with a design to insnare him, and lessen his reputation. If he should say that many would be saved, they would reproach him as too loose, and making salvation cheap; if few, they would reproach him as precise and strait-laced. The Jewish doctors said, That "all Israel should have a place in the world to come;" and would he dare to contradict that! (2.) Perhaps it was a curious question, a nice speculation, which he had lately been disputing upon with his companions, and they all agreed to refer it to Christ. Note, Many are more inquisitive respecting who shall be saved, and who not, than respecting what they shall do to be saved. It is commonly asked, "May such and such be saved?" But it is well that we may be saved without knowing that. (3.) Perhaps it was an admiring question; he had taken notice how strict the law of Christ was, and how bad the world was, and comparing these together, cries out, "How few are there that will be saved!" Note, We have reason to wonder, that of the many to whom the word of salvation is sent, there are so few to whom it is indeed a saving word. (4.) Perhaps it was an inquiring question; "If there be few that be saved," what then? What influence should this have upon me? Note, It concerns us all seriously to improve the great truth of the fewness of those that are saved. 2. Christ's answer to this question, which directs us what use to make of this truth. Our Saviour did not give a direct answer to his inquiry, for he came to "guide" men's "consciences," not to "gratify" their curiosity. Ask not, "How many shall be saved?" But, be they more or fewer, "Shall I be one of them?" Not, "What shall become of such and such, and 'what shall this man do?'" But, "What shall I do, and what shall become of me?"

3 And Jesus answering, spake unto [d]the lawyers and Pharisees, saying, [e]Is it lawful to heal on the sabbath-day?

4 And they held their peace. And he took him, and healed him, and let him go;

5 And answered them, saying, Which of you shall have an ass or an ox fallen into a pit, and will not straightway pull him out on the sabbath-day?

6 And [h]they could not answer him again to these things.

7 ¶ And he [i]put forth a parable to those which were bidden, when he marked how they chose out the chief rooms; saying unto them,

8 When thou art bidden of any man to a wedding, sit not down in the highest room,[2] lest a more honourable man than thou be bidden of him;

9 And he that bade thee and him come and say to thee, Give this man place; and thou begin with shame to take the lowest room.

10 But when thou art bidden, go and sit down in the lowest room; that when he that bade thee cometh, he may say unto thee, Friend, go up higher: then shalt thou have worship in the presence of them that sit at meat with thee.

11 For whosoever exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

12 ¶ Then said he also to him that bade him, When thou makest a dinner or a supper, call not thy friends, nor thy brethren, neither thy kinsmen, nor thy rich neighbours; lest they also bid thee again, [q]and a recompence be made thee.

13 But when thou makest a feast,[3] [r]call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind:

14 And thou shalt be blessed; for they cannot recompense thee: [s]for thou shalt be recompensed at [t]the resurrection of the just.[4]

15 ¶ And when one of them that sat at meat with him heard these things, he said unto him, [u]Blessed is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God.

16 Then said he unto him, [x]A certain man made a great supper, and bade many:

17 And sent his servant at supper-time to say to them that were bidden, [z]Come; for all things are now ready.

18 And they [b]all with one consent began to make excuse. The first said unto him, [c]I have bought a piece of ground, and I must needs go and see it: I pray thee have me excused.

19 And another said, I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I go to prove them: I pray thee have me excused.

20 And another said, [d]I have married a wife; and therefore I cannot come.

advantage of culture; in three years' time the young trees were expected to bear; but the owner of this tree is represented as coming three other years to seek fruit, and as not finding any. It might therefore be concluded to be a barren tree, not fit to occupy the room, or appropriate the nourishment and culture, which might be more profitably employed. The dresser of the vineyard, however, intreated that it might be spared for one more year; during which space he would use proper means for rendering it fruitful: then perhaps it would produce fruit, but otherwise it ought to be cut down.—The Jewish nation seems to have been primarily intended: the Lord had long borne with their unfruitfulness amidst manifold advantages, and the time of his vengeance approached. They would, however, be spared a little longer, that the apostles and preachers of the gospel might make another vigorous and zealous effort to bring them to repentance, faith, and holiness; and if this failed, they must be given to ruin. For Jerusalem would be destroyed, the ceremonial worship terminated, and the unbelieving Jews cast out of the church, to make way for the calling of the Gentiles. But the parable is equally applicable to the case of all those individuals who continue unfruitful under the means of grace; though they are spared from time to time, through the long-suffering of the Lord, they will at length be cut down by death, and cast into hell, except they repent, and bring forth fruits meet for repentance.—Many expositors speak as if Christ himself was represented by "the dresser of the vineyard;" and indeed the long-suffering of God with sinners is the effect of his mediation: yet he seems rather to be the owner of the vineyard, who sentenceth the barren trees to be cut down; and the language used seems to describe the fervent prayers and zealous labours of faithful ministers, who earnestly desire to prevent the ruin of the people.—Scott.

CHAP. XIV. Humility.—Ver. 7—11. The Scribes and Pharisees seem not to have attended even to that semblance of humility, under which numbers veil their ambition, that they may more successfully gratify it: but they openly contended for precedency, probably on the score of their reputation for wisdom, learning, or piety, or on account of their rank and authority; and they chose out for themselves the chief seats, thus claiming the highest respect as justly due to them. This disgraceful competition, however, though it rose from the same source, was a mere shadow of that spiritual pride and ambition, which has excluded numbers from the kingdom of Christ, produced the most lamentable effects in the visible church, and done immense injury even to many true Christians and ministers. Our Lord, therefore, in a mild yet decisive manner, reproved the vain-glory of the guests, by a parable, addressed as it were to each of them, the substance of which was taken from the Scriptures. If any of them should be invited to a marriage, (which was the principal festive occasion,) let him not aspire to the highest place; lest a more honourable person should be present, whom the master of the feast should deem entitled to the precedency. In this case, being required to give place to his superior, and the intermediate places being occupied, he would be sent with disgrace to take the lowest seat. On the contrary, let him sit down at first in the lowest place, as claiming no honour and pre-eminence; and then the master of the house might think it proper to desire him to go up higher, which would procure him respect and deference among the other guests. Thus the Christian should deem it honour enough for him, a poor sinful and rebellious creature, to be admitted among the redeemed in the lowest form; and not contend for eminent stations, authority, or reputation, for such ambition only tends to disgrace. But he ought, in unaffected humility, to take the lowest station or the meanest service, preferring others to himself: and in due time he will in this manner obtain the honour that cometh from God; and he will have the approbation of angels and men at the day of judgment. For it is an universal rule of God's government, of his dealings with every individual, in respect of the various incidents and actions of their lives; that "he abases those who endeavour to exalt themselves, and advances those who abase themselves;" as conscious of their actual and comparative vileness and worthlessness, and as willing to be little, despised, neglected, and subjected to others.—Scott.

Self-Denial.—Ver. 26. Mention is not made here of houses and lands; philosophy will teach a man to look upon those with contempt; but Christianity carries it higher. 1. Every good man loves "his relations;" and yet, if he be a disciple of Christ, he must comparatively "hate them," must love them "less than Christ," as Leah is said to be "hated," when Rachel was better loved. Not that their persons must be in any degree hated, but our comfort and satisfaction in them must be lost and swallowed up in our love to Christ, as Levi's was, when he "said to his father, I have not seen him," Deut. xxxiii. 9. When our duty to our parents comes in competition with our evident duty to Christ, we must give Christ the preference. If we must either "deny Christ," or be "banished" from our families and relations, (as many of the primitive Christians were,) we must rather lose their society than his favour. 2. Every man loves "his own life," no man ever yet "hated it;" and we cannot be Christ's disciples if we do not love him better than our own lives, so as rather to have our lives "imbittered" by cruel "bondage" nay, and "taken away" by cruel "deaths," than to dishonour Christ, or depart from any of his truths and ways. The experience of the pleasures of the "spiritual life," and 21 So that servant came, and shewed his lord these things. Then the master of the house, being angry, said to his servant, Go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city, and bring in hither the poor, and the maimed, and the halt, and the blind.

22 And the servant said, Lord, it is done as thou hast commanded, [k]and yet there is room.

23 And the Lord said unto the servant, [l]Go out into the highways and hedges,[5] and compel them to come in, that my house may be filled.

24 For I say unto you, That none of those men which were bidden shall taste of my supper.

25 ¶ And there went great multitudes with him: and he turned, and said unto them,

26 If [p]any man come to me, and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple.

27 And whosoever doth not bear his cross, and come after me, cannot be my disciple.

29 Lest haply, after he hath laid the foundation, and is not able to finish it, all that behold it begin to mock him,

30 Saying, [x]This man began to build, and was not able to finish.

31 Or what king, [y]going to make war against another king, sitteth not down first, and consulteth, whether he be able with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand?

32 Or else, while the other is yet a great way off, he sendeth an ambassage, and desireth conditions of peace.

14 And when he had spent all, there [t]arose a mighty famine in that land; and he began to be in want.

15 And he went and joined himself to a citizen of that country; and he sent him into his fields to feed swine.[3]

16 And he would fain have filled his belly with the husks[4] that the swine did eat: and no man gave unto him.

17 And [a]when he came to himself, he said, [b]How many hired servants of my father's have bread enough, and to spare, and I perish with hunger!

18 I [c]will arise, and go to my father, and will say unto him, Father, [e]I have sinned against heaven, and before thee,

19 And am [g]no more worthy to be called thy son: make me as one of thy hired servants.

20 And he arose, and came to his father. But when he was yet a great way off, his father saw him, and had compassion, and ran, [k]and fell on his neck, and kissed him.

21 And the son said unto him, [l]Father, I have sinned [m]against heaven, and in thy sight, and am no more worthy to be called thy son.

the believing hopes and prospects of "eternal life," will make this "hard saying" easy.

Preparation for Self-Denial.—Ver. 28. When we take upon us a profession of religion, we are like a man that undertakes to "build a tower," and therefore must consider the "expense of it." "Which of you, intending to build a tower," or stately house for himself, "sitteth not down first, and counteth the cost?" And he must be sure to count upon a great deal more than his workmen will tell him it will lie him in. Let him compare the charge with his purse, lest he make himself to be laughed at, by "beginning to build" what he "is not able to finish." Note, 1. All that take upon them a profession of religion, undertake to "build a tower," not as the tower of Babel, in opposition to heaven, which therefore was left unfinished, but in obedience to heaven, which therefore shall have its "top-stone brought forth." Begin low, and lay the foundation deep, lay it on the rock, and make sure work, and then aim as high as heaven. 2. Those that intend to build this tower, must "sit down, and count the cost;" let them consider, it "will cost them" the mortifying of their sins, even the most beloved lusts; it will cost them a life of self-denial and watchfulness, and a constant course of holy duties; it "may," perhaps, "cost them" their reputation among men, their estates and liberties, and all that is dear to them in this world, even life itself. And if it cost us all this, what is it in comparison with what it cost Christ to purchase the advantage of religion for us, which come to us without money and without price? 3. Many that begin to "build this tower," do not "go on with it," nor persevere in it, and it is their folly; they have not courage and resolution, have not a rooted fixed principle, and so bring nothing to pass. It is true, we have none of us in ourselves "sufficient to finish" this tower, but Christ hath said, "My grace is sufficient for thee," and that grace shall not be wanting to any of us, if we seek for it, and make use of it.—Henry.

CHAP. XV. Joy in Heaven.—Ver. 3—7. The lost sheep in this emblem represents the sinner, as departed from God, and exposed without help to manifold dangers and certain ruin, if not brought back to him, yet as utterly indisposed to return. Christ is the owner, or Shepherd, of his chosen and purchased flock, and counts them his property, even when in their sinful state. As a man would leave the rest of his flock in the pastures of the wilderness, being comparatively safe, to go and seek one lost sheep: so Christ is particularly earnest in bringing home sinners to his church from their perilous wanderings; and he considers this as much his work, as taking care of those who are already brought back. The owner of the flock sought the lost sheep till he found it, and then laid it on his shoulders rejoicing: thus Christ by his word and providence seeks out the lost sinner, and by his Spirit overcomes his unwillingness to return to God; by his power he delivers him from the bondage of sin and Satan, and carries him above the temptations of this evil world; and he rejoices in thus bringing him back to the favour and service of God, by repentance, faith, and true conversion. As he who had found his lost sheep, might be supposed to call on his friends and neighbours to rejoice with him on that account, rather than because the other ninety-nine had not strayed; so our Lord declared, that "there is joy in heaven over one sinner that repenteth;" the Lord himself rejoices, and all his holy worshippers rejoice with him on that account; even "more than over ninety-and-nine just persons who need no repentance." This may be differently explained. Angels are perfectly righteous, and need no repentance. Yet the repentance of a sinner on earth, taken in connection with its causes and consequences, redounds more to the glory of God, and therefore causes more joy in heaven, than the continuance of angels in their primitive state of rectitude. Some believers have been preserved from that degree of outward vice and impiety, to which others have been left; but the conversion of the latter, being more unexpected and surprising, as well as the more signal display of divine power and mercy, may be considered as exciting far louder acclamations of joy and praise, than that of such as comparatively "needed no repentance."—Every Christian in his turn has occasioned this joy in heaven; but it is the cause of renewed joy, when another and another is brought to repentance.

The Prodigal Son.—Ver. 13—16. The younger son is then described as journeying with all his property into a far country, as if he meant to traffic with it: but in fact that he might receive no more counsel or control from his father: this represents the prosperous sinner's increasing impiety and disregard of God; and the prodigal's "wasting his substance in riotous living," shadows forth the abuse that men make of the bounty of Providence, by spending it on their lusts, and the manner in which they often ruin their health, and shorten their lives, by excess. The prodigal is next described, as having "spent all;" and a famine at the same time prevailing in the land, he was soon deserted by his companions and flatterers, and began to be destitute. This shows the wasting transient nature of ungodly pleasure and prosperity, and the tendency of sin to produce misery; and also that the Lord often visits the sinner with additional afflictions, especially when he purposes to bring him to repentance. But the prodigal was yet too stout-hearted to return home, disgraced and impoverished, and submit to his offended father; and therefore he hired himself as a servant to a person in that distant country, who, deeming him fit for no other service, sent him into his fields to feed swine. This was a mean employment in itself, but among the Jews, to whom those animals were ceremonially unclean, it might be considered as the greatest debasement imaginable, especially to one who had

25 Now his elder son was in the field: and as he came and drew nigh to the house, he heard musick and dancing.[6]

26 And he called one of the servants, and asked what these things meant.

27 And he said unto him, [t]Thy brother is come; [u]and thy father hath killed the fatted calf, because he hath received him safe and sound.

28 And he was angry, and would not go in: [b]therefore came his father out, and entreated him.

29 And he, answering, said to his father, Lo, these many years do I serve thee; neither transgressed I at any time thy commandment; and yet thou never gavest me a kid, that I might make merry with my friends:

30 But as soon as this thy son was come, which hath devoured thy living with harlots, thou hast killed for him the fatted calf.

3 Then the steward [g]said within himself, What shall I do? for my lord taketh away from me the stewardship: I cannot dig; to beg I am ashamed.

4 I am resolved what to do, that, when I am put out of the stewardship, they may receive me into their houses.

7 Then said he to another, And how much owest thou? And he said, An hundred [f]measures of wheat. And he said unto him, Take thy bill, and write fourscore.

8 And the lord commended the unjust steward,[2] because he had done wisely: for [r]the children of this world are in their generation wiser[3] than [t]the children of light.

9 And I say unto you, [u]Make to yourselves friends of the *mammon of unrighteousness; that, when ye fail, they may receive you [x]into everlasting habitations.

10 He that is [a]faithful in that which is least, is faithful also in much: and [b]he that is unjust in the least, is unjust also in much.

11 If therefore ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous †mammon,[4] who will commit to your trust the true riches?

12 And if ye have not been faithful in [b]that which is another man's, who shall give you that which is your own?

13 No servant can serve two masters: for either he will [h]hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon.

14 ¶ And the Pharisees also, who were covetous, heard all these things: and they derided him.

15 And he said unto them, [i]Ye are they which justify yourselves before men; but [m]God knoweth your hearts: [n]for that which is highly esteemed among men is abomination in the sight of God.

16 The law and the prophets were until John: since that time [p]the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it.

17 And [r]it is easier for heaven and earth to pass, [s]than one tittle of the law to fail.

18 Whosoever putteth away his wife, and marrieth another, committeth adultery: and whosoever marrieth her that is put away from her husband, committeth adultery.

19 ¶ There was a certain rich man, which was clothed in purple and fine linen, and fared sumptuously every day:

20 And there was a certain beggar named [a]Lazarus, which was laid at his gate, full of sores,

21 And desiring to be fed with the crumbs which fell from the rich man's table: moreover, the dogs came and licked his sores.

22 And it came to pass, that the beggar died, and [g]was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom: the rich man also died, and was buried;

23 And in hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torments, and [n]seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom.[5]

24 And he cried, and said, Father Abraham, have mercy on me; and send Lazarus, been brought up in affluence; yet, as if the hardship and disgrace had been too little, he was not allowed to satisfy the cravings of his appetite with the husks, or coarse wild-fruits, on which the swine fed, though, for want of other food, he earnestly desired it: so that he was reduced to the extreme danger of perishing by hunger. Thus the sinner, when suffering under the effects of his trangressions, instead of repenting and humbling himself before God, often plunges still deeper into the basest crimes, and sells himself to Satan, that most cruel of masters, to work iniquity of the worst kind; and yet he sometimes can scarcely obtain the meanest sustenance, and grows more and more despicable and miserable, having nothing but destruction before his eyes.

His Return and Welcome.—Ver. 20—24. When he was yet at a distance, his father, (who is represented as regretting his absence, and desiring his return,) saw and knew him; and, forgetting all his son's provocations, yea, and overlooking his own years and dignity, being full of compassion, he ran, and fell on his neck and kissed him; expressing his joy at his arrival, and his entire reconcilation to him. Whilst the son, being the more ashamed of his own misconduct by his father's kindness, acknowledged his guilt and unworthiness, in the words which he had premeditated; save that he omitted the latter clause, either interrupted by his father, or not counting it necessary, seeing he was welcomed as a son.—Thus the penitent sinner quits the bondage of Satan, and returns to God by faith and prayer, amidst a variety of fears and difficulties: and the Lord readily meets him with unexpected tokens of his forgiving love. These tend still farther to humble his heart, though they inspire him with more confidence of hope in the mercy of his gracious Lord.—"After sin is pardoned, it becomes the sinner ingenuously to confess and acknowledge it." [Whitby.]—Whilst the prodigal was confessing his guilt, the father ordered his servants to bring "the best robe," that he might be clothed as it became his beloved son to be; and to "put a ring on his hand, and shoes on his feet;" and then to prepare a feast for him and them, that they might rejoice together over one, who had been as dead and lost to his family and friends, but was now returned alive and well.—Scott.

CHAP. XVI. The Unrighteous Mammon.—Ver. 9. Note, 1. The things of this world are the "mammon of unrighteousness," or the false "mammon;" not only because often got by fraud and unrighteousness, but because those who trust to it for satisfaction and happiness will certainly be deceived; for riches are perishing things, and will disappoint those that raise their expectations from them. 2. Though this "mammon of unrighteousness" is not to be trusted to for a happiness, yet it may and must be made use of in subserviency to our pursuits of that which is our happiness. Though we cannot find true satisfaction in it, yet we may "make to ourselves friends" with it, not by way of purchase or merit, but recommendation; so we may make God and Christ our friends, the good angels and saints our friends, and the poor our friends; and it is a desirable thing to be befriended in the account and state to come. 3. At death we must all fail. Death eclipses us. A tradesman is said to fail when he becomes a bankrupt; we must all thus fail shortly; death shuts up the shop, seals up the hand. Our comforts and enjoyments on earth will all fail us; flesh and heart fail. 4. It ought to be our great concern to make it sure to ourselves, that when we fail at death, we may be "received into everlasting habitations" in heaven. The "habitations" in heaven are "everlasting;" not "made with hands," but "eternal," 2 Cor. v. 1. Christ is gone before, to prepare a place for those that are his, and is there ready to "receive them;" the bosom of Abraham is ready to receive them, and when a guard of angels carries them thither, a choir of angels is ready to receive them there. The poor saints that are gone before to glory will receive those that in this world distributed to their necessities. 5. This is a good reason why we should use what we have in the world for the honour of God, and the good of our brethren, that thus we may with them "lay up in store a good bond," a good security, a good foundation "for the time to come," for an eternity to come.

The Rich Man.—Ver. 19. It is no sin to be rich, no sin to wear purple and fine linen, nor to keep a plentiful table, if a man's estate will afford it. Nor are we told that he got his estate by fraud, oppression, or extortion, no, nor that he was drunk, or made others drunk; but, 1. Christ would hereby show that a man may have a great deal of the wealth, and pomp, and pleasure of this world, and yet lie and perish for ever under God's wrath and curse. We cannot infer from men's living great, either that God loves them in giving them so much, or that they love God for giving them so much; happiness consists not in these things. 2. That plenty and pleasures are a very dangerous, and to many a fatal temptation to luxury and sensuality, and forgetfulness of God and another world. This man might have been happy, if he had not had great possessions and enjoyments. 3. That the indulgence of the body, and the ease and pleasure of that, are the ruin of many a soul, and the interests of it. It is true, eating good meat, and wearing good clothes, are lawful; but it is as true that it often becomes the food and fuel of pride and luxury, and so turns into sin to us. 4. That feasting ourselves and our friends, and, at the same time, forgetting the distresses of the poor and afflicted, are very provoking to God, and damning to the soul. The sin of this rich man was not so much his dress or his diet, but his providing for himself only.

Lazarus.—Ver. 20. Here is a godly man, and one that will be for ever happy, in the that he may dip the tip of his finger in water, and cool my tongue; for I am tormented in this flame.[6]

25 But Abraham said,[7] [t]Son, [u]remember that thou in thy lifetime receivedst thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things: but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented.

26 And besides all this, between us and you there is a great gulf fixed: so that they which would pass from hence to you cannot; neither can they pass to us, that would come from thence.

27 Then he said, I pray thee therefore, father, that thou wouldest send him to my father's house:

28 For I have five brethren; that he may testify unto them, lest they also come into this [s]place of torment.

29 Abraham saith unto him, [b]They have Moses and the prophets; let them hear them.

30 And he said, Nay, father Abraham: but if one went unto them from the dead, they will repent.

31 And he said unto him, [d]If they hear not Moses and the prophets, [e]neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead.[8]

[6] Through the whole of this parable, the invisible state after death is described by images borrowed from the present life, and from the objects of our senses, and should not be taken according to the letter. We must not draw any certain consequences from particular circumstances mentioned in it, which perhaps are entirely ornamental.—JORTIN.

[7] The patriarch uses two arguments, the one that it is not reasonable, the other that it is not possible, for his request to be granted; and from this representation, we learn that the states of men are fixed at death. — BOOTHROYD.

11 ¶ And it came to pass, as he went to Jerusalem, that he passed through the midst of Samaria and Galilee.

12 And as he entered into a certain village, there met him ten men that were lepers, which stood afar off:[3]

13 And they lifted up their voices, and said, Jesus, Master, [s]have mercy on us.

14 And when he saw them, he said unto them, [t]Go shew yourselves unto the priests. And it came to pass, that, as they went, they were cleansed.

15 And [x]one of them, when he saw that he was healed, turned back, and with a loud voice glorified God, depth of adversity and distress. "There was a certain beggar" named "Lazarus;" a beggar of that name, eminently devout, and in great distress, was probably well known among good people at that time: a beggar, suppose such a one as Eleazer, or Lazarus. Some think Eleazer a proper name for any poor man; for it signifies the help of God, which they must fly to, that are destitute of other helps. This poor man was reduced to the last extremity, as miserable as you can likely suppose a man to be in this world as to outward things.

LESSON.—The Scripture is now the ordinary way of God's making known his mind to us, and it is sufficient; and it is presumption for us to prescribe any other way, nor have we any ground to expect or pray for the grace of God to work upon us in any other way abstracted from that, and when that is rejected and set aside. This that our Saviour here said, was soon after verified in the unbelieving Jews, who would not hear Moses and the prophets, Christ and the apostles, and then would not be persuaded, "though Lazarus rose from the dead;" (and perhaps it was with some eye to him that Christ named this poor man Lazarus;) nay, they consulted to put him to death, and did put him that raised him to death, and would not be persuaded by him neither, though he also "rose from the dead." When Eutychus was raised to life, the people that were present continued to hear Paul preach, but did not turn to inquire of him, Acts xx. 10, 11. Let us not therefore desire visions and apparitions, nor seek to the dead, but "to the law and to the testimony," Isa. i. 19, 20, for that is "the sure word of prophecy," which we may depend upon.—Henry.

CHAP. XVII. FORGIVENESS OF OFFENCE.—See Matt. xviii. 21.

HUMILITY.—Ver. 7—8. Christ's servants do not so much as merit his thanks for any service they do him; "'Doth he thank that servant?' Doth he reckon himself indebted to him for it? No, by no means." No good works of ours can merit any thing at the hand of God. We expect God's favour, not because we have by our services made him a Debtor to us, but because he has by his promises made himself a Debtor to his own honour, and that we may plead with him, but cannot sue for a quantum meruit—according to merit. Whatever we do for Christ, though it should be more perhaps than some others do, yet it is no more than is our duty to do. Though we should "do all things that are commanded us," and alas! in many things we come short of that, yet there is no work of supererogation, it is but what we are bound to by that first and great commandment, of "loving God" with "all our heart and soul," which includes the utmost. The best servants of Christ, even when they do the best services, must humbly acknowledge that they are "unprofitable servants;" though they are not those unprofitable servants that bury their talents, and shall be cast into "utter darkness," yet as to Christ, and any advantage that can accrue to him by their services, they are "unprofitable:" our "goodness extendeth not unto God," nor "if we are righteous is he the better," Ps. xvi. 2; Job xxii. 2; xxxv. 7. God cannot be a Gainer by our services, and therefore cannot be made a Debtor by them. He has no need of us, nor can our services make any addition to his perfections; it becomes us therefore to call ourselves "unprofitable servants," but to call his service a profitable service, for God is happy without us, but we are undone without him.—Henry.

INGRATITUDE—THE TEN LEPERS.—Ver. 11—19. At some place on the confines of Galilee and Samaria, these lepers met Christ in his last circuit. They were companions in distress, and therefore they associated together, though one of them was a Samaritan. Having heard of our Lord's miracles, they earnestly begged of him to compassionate their case and cleanse their leprosy, from a general belief of his power to perform the miracle, though most of them seem to have been destitute of saving faith. Jesus therefore sent them to the priests, some of whom probably lived in that neighbourhood: and being cleansed by the mighty power of Christ, when at a distance from him, they ascertained their cure before the priests, and returned home. But one of them, even the Samaritan, being more deeply affected with the mercy vouchsafed him, came back to Jesus, glorifying the God of Israel; and, returning thanks to his gracious Benefactor, he cast himself prostrate at his feet. This gave our Lord occasion to remark, as with surprise, that this stranger alone had returned to give glory to God; whilst the nine others who had been cleansed, though they were Jews, had failed of rendering him this tribute of gratitude! The Samaritan alone seems to have believed in Jesus, as the Messiah, the Saviour of sinners; and this faith, united with a consciousness of his own unworthiness, produced this difference in his conduct. He was therefore dismissed, with the assurance, that his faith had saved him: the others obtained the outward cure, he only got the spiritual blessing.

LOT'S WIFE, &c.—Ver. 32—37. Lot's wife left Sodom; yet lost her life by looking back to those possessions and connections, which she was called to forsake: and thus she was made a perpetual warning to men in every age, not to indulge a wish for those sinful interests which religion bids them renounce, lest they should be drawn aside to destruction.—Our Lord further reminded the disciples, that in the day when he should be revealed to execute vengeance on the Jews, those professed Christians, who had sought to preserve their lives by forsaking their religion, would perish miserably; whilst those who were willing to lose their lives for his sake, should be marvellously protected. Providence would indeed singularly interpose, "in that night," in the depth of the distress

The importunate widow, 1. The Pharisee and publican, 9. Children brought to Christ, 15. All to be left for Christ's sake, 28.

AND he spake a parable unto them to this end, [a]that men ought always to pray, and not to faint;

2 Saying, There was in a *city a judge, [c]which feared not God, neither regarded man:

3 And there was a widow in that city; and she came unto him, saying, Avenge me of mine adversary.[1]

4 And he would not for a while: but afterward he said within himself, Though I fear not God, nor regard man;

5 Yet [h]because this widow troubleth me, I will avenge her, lest by her continual coming she weary me.

6 And the Lord said, Hear what the unjust judge saith.[2]

7 And shall not God [l]avenge his own elect, [m]which cry day and night unto him, though he bear long with them?

8 I tell you, that he will avenge them speedily. Nevertheless, [p]when the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?

9 ¶ And he spake this parable unto certain [q]which trusted in themselves *that they were righteous, [r]and despised others:

10 Two men went up into the temple to pray; the one a Pharisee, and the other a publican.

11 The Pharisee stood[3] and prayed thus with himself, God, I thank thee, that I am not [y]as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican.

12 I [z]fast twice in the week, I give tithes of all that I possess.

13 And the publican, standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven, but smote upon his breast, saying, [d]God be merciful to me a sinner.[4]

14 I tell you, this man went down to his house [g]justified rather than the other: for [h]every one that exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

15 ¶ And they brought unto him also infants, that he would touch them: but when his disciples saw it, they rebuked them.

16 But Jesus called them unto him, and said, [i]Suffer little children[5] to come unto me, and forbid them not: [m]for of such is the kingdom of God.

17 Verily I say unto you, [n]Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, shall in no wise enter therein.

18 ¶ And a certain ruler asked him, saying, Good Master, [q]what shall I do to inherit eternal life?

19 And Jesus said unto him, Why callest thou me good? none is good, save one, that is, God.

20 Thou knowest the commandments, [t]Do not commit adultery, Do not kill, Do not steal, Do not bear false witness, Honour thy father and thy mother.

21 And he said, [u]All these have I kept from my youth up.

22 Now when Jesus heard these things, he said unto him, Yet lackest thou one thing: sell all that thou hast,[6] and distribute unto the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come, follow me.

23 And when he heard this, he was very sorrowful: for he was very rich.

24 And when Jesus saw that he was very sorrowful, he said, [c]How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God!

25 For it is easier for [d]a camel to go through a needle's eye, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.

26 And they that heard it said, Who then can be saved?

27 And he said, [f]The things which are impossible with men, are possible with God.

28 ¶ Then Peter said, [s]Lo, we have left all, and followed thee.

29 And he said unto them, Verily I say unto you, There is no man that hath left house, or parents, or brethren, or wife, or children, for the kingdom of God's sake,

30 Who shall not receive manifold more in this present time,[7] and in the world to come life everlasting.

31 ¶ Then he took unto him the twelve, and said unto them, Behold, we go up to Jerusalem, and all things that are written by the coming on the Jews, to preserve the remnant of believers that were living among them: insomuch that when two persons were sleeping or working together in the same place, the Romans would seize upon or kill the one, and the other would escape in some unexpected manner. The whole passage may be accommodated to the day of judgment, and the eternal state of men in every age: but many expressions forbid us to give that as the primary interpretation of it.—Scott.

CHAP. XVIII. BLESSEDNESS OF IMPORTUNITY—PARABLE OF THE UNJUST JUDGE.—Ver. 1. This parable has its key hanging at the door; the drift and design of it are prefixed. Christ spake it with this intent, to teach us that "men ought always to pray, and not to faint." It supposes that all God's people are praying people; all God's children keep up both a constant and an occasional correspondence with him, send to him statedly, and upon every emergency. It is our privilege and honour that we may pray; it is our duty, we ought to pray, we sin if we neglect it. It is to be our constant work; we ought always to pray, it is that which the duty of every day requires; we must pray, and never grow weary of praying, nor think of leaving it off till it comes to be swallowed up in everlasting praise. But that which seems particularly designed here, is, to teach us constancy and perseverance in our requests for some spiritual mercies that we are in pursuit of, relating either to ourselves or to the church of God; when we are praying for strength against our spiritual enemies, our lusts and corruptions, which are our worst enemies; we must continue instant in prayer, must pray, and "not faint," for we shall not "seek God's face in vain;" so we must likewise in our prayers for the deliverance of the people of God out of the hands of their persecutors and oppressors.—Henry.

PARABLE OF THE PHARISEE AND THE PUBLICAN.—Ver. 9—14. Our Lord stated, that two men went up to the temple to perform their devotions: the one a Pharisee, one of that sect who were looked upon as examples of piety; the other a publican, one of those who were regarded as the vilest of sinners. The Pharisee, full of self-confidence, stood boldly, "by himself," at a distance from other worshippers, that he might be noticed, or that he might not be polluted, by them. In this situation he addressed God, thanking him, that he was not as other men, or as the rest of men, were; enumerating some vices, from which he was free, and some supposed duties in which he was exact; and viewing the publican at a distance with contempt and abhorrence. A humble believer indeed will say, "God, I thank thee that I am not like other men;" meaning that the whole difference between him and the vilest of those who disgrace civil society, or were cut off from it by the hand of the executioner, is owing wholly to providential restraints, or to the sanctifying grace of God: but at the same time he has very many sins to confess with deep humiliation; he feels himself a guilty, polluted, weak, foolish, indigent creature; he does not readily conclude any one to be viler than he is, all circumstances considered; he pities and prays for the most abandoned, and hopes that they are penitent whenever there are favourable appearances; and he knows that he is still liable to be tempted to the most atrocious crimes, unless the Lord uphold him. Whereas "God, I thank thee," was but a word of course in the Pharisee's mouth. He spake as if he had not been a sinner, in any respect; and as if he were in no danger at all of falling into temptation and sin. He mentioned the publican as one for whom there was no pardon, or as if it had been impossible that he should repent: and he could not expatiate on his own goodness, without contrasting it with the publican's supposed extortion and injustice. Indeed there was neither confession nor petition in his prayer; but he was in his own opinion "rich, increased with goods, and had need of nothing." But a man may be exempt from the gross crimes of robbery, extortion, and adultery, and yet be covetous, unmerciful, contentious, revengeful, proud, envious, deceitful; in short, like Satan in all the leading features of his character. He may use uncommanded austerities, fast twice a-week, or more frequently, be scrupulously honest in some particulars even to minuteness; and yet be destitute of judgment, mercy, and the love of God: nay, he may be a vile hypocrite, a perjurer, and even a sensualist: he may not be "like the publican;" and yet far viler than he. —But the publican "stood afar off," in some corner of the place, as unworthy to come near the other worshippers, and especially to approach that holy man, the Pharisee; and though his burdened conscience and inward distress constrained him to pray, yet he presumed not to lift up his eyes unto heaven; but with down-cast looks, as one overwhelmed with shame, and smiting upon his breast, as full of self-abhorrence at the recollection of his crimes, only said, "God be merciful to me a sinner." These emphatical words, which in the original imply the idea of atonement as the ground of forgiveness, when really the language of the heart, express humiliation for sin, repentance, submission to God's righteousness, faith, and hope of pardon and acceptance. Thus the publican left his cause with God, and returned home to his house. But our Lord assured those "who trusted in themselves," that he was justified, or counted a righteous person before God, "rather than" or in preference to, "the other." The Pharisee, relying on the merit of his own goodness, and puffed up with an opinion of his singular holiness, remained under the condemnation of the law, and a stranger to the grace of the gospel: but the publican, by confessing his guilt and crying for mercy as a sinner, became partaker of the blessings of the new covenant of mercy and grace.—Scott.

9 And Jesus said unto him, [q]This day is salvation come to this house, forsomuch as he also is a son of Abraham.

10 For [s]the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost.

11 ¶ And as they heard these things, he added, and spake a parable, because he was nigh to Jerusalem, and because [t]they thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear.

12 He said therefore, A certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return.[4]

13 And he called [a]his ten servants, and [b]delivered them ten *pounds,[5] and said unto them, Occupy till I come.

14 But his citizens hated him, and sent a message after him, saying, We will not have this man to reign over us.

15 And it came to pass, that, when he was returned, having received the kingdom, then he commanded these servants to be called unto him, to whom he had given the money, that he might know how much every man had gained by trading.

16 Then came the first, saying, Lord, thy pound hath gained ten pounds.

17 And he said unto him, Well, thou good servant: because thou hast [h]been faithful in a very little, have thou authority over ten cities.

18 And the second came, saying, Lord, thy pound hath gained five pounds.

19 And he said likewise to him, Be thou also over five cities.

20 And another came, saying, Lord, behold, here is thy pound, which I have kept laid up in a napkin:[6]

21 For [m]I feared thee, [n]because thou art an austere man: thou takest up that thou layedst not down, and reapest that thou didst not sow.

22 And he saith unto him, Out of thine own mouth will I judge thee, thou wicked servant. Thou knewest that I was an austere man, taking up that I laid not down, and reaping that I did not sow:

23 Wherefore then gavest not thou my money into the bank, that at my coming I might have required mine own with [q]usury?

24 And he said unto them that stood by, [r]Take from him the pound, and give it to him that hath ten pounds.

25 (And they said unto him, [s]Lord, he hath ten pounds.)

26 For I say unto you, [t]That unto every

Christ's Sufferings foretold by Himself.—Ver. 31. Two things here are, which we had in the other evangelists. 1. The sufferings of Christ are here spoken of as the "fulfilling of the Scriptures," with which consideration Christ reconciled himself to them, and would reconcile them; "All things that are written by the prophets concerning the Son of man," especially the hardships he should undergo, "shall be accomplished." Note, The Spirit of Christ in the Old Testament prophets, "testified beforehand his sufferings," and "the glory that shall follow," 1 Pet. i. 11. This proves that the Scriptures are the "word of God," for they had their exact and full accomplishment; and that Jesus Christ was "sent of God," for they had their accomplishment "in him;" this was "he that should come," for, whatever was foretold concerning the Messiah, was verified in him; and he would submit to any thing for the fulfilling of Scripture, that not one jot or tittle of that should fall to the ground. This makes the "offence of the cross to cease," and puts an honour upon it. "Thus it was written, and thus it behoved Christ to suffer," thus it became him. 2. The ignominy and disgrace done to Christ in his sufferings, are here most insisted upon. The other evangelists had said that he should be "mocked:" but here it is added, "He shall be spitefully treated"—he shall be loaded with contumely and contempt, shall have all possible reproach put upon him.—Henry.

CHAP. XIX. Zaccheus.—Ver. 1—10. Zaccheus seems to have farmed the taxes of a certain district: so that he was "the chief among the publicans," or, the ruler of them; having many others under him, who either rented of him smaller portions, or were employed as his servants to collect the taxes. It is probable that he possessed considerable property, before he engaged in this employment; as large securities were required of those, who farmed the revenue under the Roman governors: but he had doubtless greatly increased his wealth by his lucrative occupation. It does not appear, that he had previously any serious concern about religion; and his contrivance to get a sight of Jesus was probably the result of curiosity, which the miracle just before wrought on Bartimeus could not fail to increase. In what manner the words of our Lord affected his mind, we cannot tell; but without all doubt they were attended with a divine influence, to humble and change his heart, and to make way for true repentance and living faith; he therefore gladly welcomed Christ, and doubtless was further instructed, convinced, and determined by his discourse. Whilst the Pharisees and others, as usual, murmured at our Lord's inviting himself to be the guest of a man, whose employment and character were infamous, in preference to any of the priests, or Levites, who resided there, Zaccheus stood forth in the midst of the company, and avowing the change which had taken place in his judgment and disposition, he professed his purpose of immediately devoting half his wealth to charitable uses, and of making fourfold restitution to all those whom he had wronged. The publicans were used to charge the people more than the real amount of their taxes; and then if they refused to pay it, they "falsely accused them" to the Romans, as disobedient to their authority; and thus they obtained the assistance of the military to enforce their exorbitant demands: in every instance that Zaccheus had thus, or in any other manner, oppressed and injured any man, he was determined to make the utmost restitution required by the law in case of concealed theft. It has been argued, that he could not have got much of his wealth by extortion, or his estate would not have sufficed for such a restitution, after half of it had been given to the poor; especially if he reserved any part of it for himself: but it is more reasonable to suppose, that he did not give half to the poor till after restitution had been made, as he could not previously consider his riches as his own, even to give away. Perhaps he lay under a worse character than he really deserved: yet the transaction seems recorded as an illustrious triumph of mercy and grace; and the whole narration implies that he was before a bad man.—But Jesus, knowing the sincerity and humility of his professed subjection to the gospel, declared that "salvation was 'that day' come to his house;" he, and his family had been estranged from it, but it was now come thither: "forasmuch as he also was a son of Abraham," not only according to the flesh, but as being now made partaker of Abraham's faith and privileges, and the promises made to him and his seed: for this was indeed the very end for which he, "the Son of man," was come into the world, even to seek out and save lost sinners.—"The name of Zaccheus, (which is the same with Zaccai, Ezra ii. 9,) shows that he was a Jew." [Doddridge.]—Scott.

Parable of the Talents or Pounds.—Ver. 11—27. Now in the account given up, observe, First, the "good account" which was given by "some" of the servants, and the master's approbation of them. Two such are instanced, 1. They had both made considerable improvements, but not both "alike;" one had gained "ten pounds" by his trading, and another "five." Those that are diligent and faithful in serving Christ, are commonly blessed in being made blessings to the places where they live. They shall "see the travail of their soul," and not "labour in vain." And yet, all that are alike "faithful," are not alike "successful." And perhaps though they were both faithful, it is intimated that one of them took more pains, and applied himself more closely to his business, than the other, and sped accordingly. Blessed Paul was surely this servant one which hath shall be given; [u]and from him that hath not, even that he hath shall be taken away from him.

27 But those [x]mine enemies,[4] which would not that I should reign over them, bring hither, and slay them before me.

28 ¶ And when he had thus spoken, [y]he went before, ascending up to Jerusalem.

29 And it came to pass, when he was come nigh to Bethphage and Bethany, at the mount called the mount of Olives, he sent two of his disciples,

30 Saying, Go ye into the village over against you; in the which, at your entering, ye shall find a colt tied, whereon yet never man sat: loose him, and bring him hither.

31 And if any man ask you, Why do ye loose him? thus shall ye say unto him, Because [c]the Lord hath need of him.

32 And they that were sent went their way, and found even as he had said unto them.

33 And as they were loosing the colt, the owners thereof said unto them, Why loose ye the colt?

34 And they said, The Lord hath need of him.

35 And they brought him to Jesus: and they cast their garments upon the colt, and they set Jesus thereon.

36 And as he went, they spread their clothes in the way.

37 And when he was come nigh, even now at the descent of the mount of Olives, [s]the whole multitude of the disciples began to rejoice and praise God with a loud voice, for all the mighty works that they had seen, 38 Saying, [h]Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord; [i]peace in heaven, and [k]glory in the highest.

39 And some of the Pharisees from among the multitude said unto him, Master, rebuke thy disciples.

40 And he answered and said unto them, I tell you, that if these should hold their peace, the stones would immediately cry out.

41 ¶ And when he was come near, he beheld the city, and wept over it,[5]

42 Saying, [o]If thou hadst known, even thou, at least [p]in this thy day, [q]the things which belong unto thy peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes.

43 For the days shall come upon thee, that thine enemies shall cast a trench[6] about thee, and compass thee round, and keep thee in on every side, 44 And shall lay thee even with the ground, and thy children within thee; and they shall not [r]leave in thee one stone upon another; [s]because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation.

45 And he went into the temple, and began to cast out them that sold therein, and them that bought;

46 Saying unto them, It is written, My house is the house of prayer; but ye have made it a den of thieves.

47 And [t]he taught daily in the temple. But the chief priests, and the scribes, and the chief of the people, sought to destroy him;

48 And [f]could not find what they might do: for all the people [t]were very attentive to hear him.

CHAP. XX.

Christ avoucheth his authority, 1. The parable of the vineyard, 9. Of giving tribute to Cesar, 20. Of the resurrection, 27.

AND it came to pass, that on one of those days, as he taught the people in the temple, and preached the gospel, the chief priests and the scribes came upon him, with the elders,

2 And spake unto him, saying, [e]Tell us, by what authority doest thou these things? or [d]who is he that gave thee this authority?

3 And he answered and said unto them, I will also ask you one thing; and answer me:

4 The baptism of John, was it from heaven, or of men?

5 And they reasoned with themselves, saying, If we shall say, From heaven; he will say, [h]Why then believed ye him not?

6 But and if we say, Of men; [i]all the people will stone us:[1] [k]for they be persuaded that John was a prophet.

7 And they answered, That they could not tell whence it was.

8 And Jesus said unto them, Neither tell I you by what authority I do these things.

9 ¶ Then began he to speak to the people this parable; A certain man [o]planted a vineyard, [p]and let it forth to husbandmen, and went into a far country for a long time.

10 And at the season[2] he [t]sent a servant to the husbandmen, that they should give him of the fruit of the vineyard: but the husbandmen [u]beat him, and sent him away empty.

11 And again he sent another servant: and they beat him also, and [x]entreated him shamefully, and sent him away empty.

12 And again he sent a third: and they wounded him also, and cast him out.

13 Then said the lord of the vineyard, What shall I do? [a]I will send my beloved son: [b]it may be they will reverence him when they see him.

14 But when the husbandmen saw him, they reasoned among themselves, saying, This is [d]the heir: come, [e]let us kill him, that the inheritance may be ours.

15 So [f]they cast him out of the vineyard, that gained "ten pounds," double to what any of the rest did, for he "laboured more abundantly than they all," and "fully preached the gospel of Christ." 2. They both acknowledged their obligations to their Master, for intrusting them with these abilities and opportunities to do him service; Lord, it is not "my" industry, but "thy" pound that has gained "ten pounds." Note, God must have all the glory of all our gains; "not unto us," but unto him, must be "the praises," Ps. cxv. 1. Paul, who gained the "ten pounds," acknowledges, "'I laboured, yet not I. By the grace of God, I am what I am,' and do what I do; and 'his grace was not in vain,'" 1 Cor. xv. 10. He will not speak of what he had done, but of what "God had done by him," Rom. xv. 18. 3. They were both commended for their fidelity and industry; "Well done, thou good servant." And to the other he "said likewise." Note, They who do that which is good, shall have "praise of the same." "Do well," and Christ will say to thee, "Well done;" and if he saith "Well done," the matter is not great who saith otherwise. See Gen. iv. 7. 4. They were "preferred" in proportion to the improvement they had made; "'Because thou hast been faithful in a very little,' and didst not say, 'As good sit still as go to trade with one pound, what can one do with so small a stock?' but did humbly and honestly apply thyself to the improvement of that, 'have thou authority over ten cities.'" Note, Those are in a fair way to rise, who are content to begin low. "He that has used the office of a deacon well, purchaseth to himself a good degree," 1 Tim. iii. 13. Two things are hereby promised the apostles; (1.) That, when they have taken pains to "plant" many churches, they shall have the satisfaction and honour of presiding in them, and governing among them; they shall have great respect paid them, and have a great interest in the love and esteem of good Christians. "He that keepeth the fig-tree, shall eat the fruit thereof;" and he that "laboureth in the word and doctrine," shall be "counted worthy of double honour." (2.) That, when they have served their generation according to the will of Christ, though they pass through this world despised and trampled upon, and perhaps pass out of it under disgrace and persecution, as the apostles did, yet in the other world they shall reign as kings with Christ, shall sit with him on his throne, shall have "power over the nations," Rev. ii. 26. The happiness of heaven will be a much greater advancement to a good minister or Christian, than it would be to a poor tradesman, that with much ado had cleared ten pounds, to be made governor of ten cities. He that had gained but "five pounds," had dominion over "five cities." This intimates that there are "degrees of glory" in heaven; every vessel will be alike "full" but not alike "large." And the degrees of glory there, will be according to the degrees of usefulness here. Secondly, The "bad account" that was given by "one" of them, and the sentence passed upon him, for his [illegible]ness and unfaithfulness. 1. He owned that he had not "traded" with the pound with which he had been intrusted. "'Lord, behold, here is thy pound;' it is true I have not made it 'more,' but withal I have not made it 'less;' I have kept it safe 'laid up in a napkin.'" This represents the carelessness of those who have gifts, but never lay out themselves to do good with them; it is all one to them, whether the interests of Christ's kingdom sink or swim, go backward or forward; for their parts, they will take no care about it, no pains, be at no expenses, run no hazard; those are the servants that lay up their pound "in a napkin;" who think it is enough to say that they have done no hurt in the world but "did no good." —Henry.

Payment of Tribute.—Ver. 21. "Jesus perceived their craftiness," ver. 23. Note, Those that are most crafty in their designs against Christ and his gospel, cannot with all their art conceal them from his cognizance. He can see through the most political disguises, and so break through the most dangerous snare; for "surely in vain is the net spread in the sight of any bird." He did not give them a direct answer, but reproved them for offering to impose upon him, ("Why tempt ye me?") and called for a "piece of money," current money with the merchants; ("Show me a penny;") and asked them whose money it was; whose stamp it bore; who coined it. They owned, "It is Cæsar's money." "Why then," saith Christ, "you should first have asked whether it was lawful to pay and receive Cæsar's money among yourselves, and to admit that to be the instrument of your commerce. But you, having granted that by a common consent, are condemned by your own act, and, no doubt, you ought to give tribute to him who furnished you with this convenience for your trade, protects you in it, and lends you the sanction of his authority for the value of your money. You must therefore 'render to Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's.' In civil things you ought to submit to the civil powers, and so, if Cæsar protects you in your civil rights by laws and the administration of justice, you ought to 'pay him tribute;' but in sacred things God only is your King, you are not bound to be of Cæsar's religion; you must 'render to God the things that are God's,' must worship and adore him only, and not any golden image that Cæsar sets up;" and we must worship and adore him in such a way as he has and killed him. [s]What therefore shall the LORD of the vineyard do unto them?

16 He shall come and [h]destroy[3] these husbandmen, and shall give the vineyard to others. And when they heard it, they said, God forbid.

17 And he [i]beheld them, and said, [k]What is this then that is written, [l]The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner?

18 Whosoever [m]shall fall upon that stone shall be broken; but on whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder.

19 ¶ And the chief priests and the scribes [n]the same hour sought to lay hands on him; and they feared the people: for they perceived that he had spoken this parable against them.

20 And they watched him, and sent forth spies, which should feign themselves just men, that they might take hold of his words, that so [q]they might deliver him unto the power and authority of the governor.

21 And they asked him, saying, Master, we know that thou [s]sayest and teachest rightly, neither [t]acceptest thou the person of any, but teachest the way of God *truly;

22 Is it [u]lawful for us to give tribute unto Cesar, or no?

23 But he perceived their craftiness, and said unto them, [y]Why tempt ye me?

24 Shew me [z]a penny. Whose image and superscription hath it? They answered and said, Cesar's.

25 And he said unto them, [a]Render therefore unto Cesar the things which be Cesar's, and [b]unto God the things which be God's.

26 And they could not take hold of his words before the people: and they marvelled at his answer, and held their peace.

27 ¶ Then came to him certain of [c]the Sadducees, which deny that there is any resurrection;[4] and they asked him,

28 Saying, Master, Moses wrote unto us, If any man's brother die, having a wife, and he die without children, that his brother should take his wife, and raise up seed unto his brother.

29 There were therefore seven brethren: and the first took a wife, [g]and died without children.

30 And the second took her to wife, and he died childless.

31 And the third took her; and in like manner the seven also: and they left no children, and died.

32 Last of all the woman [h]died also.

33 Therefore [i]in the resurrection whose wife of them is she? for seven had her to wife.

34 And Jesus, answering, said unto them, The [k]children of this world [l]marry, and are given in marriage:

35 But they which shall be [m]accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead,[5] [o]neither marry, nor are given in marriage:

36 Neither [p]can they die any more: for they are [q]equal unto the angels; and are [r]the children of God, being the children of the resurrection.

37 Now, that the dead are raised, even Moses shewed at the bush, when he calleth the Lord the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob.

38 For he is not [u]a God of the dead, but of the living: [x]for all live unto him.

4 For all these have of their abundance cast in unto the offerings of God: but she of her penury hath cast in [e]all the living that she had.

5 ¶ And as some spake of the temple, how it was adorned with goodly stones and gifts, he said,

6 As for these things which ye behold, the days will come, in the which [g]there shall not be left one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down.

7 ¶ And they asked him, saying, Master, but when shall these things be? and what sign will there be when these things shall come to pass?

appointed, and not according to the inventions of Cæsar. It is God only that has authority to say, "My son, give me thy heart."

REFUTATION OF THE SADDUCEES.—See Matt. xxii. 23.

THE FUTURE LIFE.—Ver. 36. See what Christ here saith of it. 1. They "neither marry, nor are given in marriage." Those that are entered into the joy of their Lord are entirely taken up with that, and need not the joy of the bridegroom in his bride. The love in that world of love is all seraphic, and such as eclipses and loses the purest and most pleasing loves we entertain ourselves with in this world of sense. Where the body itself shall be a spiritual body, the delights of sense are all vanished; and where there is a perfection of holiness, there is no occasion for marriage as a preservative from sin; into that "new Jerusalem" there enters nothing that defiles. 2. They cannot "die any more;" and this comes in as a reason why they do not "marry." In this dying world there must be marriage, in order to the filling up of the vacancies made by death; but where there are no burials, there is no need of weddings. This crowns the comfort of that world, that there is no more death there, which sullies all the beauty, and damps all the comforts of this world. Here death reigns, but thence it is for ever excluded. 3. They are "equal unto the angels." In the other evangelists it was said, they are "as the angels," but here they are said to be "equal to the angels"—angels' peers; they have of glory and bliss no way inferior to that of the holy angels. They shall see the same sight, be employed in the same work, and share in the same joys, with the holy angels. Saints, when they come to heaven, shall be naturalized, and though by nature strangers, yet, having "obtained this freedom" with a "great sum," which Christ paid for them, they have in all respects equal privileges with them that were free-born, the angels that are the natives and aborigines of that country. They shall be companions with the angels, and converse with those blessed spirits that love them dearly, and with an innumerable company, to whom they are now come in faith, hope, and love. 4. They are the "children of God," and so they are as the angels, who are called the "sons of God." In the "inheritance of sons," the "adoption of sons" will be completed. Hence believers are said to "wait for the adoption," even "the redemption of the body," Rom. viii. 13. For till the body is redeemed from the grave, the adoption is not completed. "Now are we the sons of God," 1 John iii. 2. We have the nature and disposition of sons, but that will not be perfected till we come to heaven. 5. They are the "children of the resurrection," that is, they are made capable of the employments and enjoyments of the future state; they are "born to that world," belong to that family, had their education for it here, and shall there have their inheritance in it. They are the "children of God," being the "children of the resurrection." Note, God owns those only for his children, that are the children of the resurrection, that are born from above, are called to the world of spirits, and prepared for that world, the children of that family.

DAVID'S SON AND LORD.—Ver. 41—43. The Scribes were students in the law, and expositors of it to the people; men in reputation for wisdom and honour, the generality of them were enemies to Christ and his gospel. 1. We have them here commending the reply which Christ made to the Sadducees concerning the resurrection, ver. 39, "Certain of the Scribes said, Master, thou hast well said." Christ had the testimony of his adversaries, that he said well; and therefore the Scribes were his enemies, because he would not conform to the traditions of the elders; but yet when he vindicated the fundamental practices of religion, and appeared in defence of them, even the Scribes commended his performance, and owned that he said well. Many that call themselves Christians, come short even of that spirit. 2. We have them here puzzled and run aground with a question concerning the Messiah. It was plain by many Scriptures, that Christ was to be the "Son of David;" even the blind man knew that, chap. xviii. 39, and yet it was plain that David called the Messiah his Lord, his Owner, and Ruler, and Benefactor; "The Lord said to my Lord." God said it to the Messiah, Ps. cx. 1. Now if he be his Son, why doth he call him his Lord? If he be his Lord, why do we call him his Son? This he left them to consider of, but they could not reconcile this seeming contradiction; thanks be to God, we can; that Christ, as God, was David's Lord, but Christ, as Man, was David's Son. He was both the "Root" and the "Offspring of David," Rev. xxii. 16. By his human nature he was the Offspring of David, a Branch of his family; by his divine nature he was the Root of David, from whom he had his being and life, and all the supplies of grace.—Henry.

VARIOUS SIGNS OF CHRIST'S COMING.—See Matt. xxiv.; and Mark xiii.

WARS.—Ver. 9, 10. They must expect to hear of great commotions in the nations, and many terrible judgments inflicted upon the Jews and their neighbours. 1. There shall be "bloody wars." "Nation shall rise against nation;" one part of the Jewish nation against another, or rather the whole against the Romans. Encouraged by the false christs, they shall wickedly endeavour to throw off the Roman yoke, by taking up arms against the Roman powers; when they had rejected the liberty with which Christ would have made them free, they were left to themselves, to grasp at their civil liberty in ways that were sinful, and therefore could not be successful. 2. There shall be "earthquakes," great earthquakes, "in divers places," which shall not only frighten people, but destroy towns and houses, and bury many in the ruins of them. 3. There shall be "famines"

8 And he said, [k]Take heed that ye be not deceived: [l]for many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and the time draweth near: go ye not therefore after them.

9 But [m]when ye shall hear of wars and commotions, be not terrified: for these things must first come to pass; [n]but the end is not by and by.

10 Then said he unto them, Nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom:

11 And great earthquakes shall be in divers places, and famines, and pestilences; and fearful sights,[2] [p]and great signs shall there be from heaven.

12 But [q]before all these, they shall lay their hands on you, and persecute you, delivering you up to the synagogues, and into prisons, being brought before kings and rulers for my name's sake.

13 And [r]it shall turn to you for a testimony.

14 [s]Settle it therefore in your hearts, not to meditate before what ye shall answer:

15 For [t]I will give you a mouth and wisdom, [u]which all your adversaries shall not be able to gainsay nor resist.

16 And [x]ye shall be betrayed both by parents, and brethren, and kinsfolks, and friends; [y]and some of you shall they cause to be put to death.

17 And [z]ye shall be hated of all men [a]for my name's sake.

18 But [b]there shall not an hair of your head perish.

19 In your [c]patience possess ye your souls.

20 And [d]when ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh.

21 Then let them which are in Judea [e]flee into the mountains; and let them which are [f]in the midst of it depart out; and let not them that are in the countries enter thereinto.

22 For these be the days of vengeance, that all things which are written may be fulfilled.

23 But [i]woe unto them that are with child, and to them that give suck, in those days! for there shall be [k]great distress in the land, and wrath upon this people.

24 And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be [l]led away captive into all nations: and [m]Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles,[3] [n]until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled.

25 ¶ And there shall be [o]signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; and "pestilences," the common effects of war, which destroy the fruits of the earth, and, by exposing men to ill weather and reducing them to ill diet, occasion infectious diseases. God has various ways of punishing a provoking people. The four sorts of judgments which the Old Testament prophets so often speak of, are threatened by the New Testament prophets too; for though spiritual judgments are more commonly inflicted in gospel-times, yet God makes use of temporal judgments also. 4. There shall be "fearful sights," and "great signs from heaven," uncommon appearances in the clouds, comets and blazing stars, which frighten the ordinary sort of beholders, and have always been looked upon as ominous, and portending something bad.

Divine Assistance.—Ver. 14, 15. "I will give you a mouth and wisdom." This proves Christ to be God, for it is God's prerogative to "give wisdom," and he it is that "made man's mouth." Note. First, A "mouth" and "wisdom" together completely fit a man both for services and sufferings; "wisdom" to know what to say, and a "mouth" wherewith to say it as it should be said. It is a great happiness to have both matter and words wherewith to honour God and do good; to have in the mind a store-house well furnished with things new and old, and a door of utterance by which to bring them forth. Secondly, Those that plead Christ's cause, may depend upon him to give them "a mouth and wisdom," which way soever they are called to plead it, especially when they are brought before magistrates for his name's sake. It is not said that he will send an angel from heaven to answer for them, though he could do that, but that he will give them a "mouth" and "wisdom" to enable them to answer for themselves; which puts a great honour upon them, which requires them to use the gifts and graces Christ furnishes them with, and redounds the more to the glory of God, who "stills the enemy and the avenger out of the mouths of babes and sucklings." Thirdly, When Christ gives to his witnesses a "mouth and wisdom," they are enabled to say that both for him and themselves, which "all their adversaries are not able to gainsay or resist," so that they are silenced and put to confusion. This was remarkably fulfilled presently after the pouring out of the Spirit, by whom Christ gave his disciples this mouth and "wisdom," when the apostles were brought before the priests and rulers, and answered them so as to make them ashamed, Acts iv. v. and vi.—Henry.

Doom of Jerusalem.—Ver. 20—24. St. Luke explains the language of the prophet Daniel, and that of the other evangelists, by saying, "When ye see Jerusalem compassed by armies;" instead of saying, "When ye see the abomination of desolation," &c.—Days of vengeance. Eleven hundred thousand Jews are recorded to have fallen in the siege of Jerusalem, besides a vast multitude in other places: nearly a hundred thousand were sold for slaves, and reduced to the most abject captivity in distant countries: the remains of that devoted nation have been dispersed as captives, or in a most dependent, oppressed condition, throughout the kingdoms of the earth; and yet have been preserved a distinct people for above one thousand seven hundred years! This unparalleled event was doubtless intended, among other reasons, that they might be undeniable witnesses, or monuments, of the truth of the Scriptures; of that part which they reject, as well as of that which they retain. Jerusalem has ever since been trodden under foot, or governed with despotic sway, by the Gentiles; by the Romans, Saracens, Mamalucks, Franks, and Turks, who possess it to this day. A law was made by the Roman victors forbidding any Jew to dwell in their ancient inheritance, or to come within sight of Jerusalem: the foundations of the old city were ploughed up; a new city was at length builded by the conquerors, called Ælia, and an idolatrous temple was erected in the place where the temple of Jehovah had stood. In the days of Constantine and afterwards, the city was indeed possessed by Christians, among others; but they were chiefly the Gentile converts, and the Jews were driven thence with great severity.

Sobriety.—Ver. 34—36. Similar exhortations have been considered in the parallel Scriptures, which may be understood as addressed to the primitive Christians, who were waiting for those awful events which had been foretold; but they are equally applicable to those great concerns in which all men are interested.—Excess in eating, drinking, and other animal indulgences, hath a tendency, not only to oppress and disorder the body, but to stupify and darken the powers of the understanding, and to render the affections carnal and torpid. So that these sensualities, as well as the cares attending the pursuit of wealth and worldly honours and distinctions, unfit men for religious duties, and make way for the day of evil coming upon them unawares. As the Roman armies invaded Judea and besieged Jerusalem, when they were not expected; and the Jews were everywhere taken, as "a bird in the snare of the fowler;" so death surprises most "men that dwell on the face of the whole earth," in the same unprepared state: and so will the day of judgment.—Accounted worthy, &c. That is, meet persons to be thus delivered and accepted. This must be sought by constant earnest prayer, and must "therefore be the gift of God," and not the worthiness of man.—Scott.

The Lord's Supper.—Ver. 19, 20. The passover and the deliverance out of Egypt were typical and prophetic signs of a Christ to come, who should by dying deliver us from sin and death, and the tyranny of Satan; but they shall no more say, "The Lord liveth, that brought us up out of the land of Egypt," a much greater deliverance shall eclipse nity to betray him unto them *in the absence of the multitude.

7 ¶ Then came the day of unleavened bread, when the passover must be killed.

8 And he sent Peter and John,[z] saying, [a]Go and prepare us the passover, that we may eat.

9 And they said unto him, Where wilt thou that we prepare?

10 And he said unto them, Behold, when ye are entered into the city, there shall a man meet you, bearing a pitcher of water; follow him into the house where he entereth in.

11 And ye shall say unto the goodman of the house, [l]The Master saith unto thee, [m]Where is the guest-chamber, where I shall eat the passover with my disciples?

12 And he shall shew you [o]a large upper room furnished: there make ready.

13 And they went, and found as he had said unto them: and they made ready the passover.

14 And when the hour was come, he sat down, and the twelve apostles with him.

15 And he said unto them, †With desire I have desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer:

16 For I say unto you, [r]I will not any more eat thereof, [s]until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God.

17 And he [t]took the cup, [u]and gave thanks, and said, Take this, and divide it among yourselves:

18 For I say unto you, [x]I will not drink of [y]the fruit of the vine, [z]until the kingdom of God shall come.

19 ¶ And [a]he took bread, and [b]gave thanks, and brake it, and gave unto them, saying, This [c]is my body, which is [d]given for you: [e]this do[3] in remembrance of me.

20 Likewise also the cup after supper, saying, [f]This cup is the new testament in my blood, which is shed for you.

21 ¶ But, behold, [g]the hand of him that betrayeth me is with me on the table.

22 And [h]truly the Son of man goeth, as it was determined: [i]but woe unto that man by whom he is betrayed!

23 And they began to enquire among themselves, which of them it was that should do this thing.

24 ¶ And there was also a strife among them, which of them should be accounted the greatest.

25 And he said unto them, [m]The kings of the Gentiles exercise lordship over them; and they that exercise authority upon them are called benefactors.[4]

26 But ye shall not be so: but he that is greatest among you, let him be as the younger; and he that is chief, as he that doth serve.

27 For whether is greater, he that sitteth at meat, or he that serveth? is not he that sitteth at meat? but I am among you as he that serveth.

28 Ye are they which have continued with me in my temptations:

29 And [q]I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father hath appointed unto me;

30 That ye may [r]eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, [s]and sit on thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel.

31 ¶ And the Lord said, Simon, Simon, behold, Satan hath desired to have you,[5] that he may [x]sift you as wheat:

32 But [y]I have prayed for thee, that [z]thy faith fail not: and when thou art converted, [b]strengthen thy brethren.

33 And he said unto him, Lord, [c]I am ready to go with thee, both into prison, and to death.

34 And he said, I tell thee, Peter, [d]the cock shall not crow this day, before that thou shalt thrice deny that thou knowest me.

35 ¶ And he said unto them, When I sent you without purse, and scrip, and shoes, lacked ye any thing? And they said, Nothing.

36 Then said he unto them, But now, he that hath a purse, let him take it, and likewise his scrip: and he that hath no sword, let him sell his garment, and buy one.

37 For I say unto you, That this that is written must yet be accomplished in me, [i]And he was reckoned among the transgressors: for the things concerning me have an end.

38 And they said, Lord, behold, here are two swords. And he said unto them, [k]It is enough.[6]

39 ¶ And he came out, and went, as he was wont, to the mount of Olives; and his disciples also followed him.

40 And when he was at the place, he said unto them, [n]Pray that ye enter not into temptation.

41 And he was withdrawn from them about a stone's cast, [o]and kneeled down,[7] and prayed, 42 Saying, Father, if thou be willing, remove this [q]cup from me; nevertheless, [r]not my will, but thine, be done.

43 And there appeared an angel unto him from heaven, strengthening him.

44 And, being in an agony, he prayed more earnestly: [x]and his sweat was as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground.

45 And when he rose up from prayer, and was come to his disciples, he found them sleeping for sorrow, 46 And said unto them, [s]Why sleep ye? rise and pray, lest ye enter into temptation.

47 ¶ And while he yet spake, behold, a multitude, and he that was called Judas, one the lustre of that, and therefore the Lord's Supper is instituted to be a commemorative sign or memorial of a Christ already come, that has by dying delivered us; and it is his death that is in a special manner set before us in that ordinance. 1. The "breaking of Christ's body," as a "sacrifice for us," is here commemorated by the "breaking of bread;" and the sacrifices under the law were called the "bread of our God;" Lev. xxi. 6, 8, 17. "This is my body, which is given for you." And there is a feast upon that sacrifice instituted, in which we are to apply it to ourselves, and to take the benefit and comfort of it; this bread that was given for us, is given to us to be food to our souls, for nothing can be more nourishing and satisfying to our souls than the doctrine of Christ's making atonement for sin, and the assurance of our interest in that atonement; this bread that was "broken" and "given for us," to satisfy for the guilt of our sins, is "broken" and "given to us," to satisfy the desire of our souls. And this we do in "remembrance" of what he did for us, when he died for us, and for a memorial of what we do, in making ourselves "partakers of him," and joining ourselves to him in an everlasting covenant; like the stone Joshua set up for a "witness," Josh. xxiv. 27. 2. The "shedding" of "Christ's blood," by which the atonement was made, (for "the blood made atonement for the soul," Lev. xvii. 11,) as represented by the wine in the cup; and that cup of wine is a sign and token of the New Testament, or new covenant, made with us. It commemorates the purchase of the covenant by the blood of Christ, and confirms the promises of the covenant, which are all "Yea" and "Amen" in him. This will be reviving and refreshing to our souls, as wine that "makes glad the heart." In all our commemorations of the shedding of Christ's blood, we must have an eye to it as shed for us; we needed it, we take hold of it; we hope to have benefit by it; "who loved me, and gave himself for me." And in all our regards to the New Testament, we must have an eye to the "blood of Christ," which gave life and being to it, and seals to us all the promises of it. Had it not been for the blood of Christ, we had never had the New Testament; and had it not been for the New Testament, we had never known the meaning of Christ's blood shed.

True Greatness.—Ver. 24, 25. "They that exercise authority," and take upon themselves to bear sway, and give law, are called "Benefactors;" they call themselves so, and so their flatterers call them, and those that set themselves to serve their interests. It is pretended, that they have been benefactors, and upon that account they should be admitted to have rule; nay, that in exercising authority they are benefactors; however they really serve themselves, they would be thought to serve their country. One of the Ptolemies was surnamed Euergetes—"The Benefactor." Now our Saviour, by taking notice of this, intimates. 1. That to do good is much more honourable than to "look great;" for these princes that were the "terror of the mighty," would not be called so, but rather the benefactors of the needy; so that, by their own confession, a benefactor to his country is much more valued than a ruler of his country. 2. That to do good is the surest way to be great, else they that aimed to be rulers would not have been so solicitous to be called "benefactors:" this therefore he would have his disciples believe, that their greatest honour would be to do all the good they could in the world. They would indeed be "benefactors" to the world, by bringing the gospel to it. Let them value themselves upon that title, which they would indeed be entitled to, and then they need not strive which should be the greatest, for they would all be "greater;" greater blessings to mankind than the kings of the earth, that exercise lordship over them. If they have that which is confessedly the "greater" honour, of being benefactors, let them despise the lesser, of being rulers.

Peter's Temptation.—Ver. 31. "The Lord said, Simon, Simon," observe what I say; "Satan has desired to have you all in his hands, "that he may sift you as wheat." Peter, who used to be the mouth of the rest in speaking to Christ, is here made the ear of the rest; and what is designed for warning to them all, ("All you shall be offended, because of me,") is directed to Peter, because he was principally concerned, being in a particular manner struck at by the tempter; "Satan has desired to have you." Probably Satan had accused the disciples to God, as mercenary in following Christ, and aiming at nothing else therein but enriching and advancing themselves in this world, as he accused Job. "No," saith God, "they are honest men, and men of integrity." "Give me leave to try them," saith Satan, "and Peter particularly. He desired to have them, "that he might sift them," that he might show them to be chaff, and not wheat. The troubles that were now coming upon them, were "sifting," would try what there was in them; but that was not all, Satan desired to sift them by his temptations, and endeavoured by those troubles to draw them into sin; to put them into a loss and hurry, as corn when it is sifted to bring the chaff uppermost, or rather to shake out the wheat, and leave nothing but the chaff. Observe, Satan could not sift them unless God gave him leave; he "desired to have them," as he begged of God a permission to try and tempt Job.

The Kiss.—Ver. 48. Luke takes notice of the question Christ asked Judas, which we have not in the other evangelists; "Judas, betrayest thou the Son of man with a kiss?" What! Is it that the signal? Must the Son of man be "betrayed," as if any thing could be concealed from him, and a plot carried on against him unknown to him? Must one of his own disciples betray him, as if he had been a hard Master to them, or deserved ill of the twelve, went before them, and drew near unto Jesus to kiss him.

48 But Jesus said unto him, Judas, [c]betrayest thou the Son of man with a kiss?

49 When they which were about him saw what would follow, they said unto him, Lord, shall we smite with the sword?

50 ¶ And one of them smote a servant of the high priest, and cut off his right ear.

51 And Jesus answered and said, Suffer ye thus far. And he touched his ear, and healed him.[8]

52 Then [g]Jesus said unto the chief priests, and captains[9] of the temple, and the elders, which were come to him, Be ye come out, as against a thief, with swords and staves?

53 When [i]I was daily with you in the temple, ye stretched forth no hands against me: but this is your hour, and [l]the power of darkness.

54 ¶ Then took they him, and led him, and brought him into the high priest's house. And Peter followed afar off.

55 And when they had kindled a fire in the midst of the hall, and were set down together, Peter sat down among them.

56 But [q]a certain maid beheld him as he sat by the fire, and earnestly looked upon him, and said, This man was also with him.

57 And [r]he denied him, saying, Woman, I know him not.

58 And, after a little while, [s]another saw him, and said, Thou art also of them. And Peter said, Man, I am not.

59 And about the space of one hour after, another confidently affirmed, saying, Of a truth this fellow also was with him; for he is a Galilean.

60 And Peter said, Man, I know not what thou sayest. And immediately, while he yet spake, [u]the cock crew.

61 And the Lord [x]turned, and [y]looked upon Peter:[10] [z]and Peter remembered the word of the Lord, how he had said unto him, [a]Before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice.

62 And Peter went out, and wept bitterly.

63 ¶ And [c]the men that held Jesus [d]mocked him, and smote him.

64 And when they had [e]blindfolded him, they struck him on the face, and asked him, saying, Prophesy, who is it that smote thee?

65 And many other things blasphemously spake they against him.

66 ¶ And as soon as it was day, the elders of the people, and the chief priests, and the scribes, came together, and led him into their council,

67 [i]Saying, Art thou the Christ? tell us. And he said unto them, [k]If I tell you, ye will not believe:

CHAP. XXIII.

Jesus is accused before Pilate, 2, who is desirous to release him, 14. The destruction of Jerusalem foretold, 27. Christ's death and burial, 46.

AND the whole multitude of them arose, and led him unto Pilate.

2 And they began to accuse him, saying, We found this fellow perverting the nation, [d]and forbidding to give tribute to Cesar, saying [e]that he himself is Christ a King.

3 And Pilate asked him, saying, Art thou [g]the King of the Jews? And he answered him and said, Thou sayest it.

4 Then said Pilate to the chief priests and to the people, [h]I find no fault in this man.

5 And they were the more fierce, saying, He stirreth up the people, teaching throughout all Jewry, beginning from Galilee to this place.

6 When Pilate heard of Galilee, he asked whether the man were a Galilean.

7 And as soon as he knew that he belonged unto Herod's jurisdiction, he sent him to Herod,[1] who himself also was at Jerusalem at that time.

8 ¶ And when Herod saw Jesus, he was exceeding glad: [n]for he was desirous to see him of a long season, because he had heard many things of him: [o]and he hoped to have seen some miracle done by him.

9 Then he questioned with him in many words; [p]but he answered him nothing.

10 And the chief priests and scribes stood, [q]and vehemently[2] accused him.

11 And [r]Herod with his men of war [s]set him at nought, and mocked him, and arrayed him in a gorgeous robe, and sent him again to Pilate.

12 ¶ And the same day [t]Pilate and Herod were made friends together; for before they were at enmity between themselves.

13 ¶ And Pilate, when he had called together the chief priests, and the rulers, and the people,

14 Said unto them, Ye have brought this man unto me, as one that perverteth the people; and, behold, I, having examined him before you, have found no fault in this man touching those things whereof ye accuse him:

at their hands? Must he be betrayed with a kiss? Must the badge of friendship be the instrument of treachery? Was ever a love-token so desecrated and abused? Note, Nothing can be a greater affront or grief to the Lord Jesus, than to be betrayed, and betrayed with a kiss, by those that profess relation to him, and an affection for him. Those do so, who, under pretence of zeal for his honour, persecute his servants, who, under the cloak of a seeming affection for the honour of free-grace, give a blow to the root of holiness and strictness of conversation. Many instances there are of Christ's being betrayed with a kiss, by those who, under the form of godliness, fight against the power of it. It were well if their own consciences would put this question to them, which Christ here puts to Judas, "Betrayest thou the Son of man with a kiss?" And will he not resent it? Will he not revenge it?

Christ's Look to Peter.—Ver. 61. 1. It was a convincing look. Peter said that he did not know Christ. Christ "turned, and looked upon him," as if he should say, "Dost thou not know me, Peter? Look me in the face, and tell me so." 2. It was a chiding look. We may suppose that he looked upon him, and frowned, or some way signified his displeasure. Let us think with what an angry countenance Christ justly looks upon us when we have sinned. 3. It was an expostulating upbraiding look; "What, Peter, art thou he that disownest me now, when thou shouldst come and witness for me? What, thou a disciple? Thou that wast the most forward to confess me to be the Son of God, and didst solemnly promise thou wouldst never disown me?" 4. It was a compassionate look; he looked upon him with tenderness; Poor Peter, how weak is thine heart! "How art thou fallen and undone if I do not help thee!" 5. It was a directing look. Christ guided him with his eye, gave him a wink to go out from that sorry company, to retire, and bethink himself a little, and then he would soon see what he had to do. 6. It was a significant look: it signified the conveying of grace to Peter's heart, to enable him to repent; the crowing of the cock would not have brought him to repentance without this look, nor will the external means without special efficacious grace. Power went along with this look, to change the heart of Peter, and to bring him to himself, to his right mind.

Indignities Heaped on Christ.—Ver. 63, 64. We are here told, as before in the other gospels, how our Lord Jesus was abused by the servants of the high priest. "The abjects gathered themselves together against him," the rude and barbarous servants. They that "held Jesus," that had him in custody till the court sat, they "mocked him," and "smote him," they would not allow him to repose himself one minute, though he had had no sleep all night, nor to compose himself, though he was hurried to his trial, and no time given him to prepare for it. They made sport with him; this sorrowful night to him shall be a merry night to them; and the blessed Jesus, like Samson, is made the Fool in the play. They hood-winked him, and then, according to the common play that young people have among them, they struck him on the face, and continued to do so till he named the person that smote him, intending thereby an affront to his prophetical office, and that knowledge of secret things, which he was said to have. We are not told that he said any thing, but bore every thing; hell was let loose, and he suffered it to do its worst. A greater indignity could not be done to the blessed Jesus, yet this was but one instance of many; for, "many other things blasphemously spake they against him." They that condemned him for a blasphemer, were themselves the vilest blasphemers that ever were.—Henry.

CHAP. XXIII. Jesus before Pilate.—See Matt. xxvii. 11.

Jesus sent to Herod.—Ver. 7; see also Mark xv. 16. 1. Pilate removed Christ and his cause to Herod's court. The accusers mentioned Galilee, the northern part of Canaan. "Why," saith Pilate, "is he of that country? Is he a Galilean?" ver. 6. "Yes," said they, "that is his head-quarters; there he has spent most of his time." "Let us send him to Herod then," saith Pilate, "for Herod is now in town, and it is but fit he should have cognizance of his cause, since he belongs to Herod's jurisdiction." Pilate was already sick of the cause, and desirous to rid his hands of it, and that seems to be the true reason for sending him to Herod. But God ordered it so for the more evident fulfilling of the Scripture, as appears Acts iv. 26, 27, where that of David, (Ps. ii. 2,) "The kings of the earth and the rulers set themselves against the Lord and his Anointed," is expressly said to be fulfilled in Herod and Pontius Pilate. 2. Herod was very willing to have the examining of him: ver. 8, "When he saw Jesus, he was exceeding glad," and perhaps the more glad because he saw him a prisoner, saw him in bonds. He had "heard many things of him" in Galilee, where his miracles had for a great while been all the talk of the country; and he longed to see him, not for any affection he had for him or his doctrine, but purely out of curiosity; and it was only to gratify that that he "hoped to have seen some miracle done by him," which would serve him to talk of as long as he lived. In order to this, he "questioned with him in many things," that at length he might bring him to something in which he might show his power. Perhaps he pumped him concerning things secret, or things to come, or concerning his curing of diseases. But Jesus "answered him nothing;" nor would he gratify him so much as 15 No, nor yet Herod:[s] for I sent you to him; and, lo, nothing worthy of death is done unto him.

16 I will therefore [t]chastise him, and release him.

17 (For of necessity he must release one unto them at the feast.)

18 And they cried out all at once, saying, [u]Away with this man, and release unto us Barabbas:

19 (Who for a certain [x]sedition made in the city, and for murder, was cast into prison.)

20 Pilate therefore, willing to release Jesus, spake again to them.

21 But they cried, saying, [y]Crucify him, crucify him.

22 And he said unto them the third time, Why, what evil hath he done? I have found no cause of death in him: I will therefore chastise him, and let him go.

23 And they were instant with loud voices requiring that he might be crucified: and the voices of them and of the chief priests prevailed.

24 And [k]Pilate *gave sentence that it should be as they required.

25 ¶ And he released unto them him that for sedition and murder was cast into prison, whom they had desired; [n]but he delivered Jesus to their will.

26 And as they led him away,[4] [o]they laid hold upon one Simon, [p]a Cyrenian, coming out of the country, and on him they laid the cross, that he might bear it after Jesus.

27 ¶ And there followed him a great company of people, and of women, which also bewailed and lamented him.

28 But Jesus, turning unto them, said, Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me, but weep for yourselves, and for your children.

29 For, behold, the days are coming, in the which they shall say, Blessed are the barren, and the wombs that never bare, and the paps which never gave suck.

30 Then shall they begin to say to the mountains, Fall on us; and to the hills, Cover us.[5]

31 For if they do these things in a green tree, what shall be done in the dry?

32 ¶ And there were also two others, malefactors,[6] led with him to be put to death.

33 And when they were come to the place which is called *Calvary, there [b]they crucified him, and the malefactors: one on the right hand, and the other on the left.

34 ¶ Then said Jesus, [c]Father, forgive them; for [d]they know not what they do. [e]And they parted his raiment, and cast lots.

35 ¶ And the people stood beholding: and the rulers also with them derided him, saying, He saved others; let him save himself, if he be [h]Christ, the chosen of God.

50 ¶ And, behold, [k]there was a man named Joseph, a councillor; and he was a good man, and a just:

51 (The same [m]had not consented to the counsel and deed of them:) he was of [n]Arimathea, a city of the Jews; who also himself [o]waited for the kingdom of God.

52 This man went unto Pilate, and begged the body of Jesus.

53 And he took it down, and [q]wrapped it in linen, and laid it in a sepulchre that was hewn in stone, wherein never man before was laid.

54 And that day was [r]the preparation, and the sabbath drew on.

55 ¶ And the women also, which came with him from Galilee, followed after, and beheld the sepulchre, and how his body was laid.

56 And they returned, and prepared spices and ointments; and rested the sabbath-day, according to the commandment.

with the repetition of one miracle. The poorest beggar, that asked a miracle for the relief of his necessity, was never denied; but this proud prince, that asked a miracle merely for the gratifying of his curiosity, is denied; he might have seen Christ and his wondrous works many a time in Galilee, and would not, and therefore it is justly said, Now he would see them, and shall not; they are hid from his eyes, because he knew not the day of his visitation. Herod thought, now that he had him in bonds, he might command a miracle; but miracles must not be made cheap, nor Omnipotence be at the beck of the greatest potentate. 3. Herod was very abusive to him. He, with "his men of war," his attendants and officers, and great men, "set him at nought." They made nothing of him; so the word is. Horrid wickedness! To make nothing of him who made all things. They laughed at him as a fool; for they knew he had wrought many miracles to befriend others, and why would he not now work one to befriend himself? Or, they laughed at him as one that had lost his power, and was become weak as other men. Herod, who had been acquainted with John Baptist, and had more knowledge of Christ too, than Pilate had, was more abusive to Christ than Pilate was; for knowledge without grace does but make men the more ingeniously wicked. Herod arrayed Christ in a "gorgeous robe," some gaudy painted clothes, as a mock-king; and so he taught Pilate's soldiers afterwards to do him the same indignity. He was ringleader in that abuse.

The Sentence of Death.—Ver. 25. The voices of the people and of the "chief priests prevailed," and were too hard for Pilate, and overruled him to go contrary to his convictions and inclinations. He had not courage to go against so strong a stream, but "gave sentence that it should be as they required," ver. 24. Here is judgment turned away backward, and justice standing afar off, for fear of popular fury. "Truth is fallen in the street, and equity cannot enter," Isa. lix. 14. "Judgment" was looked for, but "behold oppression; righteousness," but "behold a cry," Isa. v. 7. This is repeated, ver. 25, with the aggravating circumstance of the release of Barabbas, "He released unto them him that for sedition and murder was cast into prison," who hereby would be hardened in his wickedness, and do the more mischief, because "him they had desired," being altogether such an one as themselves, but he "delivered Jesus to their will;" and he would not deal more barbarously with him than to deliver him to "their will," who hated him with a perfect hatred, and whose tender mercies were cruelty.

Sympathising Women.—Ver. 27. "Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me." Not that they were to be blamed for weeping for him, but commended rather: those hearts were hard indeed, that were not affected with such sufferings of such a person; but they must not weep only for him, (those were profitless tears that they shed for him,) but rather let them "weep for themselves and for their children," with an eye to the destruction that was coming upon Jerusalem, which some of them might live to see, and share in the calamities of, or at least their children would, for whom they ought to be solicitous. Note, When with an eye of faith we behold Christ crucified, we ought to weep, not for him, but for ourselves. We must not be affected with the death of Christ as with the death of a common person whose calamity we pity, or of a common friend whom we are likely to part with; the death of Christ was a thing peculiar, it was his victory and triumph over his enemies, it was our deliverance, and the purchase of eternal life for us. And therefore weep not for him, but let us weep for our own sins, and the sins of our children, that were the cause of his death; and weep for fear (such were the tears here prescribed) of the miseries we shall bring upon ourselves, if we slight his love, and reject his grace, as the Jewish nation did, which brought upon them the ruin here foretold. When our dear relations die in Christ, we have no reason to weep for them who have put off the burthen of the flesh, are made perfect in holiness, and are entered into perfect rest and joy, but for ourselves and our children, who are left behind in a world of sins, and sorrows, and snares.—Henry.

The Crucifixion.—See Matt. xxvii. 35.

Supernatural Darkness.—See Matt. xxvii. 45.

The Penitent Thief.—Ver. 42. Perhaps the thief actually more honoured Christ in this short space, than many do who live a number of years to profess faith in him; and, in short, here were evidently both the title to and the meetness for the inheritance of the saints in light. Our Lord, therefore, without delay, and in the most solemn manner, assured him that "on that very day he should be with him in paradise." That day was then spending apace, and many crucified persons used to hang longer on the cross, than from the time when they were suspended till the close of it; but our Lord predicted both his own death and that of the penitent thief, before the setting of the sun, and their immediate entrance into a state of happiness. Thus he triumphed over Satan upon the cross, and delivered the prey from the very jaws of that devouring lion, even in the crisis of his deepest humiliation. Thus he communicated life when he was in the very agonies of death; and he dispensed pardons and disposed of kingdoms, as from a glorious throne, even whilst hanging on the tree as a slave and a malefactor! But it is a single instance in Scripture, an act of grace well suited to honour the extraordinary occasion. It should indeed teach us to despair of none, and that none should despair of themselves; yet, lest it should be abused, it was contrasted by the awful case of the other thief, who died hardened in unbelief, with a crucified Saviour before his eyes, as a warning to presuming sinners, that in general men die as they live. The case of the penitent thief was extra-

CHAP. XXIV.

Christ's resurrection declared to the women, 1. He himself appeareth, 13; giveth a charge to the apostles, 36; and ascendeth, 50.

NOW, upon the first day of the week, very early in the morning, they came unto the sepulchre, bringing the spices which they had prepared, and certain others[1] with them.

2 And [c]they found the stone rolled away from the sepulchre.

3 And they entered in, and found not the body of the Lord Jesus.

4 And it came to pass, as they were much perplexed thereabout, behold, [e]two men stood by them in shining garments:

5 And as they were afraid, and bowed down their faces to the earth, they said unto them, Why seek ye [*]the living among the dead?

6 He is not here, but is risen: remember how he spake unto you when he was yet in Galilee,

7 Saying, The Son of man must be delivered into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise again.

8 And [h]they remembered his words,

9 And [i]returned from the sepulchre, and told all these things unto the eleven, and to all the rest.

10 It was [k]Mary Magdalene, and Joanna, and Mary the mother of James, and other women that were with them, which told these things unto the apostles.

11 And their words seemed to them as [l]idle tales, and they believed them not.

12 ¶ Then arose Peter, and ran unto the sepulchre; and, stooping down, he beheld the linen clothes laid by themselves, and departed, wondering in himself at that which was come to pass.

13 ¶ And, behold, two of them[2] went that same day to a village called Emmaus,[3] which was from Jerusalem about threescore furlongs.

14 And [o]they talked together of all these things which had happened.

15 And it came to pass, that, while they communed together, and reasoned, [p]Jesus himself drew near, and went with them.

16 But their eyes were holden,[4] that they should not know him.

17 And he said unto them, What manner of communications are these that ye have one to another, as ye walk, and are sad?

18 And the one of them, whose name was [s]Cleopas,[5] answering, said unto him, Art thou only a stranger in Jerusalem, and hast not known the things which are come to pass there in these days?

19 And he said unto them, What things? And they said unto him, [t]Concerning Jesus of Nazareth, which was a prophet mighty in deed and word before God and all the people;

20 And how the chief priests and our rulers delivered him to be condemned to death, and have crucified him.

21 But [y]we trusted that it had been he which should have redeemed Israel:[6] and, besides all this, to-day is the third day since these things were done.

22 Yea, [z]and certain women also of our company made us astonished, which were early at the sepulchre;

23 And when they found not his body, they came, saying, That they had also seen a vision of angels, which said that he was alive.

24 And certain of them which were with us [a]went to the sepulchre, and found it even so as the women had said; but him they saw not.

25 Then he said unto them, [b]O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken!

26 [c]Ought not Christ to have suffered these things,[7] and to enter into his glory?

27 And [d]beginning at Moses and all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning himself.

28 And they drew nigh unto the village whither they went: [f]and he made as though he would have gone further.

29 But they constrained him, saying, Abide with us; for it is towards evening, and the day is far spent. And he went in to tarry with them.

30 And it came to pass, as he sat at meat with them, [h]he took bread, and blessed it, and brake, and gave to them.

31 And [i]their eyes were opened, and they knew him; and he [†]vanished out of their sight.[8]

32 And they said one to another, [k]Did not our heart burn within us, while he talked with us by the way, and while he [l]opened to us the scriptures?

33 And they rose up the same hour, and returned to Jerusalem, and found the eleven gathered together, and them that were with them,

34 Saying, The Lord is risen indeed, and [n]hath appeared to Simon.[9]

35 And they told what things were done in the way, and how he was known of them in breaking of bread.

36 ¶ And as they thus spake, [p]Jesus himself stood in the midst of them,[10] and saith unto them, [q]Peace be unto you.

37 But they were terrified and affrighted, and supposed that they had seen a spirit.

38 And he said unto them, Why are ye troubled? [s]and why do thoughts arise in your hearts?

ordinary in all its circumstances: yet Jesus is still able to save to the uttermost all them that call upon him, in their latest extremity. But such a single instance can give no encouragement to those who sin on under the means of grace, and against the convictions of their own consciences, from presumptuous expectation of a death-bed repentance; and if possible, it is still more absurd for men to adduce this instance in proof of their licentious views of salvation by faith alone, to the disparagement of holiness and of good works, as the necessary fruits of saving faith; when this man's faith was connected with real sanctification, and productive of good works, as far as ever the case could possibly admit of them.—Scott.

CLEOPAS.—Ver. 13—24. Cleopas is supposed to be the same with Alpheus, the father of two apostles, and also nearly related to our Lord himself, Mark iii. 18, and Emmaus was a village about eight miles distant from Jerusalem. These two disciples were conversing earnestly as they walked, concerning the crucifixion of Jesus, and the reports which they had heard of his resurrection; and probably consulting together what to expect, or to do, in such perplexing circumstances. Whilst thus employed, Jesus himself was pleased to join them, as if he had been a stranger travelling the same road; purposely assuming a different form than usual, and supernaturally influencing their sight, that they might not know him. Having therefore listened a while to their earnest discourse, he at length inquired into the subject that engrossed their minds, and rendered them so sorrowful. This induced Cleopas to ask, whether he were so entirely a stranger at Jerusalem, that he had never heard of those extraordinary events which had just occurred? And they proceeded to inform him what had taken place, in respect of one Jesus of Nazareth, who was at least a prophet, whose miracles and powerful doctrine abundantly proved, that he was great in the sight of God, as well as in the judgment of all the people. Yet at length the chief priests and rulers had apprehended him, and delivered him to the Roman governor, to be condemned to death, and had actually crucified him. But as for them, they had confidently believed him to be the promised Messiah, who had so long been predicted, and was then expected to redeem Israel from bondage, and to rule over them in great prosperity; and therefore these events, so contrary to their expectations, had exceedingly distressed and perplexed them; seeing they could not understand how his crucifixion could consist with his redeeming his people. Indeed he had spoken some things about rising on the third day, which day was arrived; and some women of their company had exceedingly surprised them; for, having gone early to visit the sepulchre, they could not find his body; and they had also declared that they had seen a vision of angels, who assured them that he was alive; and some men of their company had also gone to the sepulchre and found that the body was gone, but they had not seen him risen from the dead. —This account seems to imply that these disciples came away, before the women who had seen Jesus returned to the apostles; though some think that the contrary is intimated in the expression, "Him they saw not;" which may signify that the women reported that they had seen him; but that the disciples thought, at most, that it was only the appearance of an angel in his form, Acts xii. 15.—"But why would not Christ be as yet known by them? That they might more unreservedly express their sentiments; and that they might not rest on the bare authority of a teacher, but on the arguments which he was about to produce." [Beza.]—Scott.

CHRIST'S MANIFESTATION OF HIMSELF.—Ver. 29—32. 1. They began to suspect it was he, when, as they "sat down to meat," he undertook the office of the Master of the feast, which he performed so like himself, and like what he used to do among his disciples, that by it they discerned him; "He took bread, and blessed it," and "brake, and gave to them." This he did with his usual air both of authority and affection, with the same gestures and mien, with the same expressions perhaps in craving a blessing, and in giving the bread to them. This was not a miraculous meal like that of the five loaves, nor a sacramental meal, like that of the eucharist, but a common meal; yet Christ here did the same as he did in those; to teach us to keep up our communion with God through Christ in common providences as well as in special ordinances, and to crave a blessing, and give thanks at every meal, and to see our daily bread provided for us, and broken to us by the hand of Jesus Christ, the Master, not only of the great family, but of all our families. Wherever we sit down to eat, let us set Christ at the upper end of the table, take our meat as blessed to us by him, and "eat and drink" to his glory; and receive contentedly and thankfully what he is pleased to carve out to us, be the fare ever so coarse and mean; we may well receive it cheerfully, if we can by faith see it coming to us from Christ's hand, and with his blessing. 2. Presently "their eyes were opened," and then they saw who it was, and "knew him" well enough; whatever it was which had hitherto concealed him from them, it was now taken out of the way, the mists were scattered, the vail taken off, and they made no question but it was their Master; he might, for wise and holy ends, put on the shape of another, but no other could put on his; and therefore it must be he. See how Christ by his Spirit and grace makes himself known to the souls of his people. (1.) He opens the Scriptures to them, for they are they which testify of him to those who search them, and search for him in them. (2.) He

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO # ST JOHN.

THE several particulars which the Scripture records concerning the inspired writer of this Gospel may be seen and compared by consulting the annexed references (xiii. 23-26; xix. 27-29, 35; xx. 2-10; xxi. 2, 7, 20-25; Matt. iv. 21, 22; x. 2; xx. 20-23; Mark i. 19, 20; v. 37; ix. 2, 38-40; xiv. 33; Luke ix. 49-56; xxii. 8; Acts iii. 1-11; iv. 13-20; viii. 14; Gal. ii. 9; Rev. i. 1, 9; x. 11). He was in many things distinguished among the apostles, and was honoured as the bosom-friend of the Divine Saviour. To this information, subsequent histories have added but little; and that little is not always entitled to our implicit credit. Some particulars, however, will be mentioned in the prefaces to the other books ascribed to him. It is probable that this apostle continued in the neighbourhood of Judea till the time approached for the predicted destruction of Jerusalem. It is recorded that he then went into Asia; resided some years at Ephesus; was banished to the island of Patmos, by the emperor Domitian; but returned to Asia after the death of that emperor: that he lived to be nearly a hundred years of age, and then died a natural death, being the only apostle who escaped martyrdom. On some of these points there are different opinions: but they cannot be discussed in this place.

meets them at his table, in the ordinance of the Lord's Supper, and commonly there makes further discoveries of himself to them; is "known to them in breaking of bread." But, (3.) The work is completed by the opening of the eyes of their mind, and causing the scales to fall off from them, as from Paul's in his conversion. If he that gives the revelation do not give the understanding, we are in the dark still.—Henry.

CHRIST'S TRUE HUMANITY.—Ver. 36—43. Whilst the disciples were discoursing on these subjects, Jesus himself, in a miraculous manner, entered the room, and appeared in the midst of them; assuring them by his salutation of peace, or his entire reconciliation to them, though they had so lately forsaken him; and promising them spiritual peace and every blessing. Yet after all the preparation which had been made, they were greatly alarmed at his presence, as if they had seen a spirit, or an apparition resembling him. He therefore expostulated with them on their unreasonable incredulity; inquiring why they thus troubled themselves, and indulged so many perplexing thoughts, seeing every circumstance so exactly accorded to his former declarations, and was so well suited to inspire them with joy and confidence. To remove all their doubts, he showed them the wounds in his hands and feet; and allowed them to touch him, that they might be sure that it was not an apparition, but his body really risen from the dead. Yet they had been sunk so low in despondency, by his crucifixion; that the fact, however evident, seemed to be too wonderful and joyful to be true: and they still feared lest it should prove an illusion. To obviate this still more, Jesus was pleased also to eat before them "a piece of a broiled fish, and an honeycomb," (which some think was a kind of cake or bread in use among them;) for eating might consist with, though it were not needful to, that kind of life to which he was risen.—It is evident from the appeal of our Lord to the senses of the apostles, that no greater certainty can here be had of any thing, than the testimony of our eyes, ears, and other senses; and that it is unreasonable, in the highest degree imaginable, to require men to believe in direct opposition to them.—Scott.

LOVE TO JERUSALEM.—Ver. 47, 48. The apostles must "begin at Jerusalem;" there they must preach their first gospel-sermon; there the gospel-church must be first formed; there the gospel-day must dawn, and thence that light shall go forth, which must take hold on the ends of the earth. And why must they begin there? First, Because "thus it was written," and therefore it "behoved them" to take this method. "The word of the" Lord must "go forth from Jerusalem," Isa. ii. 3. And see Joel ii. 32; iii. 16: Obad. 21; Zech. xiv. 8. Secondly, Because there the matters of fact on which the gospel was founded, were transacted; and therefore there they were first attested, where, if there had been any just cause for it, they might be best contested and disproved. So strong, so bright, is the first shining forth of the risen Redeemer, that it dares face those daring enemies of his, that had put him to an ignominious death, and sets them at defiance. "Begin at Jerusalem," that the chief priests may try their strength to crush the gospel, and may rage to see themselves disappointed. Thirdly, Because he would give us a further example of forgiving enemies. Jerusalem had put the greatest affronts imaginable upon him, (both the rulers and the multitude,) for which that city might justly have been excepted by name out of the act of indemnity; but no, so far from that, the first offer of gospel-grace is made to Jerusalem, and thousands there are in a little time brought to partake of that grace.

CHRIST'S FAREWELL BLESSING.—Ver. 50—51. "He lift up his hands, and blessed them." He did not go away in displeasure, but in love, he left a blessing behind him; "he lift up his hands," as the high priest did when he blessed the people; see Lev. ix. 22. He blessed as one having authority, commanded by the blessings which he had purchased; he "blessed them" as Jacob blessed his sons. The apostles were now as the representatives of the twelve tribes, so that in blessing them he blessed all his spiritual Israel, and put his Father's name upon them. He blessed them as Jacob blessed his sons, and Moses the tribes, at parting, to show that, having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end. "While he was blessing them, he was parted from them;" not as if he were taken away before he had said all he had to say, but to intimate that his being parted from them did not put an end to his blessing of them, for the intercession which he went to heaven to make for all his, is a continuation of that blessing. He began to bless them on earth, but he went to heaven to go on with it.—Henry.

CHAP. I. THE LOGOS OR WORD.—Ver. 1. The Chaldee paraphrase very frequently calls the Messiah Memra—the Word of Jehovah, and speaks of many things in the Old Testament, said to be done by "the Lord," as done by that "Word of the Lord;" even the vulgar Jews were taught that the "Word of God" was the same with God. The evangelist, in the close of his discourse, ver. 18, plainly tells us why he calls Christ the Word—"because he is the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of his Father, and has declared him." Word is twofold; word conceived, and word uttered. The ratio and oratio—intelligence and utterance. 1. There is the word conceived; that is, thought, which is the first and only immediate product and conception of the soul, (all the operations of which are performed by thought,) and it is one with the soul. And thus the second Person in the Trinity is fitly called the Word; for he is the "First-begotten of the Father;" that eternal essential Wisdom which "the Lord possessed," as the soul doth its the glory as of [h]the only begotten of the Father,) [i]full of grace and truth.

15 ¶ John [k]bare witness of him, and cried, saying, This was he of whom I spake, He that cometh after me is preferred before me; for [l]he was before me.

16 And [m]of his fulness have all we received, [n]and grace for grace.

17 For [o]the law was given by Moses, but [p]grace and truth came by Jesus Christ.

18 No man hath [q]seen God at any time; [r]the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, [t]he hath declared him.

19 ¶ And this is the record of John, when the Jews sent priests and Levites from Jerusalem to ask him, Who art thou?

20 And he confessed, and denied not; but confessed, [y]I am not the Christ.

21 And they asked him, What then? Art thou Elias? And he saith, I am not. [z]Art thou *that prophet?[6] And he answered, No.

22 Then said they unto him, Who art thou? that we may give an answer to them that sent us: what sayest thou of thyself?

23 He said, [c]I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Make straight the way of the Lord, as said the prophet Esaias.

24 And they which were sent were of the Pharisees.

25 And they asked him, and said unto him, Why baptizest thou then, if thou be not that Christ, nor Elias, neither that prophet?

26 John answered them, saying, [b]I baptize with water: but there standeth one among you, whom ye know not;

27 He it is, [k]who, coming after me, is preferred before me, [l]whose shoe's latchet I am not worthy to unloose.

28 These things were done in Bethabara beyond Jordan,[7] where John was baptizing.

29 ¶ The next day John seeth Jesus coming unto him, and saith, [c]Behold the Lamb of God, [p]which [‡]taketh away the sin of the world!

30 This is he of whom I said, After me cometh a man which is preferred before me; for he was before me.

31 And I knew him not:[8] but that he should be made manifest to Israel, therefore am I come baptizing with water.

32 And John bare record, saying, I saw the Spirit descending from heaven like a dove, and it abode upon him.

33 And I knew him not: but he that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on him, the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost.

34 And I saw, and bare record that this is the Son of God.

50 Jesus answered and said unto him, Because I said unto thee, I saw thee under the fig-tree, believest thou? thou shalt see greater things than these.

thought, "in the beginning of his way," Prov. viii. 22. There is nothing we are more sure of than that we think, yet nothing we are more in the dark about than how we think; who can declare the generation of thought in the soul? Surely then the generations and births of the eternal mind may well be allowed to be great mysteries of godliness, the bottom of which we cannot fathom, while yet we adore the depth. 2. There is the word uttered, and that is speech, the chief and most natural indication of the mind. And thus Christ is the Word, for "by him" God has "in these last days spoken to us," Heb. i. 2, and has directed us to "hear him," Matt. xvii. 5. He has made known God's mind to us, as a man's word or speech makes known his thoughts, as far as he pleases, and no further. Christ is called that wonderful Speaker, Dan. viii. 13, the "Speaker of things hidden" and "strange." He is the Word speaking from God to us, and to God for us. John Baptist was the voice; but Christ the Word; being the Word, he is the Truth, the Amen, the faithful Witness of the mind of God.

Christ the Creator.—Ver. 3. This truth is here, 1. Expressly asserted; "All things were made by him." He was "with God," not only so as to be acquainted with the divine counsels from eternity, but to be active in the divine operations in the beginning of time. "Then was I by him," Prov. viii. 30. God made the world by a word, Ps. xxxiii. 6, and Christ was that Word. By him, not as a subordinate Instrument, but as a co-ordinate Agent, God "made the world," Heb. i. 2; not as the workman cuts by his axe, but as the body sees by the eye. 2. The contrary is denied; "Without him was not any thing made, that was made," from the highest angel to the meanest worm. God the Father did nothing without him in that work. Now, (1.) This proves that he is God: for he that "built all things, is God," Heb. iii. 4. The God of Israel often proved himself to be God, with this, that he "made all things," Isa. xl. 12, 28; xli. 4; and see Jer. x. 11, 12. (2.) This proves the excellency of the Christian religion; the Author and Founder of it is the same that was the Author and Founder of the world. How excellent must that constitution needs be, which derives its institution from him who is the Fountain of all excellency! When we worship Christ, we worship him to whom the patriarchs gave honour as the Creator of the world, and on whom all creatures depend. (3.) This shows how well qualified he was for the work of our redemption and salvation; help was laid upon one that was mighty indeed, for it was laid upon him that made all things; and he is appointed the Author of our bliss, who was the Author of our being.

Christ—the Man.—Ver. 14. "The Word was made Flesh." Forasmuch as the children who were to become the sons of God, were partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise "took part of the same," Heb. ii. 14. The Socinians agree that Christ is both God and man, but they say that he was Man, and was made God, as Moses, Exod. vii. 1, directly contrary to John here, who saith, He was God, but, He was made Flesh. Compare ver. 1 with this. This speaks not only that he was really and truly man, but that he subjected himself to the miseries and calamities of the human nature. He was made Flesh, the meanest part of man. Flesh speaks man weak, and he was crucified through weakness, 2 Cor. xiii. 4. Flesh speaks man mortal and dying, Ps. lxxviii. 39, and Christ was "put to death in the flesh," 1 Pet. iii. 18. Nay, flesh speaks man tainted with sin, Gen. vi. 3, and Christ, though he was perfectly holy and harmless, yet appeared "in the likeness of sinful flesh," Rom. viii. 3, and was made "Sin for us," 2 Cor. v. 6. When Adam had sinned, God said to him, "Dust thou art;" not only because made out of the dust, but because by sin he was sunk into dust. His fall turned him, as it were, all into body, made him earthly: therefore he that was made a Curse for us, was made Flesh, and condemned sin in the flesh, Rom. viii. 3. Wonder at this, that the Eternal Word should be made flesh, when flesh was come into such an ill name; that he who made all things should himself be made flesh, one of the meanest things, and submit to that from which he was at the greatest distance. —Henry.

Christ's Baptism.—See Matthew and Mark.

The Lamb of God.—Ver. 29. The emblem of a Lamb might denote the purity, gentleness, harmlessness of the Redeemer, and his valuableness and usefulness, living and dying; but especially his fitness to be a spotless sacrifice to God for the sins of his people. He is called "the Lamb of God;" as he was a sacrifice which God himself both required, provided, and accepted. As a lamb, he taketh away sin by being made an expiatory oblation, that justice might be satisfied, and yet the sinner pardoned. The lambs, sacrificed according to the law, were appropriated to the nation of Israel: but the atonement of Christ, being of infinite value, extends its efficacy to all nations, and to every generation of men. A lamb could not take away sin except by becoming a sacrifice: and why should John call Christ "the Lamb of God," in this connection, if he did not really atone for the sins of men, by bearing the punishment due to them?—Scott.

CHAP. II. The Marriage.—Ver. 1. The occasion was a "marriage;" probably, one or both of the parties were akin to our Lord Jesus. The "mother of Jesus" is said to be "there," and not to be "called," as Jesus and his disciples were, which intimates that she was there as one at home. Observe the honour which Christ he.eby put upon the ordinance of marriage, that he graced the solemnity of it, not only with his presence,

Anno Domini cir. 30.

AND the third day there was [b]a marriage in [c]Cana of Galilee;[1] and the mother of Jesus was there.

2 And [d]both Jesus was called, and [e]his disciples, to the marriage.

3 And when [f]they wanted wine, the mother of Jesus saith unto him, They have no wine.

4 Jesus saith unto her, Woman, [1]what have I to do with thee?[2] [k]mine hour is not yet come.

5 His mother saith unto the servants, [1]Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it.

6 And there were set there six water-pots of stone, [m]after the manner of the purifying of the Jews,[3] containing two or three firkins apiece.

7 Jesus saith unto them, [n]Fill the water-pots with water. And they filled them up to the brim.

8 And he saith unto them, [o]Draw out now, and bear unto the governor of the feast. And they bare it.

9 When the ruler of the feast had tasted the water that was made wine, and knew not whence it was, (but the servants which drew the water knew,) the governor of the feast called the bridegroom,

10 And saith unto him, Every man at the beginning doth set forth good wine; and when men have well drunk, then that which is worse: but thou hast kept the good wine until now.

11 This [r]beginning of miracles did Jesus in Cana of Galilee, [t]and manifested forth his glory; [u]and his disciples believed on him.

12 ¶ After this he went down to [x]Capernaum, he, and his mother, and his brethren, and his disciples; and they continued there not many days.

13 ¶ And the Jews' passover was at hand;[4] and Jesus went up to Jerusalem,

14 And found in the temple those that sold oxen, and sheep, and doves, and the changers of money sitting:

15 And when he had made a scourge of small cords, [b]he drove them all out of the temple, and the sheep, and the oxen; and poured out the changers' money, and overthrew the tables;

16 And said unto them that sold doves, Take these things hence: make not [d]my Father's house an house of merchandise.

17 And his disciples remembered that it was written, [e]The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up.

18 ¶ Then answered the Jews, and said unto him, [f]What sign shewest thou unto us, seeing that thou doest these things?

19 Jesus answered and said unto them, [h]Destroy this temple, [i]and in three days I will raise it up.

20 Then said the Jews, Forty and six years was this temple in building, and wilt thou rear it up in three days?

21 But he spake of the [m]temple of his body.

22 When therefore he was risen from the dead, his disciples remembered that he had said this unto them; and they believed the scripture, and the word which Jesus had said.

23 ¶ Now, when he was in Jerusalem at the passover, in the feast-day, many believed in his name, when they saw the miracles which he did.

24 But Jesus did not commit himself unto them,[5] because he knew all men,

25 And needed not that any should testify of man: for he knew what was in man.

Christ teacheth Nicodemus the necessity of regeneration, 1. The baptism, witness, and doctrine of John concerning Christ, 23.

THERE was a man of the Pharisees, named Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews:[1]

2 The same came to Jesus by night, and said unto him, Rabbi, [d]we know that thou art a teacher come from God: [e]for no man can do these miracles that thou doest, except God be with him.

3 Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, [g]Except a man be born *again, [h]he cannot see the kingdom of God.

4 Nicodemus saith unto him, How can a man be born when he is old? can he enter the second time into his mother's womb, and be born?

5 Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be [k]born of water,[2] [l]and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.

6 That which is [n]born of the flesh is flesh; and [o]that which is born of the Spirit is spirit.

7 Marvel not that I said unto thee, [q]Ye must be born †again.

8 The wind bloweth where it listeth,[3] and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: [s]so is every one that is born of the Spirit.

9 Nicodemus answered and said unto him, How can these things be?

10 Jesus answered and said unto him, Art thou a master of Israel, and knowest not these things?

11 Verily, verily, I say unto thee, [s]We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen; [a]and ye receive not our witness.

12 If I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how shall ye believe if I tell you of heavenly things?

but with his first miracle; because it was instituted and blessed in innocency, because by it he would still "seek a godly seed," because it resembles the mystical union between him and his church, and because he foresaw that in the papal kingdom, while the marriage ceremony would be unduly "dignified," and advanced into a "sacrament," the "married state" would be unduly "vilified," as inconsistent with any sacred function. There was a "marriage"—a "marriage-feast," to grace the solemnity. Marriages were usually celebrated with festivals, Gen. xxix. 22; Judg. xiv. 10, in token of joy and friendly respect, and for the confirming of love. Christ and his mother and disciples were principal guests at this entertainment; "The mother of Jesus" (that was her most honourable title) "was there;" no mention being made of Joseph, we conclude him dead before this.

The Miracle.—Ver. 9. The wine which was miraculously provided, was of the best and richest wine, which was acknowledged by the governor of the feast; and that it was really so, and not his fancy, is certain, because he knew not whence it was, ver. 10. 1. It was certain that this was "wine." The "governor" knew that when he drank it, though he knew not "whence it was;" the servants knew whence it was, but had not yet tasted it. If the taster had seen the drawing of it, or the drawers had had the tasting of it, something might have been imputed to fancy; but now no room is left for suspicion. 2. That it was the best wine. Note, Christ's works commended themselves even to those that knew not their Author. The products of miracles were always the best in their kind. This wine had a stronger body, and better flavour, than ordinary. This the governor of the feast takes notice of to the bridegroom, with an air of pleasantness, as uncommon. (1.) The common method was otherwise. Good wine is brought out to the best advantage at the beginning of a feast, when the guests have their heads clear, and their appetites fresh, and can relish it, and will commend it; but "when they have well drunk," when their heads are confused, and their appetites palled, good wine is but thrown away upon them, worse will serve then. See the vanities of all the pleasures of sense; they soon surfeit, but never satisfy; the longer they are enjoyed, the less pleasant they grow. (2.) This bridegroom obliged his friends with a reserve of the best wine for the grace-cup; "Thou hast kept the good wine until now;" not knowing whom they were indebted to for this good wine, he returns the thanks of the table to the bridegroom. "She did not know that I gave her corn and wine," Hos. ii. 8.—Henry.

The Temple of His Body.—Ver. 18—22. Though we can scarcely conceive of an action more evidently of a divine energy, or more undeniably right in itself than the driving of the traders from the temple; yet the Jews, (probably the scribes, priests, and rulers,) demanded of Jesus some sign, or attestation, from heaven to his mission; seeing he presumed, in defiance of public authority, to act in this manner. In answer to this demand, he said, "Destroy this temple, and in three days I will rear it up again." Some think he pointed to his body at the time; but as his disciples did not understand him till long afterwards, this is not likely. His opponents, however, treated his assertion with derision: forty-six years had elapsed from the time that Herod the king had begun to rebuild or repair the temple; and though a vast number of hands had been employed, it was not yet completed: and would he alone presume to rebuild it, if destroyed, in the short space of three days!—Scott.

CHAP. III. Nicodemus.—He made his address "by night," which may be considered either, 1. As an act of prudence and discretion. Christ was engaged all day in public work, and he would not interrupt him then, nor expected his attendance then, but observed Christ's hour, and waited on him when he was at leisure. Note, Private advantages to ourselves, and our own families, must give way to those that are public and of more general use. The greater good must be preferred before the less. Christ had many enemies, and therefore Nicodemus came incognito to him, lest, if the chief priests had known it, they should have been the more enraged against Christ. 2. As an act of zeal and forwardness. Nicodemus was a man of business, and could not spare time all day to make Christ a visit, and therefore he would rather take time from the diversions of the evening, or the rest of the night, than not converse with Christ. When others were sleeping, he was getting knowledge, as David by meditation. (Ps. lxiii. 6; cxix. 148.) Probably it was the very next night after he saw Christ's miracles, and he would not slip the first opportunity of his convictions. He knew not how soon Christ might leave the town, nor what might happen betwixt that and another feast, and therefore would lose no time. In the night his converse with Christ would be more free, and less liable to disturbance. These were Noctes Christianæ—Christian nights; much more instructive than the Noctes Atticæ—Attic nights. Or, 3. As an act of fear and cowardice. He was afraid, or ashamed, to be seen with Christ, and therefore came in the night. When religion is out of fashion, there are many Nicodemites, especially among the rulers, who have a better affection to Christ and his religion than they would be known to have.

The New Birth.—Ver. 3. 1. We must live a new life. Birth is the beginning of life; to be "born again" is to begin anew, as those that have hitherto lived either much amiss, or to little purpose. We must not think to patch up the old building, but begin from the foundation. 2. We must have a new nature, new principles, new affections, new aims. We must be born from above. First, We must be born anew; so the word is taken, (Gal. iv. 9,) and ab initio—"from the beginning." Luke i. 3. By our first birth we were heaven, [c]but he that came down from heaven,[3] even the Son of man which is in heaven.

14 ¶ And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, [h]even so must the Son of man be lifted up;

15 That [i]whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life.

16 ¶ For [m]God so loved the world, that he [n]gave his only begotten Son, [o]that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.

17 For [p]God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; [q]but that the world through him might be saved.

18 ¶ He that believeth on him is not condemned: but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God.

19 And [t]this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, [u]because their deeds were evil.

20 For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be [‡]reproved.

21 But he that doeth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest, that they are wrought in God.

22 After these things came Jesus and his disciples into the land of Judea; and there he tarried with them, and baptized.

23 ¶ And John also was baptizing in Ænon, near to Salim,[4] because there was much water there; and they came, and were baptized:

24 For [f]John was not yet cast into prison.

25 ¶ Then there arose a question between some of John's disciples and the Jews about purifying.

26 And they came unto John, and said unto him, Rabbi, he that was with thee beyond Jordan, to whom thou barest witness, behold, the same baptizeth, [k]and all men come to him.

27 John answered and said, A man can [*]receive nothing, except it be given him from heaven.

28 Ye yourselves bear me witness, that I said, I am not the Christ, [c]but that I am sent before him.

29 He that hath the bride is the bridegroom: but the friend of the bridegroom, which standeth and heareth him, rejoiceth greatly because of the bridegroom's voice. [r]This my joy therefore is fulfilled.

30 He must increase, but I must decrease.

31 He that cometh from above is above all; he that is of the earth is earthly, and speaketh of the earth: [z]he that cometh from heaven is above all.[5]

CHAP IV.

Christ talketh with a woman of Samaria, 1; his disciples marvel, 27. Christ's zeal for God's glory, 31; he departeth into Galilee, and healeth the ruler's son, 43.

WHEN therefore the Lord knew how the Pharisees had heard that Jesus made and baptized more disciples than John,

2 (Though [c]Jesus himself baptized not,[1] but his disciples,)

3 He left Judea, and departed again into Galilee.

4 And he must needs go through Samaria.

5 Then cometh he to a city of Samaria, which is called Sychar,[2] near to the parcel of ground that Jacob gave to his son Joseph.

6 Now Jacob's well was there. Jesus therefore, being wearied with his journey, sat thus on the well: and it was about the sixth hour.

7 There cometh a woman of Samaria to draw water. Jesus saith unto her, Give me to drink.

8 (For his disciples were gone away unto the city to buy meat.)

9 Then saith the woman of Samaria unto him, How is it that thou, being a Jew, askest drink of me, which am a woman of Samaria? (for the Jews have no dealings[3] with the Samaritans.)

10 Jesus answered and said unto her, [p]If thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee, Give me to drink; [r]thou wouldest have asked of him, and he would have given thee [s]living water.

11 The woman saith unto him, Sir, thou hast nothing to draw with, and the well is deep: from whence then hast thou that living water?

12 Art thou greater than our father Jacob, which gave us the well, and drank thereof himself, and his children, and his cattle?

13 Jesus answered and said unto her, Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again:

14 But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but corrupt, shapen in sin and iniquity; we must therefore undergo a second birth, our souls must be fashioned and enlivened anew. Secondly, We must be born "from above," (so the word is used by the evangelist, chap. iii. 31; xix. 11,) and I take it to be especially intended here, not excluding the other; for to be born "from above," supposes being born again. But this new birth has its rise from heaven, (chap. i. 13,) and its tendency to heaven: it is to be born to a divine and heavenly life, a life of communion with God and the upper world, and in order to this, it is to partake of a divine nature, and bear the image of the heavenly.

God's Love.—Ver. 16. The whole design of man's redemption originated in the love of God to the world, even to the apostate race of men. This could not be approbation or complacency; for he judged them deserving of his final indignation, and meet objects of his holy abhorrence; and so vile, that he could not honourably show them mercy, except by an expedient more suited to expose the desert of their rebellion, than even the eternal punishment of the whole race would have been. The love of God to the world was therefore good-will, compassion, benevolence. He so loved the world, that he not only purposed to pardon sin, and to give heaven to those who repented, but (when the honour of his justice and holiness seemed to oppose the exercise of his mercy,) "he gave his only begotten Son," the co-equal partaker of his divine nature, a person of infinite dignity and excellency, and infinitely beloved by him, compared with whom all worlds were as nothing; "to be made flesh," that in our nature he might atone for our sins by his sufferings and death upon the cross; that this obstacle being removed, he might forgive, save, and bless with everlasting life, all those of every nation who believe in Christ, and who must otherwise have perished for ever. The world, or the race of men, (as opposed to the one nation of Israel, for whose sake alone the Jews supposed that the Messiah would come;) is therefore now borne with as under a dispensation of mercy; sinners in general are invited to partake of the blessing; believers without exception are saved. But as true faith springs from the new birth, and the Spirit quickens whom he will, so we must here allow a limitation, as likewise in the intention of the redeemer; for "known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world."

Salvation by Jesus.—Ver. 35, 36. The Father loved and delighted in the Son, and in his mediatorial undertaking and work, because they so greatly glorified his name; and therefore he had intrusted to him, as Mediator, all authority and judgment; had committed to him every thing relative to the government of the church and of the world, and had determined that all fulness should dwell in him. Thus everlasting life could only be had by faith in him, and might assuredly be thus obtained; whereas every one, whether he were a disciple of the Pharisees or of John, or whatever his character or profession might be, who did not believe in the Son of God, could not see life, or partake of salvation; but the wrath of God must for ever rest upon him, as it does on every sinner till he believe in Christ.—"Why do you endeavour to add any thing to my condition? This is the lot of all men, that they cannot attain even the least thing of themselves; but whatever they have of excellency, they must ascribe it to the bounty of God." [Beza.]—Scott.

CHAP. IV. The Woman of Samaria. Ver. 5—9. Sychar is supposed to have been the same place as Sichem or Shechem, and to have been so named from the drunkenness of the inhabitants; for such is the signification of the word. In a piece of ground that Jacob bequeathed to Joseph, there was a well, which tradition reported to have belonged to Jacob. At this place our Lord arrived "about noon," (for there seems no reason to suppose that John computed time differently than the other evangelists, chap. i. 32;) and being wearied with his journey he sat down "thus" on the side of the well, or near to it; taking the poor accommodations as he found them, though the seat would be uneasy, and probably there was no shelter from the meridian sun. The Samaritans were not generally disposed to receive the Jews into their houses; he therefore did not attempt to go into the town, but sent the disciples to buy some necessary provisions; as if he intended, after making a homely meal by the well's side, to walk forward in the afternoon. In the mean while a woman came to draw water, and Jesus, being thirsty, condescended to become her supplicant for a draught of it; intending also by this method to engage her in conversation. Accordingly she expressed her surprise that he, whom she knew by his apparel to be a Jew, should ask water of her, a Samaritan. How could "he" think of becoming her petitioner? Or how could he expect any favour from her? For the inveteracy between the two nations and sects was so great, that they generally confined all their intercourse to matters of mere necessity, and mutually refused to ask or perform any actions of friendship or kindness. These words seem to be the evangelist's observation, and not the reason assigned by the woman for her question.—"By the tradition of the Pharisees, the Jews might buy of the Samaritans; but they were not to borrow any thing of them, or receive any kindness from them, or drink of their water, or eat of their morsels; for they bound them, under an anathema, not to eat of the fruit or morsel of a Cuthean; and held this as bad as eating swine's flesh. But Christ, despising such traditions, as had no foundation, either in the law of God or in equity, and tending to the impairing the laws of common friendship and humanity, asks drink of this Samaritan woman." [Whitby.]—Scott.

the water that I shall give him, [z]shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life.

15 The woman saith unto him, Sir, give me this water, that I thirst not, neither come hither to draw.

16 Jesus saith unto her, Go, call thy husband, and come hither.

17 The woman answered and said, I have no husband. Jesus said unto her, Thou hast well said, I have no husband:

18 For thou hast had five husbands; and he whom thou now hast is not thy husband: in that saidst thou truly.

19 The woman saith unto him, Sir, [d]I perceive that thou art a prophet.

20 Our [f]fathers worshipped in this mountain;[4] and ye say, that in Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship.

21 Jesus saith unto her, Woman, believe me, the hour cometh,[5] when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, [k]worship the Father.

22 Ye worship ye know not what: [m]we know what we worship; [n]for salvation is of the Jews.

23 But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father [q]in spirit and in truth: for [s]the Father seeketh such to worship him.

24 God is [t]a Spirit: and they that worship him [u]must worship him in spirit and in truth.

25 The woman saith unto him, I know that [x]Messias cometh, which is called Christ: [y]when he is come, he will tell us all things.

26 Jesus saith unto her, [z]I that speak unto thee am he.[6]

27 ¶ And upon this came his disciples, and marvelled that he talked with the woman: yet no man said, What seekest thou? or, Why talkest thou with her?

28 The woman then left her water-pot, and went her way into the city, and saith to the men, 29 Come, see a man which told me all things that ever I did: is not this the Christ?

30 Then they went out of the city, and came unto him.

31 ¶ In the mean while his disciples prayed him, saying, Master, eat.

32 But he said unto them, [f]I have meat to eat that ye know not of.[7]

33 Therefore said the disciples one to another, Hath any man brought him ought to eat?

34 Jesus saith unto them, [f]My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, [k]and to finish his work.

35 Say not ye, There are yet four months, and then cometh harvest? behold, I say unto you, Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; [f]for they are white already to harvest.

39 ¶ And many of the Samaritans of that city believed on him for the saying of the woman, which testified, He told me all that ever I did.

40 So when the Samaritans were come unto him, they besought him that he would tarry with them: [s]and he abode there two days.[8]

compared with the things of this world; for there will appear no comparison between them. Whoever partakes of the Spirit of grace, and the comforts of the everlasting gospel, 1. He shall "never thirst," he shall never want that which will abundantly satisfy his soul's desires; they are "longing," but not "languishing." A "desiring" thirst he has, nothing more "than" God, still more and more "of" God; but not a "despairing" thirst. 2. Therefore he shall never thirst, because this water that Christ gives, "shall be in him a well of water." "He" can never be reduced to extremity, that has in himself a "fountain" of supply and satisfaction. (1.) "Ever ready," for it shall be "in him." The principle of grace planted "in him," is the spring of his comfort: see chap. vii. 38. A good man is "satisfied from himself," for Christ "dwells in his heart." The anointing abides in him; he needs not sneak to the world for comfort; the "work," and the "witness" of the Spirit in the heart, furnish him with a firm foundation of hope, and an overflowing fountain of joy. (2.) "Never failing," for it shall be in him a "well of water." He that has at hand but a bucket of water, needs not thirst as long as that lasts, but that will soon be "exhausted;" believers have in them a "well of water," overflowing, ever-flowing. The principles and affections which Christ's holy religion forms in the souls of those that are captivated to the power of it, are this "well of water." It is "springing up," ever in motion, which speaks the actings of grace strong and vigorous. If good truths stagnate in our souls, like standing water, they do not answer the end of our receiving them. If there be a good treasure in the heart, we must thence bring forth good things.—Henry.

Spiritual Worship.—Ver. 24. God was about to be revealed as the Father of all believers in every nation; and he would seek out vast multitudes to worship him in spirit and truth. For as he is a Spirit, immaterial, holy, omnipresent, and intimately acquainted with the inmost soul of man; so they, who acceptably "worship him, must worship him in spirit, and in truth." Splendid temples, costly vestments, multiplied sacrifices, and external ceremonies, with types and shadows, have nothing in them suited to his nature; and could only be appointed for a time to be figures of good things to come: the spirit, or the soul, of man, as influenced by the Holy Spirit, must worship God, and have communion with him; knowledge of his perfections, reverential fear, humiliation as creatures and sinners, hope in his mercy and truth, regard to his word, love of his excellency, earnest desires after his favour and image, gratitude for his goodness, delight in his service, zeal for his glory, submission to his will, and cheerful dependence on his grace and providence. The spiritual affections, expressed in fervent prayers, supplications, praises, and thanksgivings, form that worship of an upright heart, in which God delights, and is glorified. The redemption of Christ, the ministry of the word, and the work of the Holy Spirit, concur in forming such worshippers, and rendering them accepted; and nothing can be pleasing to God, which has not in it something of this nature.—"Not with carnal sacrifices, but with those 'spiritual sacrifices, which are acceptable to God through Jesus Christ.' We must have just and awful thoughts of the Divine majesty, often representing him to our thoughts, as a God of infinite purity and justice, as well as of power and wisdom; one who is always present with us, and beholds all our secret thoughts and actions, in order to a future recompense.—We must endeavour to resemble him as much as may be in holiness and righteousness, in truth, in godliness, and in mercy, And we must worship God from spiritual principles, a sincere love, and filial reverence of him; and to spiritual ends, that we may promote his glory, and do what is pleasing in his sight; and after a spiritual manner, serving him with the whole heart, soul, and mind, and with a fervency of spirit." [Whitby.]—The immediate and powerful influences of the Holy Spirit are indispensably necessary in forming such worshippers.—Scott.

Missionary Work.—Ver. 39. See here First, How God is sometimes pleased to use very weak and unlikely instruments for the beginning and carrying on of a good work. A little maid directed a great prince to Elisha, 2 Kings v. 2. Secondly, How great a matter a little fire kindles. Our Saviour, by instructing one poor woman, spread instruction to a whole town. Let not ministers be either careless in their preaching, or discouraged in it, because their hearers are few and mean; for, by doing good to them, good may be conveyed to more, and those that are more considerable. If they teach every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, a great number may learn at second-hand. Philip preached the gospel to a single gentleman in his chariot upon the road, and he not only received it himself, but carried it into his country, and propagated it there. Thirdly, See how good it is to speak experimentally of Christ and the things of God. This woman could say little of Christ, but what she did say she spake feelingly; "He told me all that ever I did." Those are most likely to do good, that can tell what God has done "for their souls," Ps. lxvi. 16.—Henry.

Healing of the Nobleman's Son.—Ver. 46—54. When our Lord was come again to Cana, the son of a certain nobleman, or courtier, (probably belonging to Herod's retinue,) lay dangerously ill at Capernaum, which was several miles distant. This courtier hearing that Jesus was returned, came in person to Cana, and most respectfully entreated him to go with him and heal his son, who lay at the point of death. Upon this the Lord rebuked the unteachableness of his countrymen, and their neglect of spiritual blessings, by observing, they would not believe in him, except they continually witnessed his power in working miracles, and received the temporal benefit of them;

Jesus did, when he was come out of Judea into Galilee.

CHAP. V.

Jesus, on the sabbath-day, cureth him that was diseased eight-and-thirty years, 1. The Jews cavil, and persecute him for it, 10.

AFTER this there was a feast of the Jews; and Jesus went up to Jerusalem.

2 Now there is at Jerusalem, by the sheep-[*] market, a pool, which is called in the Hebrew tongue Bethesda, having five porches.[1]

3 In these lay a great multitude of impotent folk, of blind, halt, withered, [o]waiting for the moving of the water.

4 For an angel went down at a certain season into the pool, and troubled the water: whosoever then [f]first,[2] after the troubling of the water, stepped in, was made whole of whatsoever disease he had.

5 And a certain man was there, which had an infirmity thirty and eight years.

6 When Jesus saw him lie, and knew that he had been now a long time in that case, he saith unto him, [k]Wilt thou be made whole?

7 The impotent man answered him, Sir, I have no man, when the water is troubled, to put me into the pool: but while I am coming, another steppeth down before me.

8 Jesus saith unto him, [n]Rise, take up thy bed, and walk.

9 And [o]immediately the man was made whole, and took up his bed, and walked: and on the same day was the sabbath.

10 ¶ The Jews therefore said unto him that was cured, It is the sabbath-day; [q]it is not lawful for thee to carry thy bed.

11 He answered them, [r]He that made me whole, the same said unto me, Take up thy bed, and walk.

12 Then asked they him, What man is that which said unto thee, Take up thy bed, and walk?

13 And he that was healed wist not who it was: for Jesus had conveyed himself away,[3] [†]a multitude being in that place.

14 Afterward Jesus findeth him in the temple, and said unto him, Behold, thou art made whole: sin no more, [y]lest a worse thing come unto thee.[4]

15 The man departed, [z]and told the Jews that it was Jesus which had made him whole.

16 And therefore did the Jews persecute Jesus, and sought to slay him, because he had done these things on the sabbath-day.

17 ¶ But Jesus answered them, [d]My Father worketh hitherto, and I work.

18 Therefore the Jews sought the more to kill him, because he not only had broken the sabbath, but said also that God was his Father, making himself equal with God.

19 ¶ Then answered Jesus, and said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, [h]The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: [i]for what things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise.

20 For [k]the Father loveth the Son, [l]and sheweth him all things that himself doeth: and he will shew him greater works than these, that ye may marvel.

21 For [n]as the Father raiseth up the dead, and quickeneth them; [o]even so the Son quickeneth whom he will.

22 For [p]the Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son:

23 That all men should honour the Son, even as they honour the Father.[5] [r]He that honoureth not the Son, honoureth not the Father which hath sent him.

24 Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life.

25 Verily, verily, I say unto you, [x]The hour is coming, and now is, [y]when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live.

26 For as the Father hath life in himself, [a]so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself;

27 And [b]hath given him authority to execute judgment also, because he is the Son of man.[6]

28 Marvel not at this: [c]for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice,

29 And shall come forth; they that have [g]done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation.

30 I [h]can of mine own self do nothing: as I hear, I judge: and my judgment is just; [k]because I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent me.

31 ¶ If I bear witness of myself, my witness is not true.

32 There [m]is another that beareth witness of me; and I know that the witness which he witnesseth of me is true.

33 Ye sent unto John, and [p]he bare witness unto the truth.

34 But I receive not testimony from man: but these things I say, [r]that ye might be saved.

35 He was a burning and a shining light;[7] and ye were willing for a season to rejoice in his light.

36 ¶ But I have greater witness than that

whereas the Samaritans had believed his word without any miraculous confirmation of it. This reproof, of the truth and justice of which the courtier was probably convinced, only influenced him more earnestly to entreat Jesus to go with him, ere his son died: for he believed he could recover him, if upon the spot; though he does not then seem to have conceived, that he could raise him from the dead, or heal him at a distance. But our Lord, in order to prove and increase his faith, ordered him to return home, as "his son lived," or "was recovered, and out of danger;" and though the man had no proof of this but the word of Jesus, and no instance of this kind seems at that time to have occurred, yet he was enabled to believe it. He therefore set off home without hesitation, and being met by his servants, he found from them, that his son was instantaneously relieved from his fever, exactly at the time when Jesus had spoken the word: in consequence of this, both the courtier and his family became the avowed disciples of Christ.—Some think that this was Chuza, Herod's steward, Luke viii. 3. Our Lord had wrought other miracles, but this was the second performed at Cana, and on his return from Jerusalem.—Scott.

CHAP. V. Bethesda.—Ver. 2. The name, Bethesda, signifies a house of mercy; and it seems to have been given it on account of the miracles there wrought. The five porches, or porticoes, were probably built on the several sides of the pool, for the accommodation of those who walked there to recreate themselves, or converse with their friends; but they became at length in great measure appropriated to the use of those diseased persons who came thither to be cured. Of these a great multitude were collected together; some of them being afflicted or disabled in one way, and some in another. Probably most of them were deemed incurable by ordinary methods, and therefore they were carried thither to wait and hope for a miraculous recovery. For it pleased God, (in order to show that he had not forsaken his people, but that he was about to visit them again in mercy,) to send an angel, from time to time, to excite a visible and extraordinary commotion in the pool; and whenever this took place, it was found by experience, that the person who first bathed in the pool, after the troubling of the water, was perfectly cured, whatever disorder he had been afflicted with, but that others who bathed afterwards obtained no relief. Some have thought that this effect was produced only once a-year, at the feast of the passover; and others, with more probability, that it occurred every Sabbath. But if the troubling of the water took place so regularly, that the time might be certainly foreknown, it does not appear, that the diseased persons would have had any occasion previously to wait by the pool, as it would have sufficed for them to come at the appointed season.—"An angel went down, at some seasons appointed by God, though not fixed or foreknown by men." [Bp. Hall.]—The hypothesis of Dr. Hammond, (though favoured by some of the ancient fathers,) which supposes, that the washing of the numerous sacrifices and the entrails of them in this pool, had given it a salutary virtue; and that the angel was no other than a messenger, sent by the priests or rulers to stir up the water, that this efficacy might be more powerfully exerted—is so unscriptural and so irrational, that it is wonderful it should ever have been thought of a second time by any one, to whose imagination it might once occur. To mention nothing else, what were the brazen sea and the lavers in the courts of the temple provided for, and always replenished with abundance of water, but that the sacrifices (as well as the priests and Levites,) might be washed upon the spot, and not carried out of the holy place, to a distant pool for that purpose?—It is probable, that this miracle was not wrought for any length of time, and perhaps it ceased on this occasion.—This may account for the silence of Josephus.—Scott.

The Miraculous Cure.—Ver. 8. "Rise, Take up thy bed." 1. He is bidden to "rise and walk;" a strange command to be given to an impotent man, that had been long disabled; but this divine word was to be the vehicle of a divine power; it was a command to the disease to be gone, to nature to be strong, but it is expressed as a command to him to bestir himself. He must "rise and walk," that is, attempt to do it, and in the essay he should receive strength to do it. The conversion of a sinner is the cure of a chronical disease; this is ordinarily done by the word, a word of command; Arise, and walk; "turn and live; make ye a new heart;" which no more supposes a power in us to do it, without the grace of God, distinguishing grace, than this supposed such a power in the impotent man. But if he had not attempted to help himself, he had not been cured, and he must have borne the blame; yet it does not therefore follow, that, when he did rise and walk, it was by his own strength; no, it was by the power of Christ, and he must have all the glory. Observe, Christ did not bid him rise, and go into the waters, but "rise and walk." Christ did that for us, which the law could not do, and set that aside. 2. He is bidden to "take up his bed." First, To make it to appear that it was a perfect cure, and purely miraculous; for he did not recover strength by degrees, but from the extremity of weakness and impotency he suddenly stepped into the highest degree of bodily strength; so that he was able to carry as great a load as any porter that had been as long used to it as he had been disused. He, who this minute was not able to turn him in his bed, the next minute was able to carry his bed. The man sick of the palsy, Matt. ix. 6, was bidden to "go to his house," but probably this man had no house to go to, the hospital was his home; therefore he is bidden to "rise, and walk." Secondly, It was to proclaim the cure, and make it public.—Henry.

CHAP. VI.

Christ feedeth five thousand, 1. He withdraweth himself, 15. The people follow him, and are reproved for their fleshly hearts, 22. Many disciples leave him, 66.

AFTER these things Jesus went over the sea of Galilee, [c]which is the sea of Tiberias.

2 And a great multitude followed him, because they saw his miracles which he did on them that were diseased.

3 And Jesus went up into a mountain, and there he sat with his disciples.

4 And [f]the passover, a feast of the Jews, was nigh.

5 ¶ When Jesus then lifted up his eyes, and saw a great company come unto him, he saith unto Philip, Whence shall we buy bread, that these may eat?[1]

6 (And this he said to [l]prove him: for he himself knew what he would do.)

7 Philip answered him, Two hundred pennyworth[2] of bread is not sufficient for them, that every one of them may take a little.

8 One of his disciples, Andrew, Simon Peter's brother, saith unto him, 9 There is a lad here, which hath five barley-loaves, and two small fishes: [p]but what are they among so many?

10 And Jesus said, Make the men sit down. Now there was much grass in the place. So the men sat down, in number about five thousand.

11 And Jesus took the loaves; and [r]when he had given thanks, he distributed to the disciples, and the disciples to them that were set down; and likewise of the fishes as much as they would.

12 When [s]they were filled, he said unto his disciples, Gather up the fragments that remain, [t]that nothing be lost.

13 Therefore they gathered them together, [u]and filled twelve baskets[3] with the fragments of the five barley-loaves, which remained over and above unto them that had eaten.

14 Then those men, when they had seen the miracle that Jesus did, said, [x]This is of a truth that Prophet[4] that should come into the world.

15 When Jesus therefore perceived that they would come and [z]take him by force, to make him a king, he departed again into a mountain himself alone.[5]

16 And when even was now come, his disciples went down unto the sea,

17 And entered into a ship, [b]and went over the sea toward Capernaum: and it was now dark, and Jesus was not come to them.

18 And [c]the sea arose, by reason of a great wind that blew.

19 So when they had rowed about five and twenty or thirty furlongs, they see Jesus [f]walking on the sea, and drawing nigh unto the ship: and they were afraid.

20 But he saith unto them, It is I; be not afraid.

21 Then [h]they willingly received him into the ship: and immediately the ship was at the land whither they went.

22 ¶ The day following, when the people, which stood on the other side of the sea, saw that there was none other boat there, save that one whereinto his disciples were entered, and that Jesus went not with his disciples into the boat, [l]but that his disciples were gone away alone;

23 (Howbeit there came other boats from Tiberias, nigh unto the place where they did eat bread, after that the Lord had given thanks:)

24 When the people therefore saw that Jesus was not there, neither his disciples, they also took shipping,[6] and came to Capernaum, [o]seeking for Jesus.

25 And when they had found him on the other side of the sea, they said unto him, [p]Rabbi, when camest thou hither?

26 Jesus answered them, and said, [q]Verily, verily, I say unto you, [r]Ye seek me, not because ye saw the miracles, but because ye did eat of the loaves, and were filled.[7]

CHRIST'S SELF-VINDICATION.—Ver. 17, 18. In answer to the accusation brought against him, our Lord briefly observed, that "his Father worked hitherto, and he worked." Thus he called God his Father in a peculiar sense, and claimed the prerogative of acting as God the Father did, without being restricted by rules laid down for his creatures and subjects: for the miracle which had been performed was not wrought by human labour, but by the immediate energy of his divine power. God finished the work of creation in six days, and rested on the seventh; but he incessantly worketh in upholding the universe, and in continuing the course of nature by his providential superintendency. In this work the Son concurs, by an union of will and operation, "upholding all things by the word of his power." His work also as Mediator was to be conducted by the same unremitted and uninterrupted action, as that of sustaining the universe: this miracle was a part of it well suited to the Sabbath-day; and he claimed the prerogative of carrying on his holy work on that day as well as on others, even as the Father conducts his providential operations on every day alike.—Unless we suppose this to have been our Lord's meaning, there could be no argument in this plea: for the example of the Creator in "working hitherto," can be no reason why a creature, a servant, a mere man, should do as he pleased on the Sabbath-day. The divine power of the miracle proved Jesus to be the Son of God; and he insisted on the prerogative of working with and like unto his Father, as he saw good, without giving any account of his conduct. These ancient enemies of Christ plainly understood him, (though modern opposers of his deity cannot!) and were thus rendered more violent in their prosecution; not only charging him with Sabbath-breaking, but with blasphemy, in calling God his own Father, "and making himself equal with God" in perfection and operation.—"If God my Father, working on the Sabbath, doth not violate the Sabbath; neither do I, when I work on the Sabbath, violate the Sabbath.—Scott.

MISTAKEN ZEAL.—Ver. 15. Nothing would serve some of Christ's followers but they would make him "a king." Now, 1. This was the act of zeal for the honour of Christ, and against the contempt which the wisest part of the Jewish Church put upon him. [illegible] 2. It was [illegible] their king, and set him upon the throne in their souls; let him that has fed us, rule us. But, 2. It was an irregular zeal: for, First, it was grounded upon a mistake concerning the nature of Christ's kingdom, as if it were to be of this world, and he must appear with outward pomp, a crown, on his head, and an army at his foot; such a king as this they would make him, which was as great a disparagement to his glory as it would be to lacker gold, or paint a ruby. Right notions of Christ's kingdom would keep us to right methods for the advancing of it. Secondly, It was excited by the love of the flesh; they would make him their king who could feed them so plentifully without their toil, and save them from the curse of eating their bread in the sweat of their face. Thirdly, It was intended to carry on a secular design; they hoped this might be a fair opportunity of shaking off the Roman yoke, which they were weary of. If they had one to head them who could victual an army cheaper than another could provide for a family, they were sure of the sinews of the war, and could not fail of success, and the recovery of their ancient liberties. Thus is religion often prostituted to a secular interest, and Christ is served only to "serve a turn." Rom. xiv. 18. Vix quæritur Jesus propter Jesum, sed propter aliud—"Jesus is usually sought after for something else, not for his own sake."—[August.] Nay, Fourthly, It was a tumultuous, seditious attempt, and a disturbance of the public peace; it would make the country a seat of war, and expose it to the resentments of the Roman power. Fifthly, It was contrary to the mind of our Lord Jesus himself; for they would take him "by force," whether he would or no. Note, Those who force honours upon Christ, which he has not required at their hands, displease him, and do him the greatest dishonour. They that say, I am of Christ, in opposition to those that are of Apollos and Cephas, (so making Christ the head of a party,) take him by force to make him a king, contrary to his own mind. Here is an instance of the humility and self-denial of the Lord Jesus, that, when they would have made him a king, he "departed;" so far was he from countenancing the design, that he effectually quashed it. Herein he has left a testimony against ambition and affectation of worldly honour, to which he was perfectly mortified, and has taught us to be so.

BREAD OF LIFE.—Ver. 35. Jesus is the "bread of life," that bread of life, alluding to the tree of life in the midst of the garden of Eden, which was to Adam the sacrament of that part of the covenant, "Do this, and live," of which he might "eat, and live for ever." Christ is the Bread of life, for he is the Fruit of the "tree of life." He is the "Living Bread," (so he explains himself, ver. 51,) "I am the living Bread." [illegible] Christ we [illegible] Bread, and nourished by his own [illegible]

27 *Labour not for the meat which perisheth, but for that [t]meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man shall give unto you: [x]for him hath God the Father sealed.[8]

28 Then said they unto him, What shall we do, that we might work the works of God?

29 Jesus answered and said unto them, This is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath sent.

30 They said therefore unto him, What sign shewest thou then, that we may see, and believe thee? what dost thou work?

31 Our fathers did eat manna in the desert; as it is written, [d]He gave them bread from heaven to eat.

32 Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Moses gave you not that bread from heaven; but my Father giveth you [f]the true bread from heaven.

33 For the bread of God is he which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world.

34 Then said they unto him, Lord, evermore give us this bread.

35 And Jesus said unto them, [i]I am the bread of life: [k]he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst.

36 But I said unto you, That ye also have seen me, and believe not.

37 All [n]that the Father giveth me shall come to me: and him that cometh to me [p]I will in no wise cast out.[9]

38 For I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me.

39 And [s]this is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath [t]given me [u]I should lose nothing, [x]but should raise it up again at the last day,

40 And this is the will of him that sent me, that every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life: and I will raise him up at the last day.

41 The Jews then murmured at him, because he said, [b]I am the bread which came down from heaven.

42 And they said, Is not this Jesus, the son of Joseph, whose father and mother we know? how is it then that he saith, I came down from heaven?

43 Jesus therefore answered and said unto them, Murmur not among yourselves.

44 No man can come to me, [f]except the Father, which hath sent me, draw him:[10] [h]and I will raise him up at the last day.

45 It is written in the prophets, [k]And they shall be all taught of God. Every man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me.

46 Not that any man hath seen the Father, save he which is of God, he hath seen the Father.

47 Verily, verily, I say unto you, [o]He that believeth on me hath everlasting life.

48 I am [p]that bread of life.

49 Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness, and are dead.

50 This is the bread which cometh down from heaven, [t]that a man may eat thereof, and not die.

51 I am the [u]living bread which came down from heaven. If any man eat of this bread, he shall live for ever: and the bread that I will give is [x]my flesh, which I will give for the life of the world.

52 The Jews therefore [z]strove among themselves, saying, How can this man give us his flesh to eat?[11]

53 Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, [c]Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you.

54 Whoso [e]eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, [f]hath eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day.

55 For my flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed.

56 He that eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, [h]dwelleth in me, and I in him.

57 As the living Father hath sent me, and [k]I live by the Father; so he that eateth me, [l]even he shall live by me.[12]

58 This is that bread which came down from heaven: not as your fathers did eat manna, and are dead. He that eateth of this bread shall live for ever.

59 These things said he in the synagogue, as he taught in Capernaum.

60 Many therefore of his disciples, when they had heard this, said, [p]This is an hard saying; who can hear it?

61 When Jesus knew in himself that his disciples murmured at it, he said unto them, Doth this offend you?

62 What and if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up where he was before?

63 It is [s]the Spirit that quickeneth;[13] the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life.

64 But there are some of you that believe not. For Jesus knew from the beginning who they were that believed not, and who should betray him.

65 And he said, Therefore said I unto you, [z]That no man can come unto me, except it were given unto him of my Father.

66 ¶ From that time many of his disciples went back, and walked no more with him.

thing; if kept but one night, it putrefied, and bred worms; but Christ is ever-living, everlasting Bread, that never moulds or waxes old. The doctrine of Christ crucified is now as strengthening and comforting to a believer as ever it was, and his mediation still of as much value and efficacy as ever. 2. He "gives life unto the world," (ver. 33,) spiritual and eternal life; the life of the soul in union and communion with God here, and in the vision and fruition of him hereafter; a life that includes in it all happiness. The manna did only preserve and support life, did not preserve and perpetuate life, much less restore it; but Christ gives life to those that were dead in sin. The manna was ordained only for the life of the Israelites, but Christ is given for the "life of the world;" none are excluded from the benefit of this Bread, but such as exclude themselves. Christ came to put life into the minds of men; principles productive of acceptable performances. He is the "Bread which came down from heaven;" this is often repeated here, ver. 33, 50, 51, 58. This denotes, (1.) The divinity of Christ's person. As God, he had a being in heaven, whence he came to take our nature upon him; "I came down from heaven;" whence we may infer his antiquity, he was in the beginning with God; his ability, for heaven is the firmament of power; and his authority, he came with a divine commission. (2.) The divine original of all that good which flows to us through him.

Eating Christ's Flesh and Drinking his Blood.—Ver. 53. What is meant by eating this flesh, and drinking this blood, which is so necessary and beneficial; it is certain that it means neither more nor less than believing in Christ. As we partake of meat and drink by eating and drinking, so we partake of Christ and his benefits by faith; and believing in Christ includes these four things, which eating and drinking do. 1. It implies an appetite to Christ. This spiritual eating and drinking begins with hungering and thirsting, (Matt. v. 6,) earnest and importunate desires after Christ, not willing to take up with any thing short of an interest in him: "Give me Christ, or else I die." 2. An application of Christ to ourselves. Meat looked upon will not nourish us, but meat fed upon, and so made our own, and, as it were, one with us. We must so accept of Christ as to appropriate him to ourselves; "My Lord and my God," chap. xx. 28. 3. A delight in Christ and his salvation. The doctrine of Christ crucified must be meat and drink to us, most pleasant and delightful. We must feast upon the dainties of the New Testament in the blood of Christ, taking as great a complacency in the methods which infinite wisdom has taken to redeem and save us, as ever we did in the most needful supplies or grateful delights of nature. 4. A derivation of nourishment from him, and a dependence upon him for the support and comfort of our spiritual life, and the strength, growth and vigour of the new man. To feed upon Christ is to do all in his name, in union with him, and by virtue drawn from him; it is to live upon him as we do upon our meat. How our bodies are nourished by our food we cannot describe, but that they are so we know and find; so it is with this spiritual nourishment. Our Saviour was so well pleased with this metaphor, (as very significant and expressive,) that, when afterward he would institute some outward sensible signs, by which to represent our communicating of the benefits of his death, he chose those of eating and drinking, and made them sacramental actions.

Backsliding.—Ver. 66. 1. See here the backsliding of these disciples. "Many of them went back" to their houses, and families, and callings, which they had left for a time to follow him; went back, one to his farm, and another to his merchandise; went back, as Orpah did, to their people, and to their gods, Ruth i. 15. They had entered themselves in Christ's school, but they went back, did not only play truant for once, but took leave of him and his doctrine for ever. Note, The apostacy of Christ's disciples from him, though really a strange thing, yet has been such a common thing, that we need not think strange at it. Here were many that went back. It is often so; when some backslide, many backslide with them; the disease is infectious. 2. The occasion of this backsliding; "From that time," from the time that Christ preached this comfortable doctrine, that he is the "Bread of life," and those who by faith feed upon him, shall live by him, which, one would think, should have engaged them to cleave the more closely to him; from that time they withdrew. Note, The corrupt and wicked heart of man often makes that an occasion of offence, which is indeed matter of the greatest comfort. Christ foresaw that they would thus take offence at what he said, and yet he said it. That which is the undoubted word and truth of Christ, must be faithfully delivered, whoever are offended at it. Men's humours must be captivated to God's word, and not that accommodated to men's humours. 3. The degree of their apostacy; "They walked no more with him," returned no more to him, and attended no more upon his ministry. It is hard for those who have been "once enlightened," and have "tasted the good word of God, if they fall away, to renew them again to repentance," Heb. vi. 4—6.

Judas—Traitor.—Ver. 70, 71. Those whose bodies were possessed by the devil, are never called devils, (demoniacs, but not devils,) but Judas, into whose heart Satan entered, and filled it, is called a devil. Many that are seeming saints, are real devils. Judas had as fair an outside as many of the apostles; his venom was, like that of the serpent, covered with a fine skin. He "cast out devils," and appeared an enemy to the devil's kingdom, and yet himself a devil all the while. Not only he will be one shortly, but he is one now. It is strange, and to be wondered at; Christ speaks of it

AFTER these things Jesus walked in Galilee: for he would not walk in Jewry, [b]because the Jews sought to kill him.

2 Now the Jews' feast of tabernacles[1] was at hand.

3 His [d]brethren therefore said unto him, Depart hence, and go into Judea, that thy disciples also may see the works that thou doest.

4 For [f]there is no man that doeth any thing in secret, and he himself seeketh to be known openly: if thou do these things, shew thyself to the world.

5 For neither did his brethren believe in him.[2]

6 Then Jesus said unto them, [i]My time is not yet come: but your time is alway ready.

7 The world cannot hate you; but me it hateth, because I testify of it, that the works thereof are evil.

8 Go ye up unto this feast: I go not up yet unto this feast; for my time is not yet full come.

9 When he had said these words unto them, he abode still in Galilee.

10 ¶ But when his brethren were gone up, [o]then went he also up unto the feast, not openly, but as it were in secret.

11 Then the Jews sought him at the feast, and said, Where is he?

12 And there was much murmuring among the people concerning him: for some said, He [t]is a good man: others said, Nay; but he [u]deceiveth the people.

13 Howbeit, no man spake openly of him, for fear of the Jews.

14 ¶ Now, about the midst of the feast, Jesus went up into the temple, and taught.

15 And the Jews marvelled, saying, [b]How knoweth this man *letters, having never learned?[3]

16 Jesus answered them, and said, [c]My doctrine is not mine, [d]but his that sent me.

17 If [e]any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself.

18 He that speaketh of himself seeketh his own glory:[4] but he that [g]seeketh his glory that sent him, the same is true, and no unrighteousness is in him.

19 Did not Moses give you the law, and [l]yet none of you keepeth the law? Why go ye about to kill me?

20 The people answered and said, [l]Thou hast a devil: who goeth about to kill thee?

21 Jesus answered and said unto them, I have done one work, and ye all marvel.

22 Moses therefore gave unto you circumcision; (not because it is of Moses, but of the fathers;) and ye on the sabbath-day circumcise a man.

23 If a man on the sabbath-day receive circumcision, †that the law of Moses should not be broken; are ye angry at me, because I have [o]made a man every whit whole on the sabbath-day?[5]

24 Judge not according to the appearance, but judge righteous judgment.

25 Then said some of them, of Jerusalem, Is not this he whom they seek to kill?

26 But, lo, he speaketh boldly, and they say nothing unto him. Do the rulers know indeed that this is the very Christ?

27 Howbeit we know this man whence he is: but when Christ cometh, [x]no man knoweth whence he is.

28 Then cried Jesus in the temple, as he taught, saying, Ye both know me, and ye know whence I am: [s]and I am not come of myself, but he that sent me [a]is true, [b]whom ye know not.

29 But [c]I know him: [d]for I am from him,[6] and he hath sent me.

30 ¶ Then [e]they sought to take him; [f]but no man laid hands on him, because his hour was not yet come.

31 And many of the people [g]believed on him, and said, [h]When Christ cometh, will he do more miracles than these which this man hath done?

32 ¶ The Pharisees heard that the people murmured such things concerning him; and the Pharisees and the chief priests sent officers to take him.

33 Then said Jesus unto them, Yet a little while am I with you, and then I go unto him that sent me.[7]

34 Ye shall seek me, and shall not find me: and where I am, thither ye cannot come.

35 Then said the Jews among themselves, Whither will he go, that we shall not find him? will he go unto the dispersed among the ‡Gentiles, [o]and teach the Gentiles?

36 What manner of saying is this that with wonder; "Have not I?" It is sad, and to be lamented, that ever Christianity should be made a cloak to diabolism. The disguises of hypocrites, however they may deceive men, and put a cheat upon them, cannot deceive Christ, for his piercing eye sees through them. He can call those devils, that call themselves Christians, like the prophet's greeting to Jeroboam's wife, when she came to him in masquerade; 1 Kings xiv. 7, "Come in, thou wife of Jeroboam." Christ's divine sight, far better than any double sight, can see spirits. There are those who are chosen by Christ to special services, who yet prove false to him; "I have chosen you" to the apostleship, for it is expressly said, Judas was not chosen to eternal life, chap. xiii. 18, and yet one of you is a devil. Note, Advancement to places of honour and trust in the church, is no certain evidence of saving grace. "We have prophesied in thy name."—Henry.

CHAP. VII. DIFFERENT OPINIONS OF CHRIST.—Ver. 16—18. Attendance on the sacred festivals was a part of the obedience which the law required, to which our Lord willingly subjected himself: and this he perfectly obeyed. But this attendance also gave him the opportunity of teaching vast multitudes, and confirming his doctrine by miracles before them. Yet in availing himself of these opportunities, a wise regard to circumstances was in all respects highly important.—There is reason to conclude these brethren of our Lord afterwards became his disciples. As the Jews sought our Lord, it may be supposed that he constantly attended on the three great feasts, though we have not a particular account of it. Some of the people concluded from his doctrine and miracles, that he must be a good and holy man; but others would not allow him even this inferior honour; concluding that he imposed on the people by some artifice which they were not able to detect; and they who favoured him dared not openly to avow their sentiments, lest the rulers should censure or excommunicate them.—Perhaps the Galileans might also fear, lest the Jews should inform against them. "They that thought contemptibly of Christ might have spoken their minds as freely as they pleased." [Doddridge.]—This has often been the case; and still is, in very many places, even where Christianity is professed.—"An example of horrible confusion in the very bosom of the church! The pastors keep the people under oppression by fear and terror; the people seek Christ when he does not appear, and neglect him when he offereth himself to them. Some that know, rashly condemn him; and very few think rightly of him, and that in secret." [Beza.]—It may be added, that of those who favoured him, very few indeed had just views of his person, salvation, and kingdom.

INCORRECT OPINIONS ABOUT CHRIST.—Ver. 25—30. Whilst the subject referred to in the preceding verses was under consideration, some of the citizens, who were acquainted with the designs of the council, (of which they who came from other places were ignorant,) inquired, Whether this were not the person, whom the rulers had resolved to put to death as a deceiver? and they were astonished, that he was allowed to speak in so open a manner, and met with no interruption. Was it possible, that the rulers should at length be persuaded, that he was indeed the promised Messiah? They knew him to be an inhabitant of Nazareth, the son of Mary the wife of Joseph; but when the Messiah came, no man would know whence he was.—Doubtless they were ignorant of our Lord's descent from David, of his miraculous conception, and of his nativity at Bethlehem; and they rashly concluded, that his parentage and birth did not answer to those predicted of the Messiah; yet they seem to have had some confused idea of the divine original of that great Redeemer; and thence they concluded, that when he came, no man would know whence he was. Had their prejudices allowed them to examine, they would have found their objections sufficiently answered by the circumstances of our Lord's nativity. Some think that the Messiah's birth of a virgin was referred to; and others, that a tradition of the Jews, that the Messiah, when he came, would for a long time be hidden, was meant: but it is more probable that an erroneous construction of some prophecies which relate to his eternal deity, had drawn away their minds from the plainer and more express predictions on the subject.—Our Lord, nowever, knowing this, proclaimed aloud, in reproof of their obstinate and ignorant opposition; that they indeed vainly imagined that they both knew him and his original, and were sure that he was not the Messiah.—Scott.

THE GRACIOUS INVITATION.—Ver. 37. Now observe, 1. "When" Jesus made this invitation: "on the last day" of the feast of tabernacles, "that great day." The "eighth day," which concluded that solemnity, was to be a "holy convocation," Lev. xxiii. 36. Now on this day Christ published this gospel-call. Because, (1.) Much people were gathered together, and if the invitation was given to "many" it might be hoped that "some" would accept of it, Prov. i. 21. Numerous assemblies give opportunity of doing the more good. (2.) The people were now returning to their homes, and he would give them this to carry away with them as his parting word. When a great congregation is to be dismissed, and is about to scatter, as here, it is affecting to think, that in all probability they will never come all together again in this world, and therefore if we can say or do any thing to help them to heaven, that must be the time. It is good to be lively at the close of an ordinance. 2. "How" he made this invitation; "Jesus stood and cried;" which denotes, (1.) His great earnestness and importunity. His heart was upon it, to bring poor souls in to himself. The erection of his body and the elevation of his voice were indications of the intenseness of his mind. Love to souls will make preachers he said, Ye shall seek me, and shall not find me: and where I am, thither ye cannot come?

37 In the last day, that great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried, saying, If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink.

38 He that believeth on me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water.

39 (But this spake he of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive: for the Holy Ghost was not yet given; because that Jesus was not yet glorified.)

40 ¶ Many of the people therefore, when they heard this saying, said, Of a truth this is the Prophet.[g]

41 Others said, This is the Christ. But some said, [e]Shall Christ come out of Galilee?

42 Hath [f]not the scripture said, That Christ cometh of the seed of David, and out of the town of Bethlehem, [g]where David was?

43 So [h]there was a division among the people because of him.

44 And some of them would have taken him; [i]but no man laid hands on him.

45 ¶ Then came [k]the officers to the chief priests and Pharisees; and they said unto them, Why have ye not brought him?

46 The officers answered, [l]Never man spake like this man.

47 Then answered them the Pharisees, Are ye also deceived?

48 Have any of the rulers, or of the Pharisees, believed on him?

49 But this people,[q] who knoweth not the law, are cursed.

50 Nicodemus saith unto them, (he that came to Jesus by night, being one of them,)

51 Doth our law judge any man before it hear him, and know what he doeth?

52 They answered and said unto him, Art thou also of Galilee? Search, and look: for out of Galilee ariseth no prophet.

53 And every man went unto his own house.

7 So, when they continued asking him, he lifted up himself, and said unto them, [k]He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her.[3]

8 And again he stooped down, and wrote on the ground.

9 And they which heard it, [l]being convicted by their own conscience, went out one by one, beginning at the eldest, even unto the last: and Jesus was left alone, and the woman standing in the midst.

10 When Jesus had lifted up himself, and saw none but the woman, he said unto her, Woman, [o]where are those thine accusers? hath no man condemned thee?

11 She said, No man, Lord. And Jesus said unto her, [p]Neither do I condemn thee: [q]go, and sin no more.

12 ¶ Then spake Jesus again unto them, saying, [r]I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life.

13 The Pharisees therefore said unto him, Thou bearest record of thyself; thy record is not true.

lively. (2.) His desire that all might take notice, and take hold of this invitation. He "stood, and cried," that he might the better be heard. 3. The invitation itself, which is, 1. Very general; if "any man" thirst, whoever he be, he is invited to Christ. Be he high or low, rich or poor, young or old, bond or free, Jew or Gentile. 2. Very gracious; "'If any man thirst, let him come to me and drink.' If any man desires to be truly and eternally happy, let him apply himself to me, and be ruled by me, and I will undertake to make him so."

AN UNEXPECTED EULOGY.—Ver. 46. "Never man spake like this man." Now, 1. This was a very great truth, that "never any man spake with" that wisdom, and power, and grace, that convincing clearness, and that charming sweetness, wherewith Christ spake; none of the prophets, no not Moses himself. 2. The very officers that were sent to take him, were taken with him, and acknowledged this. Though it is probable that they were men who had no quick sense of reason or eloquence, and, it is certain, had no inclination to think well of Jesus, yet so much self-evidence was there in what Christ said, that they could not but prefer him before all those that sat in Moses's seat. Thus Christ was preserved by the power God has upon the consciences even of bad men. 3. They said this to their lords and masters, who could not endure to hear any thing that tended to the honour of Christ, and yet could not avoid hearing this. Providence ordered it so, that this should be said to them, that it might be a vexation in their sin, and an aggravation of their sin. Their own officers are witnesses against them, who could not be suspected to be biassed in favour of Christ. This testimony of theirs should have made them reflect upon themselves, with this thought, "Do we know what we are doing, when we are hating and persecuting one that speaks so admirably well."—Henry.

CHAP. VIII. THE WOMAN CAUGHT IN ADULTERY.—Ver. 3—11. While our Lord was teaching the multitudes, his enemies concerted a plan for drawing him into a snare. A woman had been taken in adultery, whose guilt was undeniable: they therefore pretended a deference to his judgment and authority, and brought the criminal to him, that he might decide what punishment should be inflicted on her; as Moses had commanded that such criminals should be stoned. The law doomed both the adulterer and adulteress to be put to death, but these persons showed their partiality, by prosecuting the woman, and letting the man escape. In a case nearly parallel, stoning was specified, and probably this had become the general punishment of all convicted of this crime. The Scribes and Pharisees, however, concluded, from many parts of our Lord's doctrine, that he deemed himself authorized to alter or abrogate the appointments of Moses, and therefore they desired his opinion. But if he had ordered them to execute the law, they would doubtless have accused him to the Romans of assuming a judicial authority, independent of their government: had he directed them to set her at liberty, they would have represented him to the people as an enemy to the law, and the patron of the most infamous characters; and had he referred them to the Roman authority, they would have accused him to the multitude as a betrayer of their liberties. Indeed, they seem to have concluded, that he must inevitably either render himself obnoxious to the Romans, or unpopular among the Jews, by his answer to this insidious question: and in either case it would have facilitated the execution of their purpose of putting him to death. But he saw the wickedness of their hearts; and therefore he stooped down, as if he had not regarded them. Perhaps he wrote with his finger in the dust the sentence which he afterwards spake. Some think that he meant to teach them in this manner, that they ought to decide such matters by the written word; and others, that he intimated that such base hypocrites "should be written in the earth," Jer. xvii. 13. But these are vague conjectures.—"To be willing to be ignorant of what our great Master has thought fit to conceal, is no inconsiderable part of Christian learning." [Doddridge.] His apparent backwardness, however, to interfere, rendered the Scribes the more urgent: and therefore at length he abruptly ordered that man, who was without sin among them, to begin the execution of the criminal, by first casting a stone at her. It was appointed by the law that the accuser should thus lead the way in putting the condemned person to death: the whole company that brought this woman were her accusers; but it would have been unsuitable for any one of them, who was conscious of secret wickedness, to have begun this severity, and therefore he ordered that person to do it who was conscious of his own innocence.—A divine power doubtless attended his word, and a new conviction of guilt seized on them, which for the present disarmed their malice: and, perhaps, fearing lest he should more openly and explicitly mention the particular crimes in which they severally lived, they took the opportunity whilst he again stooped down, to withdraw silently and singly; the eldest of the company, being most deeply alarmed, departing first, and the others following his example. Thus they were sent away in disgrace and self-condemned, so that Jesus was left alone: that is, none remained with him of that company, save the woman, who stood in the midst of the court where the people were assembled to attend on his doctrine; and there she waited to hear what sentence he would pass upon her. But having baffled the designs of his enemies, he declined all interference with the magistrate's office, and gave her permission to depart; exhorting her at the same time not to repeat her crime, or return to any of her former wickednesses.—There is no decisive proof that she was a true penitent; for our Lord, in beneath; I am from above: ye are of this world; I am not of this world.

24 I said therefore unto you, that ye shall die in your sins: [t]for if ye believe not that I am he, ye shall die in your sins.

25 Then said they unto him, Who art thou? And Jesus saith unto them, Even the same that I said unto you from the beginning.

26 I have many things to say and [z]to judge of you: [a]but he that sent me is true; and I speak to the world those things which I have heard of him.

27 And they understood not that he spake to them of the Father.

28 Then said Jesus unto them, When ye have lifted up the Son of man, [c]then shall ye know that I am he, and that I do nothing of myself; [g]but as my Father hath taught me, I speak these things.

29 And [h]he that sent me is with me: the Father hath not left me alone; for I do always those things that please him.

30 As he spake these words, [k]many believed on him.

31 ¶ Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my word, then are ye [m]my disciples indeed;

32 And ye shall know the truth, [o]and the truth shall make you free.

33 ¶ They answered him, We be Abraham's seed, and were never in bondage to any man:[6] how sayest thou, Ye shall be made free?

34 Jesus answered them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, [s]Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin.

35 And the servant abideth not in the house for ever: [u]but the Son abideth ever.

36 If [x]the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed.

37 I know that ye are Abraham's seed; [z]but ye seek to kill me, [a]because my word hath no place in you.[7]

38 I [b]speak that which I have seen with my Father: [c]and ye do that which ye have seen with your father.

39 They answered and said unto him, Abraham is our father. Jesus saith unto them, [d]If ye were Abraham's children, ye would do the works of Abraham.

40 But now ye seek to kill me, a man that hath told you the truth, which I have heard of God: this did not Abraham.[8]

41 Ye do the deeds of your father. Then said they to him, We be not born of fornication; [l]we have one Father, even God.

42 Jesus said unto them, If God were your Father, ye would love me: [l]for I proceeded forth and came from God; [m]neither came I of myself, but he sent me.

43 Why do ye not understand my speech? even because [o]ye cannot hear my word.

44 Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do: he was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar,[9] and the father of it.

45 And [t]because I tell you the truth, ye believe me not.

46 Which of you [u]convinceth me of sin? And if I say the truth, [x]why do ye not believe me?

47 He [y]that is of God, heareth God's words: ye therefore hear them not, because ye are not of God.

48 ¶ Then answered the Jews, and said unto him, [z]Say we not well that thou art a Samaritan,[10] and hast a devil?

49 Jesus answered, I have not a devil: [a]but I honour my Father, and ye do dishonour me.

50 And I seek not mine own glory: there is one that seeketh and judgeth.

51 Verily, verily, I say unto you, [f]If a man keep my saying, he shall never [b]see death.

52 Then said the Jews unto him, [i]Now we know that thou hast a devil. Abraham is dead, and the prophets; and thou sayest, If a man keep my saying, he shall never [i]taste of death.

53 Art thou greater than our father Abraham, which is dead? and the prophets are dead: [n]whom makest thou thyself?

54 Jesus answered, [o]If I honour myself, my honour is nothing: [p]it is my Father [q]that honoureth me, of whom ye say, that he is your God.

55 Yet ye have not known him; [u]but I know him: and if I should say, I know him not, I shall be a liar like unto you: but I know him, [u]and keep his saying.

56 Your father Abraham rejoiced to see my day: and he saw it, and was glad.

57 Then said the Jews unto him, Thou art not yet fifty years old,[11] and hast thou seen Abraham?

58 Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, [z]Before Abraham was, [a]I am.

59 Then took they up stones to cast at him: but Jesus hid himself, and went out of the temple, going through the midst of them, and so passed by.

CHAP. IX.

He that was born blind is restored to sight, 1; he is brought to the Pharisees, 13, who excommunicate him, 34; Christ receiveth him, and he confesseth Christ, 35.

AND as Jesus passed by, he saw a man, which was blind from his birth.

saying, "Neither do I condemn thee," spake only of condemnation to death according to the judicial law; and the exhortation, "Sin no more," was a direct and strong condemnation of her conduct: yet if these remarkable circumstances were the means of her being converted, pardoned, and saved, it would appear peculiarly suited to his design, who "came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance."—Scott.

CHRIST THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD.—Ver. 12. "Then spake Jesus again unto them," though he had spoken a great deal to them to little purpose, and what he had said was opposed, yet he "spake again," for he "speaketh once, yea twice." They had turned a deaf ear to what he said, and yet he "spake again to them," saying, "I am the light of the world." Note, Jesus Christ is the light of the world. One of the rabbies saith, "Light" is the name of the Messiah, as it is written, Dan. ii. 22. "And light dwelleth with him." God is Light, and Christ is "the Image of the Invisible God;" God of gods, Light of lights. He was expected to be a "Light to lighten the Gentiles," Luke ii. 32, and so the "Light of the world," and not of the Jewish church only. The visible light of the world is the sun, and Christ is the "Sun of righteousness." One sun enlightens the whole world, so does one Christ, and there needs no more. Christ's being the Light speaks, 1. What he is in himself—most excellent and glorious. 2. What he is to the world—the Fountain of light, enlightening every man. What a dungeon would the world be without the sun! So would it be without Christ, by whom "light came into the world."

IMPUDENCE AND FALSEHOOD.—Ver. 33. "We were never in bondage to any man." Now observe, 1. How "false" this "allegation was." I wonder how they could have the confidence to say a thing in the face of a congregation, which was so notoriously untrue. Was not the seed of Abraham in bondage to the Egyptians? Were they not often in bondage to the neighbouring nations, in the time of the judges? Were they not seventy years captives in Babylon? Nay, were they not at this time tributaries to the Romans, and though not in a personal, yet in a national bondage to them, and groaning to be made free? And yet, to confront Christ, they have the impudence to say, "We were never in bondage." Thus they would expose Christ to the ill-will both of the Jews, who were very jealous for the honour of their liberty, and of the Romans, who would not be thought to enslave the nations they conquered. 2. How foolish the application was. Christ had spoken of a liberty wherewith the truth would make them free, which must be meant of a spiritual liberty, for truth, as it is the enriching, so it is the enfranchising of the mind, and the enlarging of that from the captivity of error and prejudice; and yet they plead against the offer of spiritual liberty, that they were never in corporal thraldom; as if because they were never in bondage to "any man," they were never in bondage to any lust.

GENUINE FREEDOM.—Ver. 36. "If the Son shall make you free, you shall be free indeed." Jesus Christ in the gospel offers us our redemption; he has authority and power to make free. 1. To discharge prisoners; this he does in justification, by making satisfaction for our guilt, on which the gospel-offer is grounded, which is to all a conditional act of indemnity, and to all true believers, upon their believing, an absolute charter of pardon; moreover, he makes satisfaction for our debts, for which we were by the law arrested and in execution. Christ, as our Surety, or rather our Bail, (for he was not originally bound with us, but upon our insolvency bound for us,) compounds with the Creditor, answers the demand of injured justice with more than an equivalent, takes the bond and judgment into his own hands, and gives them up cancelled to all that by faith and repentance give him (if I may so say) a counter-security to save his honour harmless, and so they are made free; and from the debt, and every part thereof, they are for ever acquitted, exonerated, and discharged, and a general release sealed of all actions and claims; while against those who refuse to come up to these terms, the securities lie still in the Redeemer's hands in full force. 2. He has a power to rescue bond-slaves, and this he does in sanctification; by the powerful arguments of his gospel, and the powerful operations of his Spirit, he breaks the power of corruption in the soul, rallies the scattered forces of reason and virtue, and fortifies God's interest against sin and Satan, and so the soul is made free. 3. He has a power to naturalize strangers and foreigners, and this he does in adoption. This is a further act of grace; we are not only forgiven and healed, but preferred, there is a charter of privileges as well as pardon: and thus the Son makes us free denizens of the kingdom of priests, the holy nation, the new Jerusalem. Those whom Christ makes free are "free indeed."

ABRAHAM'S VISION OF CHRIST'S DAY.—Ver. 56. They that "received not the promises," yet "saw them afar off," Heb. xi. 13. Balaam saw Christ, but not now, not nigh. There is room to conjecture that Abraham had some vision of Christ and his day, for his own private satisfaction, which is not, nor must be, recorded in his story, like that of Daniel's, which must be "shut up and sealed unto the time of the end," Dan. xii. 4. Christ knew what Abraham saw better than Moses did. But there are divers things recorded, in which Abraham saw more of that which he longed to see, than he did when the promise was first made to him. He saw in Melchizedek one "made like unto the Son of God," and a priest for ever: he saw an appearance of Jehovah, attended with two angels, in the plains of Mamre. In the prevalency of his intercession for Sodom, he saw a specimen of Christ's intercession: in the casting out of Ishmael, and the establishment of the covenant with Isaac, he saw a figure of the gospel day, which is Christ's day, for these things were an allegory. In offering Isaac, and the ram instead of Isaac, he saw a double type of the great Sacrifice.—Henry.

2 And his disciples asked him, saying, Master, [b]who did sin, this man, or his parents, that he was born blind?

3 Jesus answered, [c]Neither hath this man sinned, nor his parents: [d]but that the works of God should be made manifest in him.

4 I [e]must work the works of him that sent me, [f]while it is day; the night cometh, when no man can work.

5 As [g]long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world.

6 When he had thus spoken, he spat on the ground, and made clay of the spittle, and he *anointed the eyes of the blind man with the clay,

7 And said unto him, [1]Go, wash in [k]the pool of Siloam, (which is, by interpretation, [l]Sent.)[1] He went his way therefore, and washed, [m]and came seeing.

8 ¶ The neighbours therefore, and they which before had seen him that he was blind, said, Is not this he that sat and begged?

9 Some said, This is he: others said, He is like him: but he said, I am he.

10 Therefore said they unto him, [p]How were thine eyes opened?

11 He answered and said, [q]A man that is called Jesus made clay, and anointed mine eyes, and said unto me, Go to the pool of Siloam, and wash: and I went and washed, and I received sight.

12 Then said they unto him, Where is he? He said, I know not.

13 ¶ They brought to the Pharisees him that aforetime was blind.

14 And it was the sabbath-day[2] when Jesus made the clay, and opened his eyes.

15 Then again the Pharisees also asked him how he had received his sight. He said unto them, He put clay upon mine eyes, and I washed, and do see.

16 Therefore said some of the Pharisees, [x]This man is not of God, because he keepeth not the sabbath-day. Others said, How can a man that is a sinner do such miracles? [y]And there was a division among them.

17 They say unto the blind man again, What sayest thou of him, that he hath opened thine eyes? He said, [z]He is a prophet.

18 But the Jews did not believe concerning him, that he had been blind, and received his sight, until they called the parents of him that had received his sight.

19 And they asked them, saying, [b]Is this your son, who ye say was born blind? how then doth he now see?

20 His parents answered them, and said, We know that this is our son, and that he was born blind:

21 But by what means he now seeth, we know not; or who hath opened his eyes, we know not: he is of age, ask him; he shall speak for himself.

22 These words spake his parents, because they feared the Jews: for the Jews had agreed already, that if any man did confess that he was Christ, [d]he should be put out of the synagogue.[3]

23 Therefore said his parents, He is of age, ask him.

24 Then again called they the man that was blind, and said unto him, [f]Give God the praise: we know that this man is a sinner.

25 He answered and said, Whether he be a sinner or no, I know not: one thing I know, that, whereas I was blind, now I see.

26 Then said they to him again, What did he to thee? how opened he thine eyes?

27 He answered them, I have told you already, and ye did not hear: wherefore would you hear it again? will ye also be his disciples?

28 Then they reviled him, and said, Thou art his disciple; [m]but we are Moses' disciples.

29 We know that God spake unto Moses: as for this fellow, [p]we know not from whence he is.

30 The man answered and said unto them, Why, herein is a marvellous thing, that ye know not from whence he is, [r]and yet he hath opened mine eyes.

31 Now [s]we know that God heareth not sinners: [4] but if any man be a worshipper of God, [t]and doeth his will, him he heareth.

32 Since the world began was it not heard, that any man opened the eyes of one that was born blind.

33 If this man were not of God, he could do nothing.

34 They answered and said unto him, Thou wast altogether born in sins, [a]and dost thou teach us? [b]And they [t]cast him out.

35 ¶ Jesus heard that they had cast him out; and when he had found him, he said unto him, [d]Dost thou believe on the Son of God?

36 He answered and said, Who is he, Lord, that I might believe on him?

37 And Jesus said unto him, [g]Thou hast both seen him, and it is he that talketh with thee.

38 And he said, Lord, I believe. And he worshipped him.

39 ¶ And Jesus said, For judgment[5] I am come into this world; [k]that they which see not might see, and that they which see [l]might be made blind.

40 And some of the Pharisees which were with him heard these words, and said unto him, [m]Are we blind also?

41 Jesus said unto them, [n]If ye were blind, ye should have no sin: but now ye say, We see; therefore your sin remaineth.

CHAP. IX. THE BLIND MAN.—Ver. 1. This man was "born blind," and it was worth while for him to be so, and to continue thus long dark, "that the works of God might be manifest in him." That is, First, That the attributes of God might be manifested in him; his justice in making sinful man liable to such grievous calamities; his ordinary power and goodness in supporting a poor man under such a grievous and tedious affliction; especially, that his extraordinary power and goodness might be manifested in curing him. Note, The difficulties of Providence, otherwise unaccountable, may be resolved into this—God intends in them to show himself, to declare his glory, to make himself to be taken notice of. Those who regard him not in the ordinary course of things, are sometimes alarmed by things extraordinary. How contentedly then may a good man be a loser in his comforts, while he is sure that thereby God will be one way or other a gainer in his glory! Secondly, That the counsels of God concerning the Redeemer might be manifested in him. He was "born blind," that our Lord Jesus might have the honour of "curing him," and might therein prove himself sent of God to be the Light of the world.

THE KIND OF EYE-SALVE EMPLOYED.—Ver. 6. Now Christ did this, 1. To magnify his power in making a blind man to see by that method which one would think more likely to make a seeing man blind. Daubing clay on the eyes would "close them up," but never "open them." Note, The power of God often works by contraries: and he makes men feel their own blindness before he gives them sight. 2. To give an intimation that it was his mighty hand, the very same that at first made man out of "the clay;" for by him God "made the worlds," both the great world, and man the little world. Man was "formed out of the clay," and moulded like the clay, and here Christ used the same materials to give sight to the body, that at first he used to give being to it. 3. To represent and typify the healing and opening the eyes of the mind by the grace of Jesus Christ. The design of the gospel is to "open men's eyes," Acts xxvi. 18. Now the eye-salve that does the work, is of Christ's preparing; it is made up, not as this, of his spittle, but of his blood, the blood and water that came out of his pierced side; we must come to Christ for "the eye-salve," Rev. iii. 18. He only is able, and he only is appointed, to make it up, Luke iv. 18. The means used in this work are very weak and unlikely, and are made effectual only by the power of Christ.—Henry.

EXCOMMUNICATION.—Ver. 22, 23. Expulsion from the synagogue was a sort of excommunication, attended with many civil penalties and inconveniences. We may account for the parents of the man declining to say any thing, which might bring them into danger of so heavy a punishment; but their conduct cannot be excused, considering their obligations to Jesus, and the sensible evidence, which they had of his power to protect and do them good.—Was the Christ. "Hence it appears, that though our Lord was cautious of professing himself to be the Christ in express terms, yet many understood the intimations he gave;—and also that the parents, and indeed the sanhedrim, knew who it was that opened this man's eyes; though he himself was hitherto a stranger to him, and was not yet acquainted with the dignity of his person." [Doddridge.]—Scott.

CHRIST'S INTERVIEW WITH THE EXPELLED MAN.—Ver. 35. Christ here describes himself to this man by two things, which express his great favour to him. 1. "Thou hast seen him;" and he was much indebted to the Lord Jesus for opening his eyes, that he might "see him." Now he was made sensible, more than ever, what an unspeakable mercy it was to be cured of his blindness, that he might see the Son of God, a sight which rejoiced his heart more than that of the "light of this world." Note, The greatest comfort of bodily eyesight, is, its serviceableness to our faith and the interest of our souls. How contentedly might this man have returned to his former blindness, like old Simeon, now that his eyes had "seen God's salvation!" If we apply it to the opening of the eyes of the mind, it intimates that spiritual sight is given principally for this end, that we may see Christ, 2 Cor. iv. 6. Can we say, that by faith we have seen Christ, seen him in his beauty and glory, in his ability and willingness to save, so seen him as to be satisfied "concerning him," to be satisfied "in him?" Let us give "him" the praise, who opened our eyes. 2. It is "he that talketh with thee;" and he was indebted to Christ for condescending to do this. He was not only favoured with a sight of Christ, but was admitted into fellowship and communion with him. Great princes are willing to be seen by those whom yet they will not vouchsafe to talk with. But Christ, by his word and Spirit, talks with those whose desires are toward him, and in talking with them manifests himself to them, as he did to the two disciples, when he talked their hearts warm, Luke xxiv. 32. Observe, This poor man was solicitously inquiring after the Saviour, when at the same time he saw him, and was talking with him. Note, Jesus Christ is often nearer the souls that seek him, than they themselves are aware of. Doubting Christians are sometimes saying, "Where is the Lord?" and fearing that they are cast out from his sight, when at the same time it is he that "talks with them," and "puts strength into them." 3. The poor man readily entertains this surprising revelation, and, in a transport of joy and wonder, he said, "Lord, I believe, and he worshipped him." (1.) He professed his faith in Christ; "Lord, I believe thee to be the Son of God." He would not dispute any thing that "he" said, who had showed such mercy to him, and wrought such a miracle for him, nor doubt of the truth of a doctrine which was confirmed by such signs. Believing with the heart, he thus confesses with the mouth; and now the bruised reed was become a cedar. (2.) He paid his homage to him. He "worshipped him," not only gave him

Christ is the door, and the good shepherd, 1. Divers opinions of him, 19. He proveth by his works that he is Christ, 22.

VERILY, verily, I say unto you, [b]He that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold,[1] but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber.

2 But he that entereth in by the door is [*]the shepherd of the sheep.

3 To him the porter openeth; and the sheep hear his voice: and he calleth his own sheep by name, [i]and leadeth them out.

4 And when he putteth forth his own sheep, [k]he goeth before them, and the [l]sheep follow him: for they know his voice.

5 And a stranger will they not follow, but will flee from him: for they know not the voice of strangers.

6 This parable spake Jesus unto them; but they understood not what things they were which he spake unto them.

7 Then said Jesus unto them again, Verily, verily, I say unto you, [o]I am the door of the sheep.

8 All that ever came before me are thieves and robbers: but the sheep did not hear them.

9 I am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, [t]and shall go in and out, and find pasture.

10 The thief cometh not, but for to steal, and to kill, and to destroy: [x]I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly.

11 I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd [*]giveth his life for the sheep.

12 But he that is an hireling, and not the shepherd, whose own the sheep are not, seeth [c]the wolf coming, and leaveth the sheep, and fleeth; and the wolf catcheth them, and scattereth the sheep.

13 The hireling fleeth, because he is an hireling, and careth not for the sheep.

14 I am [e]the good shepherd, and know my sheep, [g]and am known of mine.

15 As [h]the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father: and I lay down my life for the sheep.

16 And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, [m]and they shall hear my voice; [n]and there shall be one fold, and [o]one shepherd.

17 Therefore doth my Father love me, because I lay down my life, that I might take it again.[2]

18 No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself; I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again. This commandment have I received of my Father.

19 ¶ There was a division therefore again among the Jews for these sayings.

20 And many of them said, He hath a devil, and is mad; why hear ye him?

21 Others said, These are not the words of him that hath a devil: [y]can a devil open the eyes of the blind?

22 ¶ And it was at Jerusalem the feast of the dedication, and it was winter.

23 And Jesus walked in the temple in Solomon's porch.[3]

24 Then came the Jews round about him, and said unto him, How long dost thou [*]make us to doubt? [b]If thou be the Christ, tell us plainly.

25 Jesus answered them, I told you, and ye believed not: [d]the works that I do in my Father's name, they bear witness of me:

26 But ye believe not; [e]because ye are not of my sheep, as I said unto you.

27 My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me:

28 And [i]I give unto them eternal life; [k]and they shall never perish, neither shall any pluck them out of my hand.

29 My Father, which gave them me, [n]is greater than all; and none is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand.

30 [o]I and my Father are one.[4]

31 ¶ Then the Jews took up stones again to stone him.

32 Jesus answered them, Many good works have I shewed you from my Father; for which of those works do ye stone me?

33 The Jews answered him, saying, For a good work we stone thee not, but for blasphemy; and because that thou, being a man, [t]makest thyself God.

34 Jesus answered them, Is it not written in your law, I said, Ye are gods?

35 If he called them gods, [s]unto whom the word of God came, and the scripture cannot be broken;

36 Say ye of him, whom the Father hath sanctified, [c]and sent into the world, Thou blasphemest; because I said, I am the Son of God?

37 If I do not the works of my Father, believe me not.

38 But if I do, though ye believe not me, [f]believe the works: [g]that ye may know and believe that the Father is in me, and I in him.

the civil respect due to a great man, and the acknowledgments owing to a kind benefactor, but herein gave him divine honour, and worshipped him as the "Son of God" manifested in the flesh. None but God is to be worshipped; so that in worshipping Jesus, he owned him to be God. Note, True faith will show itself in a humble adoration of the Lord Jesus. They who believe in him, will see all the reason in the world to worship him. We never read any more of this man; but, it is very likely, from henceforth he became a constant follower of Christ.—Henry.

CHAP. X. Parable of the Shepherd.—Ver. 1—5. The faithful shepherds enter by the door into the sheepfold; but all who intrude into the pastoral office without these views, dispositions, and purposes, (which are so many credentials from Christ, that he hath sent the man who possesses them,) climb up by some other way, abusing human appointments, though good in themselves, and even divine institutions, to subserve their love of ease, wealth, authority, or reputation; and employing the influence of rich and powerful connections, or that acquired by natural abilities and human learning, as a passport into stations in the church, for which they have not one correspondent disposition or qualification. Such men, like the priests, Scribes, and Pharisees, in our Lord's time, are thieves and robbers, who enter the fold in an unauthorized manner, to fleece or butcher, not to feed, the flock; who rob Christ of his honour, and starve the souls of his people, in order to enrich themselves and aggrandize their families. But to them, who enter with a due regard to Christ, and with proper desires and intentions, "the porter openeth;" that is, God, in his providence and by his Spirit, makes way for them successfully to exercise their ministry: and the sheep of Christ, or true believers, hear their voice, and receive the truth from them. And, as in those eastern regions, the sheep, when led forth from the fold to the pasture, followed the shepherd, when they heard his well-known voice, and saw him going before them: so these pastors get acquainted with the people committed to their care, and lead them by their instructions into the knowledge of the truth, and into the ways of peace and holiness: they walk before them by their example; and the people follow them with confidence, as they know and experience their doctrine to be good, and their exhortations salutary. But the sheep will not follow those who are strangers to them, to Christ, and to his truth, but will flee from them, fearing lest they should be deceived, and not finding their doctrine suited to their wants and experience, or level to their capacities.—Scott.

The Hireling.—Ver. 12. Not that those are hirelings, who, while they "serve at the altar, live," and live comfortably, "upon the altar;" the labourer is worthy of his meat; and a scandalous maintenance will soon make a scandalous ministry; but those are "hirelings," that love the "wages" more than the work, and "set their hearts" upon that, as the "hireling" is said to do, Deut. xxiv. 15; see 1 Sam. ii. 29; Isa. lvi. 11; Mic. iii. 5, 11. The work of their place is the least of their care; they "value not the sheep," are unconcerned in the souls of others, their business is to be their brothers' lords, not their brothers' keepers or helpers; they "seek their own things," and do not, like Timothy, "naturally care for the state of souls;" what can be expected but that they will flee when "the wolf comes?" He "careth not for the sheep," for he is one "whose own the sheep are not;" in one respect we may say of the best of the under-shepherds, that the sheep are "not their own," they have not dominion over them, or property in them; ("Feed my sheep" and "my lambs," saith Christ;) but in respect of dearness and affection they should be "their own." Paul looked upon those as "his own," whom he called his "dearly beloved and longed for." Those who do not cordially espouse the church's interests, and make them "their own," will not long be faithful to them.

The Good Shepherd.—Ver. 15. "I lay down my life for the sheep." He not only ventured his life for them, (in such a case, the hope of saving it may balance the fear of losing it,) but he actually deposited it, and submitted to a necessity of dying for our redemption. Sheep appointed for the slaughter, ready to be sacrificed, were ransomed with the blood of the Shepherd. He laid down his life, not only for the good of the sheep, but "in their stead." Thousands of sheep had been offered in sacrifice for their shepherds, as sin-offerings, but here, by a surprising reverse, the Shepherd is sacrificed for the sheep. When David, the shepherd of Israel, was himself guilty, and the destroying angel drew his sword against the flock for his sake, with good reason did he plead, "These sheep, what evil have they done? Let thy hand be against me," 2 Sam. xxiv. 17. But the Son of David was sinless and spotless; and his sheep, what evil have they not done? Yet he saith, "Let thine hand be against me." Christ here seems to refer to that prophecy, Zech. xiii. 7, "Awake, O sword, against my Shepherd;" and though the smiting of the Shepherd be for the present the "scattering" of the flock, it is in order to the gathering of them in.

Safety of the Sheep.—Ver. 27. 1. Our Lord Jesus takes cognizance of his sheep; They "hear my voice," and I "know them." He distinguishes them from others, 2 Tim. ii. 19, has a particular regard to every individual, Ps. xxxiv. 6, he knows their wants and desires; knows their souls in adversity, where to find them, and what to do for them. He knows others afar off, but knows them near at hand. 2. He has provided a happiness for them, suited to them; "I give unto them eternal life," ver. 28. The estate settled upon them is rich and valuable; it is life, eternal life. Man has a living soul, therefore the happiness provided is "life," suited to his nature. Man has an immortal

CHAP. XI.

Christ raiseth Lazarus, 1. The priests and Pharisees gather a council against him, 47.

NOW a certain man [a]was sick,[1] named [b]Lazarus, of [c]Bethany, the town of [d]Mary and her sister Martha.

2 (It was [e]that Mary which [f]anointed the Lord with ointment, and wiped his feet with her hair, whose brother Lazarus was sick.)

3 Therefore his sisters sent unto him, saying, Lord, behold, he whom thou lovest is sick.

4 When Jesus heard that, he said, This sickness is not unto death, but [i]for the glory of God, [k]that the Son of God might be glorified thereby.

5 Now Jesus [l]loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus.

6 When he had heard therefore that he was sick, [m]he abode two days still in the same place where he was.

7 Then after that saith he to his disciples, Let us go into Judea again.

8 His disciples say unto him, Master, the Jews of late sought to stone thee; and goest thou thither again?

9 Jesus answered, Are there not twelve hours[2] in the day? If any man walk in the day, [q]he stumbleth not, because he seeth the light of this world.

10 But if [r]a man walk in the night, he stumbleth, because there is no light in him.

11 These things said he: and after that he saith unto them, Our friend Lazarus [t]sleepeth; but I go, that I may [u]awake him out of sleep.

12 Then said his disciples, Lord, if he sleep, he shall do well.

13 Howbeit, Jesus spake of his death: but they thought that he had spoken of taking of rest in sleep.

14 Then said Jesus unto them plainly, Lazarus is dead.

15 And [y]I am glad for your sakes that I was not there, [z]to the intent ye may believe; nevertheless, let us go unto him.

16 Then said Thomas, which is called Didymus,[3] unto his fellow-disciples, [c]Let us also go, that we may die with him.[4]

17 Then, when Jesus came, he found that he had lain in the grave four days already.

18 (Now Bethany was nigh unto Jerusalem, about *fifteen furlongs off.)

19 And many of the Jews came to Martha and Mary, [c]to comfort them concerning their brother.

20 Then Martha, as soon as she heard that Jesus was coming, went and met him: but Mary sat still in the house.

21 Then said Martha unto Jesus, Lord, [g]if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died.

22 But I know, [h]that even now, whatsoever thou wilt ask of God, [i]God will give it thee.

23 Jesus saith unto her, [k]Thy brother shall rise again.

24 Martha saith unto him, I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day.

25 Jesus said unto her, [m]I am the resurrection, and [n]the life: [o]he that believeth in me, though he were dead,[5] yet shall he live:

26 And [p]whosoever liveth, and believeth in me, shall never die. Believest thou this?

27 She saith unto him, Yea, Lord: I believe that thou art the Christ, the Son of God, [s]which should come into the world.

28 And when she had so said, she went her way, and called Mary her sister secretly, saying, [u]The Master is come, and calleth for thee.

29 As soon as she heard that, she arose quickly, and came unto him.

30 Now Jesus was not yet come into the town, but was in that place where Martha met him.

31 The Jews then which were with her in the house, and comforted her, when they saw Mary, that she rose up hastily and went out, followed her,[6] saying, [b]She goeth unto the grave to weep there.

32 Then when Mary was come where Jesus was, and saw him, [c]she fell down at his feet, saying unto him, Lord, [d]if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died.

33 When Jesus therefore saw her weeping, [e]and the Jews also weeping which came with her, [f]he groaned in the spirit, and *was troubled,

34 And said, Where have ye laid him? They say unto him, Lord, come and see.

35 [h]Jesus wept.

36 Then said the Jews, [l]Behold how he loved him!

37 And some of them said, Could not this man, which opened the eyes of the blind, have caused that even this man should not have died?

38 Jesus therefore again [l]groaning in himself, cometh to the grave. It was a cave, and a stone lay upon it.

39 Jesus said, Take ye away the stone. Martha, the sister of him that was dead, saith unto him, Lord, by this time he stinketh:[7] for he hath been dead four days.

40 Jesus saith unto her, Said I not unto thee, that, if thou wouldest believe, thou shouldest [p]see the glory of God?

41 Then they took away the stone from the place where the dead was laid. [q]And soul, therefore the happiness provided is "eternal life," running parallel with his duration. "Life eternal" is the felicity and chief good of a soul immortal.—Henry.

CHAP. XI. THE FAMILY OF BETHANY.—Ver. 1—5. We have, in these verses, 1. A particular account of the parties principally concerned in this story, ver. 1, 2. They lived at Bethany, a village not far from Jerusalem, where Christ usually lodged when he came up to the feasts. It is here called the "town of Mary and Martha," that is, the town where they dwelt, as Bethsaida is called the "city of Andrew and Peter," chap. i. 44. For I see no reason to think, as some do, that Martha and Mary were owners of the town, and the rest were their tenants. 2. Here was a brother named Lazarus: his Hebrew name, probably, was Eleazar, which, being contracted, and a Greek termination put to it, is made Lazarus. Perhaps, in prospect of this history, our Saviour made use of the name of Lazarus in that parable wherein he designed to set forth the blessedness of the righteous in the bosom of Abraham immediately after death, Luke xvi. 22. 3. Here were two sisters, Martha and Mary, who seem to have been the housekeepers, and to have managed the affairs of the family, while perhaps Lazarus lived a retired life, and gave himself to study and contemplation. Here was a decent, happy, well-ordered family, and a family that Christ was very much conversant in, where yet there was neither husband nor wife, (for aught that appears,) but the house kept by a brother, and his sisters dwelling together in unity. 4. One of the sisters is particularly described to be "that Mary which anointed the Lord with ointment," ver. 2. Some think she was that woman that we read of, Luke vii. 37, 38, who had been a "sinner," a bad woman. I rather think it refers to that anointing of Christ, which this evangelist relates, chap. xii. 3, for the evangelists do never refer one to another, but John frequently refers in one place of his gospel to another. Extraordinary acts of piety and devotion, that come from an honest principle of love to Christ, will not only find acceptance with him, but gain reputation in the church, Matt. xxvi. 13. This was she "whose brother Lazarus was sick;" and the sickness of those we love is our affliction.

DEATH OF LAZARUS.—Ver. 11. "Our friend Lazarus sleepeth." See here how Christ calls a believer, and a believer's death. First, He calls a believer his friend, "Our friend Lazarus." Note, 1. There is a covenant of friendship between Christ and believers, and a friendly affection and communion pursuant to it, which our Lord Jesus will own and not be ashamed of. His secret is with the righteous. 2. Those whom Christ is pleased to own as his friends, all his disciples should take for theirs. Christ speaks of Lazarus as their common friend,—"Our friend." 3. Death itself does not break the bond of friendship between Christ and a believer. Lazarus is dead, and yet he is still "our friend." Secondly, He calls the death of a believer a sleep, "he sleepeth." It is good to call death by such names and titles as will help to make it more familiar and less formidable to us. The death of Lazarus was in a peculiar sense a sleep, as that of Jairus's daughter, because they were to be raised again speedily; and since we are sure to rise again at last, why should that make any great difference? And why should not the believing hope of that resurrection to eternal life make it as easy to us to put off the body and die, as it is to put off our clothes and go to sleep? A good Christian, when he dies, does but sleep: he rests from the labours of the day past, and is refreshing himself for the next morning. Nay, herein death has the advantage of sleep, that sleep is only the parenthesis, but death is the period of our cares and toils. The soul does not sleep, but becomes more active; but the body sleeps without any toss, without any terror; not distempered nor disturbed. The grave to the wicked is a prison, and its grave-clothes as the shackles of a criminal reserved for execution; but to the godly it is a bed, and all its bands as the soft and downy feathers of an easy, quiet sleep. Though the body corrupt, it will rise in the morning as if it had never seen corruption; it is but putting off our clothes to be mended and trimmed up for the marriage-day, the coronation-day, to which we must rise. See Isa. lvii. 2; 1 Thess. iv. 14. The Greeks called their burying-places dormitories.

CHRIST THE RESURRECTION AND LIFE.—Ver. 25. "I am the Resurrection and the Life," the Fountain of Life, and the Head and Author of the resurrection. Martha believed that at his prayer God would give any thing, but he would have her know that by his word he could work any thing. Martha believed a resurrection at the last day, Christ tells her that he had that power lodged in his own hand, that the dead were to "hear his voice," chap. v. 25, whence it was easy to infer, he that could raise a world of men that had been dead many ages, could doubtless raise one man that had been dead but four days. Note, It is an unspeakable comfort to all good Christians, that Jesus Christ is the Resurrection and the Life, and will be so to them. Resurrection is a return to life, Christ is the Author of that return, and of that life to which it is a return. We look for the resurrection of the dead, and the life of the world to come, and Christ is both; the author and principle of both, and the ground of our hope of both.

GRIEF OF MARY.—Ver. 31. They said, "She goes to the grave to weep there." Martha bore up better under this affliction than Mary did, who was a woman of a tender and sorrowful spirit; such was her natural temper. Those that are so, have need to watch against melancholy, and ought to be pitied and helped. Those comforters found that their formalities did her no service, but that she hardened herself in sorrow; and therefore concluded, when she went out, and turned that way, it was to "go to the grave,"

Jesus lifted up his eyes, and said, Father, I thank thee that thou hast heard me.

42 And [s]I knew that thou hearest me always: [t]but because of the people which stand by I said it, [u]that they may believe [x]that thou hast sent me.

43 And when he thus had spoken, he cried with a loud voice, [y]Lazarus, come forth.

44 And [z]he that was dead came forth, bound hand and foot with grave-clothes; and his face was bound about with a napkin.[8] Jesus saith unto them, Loose him, and let him go.

45 Then many of the Jews which came to Mary, and had seen the things which Jesus did, believed on him.

46 But some of them went their ways to the Pharisees, and told them what things Jesus had done.

47 ¶ Then gathered the chief priests and the Pharisees a council, and said, [f]What do we? for this man doeth many miracles.

48 If we let him thus alone, [h]all men will believe on him; [i]and the Romans shall come and take away both our place and nation.[9]

49 And one of them, named [k]Caiaphas, being the high priest that same year, said unto them, Ye know nothing at all,

50 Nor consider that it is expedient for us, that one man should die for the people, and that the whole nation perish not.

51 And this spake he not of himself: but being high priest that year, [o]he prophesied that Jesus should die for that nation;

52 And [q]not for that nation only, but that also he should [r]gather together in one [s]the children of God [t]that were scattered abroad.

53 Then, from that day forth, they took counsel together for to [y]put him to death.

54 Jesus therefore walked no more openly among the Jews; but went thence unto a country near to the wilderness, into a city called Ephraim, and there continued with his disciples.

55 ¶ And the Jews' passover was nigh at hand: and many went out of the country up to Jerusalem [d]before the passover, [e]to purify themselves.[10]

56 Then sought they for Jesus, and spake among themselves, as they stood in the temple, What think ye, that he will not come to the feast?

57 Now both the chief priests and the Pharisees had given a commandment, that, if any man knew where he were, he should shew it, that they might take him.

[2] There were at that time many Gentile inquirers after true religion; they used to frequent the synagogues as proselytes of the gate, and were not circumcised (mentioned Acts xvii. 4). It is probable, therefore, that these were Gentiles, and not Jews.—Bloomfield.

THEN Jesus, six days before the passover, came to Bethany, where Lazarus was which had been dead, whom he raised from the dead.

2 There they made him a supper; [d]and Martha served: but [e]Lazarus was one of them that sat at the table with him.

3 Then took Mary a pound of ointment of spikenard, very costly, and [h]anointed the feet of Jesus, and wiped his feet with her hair: and the house was [i]filled with the odour of the ointment.

4 Then saith one of his disciples, Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, which should betray him,

5 Why was not this ointment sold for three hundred pence, [o]and given to the poor?

6 This he said, not that he cared for the poor; but because he was a thief, and had [l]the bag, and bare what was put therein.

7 Then said Jesus, [s]Let her alone: [t]against the day of my burying hath she kept this.

8 For [u]the poor always ye have with you; [x]but me ye have not always.

9 ¶ Much people of the Jews therefore knew that he was there: and they came, not for Jesus' sake only, but that they might see Lazarus also, whom he had raised from the dead.

10 But the chief priests consulted that they might put Lazarus also to death;

11 Because that [a]by reason of him many of the Jews went away, and believed on Jesus.

12 ¶ On the next day much people that were come to the feast, when they heard that Jesus was coming to Jerusalem, 13 Took [d]branches of palm-trees, and went forth to meet him, and cried, [e]Hosanna: Blessed is [f]the King of Israel that cometh in the name of the Lord.

14 And Jesus, when he had found a young ass, sat thereon; as it is written,

15 Fear not, daughter of Sion: behold, thy King cometh, [k]sitting on an ass's colt.

16 These things [l]understood not his disciples at the first: but [m]when Jesus was glorified, [n]then remembered they that these things were written of him, and that they had done these things unto him.

17 The people therefore that was with him when he called Lazarus out of his grave, and raised him from the dead, bare record.

18 For this cause the people also met him, for that they heard that he had done this miracle.

19 The Pharisees therefore said among themselves, Perceive ye how ye prevail nothing? behold, [s]the world is gone after him.

20 ¶ And there were certain Greeks[2] among them that came up to worship at the feast:

and "weep there." See, 1. What often is the folly and fault of mourners; they contrive how to aggravate their own grief, and to make bad worse. We are apt in such cases to take a strange pleasure in our own pain, and to say, We do well to be passionate in our grief, even unto death; we are apt to fasten upon those things that aggravate the affliction, and what good does it do to us when it is our duty to reconcile ourselves to the will of God in it? Why should mourners go to the grave to weep there, when they sorrow not as those that have no hope? Affliction of itself is grievous; why should we make it more so? 2. What is the wisdom and duty of comforters; and that is, to prevent as much as may be, in those who grieve inordinately, the revival of the sorrow, and to divert it.

Sorrow of the Man of Sorrows.—Ver. 35. "Jesus wept." A very short verse, but it affords many useful instructions. 1. That Jesus Christ was really and truly man, and partook with the children, not only of flesh and blood, but of a human soul, susceptible of the impressions of joy, and grief, and other affections. Christ gave this proof of his humanity, in both senses of the word; that as a man he could weep, and as a merciful man he would weep, before he gave this proof of his divinity. 2. That he was "a man of sorrows," and "acquainted with grief," as was foretold, Isa. liii. 2. We never read that he laughed, but more than once we have him in tears. Thus he shows not only that a mournful state will consist with the love of God, but that they who sow to the Spirit must sow in tears. 3. Tears of compassion well become Christians, and make them most to resemble Christ. It is a relief to those who are in sorrow to have their friends sympathize with them, especially such a friend as the Lord Jesus.—Henry.

Resurrection of Lazarus.—Ver. 41—46. When the stone was removed, our Lord, with eyes lifted up to heaven, addressed himself to his Father, in a manner of which we have no other instance. The Jews, unable to deny the reality of his miracles, had repeatedly ascribed them to the power of the devil; he was therefore pleased to introduce this most astonishing miracle by an appeal to the God of heaven, as his Father; thus making it undeniably evident that he performed it by power from above; and that the Father bare witness to him, and authorized all those declarations of his own dignity and authority, which the Jews considered as blasphemy. He therefore praised and thanked the Father that he had heard him, in respect of the opportunity and circumstances, which had been ordered in providence for the display of his power, by the miracle that he was about to perform. Indeed, he was assured, that the Father always accepted and answered the prayers which, as Man and Mediator, he continually presented before him. But he made this public appeal for the benefit of those who stood by; that the event might convince them that God had sent him as his beloved Son into the world, to perform the works, and to teach the doctrines, which they had seen and heard.—Scott.

CHAP. XII. Mary's Love.—Ver. 3.—See also Matt. xxvi. 6.—Now by this her love to Christ appears to have been, 1. A generous love; so far from sparing necessary charges in his service, she is as ingenious to create an occasion of expense in religion as most are to avoid it. If she had any thing more valuable than another, that must be brought out for the honour of Christ. Note, Those who love Christ truly, love him so much better than this world, as to be willing to lay out the best they have for him. 2. A condescending love; she not only bestowed her ointment upon Christ, but poured it upon him with her own hands, which she might have ordered one of her servants to have done; nay, she did not, as usual, anoint his head with it, but his feet. True love, as it does not spare charges, so it does not spare pains, in honouring Christ. Considering what Christ has done and suffered for us, we are very ungrateful if we think any service too hard to do, or too mean to stoop to, whereby he may really be glorified. 3. A believing love; there was faith working by this love, faith in Jesus as the Messiah, the Christ, the Anointed, who, being both Priest and King, was anointed as Aaron and David were. Note, God's Anointed should be our Anointed. Has God poured on him the oil of gladness above his fellows? Let us pour on him the ointment of our best affections above all competitors. By consenting to Christ as our King, we must comply with God's designs, appointing him our Head, whom he has appointed, Hos. i. 11.

Christ and Lazarus.—Ver. 9. The people came to see Lazarus and Christ together, which was a very inviting sight. Some came for the confirmation of their faith in Christ, to have the story perhaps from Lazarus's own mouth. Others came only for the gratifying of their curiosity, that they might say they had seen a man who had been dead and buried, and yet lived again: so that Lazarus served for a show, these holidays, to those, who, like the Athenians, spent their time in hearing and seeing new things. Perhaps some came to put curious questions to Lazarus about the state of the dead, to ask what news from the other world; we ourselves have sometimes said, it may be, We would have gone a great way for one hour's discourse with Lazarus. But if any came on this errand, it is probable that Lazarus was silent, and gave them no account of his voyage: however, the Scripture is silent, and gives us no account of it; and we must not covet to be wise above what is written. But our Lord Jesus was present, who was a much fitter person for them to apply to than Lazarus; for if we hear not Moses and the prophets, Christ and the apostles, if we heed not what they tell us concerning 21 The same came therefore to Philip, which was of Bethsaida of Galilee,[3] and desired him, saying, Sir, [y]we would see Jesus.

22 Philip cometh, and telleth Andrew: and again Andrew and Philip tell Jesus.

23 ¶ And Jesus answered them, saying, The hour is come, that the Son of man should be glorified.

24 Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone: but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit.

25 He [c]that loveth his life shall lose it; and he that [f]hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal.

26 If any man serve me, [h]let him follow me; and [i]where I am, there shall also my servant be: if any man serve me, [k]him will my Father honour.

27 Now [l]is my soul troubled; and what shall I say? Father, save me from this hour: [o]but for this cause came I unto this hour.

28 [p]Father, glorify thy name. Then came there a voice from heaven, saying, I have both glorified it, and will glorify it again.

29 The people therefore that stood by, and heard it, said that it thundered: others said, An angel spake to him.

30 Jesus answered and said, This voice came not because of me, but for your sakes.

31 Now [y]is the judgment of this world: [z]now shall the prince of this world be cast out.

32 And I, [a]if I be lifted up from the earth, [b]will draw all men unto me.[4]

33 (This he said, signifying what death he should die.)

34 The people answered him, We have heard out of the law, that [f]Christ abideth for ever: and how sayest thou, The Son of man must be lifted up? [g]who is this Son of man?

35 Then Jesus said unto them, Yet a little while is the light with you: [i]walk while ye have the light, [k]lest darkness come upon you: for he that walketh in darkness knoweth not whither he goeth.

36 While ye have light, believe in the light, that ye may be [n]the children of light. These things spake Jesus, [o]and departed, and did hide himself from them.

37 ¶ But though he had done so many miracles before them, yet they believed not on him:

38 That the saying of Esaias the prophet might be fulfilled, which he spake, Lord, [s]who hath believed our report? and to whom hath [t]the arm of the Lord been revealed?

39 Therefore [x]they could not believe, because that Esaias said again, 40 He hath blinded their eyes, and hardened their heart; that they should not see with their eyes, nor understand with their heart, [c]and be converted, and I should [d]heal them.

41 These things said Esaias, when he saw his glory, and spake of him.

42 ¶ Nevertheless among the chief rulers also many believed on him; but because of the Pharisees they did not confess him, lest they should be put out of the synagogue:

43 For [l]they loved the praise of men more than [m]the praise of God.

44 ¶ Jesus cried, and said, [o]He that believeth on me, believeth not on me, but on him that sent me.

45 And [p]he that seeth me, seeth him that sent me.[5]

46 I [q]am come a light into the world, that whosoever believeth on me should not [r]abide in darkness

47 And if any man hear my words, and believe not, [s]I judge him not: [t]for I came not to judge the world, but to save the world.

48 He that [u]rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him: the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day.

49 For I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak.

50 And I know that [a]his commandment is life everlasting: whatsoever I speak therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak.

CHAP. XIII.

Jesus washeth his disciples' feet, and exhorteth them to humility and charity, 1. He forewarneth Peter of his denial, 38.

NOW, before [a]the feast of the passover, when Jesus [b]knew that his hour was come, that he should [c]depart out of this world unto the Father, having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end.

2 And supper being ended, (the devil having now put into the heart of Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, to betray him,)

3 Jesus knowing that the Father had given all things into his hands, [k]and that he was come from God, and went to God;

4 He riseth from supper, and laid aside his garments; and took a towel, and girded himself.

5 After that, he poureth water into a bason, and began to wash the disciples' feet, and to wipe them with the towel wherewith he was girded.

6 Then cometh he to Simon Peter: and *Peter said unto him, Lord, dost thou wash my feet?

another world, neither should we be persuaded though Lazarus rose from the dead. We have a more sure word of prophecy.

Blessed Results of Christ's Death.—Ver. 24. "'Verily, verily, I say unto you,' you to whom I have spoken of my death and sufferings, that 'except a corn of wheat' fall, not only to, but into, 'the ground' and 'die,' and be buried and lost, it 'abideth alone,' and you never see any more of it; 'but if it die,' according to the course of nature, (otherwise it would be a miracle,) it 'bringeth forth much fruit:' God giving to every seed its own body." Christ is this corn of wheat, the most valuable and useful grain. Now here is, 1. The intimation of Christ's humiliation intimated. He had never been the living, quickening Head and Root of the church, if he had not descended from heaven to this accursed earth, and ascended from earth to the accursed tree, and so accomplished our redemption. He must "pour out his soul unto death," else he cannot "divide a portion with the great," Isa. liii. 12. He shall have a seed given him, but he must shed his blood, to purchase them and purify them, must win them and wear them. It was necessary likewise as a qualification for that glory, which he was to have by the accession of multitudes to his church; for if he had not by his sufferings made satisfaction for sin, and so brought in an everlasting righteousness, he had not been sufficiently provided for the entertainment of those that should come to him, and therefore must "abide alone." 2. The advantage of Christ's humiliation illustrated. He "fell to the ground" in his incarnation, seemed to be buried alive in this earth, so much was his glory veiled; but that was not all, "he died," this immortal Seed submitted to the laws of mortality, he lay in the grave like seed under the clods; but as the seed comes up again green, and fresh, and flourishing, and with a great increase, so one dying Christ gathered to himself thousands of living Christians, and he became their Root. The salvation of souls hitherto, and henceforward to the end of time, is all owing to the dying of this Corn of wheat. Hereby the Father and Son are glorified, the church is replenished, the mystical body kept up, and will at length be completed.

Christ's Love and Heroism.—Ver. 27. "For this cause came I to this hour." Innocent nature got the first word, but divine wisdom and love got the last. Note, They who would proceed regularly must go upon second thoughts. The complainant speaks first; but, if we would judge righteously, we must hear the other side. With the second thought he checked himself; "For this cause came I to this hour;" he does not silence himself with this, that he could not avoid it, there was no remedy; but satisfies himself with this, that he would not avoid it, for it was pursuant to his own voluntary engagement, and was to be the crown of his whole undertaking; should he now fly off, it would frustrate all that had been done hitherto. Reference is here had to the divine counsels concerning his sufferings, by virtue of which, thus it behoveth him to submit and suffer. Note, This should reconcile us to the darkest hours of our lives, that we were all along designed for them: see 1 Thess. iii. 3.—Henry.

Unbelief.—Ver. 37—41. The obstinate unbelief of the Jews, notwithstanding the numerous and signal miracles of Jesus, was an accomplishment of an ancient prophecy. It was predicted by Isaiah, as by one astonished, that few in comparison would believe the report of the Messiah's coming; because his external appearance would not coincide with their carnal expectations: and in the case of these few, the arm, or power of the Lord would be displayed, or made bare, to overcome their pride, enmity, and worldly prejudices, and to bring them to believe in their lowly and spiritual Redeemer. Or the inquiry might be, to whom the despised Messiah would be made known, as the arm or power of God to salvation? None indeed are of themselves inclined to welcome the salvation of God; but the Jews of that generation did every thing that could be conceived to provoke him to withhold it from them, and to give them up to their own hearts' lusts. "Therefore they could not believe," for it was further predicted, that "God would blind their eyes," &c. They had long shut their own eyes, and hardened their own hearts; and so God would give up many of them to such judicial blindness as rendered their conversion and salvation impossible. The prophecy was not the motive or the cause of their wickedness; but it was the declaration of God's purpose, which could not be defeated; therefore, whilst this prophecy stood in Scripture against them, and others of like character, who hated the truth from love of sin, the event became certain; in which sense it is said, that they could not believe.—Scott.

CHAP. XIII. Christ's Last Passover.—See Mark xiv. 12.

Washing the Disciples' Feet—Peter.—Ver. 6—11. It is probable that Peter was one of the first, whose feet Jesus attempted to wash: so that after what had passed in respect of him, none else made any objection; and doubtless Jesus washed the feet of Judas the traitor, as well as those of the rest. Peter, conscious of his own sinfulness, and firmly believing his Lord to be "the Christ, the Son of the living God;" inquired with the utmost amazement, whether He could really mean to wash the feet of so mean and vile a sinner? Intimating that it would be such a degradation, as he could not bear to think of. To this, Jesus replied, that though Peter did not then understand the import or perceive the propriety of his conduct; yet it would be explained to him in due time, and he would know and approve of his reasons for so doing. Peter, however, supposing himself actuated by a humble regard to his Master's honour,

7 Jesus answered and said unto him, [q]What I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter.

8 Peter saith unto him, [r]Thou shalt never wash my feet. Jesus answered him, [s]If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me.

9 Simon Peter saith unto him, Lord, [t]not my feet only, but also my hands and my head.

10 Jesus saith to him, He that is washed [x]needeth not, save to wash his feet, [y]but is clean every whit: [z]and ye are clean, but not all.

11 For he knew who should betray him; therefore said he, Ye are not all clean.

12 So, after he had washed their feet, and had taken his garments, and was set down again, he said unto them, [b]Know ye what I have done to you?

13 Ye call me Master and Lord: and ye say well; for so I am.

14 If I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet, [c]ye also ought to wash one another's feet.

15 For I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you.

16 Verily, verily, I say unto you, [d]The servant is not greater than his lord; neither he that is sent greater than he that sent him.

17 If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them.

18 ¶ I speak not of you all; [e]I know whom I have chosen: but, that the scripture may be fulfilled, He that eateth bread with me hath lifted up his heel against me.[2]

19 *Now I tell you before it come, that, when it is come to pass, ye may believe that I am he.

20 Verily, verily, I say unto you, [p]He that receiveth whomsoever I send, receiveth me; and he that receiveth me, receiveth him that sent me.

21 When Jesus had thus said, [q]he was troubled in spirit, and testified, and said, Verily, verily, I say unto you, That one of you shall betray me.

22 Then the disciples looked one on another, doubting of whom he spake.

23 Now there was [t]leaning on Jesus' bosom one of his disciples, [u]whom Jesus loved.[3]

24 Simon Peter therefore beckoned to him, that he should ask who it should be of whom he spake.

25 He then lying on Jesus' breast, saith unto him, Lord, who is it?

26 Jesus answered, He it is to whom I shall give [†]a sop, when I have dipped it. And, when he had dipped the sop, he gave it to [a]Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon.

27 And after the sop [b]Satan entered into him. Then said Jesus unto him, That thou doest,[4] do quickly.

28 Now no man at the table knew for what intent he spake this unto him.

29 For some of them thought, because Judas had the bag, that Jesus had said unto him, Buy those things that we have need of against the feast; or, that he should give something to the poor.

30 He then, having received the sop, went immediately out;[5] and it was night.

31 ¶ Therefore, when he was gone out, Jesus said, [h]Now is the Son of man glorified, [i]and God is glorified in him.

32 If God be glorified in him, [k]God shall also glorify him in himself, and shall straightway glorify him.

33 Little children,[6] yet a little while I am with you. Ye shall seek me: and as I said unto the Jews, Whither I go, ye cannot come; so now I say to you.

34 A [°]new commandment I give unto you, [p]That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another.

35 By [q]this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another.

36 ¶ Simon Peter said unto him, Lord, whither goest thou? Jesus answered him, Whither I go, thou canst not follow me now; but thou shalt follow me afterwards.

37 Peter said unto him, Lord, [t]why cannot I follow thee now? I will lay down my life for thy sake.

38 Jesus answered him, Wilt thou lay down thy life for my sake? Verily, verily, I say unto thee, [x]The cock shall not crow,[7] till thou hast denied me thrice.

CHAP. XIV.

Christ comforteth his disciples, 1; professeth himself the way, the truth, and the life.

LET [a]not your heart be troubled: [b]ye believe in God, believe also in me.

2 In [c]my Father's house are many mansions:[1] if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you.

3 And if I go and prepare a place for you, [f]I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also.

4 And whither I go ye know, and the way ye know.

5 ¶ Thomas saith unto him, Lord, we know not whither thou goest; and how can we know the way?

6 Jesus saith unto him, [l]I am the way, and the truth, and the life: [°]no man cometh unto the Father, but by me.

7 If ye had known me, ye should have known my Father also: [q]and from henceforth ye know him, and have seen him.

positively declared that he should never wash his feet; thus setting up his own will and wisdom in opposition to those of Christ! Yet when our Lord declared, that except he washed him, he could have no part in him or his salvation; Peter suddenly changed his mind, and desired him not only to wash his feet, but also his hands and his head. But our Lord intimated that this was not requisite: for the man, who had been in the bath, needed not to repeat his washing, except as his feet had contracted some occasional defilement, as in other respects he was every whit clean; and so were all the apostles, except Judas, who was a hypocrite and a traitor.—This shows that this action of Christ was an intended emblem of that washing from sin, by his blood and grace, without which we can have no benefit from him or part in him. The true believer is thus washed, when he first receives Christ for his salvation: all his sins are completely pardoned; the sanctification of the Spirit pervades all his faculties, dispositions, affections, and conduct; and he is graciously considered as clean every whit.—Scott.

Condescension.—Ver. 14, 15. Three things our Master hereby designed to teach us. 1. A humble condescension; we must learn of our Master to be "lowly in heart," Matt. xi. 29, and walk with all lowliness; we must think meanly of ourselves, and respectfully of our brethren, and deem nothing below us but sin; we must say of that which seems mean, but has a tendency to the glory of God, and our brethren's good, as David, 2 Sam. vi. 22, "If this be to be vile, I will be yet more vile." Christ had often taught his disciples humility, and they had forgotten the lesson; but now he teaches them in such a way as surely they could never forget. 2. A condescension to be serviceable. To wash one another's feet is to stoop to the meanest offices of love, for the real good and benefit one of another, as blessed Paul, who, though free from all, made himself servant of all; and the blessed Jesus, who "came not to be ministered unto, but to minister." We must not grudge to take care and pains, and to spend time, and to diminish ourselves for the good of others that we are not under any particular obligations to, even to our inferiors, and such as are not in a capacity of making us any requital. Washing the feet after travel, contributes both to the decency of the person, and to his ease, so that to wash one another's feet, is to consult both the credit and the comfort one of another; to do what we can, both to advance our brethren's reputation, and to make their minds easy. See 1 Cor. x. 24; Heb. vi. 10. The duty is mutual; we must both accept help from our brethren, and afford help to our brethren. 3. A serviceableness to the sanctification one of another; ye "ought to wash one another's feet" from the pollutions of sin. Austin takes it in this sense, and many others. We cannot satisfy for one another's sins, that is peculiar to Christ, but we may help to purify one another from sin.

The Beloved Disciple.—Ver. 23—25. 1. Of all the disciples, John was most fit to ask, because he was the favourite, and sat next his Master: "There was leaning on Jesus' bosom, one of his disciples, whom Jesus loved." It appears that this was John, by comparing chap. xxi. 20. Observe, 1. The particular kindness which Jesus had for him; he was known by this periphrasis, that he was "the disciple whom Jesus loved." He loved them all, ver. 1, but John was particularly dear to him. His name signifies gracious. Daniel, who was honoured with the revelations of the Old Testament, as John of the New, was "a man greatly beloved," Dan. ix. 23. Note, Among the disciples of Christ, some are dearer to him than others. 2. His place and posture at this time. He was "leaning on Jesus' bosom." Some say that it was the fashion of those countries to sit at meat in a leaning posture, so that the second lay in the bosom of the first, and so on; which does not seem probable to me, for in such a posture as that they could neither eat nor drink conveniently; but whether that were so or no, John now "leaned in his bosom," and it seems to be an extraordinary expression of endearment used at this time. Note, There are some of Christ's disciples whom he lays in his bosom, who have more free and intimate communion with him than others. The Father loved the Son, and laid him "in his bosom," chap. i. 18, and believers are in like manner one with Christ, chap. xvii. 21. This honour all they shall have shortly in the bosom of Abraham. They who lay themselves at Christ's feet, he will lay them in his bosom.—Henry.

CHAP. XIV. The House of Many Mansions.—Ver. 2. See under what notion the happiness of heaven is here represented; as "mansions," many mansions in Christ's Father's house. 1. Heaven is "a house," not a tent or tabernacle; it is a house not made with hands, "eternal in the heavens." 2. It is a "Father's house; my" Father's house; and his Father is "our" Father, to whom he was now ascending; so that in right of their elder brother all true believers shall be welcome to that happiness as to "their home." It is his house, who is King of kings and Lord of lords, dwells in light, and inhabits eternity. 3. There are "mansions" there; that is, First, Distinct dwellings, an apartment for each; perhaps there is an allusion to the priests' chambers that were about the temple. In heaven there are accommodation for particular saints; though all shall be swallowed up in God, yet our individuation shall not be lost there; every Israelite had his lot in Canaan, and every elder "a seat," Rev. iv. 4. Secondly, Durable dwellings. 8 ¶ Philip saith unto him, Lord, [s]shew us the Father, and it sufficeth us.

9 Jesus saith unto him, Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me, Philip? [u]he that hath seen me hath seen the Father; and how sayest thou then, Shew us the Father?

10 [y]Believest thou not that I am in the Father, and the Father in me? the words that I speak unto you, I speak not of myself: but the Father, [a]that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works.

11 Believe me that I am in the Father, and the Father in me: [c]or else believe me for the very works' sake.

12 Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; [f]because I go unto my Father.[2]

13 And [g]whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do, [k]that the Father may be glorified in the Son.

14 If ye shall ask any thing in my name, I will do it.

15 ¶ If [l]ye love me, keep my commandments:

16 And [m]I will pray the Father, and he shall give you [n]another Comforter,[3] that he may abide with you for ever;

17 Even [p]the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye know him; for he dwelleth with you, [s]and shall be in you.

18 I will not leave you [*]comfortless; I will come to you.

19 Yet a little while, and the world seeth me no more; but ye see me: [y]because I live, ye shall live also.

20 At that day ye shall know that I am in my Father, and [a]ye in me, and I in you.

21 He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me; and he [c]that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, [d]and will manifest myself to him.

22 Judas saith unto him, (not Iscariot,) Lord, how is it that thou wilt manifest thyself unto us, and not unto the world?

23 Jesus answered and said unto him, If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him.[4]

24 He that loveth me not keepeth not my sayings: and the word which ye hear is not mine, but the Father's which sent me.

25 These things have I spoken unto you, being yet present with you.

26 But [m]the Comforter, which is the [n]Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name,[5] [p]he shall teach you all things, [q]and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you.

27 ¶ [r]Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid.

28 Ye have heard how I said unto you, I go away, and come again unto you. [y]If ye loved me, ye would rejoice, because I said, I go unto the Father: for [a]my Father is greater than I.[6]

29 And now I have told you before it come to pass, that when it is come to pass, ye might believe.

30 Hereafter I will not talk much with you, for [d]the prince of this world cometh, and hath nothing in me.

31 But that the world may know that I love the Father; and as the Father gave me commandment, even so I do. Arise, let us go hence.

The mutual love between Christ and his members, under the parable of the vine.

I AM the [a]true vine, and my Father is the [c]husbandman.

2 Every [d]branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away; [e]and every branch that beareth fruit he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit.

3 Now ye are clean[1] through the word which I have spoken unto you.

4 [h]Abide in me, and [i]I in you. [k]As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me.

5 I am the vine, ye are the branches:[2] he that abideth in me, and I in him, [m]the same bringeth forth much fruit; for [*]without me ye can do nothing.

6 If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered; and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned.

7 If ye abide in me, and [p]my words abide in you, [q]ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you.

8 Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; [s]so shall ye be my disciples.[3]

9 As the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you: [u]continue ye in my love.

10 If [x]ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love;[4] [y]even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love.

11 These things have I spoken unto you, ciples had quitted their houses to attend Christ, who had not where to lay his head, but the mansions in heaven will make them amends. 4. There are "many" mansions, for there are "many sons" to be "brought to glory" and he exactly knows their number; nor will be straitened for room by the coming of more company than he expects. He had told Peter that he should follow him, chap. xiii 36, but let not the rest be discouraged, in heaven there are mansions for them all. Rehoboth, Gen. xxvi. 22.—Henry.

CHRIST THE WAY, THE TRUTH, AND THE LIFE.—Ver. 4—6. Thomas observed, that as Jesus had not favoured them with any information concerning the place to which he was about to go, they could not possibly know by what way they should follow him. To this our Lord answered, by declaring himself to be "the way, the truth, and the life." He is our "way to the Father," and to heaven; in his person as "God manifest in the flesh," and as our surety and mediator, by his obedience and atoning sacrifice, and by his intercession as our advocate before the throne. He is our great and only high priest, who by his sacrifice on the cross made propitiation for the sins of the world; and by his resurrection, ascension, and intercession, gives us access with confidence to God, upon a throne of grace. He is "the truth," not only as he is the substance of all typical shadows, and the accomplishment of all the prophecies and promises of a Saviour; but also as the great Prophet of the church, whose doctrine is that truth, by believing which sinners come through him "the way" to the Father and to heaven. And he is "the life" also, by whose life-giving Spirit the dead in sin are quickened, and so enabled to believe in him as "the truth," and to come by him as "the way" to the mercy-seat of God: nor can any man approach God as a Father, who is not quickened by him as "the life," and instructed by him as "the truth," to come by him as "the way:" all others will have to do with God, merely as an offended Sovereign and an avenging Judge.

THE COMFORTER.—Ver. 15—17. Jesus next reminded the disciples, that, instead of yielding to inconsolable sorrow in the prospect of his removal, they ought to show their love to him by a conscientious and diligent obedience to his commandments: and whilst they thus regarded his authority and glory on earth; he would attend to their interests in heaven, and, interceding with the Father, obtain for them "another Comforter." The word signifies an Advocate, a Counsellor, a Monitor, and a Comforter. Jesus had been their advocate to plead their cause on earth, and he was going to be their advocate with the Father; he had also counselled, admonished, exhorted, and comforted them: but he was about to be removed from them; and if he should continue on earth, his personal presence must be confined to one place, and was only suited to their state whilst few in number. But another comforter, counsellor, and advocate would be given them in consequence of his return to the Father, who would abide with them individually, during life, yea, for ever; and with his church to the end of time: and his gifts and graces would both encourage their hearts, and make them a comfort to each other, and also plead their cause before the world. This character of another comforter or advocate, and the language here and elsewhere employed, evidently denote personality; and the office itself implies omnipresence, omniscience, omnipotence, and all divine perfections. This other comforter would be sent by the Father, and through the Son who is one with the Father; thus the trinity of persons is evidently declared in this and other parallel passages; each person distinct and divine, yet but one God. This comforter is called "The Spirit of truth;" being essential truth, the revealer of all divine truth, as the source of inspiration; and the great teacher of truth in the hearts of believers.—Scott.

CHRIST'S LEGACY—PEACE.—Ver. 27. "Peace I leave with you." When Christ was about to leave the world, he made his will; his soul he committed to his Father, his body he bequeathed to Joseph, to be decently interred, his clothes fell to the soldiers, his mother he left to the care of John; but what should he leave to his poor disciples, that left all for him? Silver and gold he had none; but he left them that which was infinitely better, "his peace." "'I leave you,' but I leave 'my peace' with you. I not only give you a title to it, but put you in possession of it." He did not part in anger, but "in love;" for this was his farewell, "Peace I leave with you," as a dying father leaves portions to his children; and this is a "worthy portion."—Henry.

CHAP. XV. THE TRUE VINE.—Ver. 1. The close of the former chapter intimates, that our Lord and his disciples then arose from table, as about to leave the house and to retire to Gethsemane: yet probably they did not set out, till he had finished his discourse, and the prayer with which he closed it. But some think that this and the following chapters were spoken by the way, before they passed the brook Cedron.—Perhaps the fruit of the vine, of which they had been partaking, or the sight of a spreading vine, gave occasion to this illustration of that union betwixt Christ and his disciples, which had before been mentioned, chap. xiv. 20.—The nation of Israel, the worshippers of JEHOVAH, had frequently been represented as a vine; but Jesus declared that he was "the true vine." For that nation had been only a type of the true Israel, the seed of Abraham; which consists of Christ, and believers as one with him. He therefore was the true vine, the substance of that shadow; and all the fruitful branches of that vine, which had produced good fruit, had been rendered so by grace derived from him.—His Father was the husbandman, who planted, watered, guarded, and took care of this vine and all its that my joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full.

12 ¶ This is my commandment, That ye love one another, as I have loved you.

13 [c]Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends.

14 Ye are my friends, [e]if ye do whatsoever I command you.

15 Henceforth [f]I call you not servants;[6] for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth: but I have called you [g]friends; [h]for all things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you.

16 Ye [i]have not chosen me, but I have chosen you,[7] [k]and ordained you, that ye should go [l]and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain; that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name, he may give it you.

17 These things I command you, that ye love one another.

18 ¶ If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you.

19 If ye were [q]of the world, the world would love his own: but [r]because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you.

20 Remember the word that I said unto you, The servant is not greater than his lord. If they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you; if they have kept my saying, they will keep yours also.

21 But all these things will they do unto you for my name's sake, because they know not him that sent me.

22 If I had not come, and spoken unto them, they had not had sin;[8] but now they have no [t]cloak for their sin.

23 He [z]that hateth me, hateth my Father also.

24 [a]If I had not done among them the works which none other man did, they had not had sin: [b]but now have they both seen [c]and hated both me and my Father.[9]

25 But this cometh to pass, that the word might be fulfilled that is written in their law, [e]They hated me without a cause.

26 But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, [h]which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me:

27 And [k]ye also shall bear witness, because ye have been with me from the beginning.

CHAP. XVI.

Christ comforteth his disciples against tribulation, by the promise of the Holy Ghost.

THESE things [a]have I spoken unto you, that ye should not be offended.

2 They [b]shall put you out of the synagogues: yea, the time cometh, that whosoever killeth you will think that he doeth God service.[1]

3 And these things will they do unto you, because they have not known the Father, nor me.

4 But these things have I told you, [e]that, when the time shall come, ye may remember that I told you of them. And these things I said not unto you at the beginning, [f]because I was with you.

5 But now [g]I go my way to him that sent me; and none of you asketh me, Whither goest thou?

6 But because I have said these things unto you, sorrow hath filled your heart.

7 Nevertheless I tell you the truth; [i]It is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you.

8 And when he is come, [o]he will *reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment:[2]

9 Of sin, because they believe not on me:

10 Of [q]righteousness, because I go to my Father, and ye see me no more:

11 Of [r]judgment, because the prince of this world is judged.

12 I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now.

13 Howbeit when he, [x]the Spirit of truth, is come, [y]he will guide you into all truth:[3] for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and [a]he will shew you things to come.

14 He shall glorify me: for he shall receive of mine, and shall shew it unto you.

15 All [d]things that the Father hath are mine: therefore said I, that he shall take of mine, and shall shew it unto you.

16 ¶ A [e]little while, and ye shall not see me: and again [f]a little while, and ye shall see me; [g]because I go to the Father.

17 Then [h]said some of his disciples among themselves, What is this that he saith unto us, A little while, and ye shall not see me: and again a little while, and ye shall see me: and, Because I go to the Father?

18 They said therefore, What is this that he saith, A little while? [i]we cannot tell what he saith.

19 Now [k]Jesus knew that they were desirous to ask him, and said unto them, Do ye enquire among yourselves of that I said, A little while, and ye shall not see me: and again a little while, and ye shall see me?

20 Verily, verily, I say unto you, That ye shall weep and lament, but the world shall rejoice; and ye shall be sorrowful, but your sorrow shall be turned into joy.

branches: he had appointed the person of Christ as "God manifest in the flesh," and from the beginning had made known his purpose of sending him to redeem sinners. He had determined every thing respecting his mediatorial work, and its happy effects. He had constituted him the medium of communication, through which alone he would show favour and convey grace to the apostate race of men. He took peculiar delight in his obedience and sacrifice, as man's surety; and in giving him the Spirit without measure, to furnish him for his work, and also that from his fulness all believers might receive grace sufficient to render them fruitful and holy; and he was well pleased with the care of his church, and greatly valued its truth. The union of the divine and human natures in the person of Christ, and the fulness of the Spirit in him, resembles the root of the vine, deriving the fertilizing juices from a rich soil; and his mediatorial work, like the stem, conveys them to all believers, to render them fruitful.—Scott.

Much Fruit.—Ver. 8. If we "bear much fruit," 1. "Herein" our "Father" will be "glorified." The fruitfulness of the apostles, as such, in the diligent discharge of their office, would be "to the glory of God" in the conversion of souls, and the offering of them up to him, Rom. xv. 9, 16. The fruitfulness of all Christians, in a lower and narrower sphere, is "to the glory of God." By the eminent good works of Christians many are brought to "glorify our Father which is in heaven." 2. "So shall we be" Christ's "disciples" indeed, approving ourselves so, and making it to appear that we are really what we call ourselves. "So shall" we both evidence our discipleship, and adorn it, and be to our Master "for a name and a praise," and a glory, that is, "disciples" indeed, Jer. xiii. 11. "So shall" we be owned by our Master in the great day, and have the reward of disciples, a share "in the joy of our Lord." And the "more fruit" we "bring forth," the more we abound in that which is good, the more he is "glorified."—Henry.

Comforter.—See chap. xiv. 15.

Chap. XVI. Ignorance the Source of Persecution.—Ver. 3. "'These things will they do unto you,' not because you have done them any harm, but 'because they have not known the Father nor me.' Let this comfort you, that none will be your enemies but the worst of men." Note, 1. Many that pretend to know God are wretchedly ignorant of him. They that pretended to "do him service," thought they knew him, but it was a wrong notion they had of him. Israel transgressed the covenant, and yet cried, "My God, we know thee." Hos. viii. 1, 2. 2. They that are ignorant of Christ cannot have any right knowledge of God. In vain do men pretend to know God and religion, while they slight Christ and Christianity. 3. Those are very ignorant indeed of God and Christ, that think it an acceptable piece of service to persecute good people. They that know Christ know that he "came not into the world to destroy men's lives, but to save them;" that he rules by the power of truth and love, not of fire and sword. Never was such a persecuting church as that which makes "ignorance" the "mother of devotion."—Henry.

Work of the Spirit.—Ver. 8—11. The principal meaning of the words seems to refer to the general internal operation of the Holy Spirit on the minds and hearts of men, in every age and country, when he leads them to believe in Jesus Christ for salvation. He deeply convinces them of many things, concerning the evil and desert of sin, and the sinfulness of numberless thoughts, words, actions, and omissions, which before they had scarcely thought of; especially he convicts and detects the sinfulness of their own conduct, their supposed virtues, and their hearts; by discovering the glory of God to their souls, showing them their obligations and relations to him, and turning their reflections to the spirituality of the law, to the hateful nature of transgression, to their own past lives, to their present behaviour, and to their inward thoughts, desires, and motives. Thus the veil of ignorance, pride, and partiality being removed, they are brought without reserve to condemn themselves, and to plead guilty before God. He convinces them also concerning the nature of righteousness, and also the righteousness of God, in the sentence denounced against sinners: he leads them to realize and anticipate the day of judgment, and to seek deliverance from the condemnation to be then denounced against ungodly men. But especially, the Holy Ghost shows sinners the evil of unbelief, and neglect of Christ and his salvation. Perhaps they once thought this meritorious, at least supposed there was no great evil in it; but now they perceive that it arises from pride, love of sin, enmity to God, and the most rebellious state of the heart imaginable: they find that it implies the greatest contempt of the divine authority, justice, truth, wisdom, and mercy, that can be conceived; that it is a rooted aversion to be reconciled unto God; and, in short, that unbelief is in some respects the source, and as it were the substance, of all other sins; the most affronting and ruinous of all the crimes of which men are or can be guilty; and ranks those who deliberately persist in it with those implacable enemies of God that hated and crucified the incarnate Redeemer, when he appeared on earth. In connection with these discoveries, the Holy Spirit discloses to those whom he influences, that righteousness of God which is revealed to faith, as the ground of a sinner's justification; even the obedience unto death of the divine Redeemer, as our surety. He convinces them concerning the suitableness and sufficiency of this righteousness, for the end proposed: he makes them sensible, that in this way God is righteous in justifying sinners, as well as glorious in mercy, and in all other perfections. He discovers to 21 A woman when she is in travail hath sorrow, because her hour is come: but, as soon as she is delivered of the child, she remembereth no more the anguish, for joy that a man is born into the world.

22 And [q]ye now therefore have sorrow; but I will see you again, and your heart shall rejoice, [s]and your joy no man taketh from you.

23 And in that day ye shall ask me nothing.[4] Verily, verily, I say unto you, [u]Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name, he will give it you.

24 Hitherto have ye asked nothing in my name: ask, and ye shall receive, [y]that your joy may be full.

25 These things have I spoken unto you in †proverbs: but the time cometh, when I shall no more speak unto you in proverbs, [z]but I shall shew you plainly of the Father.

26 At that day ye shall ask in my name: and I say not unto you, that I will pray the Father for you:[5]

27 For [b]the Father himself loveth you, [e]because ye have loved me, [d]and have believed that I came out from God.

28 I came forth from the Father, and am come into the world: again, [f]I leave the world, and go to the Father.

29 ¶ His disciples said unto him, Lo, now speakest thou plainly, and speakest no ‡proverb.

30 Now are we sure that thou knowest all things,[6] and needest not that any man should ask thee: by this we believe that thou camest forth from God.

31 Jesus answered them, Do ye now believe?

32 Behold, [k]the hour cometh, yea, is now come, [l]that ye shall be scattered, every man to his §own, and shall leave me alone: and yet I am not alone, because the Father is with me.

33 These things I have spoken unto you, that [n]in me ye might have peace. [o]In the world ye shall have tribulation: [p]but be of good cheer; [q]I have overcome the world.

Christ prayeth to his Father to glorify him, 1, and to preserve his apostles in unity and in truth, 6.

THESE words spake Jesus, and lifted up his eyes to heaven, and said, Father, [b]the hour is come; [c]glorify thy Son,[1] that thy Son also may glorify thee:

2 As [d]thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should [e]give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him.

3 And this is life eternal, that they might know [h]thee the only true God, [i]and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent.

5 And now, O Father, [m]glorify thou me with thine own self with the glory which I had with thee [n]before the world was.

6 ¶ I have manifested thy name unto the men which thou gavest me out of the world: [q]thine they were,[2] and thou gavest them me; [r]and they have kept thy word.

7 Now [s]they have known that all things, whatsoever thou hast given me, [t]are of thee:

8 For I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me; and they have received them, and have known surely that I came out from thee, and they have believed that thou didst send me.

9 I pray for them: I pray not for the world,[3] [a]but for them which thou hast given me; for they are thine.

10 And [b]all mine are thine, and thine are mine; [c]and I am glorified in them.

11 And now [d]I am no more in the world, but these are in the world, and I come to thee. Holy Father, [g]keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, [t]that they may be one, as we are.

12 While I was with them in the world, [k]I kept them in thy name: those that thou gavest me I have kept, [l]and none of them is lost, but [m]the son of perdition; that the scripture might be fulfilled.

13 And now come I to thee; and these things I speak in the world, that they might have my joy[4] fulfilled in themselves.

14 I have given them thy word; and the world hath hated them, because they are not of the world, even as I am not of the world.

15 I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil.

16 They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world.

17 [v]Sanctify them through thy truth; [z]thy word is truth.

18 As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world.

19 And for their sakes I sanctify myself,[5] [d]that they also might be *sanctified through the truth.

20 ¶ Neither [e]pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word;[6]

21 That they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: [t]that the world may believe that thou hast sent me.

22 And [k]the glory which thou gavest me I have given them; that they may be one, even as we are one:

them how the law is thus magnified, and how real faith in the righteousness of Christ must ever be accompanied with hatred of sin, with humility, love of God, and the beginning of all holy dispositions. He convinces them that Christ's ascension to the right hand of the Father fully proves the ransom accepted, and the righteousness finished, through which believers were to be justified; and therefore there is no need for him to appear again on earth, till he shall come to judge the world. The Holy Spirit likewise gives men a realizing apprehension of a future judgment, (which few so believe as to be influenced in their daily conduct by the expectation of it,) and convinces them of many things before unthought of, concerning the nature, measure, and consequences of that solemn season. He shows them that the prince of this world, who is already judged and condemned, will then be consigned, with all his angels, and all who adhere to him, in opposition to Christ, to everlasting punishment; but that all who truly believe in Christ, and become his disciples and servants, will then be adjudged righteous through his merits, (their good works being adduced as evidences of their faith,) and so be admitted into the regions of everlasting glory and felicity.—Scott.

No Solitude to Believers.—Ver. 32. When they "are alone," they are "not alone," but "the Father is with them." 1. When solitude is their choice, when they are alone, as Isaac in the field, Nathanael under the fig-tree, Peter upon the house-top, meditating and praying, the Father is with them. They that converse with God in solitude are never less alone than when alone. A good God and a good heart are good company at any time. 2. When solitude is their affliction, their enemies lay them alone, and their friends leave them so; their company, like Job's, is "made desolate;" yet they are not so much alone as they are thought to be, "the Father is with them," as he was with Joseph in his bonds, and with John in his banishment. In their greatest troubles they are as one whom his father pities, as one whom his mother comforts. And while we have God's favourable presence with us, we are happy, and ought to be easy, though all the world forsake us.—Henry.

CHAP. XVII. Character of Christ's Prayer.—Here we have, the circumstances of this prayer, Ver. 1. Many a solemn prayer Christ made in the days of his flesh; (sometimes he continued all night in prayer;) but none of his prayers are recorded so fully as this. Observe, 1. It was a prayer after sermon; when he had spoken from God to them, he turned to speak to God for them. Note, Those we preach to, we must pray for. He that was to prophecy upon the dry bones, was also to pray, "Come, O breath," and "breathe" upon them. And the word preached should be prayed over, for God "gives the increase." 2. It was a prayer after sacrament; after Christ and his disciples had eaten the passover and the Lord's Supper together, and he had given them a suitable exhortation, he closed the solemnity with this prayer; that God would preserve the good impressions of the ordinance upon them. 3. It was a family-prayer. Christ's disciples were his family, and, to set a good example before masters of families, he not only, as a son of Abraham, "taught his household," Gen. xviii. 19, but, as a son of David, "blessed his household," 2 Sam. vi. 20, prayed for them, and with them. 4. It was a parting prayer; when we and our friends are parting, it is good to part with prayer, Acts xx. 36. Christ was parting by death, and that parting should be sanctified and sweetened by prayer. Dying Jacob blessed the twelve patriarchs, dying Moses the twelve tribes, and so, here, dying Jesus the twelve apostles. 5. It was a prayer that was a preface to his sacrifice which he was now about to offer on earth, specifying the favours and blessings designed to be purchased by the merit of his death for those that were his; like a deed leading the uses of a fine, and directing to what intents and purposes it shall be levied. Christ prayed then as a priest now offering sacrifice, in the virtue of which all prayers were to be made. 6. It was a prayer that was a specimen of his intercession, which he ever lives to make for us within the veil. Not that in his exalted state he addresses himself to his Father by way of humble petition, as when he was on earth. No, his intercession in heaven is a presenting of his merit to his Father, with a suing out of the benefit of it for all his chosen ones.—Henry.

Let us Pray also.—Ver. 20—26. Blessed be God, that we sinners, in these remote regions and distant ages, are interested in this prayer of our Redeemer, if we indeed believe in him according to the word of his holy apostles! May we continually recollect, that union and communion with the Father and the Son, by the indwelling of the Holy Spirit; and union, peace, and harmony with one another; formed the substance of our Redeemer's prayer for all his future disciples to the end of time. Let us then "endeavour to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace:" and let us pray for a larger portion of divine illumination in behalf of ourselves and of all our brethren, that we may all be united in one mind and judgment. Let us also beg of God to bestow on us far more abundance of holy love, that we may amicably differ in opinion, where we cannot see things exactly in the same light. Thus a spirit of mutual candour, forbearance, and active self-denying kindness, among all who love the Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity, might convince the world, that we are of one heart and soul, (though somewhat separated through external circumstances;) and that we are all soldiers in one army, (though not exactly marshalled and disciplined in the same manner;) that we are indeed fighting against sin, the world, and the devil; and that we will not be seduced to turn our arms against each other, (as hath too often been the case,) to the joy and triumph

Judas betrayeth Jesus, 1; Peter denieth him, 15, he is arraigned before Pilate, 28.

WHEN Jesus had spoken these words, he went forth with his disciples over the brook Cedron, where was a garden, into the which he entered, and his disciples.

2 And Judas also, which betrayed him, knew the place; for Jesus oft-times resorted thither with his disciples.

3 [f]Judas then, having received a band of men[1] and officers from the chief priests and Pharisees, cometh thither with lanterns, and torches, and weapons.

4 Jesus therefore, [h]knowing all things that should come upon him, went forth, and said unto them, [i]Whom seek ye?

5 They answered him, [k]Jesus of Nazareth. Jesus saith unto them, I am he. And Judas also, which betrayed him, stood with them.

6 As soon then as he had said unto them, I am he, [m]they went backward, and fell to the ground.[2]

7 Then asked he them again, Whom seek ye? And they said, Jesus of Nazareth.

8 Jesus answered, I have told you that I am he. If therefore ye seek me, let these go their way:

9 That the saying might be fulfilled[3] which he spake, [o]Of them which thou gavest me have I lost none.

10 Then Simon Peter, having a sword, drew it, and smote the high priest's servant, and cut off his right ear. The servant's name was Malchus.

11 Then said Jesus unto Peter, Put up thy sword into the sheath: [r]the cup which my Father hath given me, shall I not drink it?

13 And led him away to [y]Annas first: (for he was father-in-law to Caiaphas, which was the high priest that same *year.)

14 Now Caiaphas was he which gave counsel to the Jews, that it was expedient that one man should die for the people.

15 ¶ And Simon Peter followed Jesus, and so did another disciple.[4] That disciple was known unto the high priest, and went in with Jesus into the palace of the high priest.

16 But Peter stood at the door without. Then went out that other disciple, which was known unto the high priest, and spake unto her[5] that kept the door, and brought in Peter.

17 Then saith the damsel that kept the door unto Peter, Art not thou also one of this man's disciples? He saith, [d]I am not.

18 And the servants and officers stood there, who had made a fire of coals;[6] (for it was cold;)[7] and they warmed themselves: and [g]Peter stood with them, and warmed himself.

19 ¶ The high priest then [h]asked Jesus of his disciples, and of his doctrine.

20 Jesus answered him, [i]I spake openly to the world; I ever taught in the synagogue, and in the temple, whither the Jews always resort; and in secret have I said nothing.

21 Why askest thou me? ask them which heard me, what I have said unto them: behold, they know what I said.

22 And when he had thus spoken, one of the officers which stood by [m]struck Jesus with †the palm of his hand, saying, [n]Answerest thou the high priest so?

23 Jesus answered him, [o]If I have spoken evil, bear witness of the evil; but if well, why smitest thou me?

24 (Now [p]Annas had sent him [q]bound unto Caiaphas the high priest.)

25 And Simon Peter stood and warmed himself: they said therefore unto him, Art not thou also one of his disciples? [t]He denied it, and said, I am not.

26 One of the servants of the high priest ([u]being his kinsman whose ear Peter cut off) saith, [x]Did not I see thee in the garden with him?

27 Peter then denied again; [y]and immediately the cock crew.

28 ¶ Then led they Jesus from Caiaphas unto the ‡hall of judgment: and it was early; [c]and they themselves went not into the judgment-hall, lest they should be defiled;[8] but that they might eat the passover.

29 Pilate then went out unto them, and said, What accusation bring ye against this man?

30 They answered and said unto him, If he were not a malefactor, we would not have delivered him up unto thee.

of our insulting enemies. Thus we shall best manifest the truth and excellency of our religion, and the divine authority of its great Author. Thus we shall experience more intimate union of soul, and more sweet and sanctifying communion, with the God of our salvation, and with his saints. Thus we shall have a measure of the Redeemer's glory conferred on us, by being conformed to his image, united with his people, and hated by those only, who hate him and the Father that sent him. Thus at length, we shall surely be with him for ever, to behold his glory, and enjoy, as one with him, that love, with which the Father loved him before the foundation of the world; and shall possess the most complete felicity, in the full knowledge of that glorious God, whom the world hath not known; but in knowing whom, angels and archangels find blessedness, of which in our present state we can frame no adequate conception.—Scott.

Peter's Rashness.—Ver. 10, 11. He had "a sword;" it is not likely that he wore one constantly, as a gentleman, but they had two swords among them all, Luke xxii. 38, and Peter was intrusted with one, and he "drew it," for now, if ever, he thought it was his time to use it, and "he smote one of the high priest's servants," who, it is likely, was one of the forwardest, and aiming, it is likely, to cleave him down the head, missed his blow, and only "cut off his right ear." "The servant's name," for the greater certainty of the narrative, is recorded; it "was Malchus," or "Mallach," Neh. x. 4. 1. We must here acknowledge Peter's good-will; he had an honest zeal for his Master, though now misguided; he had lately promised to venture his life for him, and would now make his words good. Probably it exasperated Peter to see Judas at the head of this gang; his baseness excited Peter's boldness, and I wonder that when he did draw his sword, he did not aim at his head. 2. Yet we must acknowledge Peter's ill conduct; and though his good intention did excuse, yet it would not justify him. (1.) He had no warrant from his Master for what he did. Christ's soldiers must wait the word of command, and not outrun it; before they expose themselves to sufferings, they must see to it, not only that their cause be good, but their call clear. (2.) He transgressed the duty of his place, and resisted the powers that were, which Christ had never countenanced, but forbidden, Matt. v. 39, "that ye resist not evil." (3.) He opposed his Master's suffering, and, notwithstanding the rebuke he had for it once, is ready to repeat, Master, spare thyself; suffering be far from thee; though Christ had told him that he must and would suffer, and that his hour was now come; thus, while he seemed to fight for Christ, he fought against him. (4.) He broke the capitulation his Master had lately made with the enemy; when he said, "Let these go their way," he not only indented for their safety, but in effect passed his word for their good behaviour, that they should go away peaceably; this Peter heard, and yet would not be bound by. As we may be guilty of a sinful cowardice when we are called to appear, so we may be of a sinful forwardness when we are called to retire. (5.) He foolishly exposed himself and his fellow-disciples to the fury of this enraged multitude; if he had cut off Malchus's head when he cut off his ear, we may suppose the soldiers would have fallen upon all the disciples.

Christ's Spiritual Kingdom.—Ver. 36. Observe, 1. An account of the nature and constitution of Christ's kingdom: it "is not of this world;" it is expressed negatively, what it is not, to rectify the present mistakes concerning it; but the positive is implied, it is the kingom of heaven, and belongs to another world; he is a king, and has a kingdom, but "not of this world." First, Its rise is not from this world; the kingdoms of men arise "out of the sea and the earth," Dan. vii. 3; Rev. xiii. 1, 11, but "the holy city comes down from God out of heaven," Rev. xxi. 2. His "kingdom is not" by succession, election, or conquest, but by the immediate and special designation of the divine will and counsel. Secondly, Its nature is not worldly; it is a "kingdom within men," Luke xvii. 21, set up in their hearts and consciences, Rom. xiv. 17, its riches spiritual, power spiritual, and all its glory within. The ministers of state in Christ's kingdom have not "the spirit of the world," 1 Cor. ii. 12. Thirdly, Its guards and supports are not worldly; its weapons are spiritual; it needed not, nor used, secular force to maintain and advance it, nor was it carried on in a way hurtful to "kings or provinces;" it did not in the least interfere with the prerogatives of princes, or the property of their subjects; it tended not to alter any national establishment in secular things, nor opposed any kingdom but that of sin and Satan. Fourthly, Its tendency and design are not worldly. Christ aimed not, nor would allow his disciples to aim, at the pomp and power of "the great men of the earth." Fifthly, Its subjects, though they "are in the world," yet "are not of the world;" they "are called and chosen out of the world," are born from, and bound for, another world; they are neither the world's pupils, nor its darlings; neither governed by its wisdom, nor enriched with its wealth. 2. An evidence of the spiritual nature of Christ's kingdom produced. If he had designed an opposition to the government, he would have fought them at their own weapons, and would have repelled force with force of the

him, and judge him according to your law. The Jews therefore said unto him, It is not lawful for us to put any man to death:

32 That the saying of Jesus might be fulfilled which he spake, signifying [1]what death he should die.[g]

33 Then Pilate entered into the judgment-hall again, and called Jesus, and said unto him, Art thou the King of the Jews?

34 Jesus answered him, Sayest thou this thing of thyself, or did others tell it thee of me?

35 Pilate answered, Am I a Jew? [q]Thine own nation, and the chief priests, have delivered thee unto me: [r]what hast thou done?

36 Jesus answered, [s]My kingdom is not of this world. If my kingdom were of this world, [t]then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews: but now is my kingdom not from hence.

37 Pilate therefore said unto him, Art thou a king then? Jesus answered, Thou sayest that I am a king. To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, [x]that I should bear witness unto the truth. [y]Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice.

38 Pilate saith unto him, [z]What is truth? And when he had said this, he went out again unto the Jews,[10] and saith unto them, [a]I find in him no fault at all.

39 But ye have a custom, that I should release unto you one at the passover: will ye therefore that I release unto you the King of the Jews?

40 Then cried they all again, saying, Not this man, but Barabbas. Now Barabbas was a robber.

CHAP. XIX.

Christ is scourged, crowned with thorns, beaten, and crucified, 1. He dieth, 28, and is buried by Joseph and Nicodemus, 38.

THEN Pilate therefore took Jesus,[1] and [b]scourged him.

2 And [c]the soldiers platted a crown of thorns,[2] and put it on his head, and they put on him a purple robe,

3 And said, [d]Hail, King of the Jews! and they smote him with their hands.

4 ¶ Pilate therefore went forth again, and saith unto them, Behold, I bring him forth to you, that ye may know that I find no fault in him.

5 Then came Jesus forth, wearing the crown of thorns, and the purple robe. And Pilate saith unto them, [e]Behold the man![3]

6 When the chief priests therefore and officers saw him, they cried out, saying, Crucify him, crucify him. Pilate saith unto them, Take ye him, and crucify him: for I find no fault in him.

7 The Jews answered him, We have a law, and by our law he ought to die, because he made himself the Son of God.

8 When Pilate therefore heard that saying, he was the more afraid;

9 And went again into the judgment-hall, and saith unto Jesus, Whence art thou? But Jesus gave him no answer.

10 Then saith Pilate unto him, Speakest thou not unto me? knowest thou not that I have power to crucify thee, and have power to release thee?

11 Jesus answered, [q]Thou couldest have no power at all against me, except it were given thee from above: therefore [r]he that delivered me unto thee hath the greater sin.

12 And [t]from thenceforth Pilate sought to release him: but the Jews cried out, saying, If thou let this man go, thou art not Cesar's friend:[4] whosoever maketh himself a king speaketh against Cesar.

13 When Pilate therefore heard that saying, he brought Jesus forth, and sat down in the judgment-seat, in a place that is called the Pavement, but in the Hebrew, Gabbatha.

14 And it was the preparation of the passover, and about the sixth hour: and he saith unto the Jews, [b]Behold your King!

15 But they cried out, [c]Away with him, away with him, crucify him. Pilate saith unto them, Shall I crucify your King? The chief priests answered, We have no king but Cesar.

16 Then delivered he him therefore unto them to be crucified. And they took Jesus, and led him away.

17 ¶ And he, [f]bearing his cross, [g]went forth into a place called the place of a skull, which is called in the Hebrew, [h]Golgotha;

18 Where [i]they crucified him, and two other with him, on either side one, and Jesus in the midst.

19 ¶ And Pilate [k]wrote a title, and put it on the cross. And the writing was, [l]JESUS OF NAZARETH, THE KING OF THE JEWS.

20 This title then read many of the Jews: for the place where Jesus was crucified was nigh to the city: and it was written[5] [m]in Hebrew, [n]and Greek, and Latin.[6]

21 Then said the chief priests of the Jews to Pilate, Write not, The King of the Jews; but that he said, I am King of the Jews.

22 Pilate answered, [o]What I have written I have written.

23 ¶ Then the soldiers, when they had crucified Jesus, took his garments, and made four parts, to every soldier a part; and also his coat: now the coat was without seam,[7] *woven from the top throughout.

24 They said therefore among themselves, Let us not rend it, but cast lots for it, whose it shall be: [q]that the scripture might be fulfil-same nature; but he did not take this course; "If my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews," and my kingdom be ruined by them. He did not order them to fight; nay, he forbade them.

The Important Question.—Ver. 38. Pilate said, "What is truth?" and immediately "went out again." 1. It is certain that this was a good question, and could not be put to one that was better able to answer it. "Truth" is that "pearl of great price," which the human understanding has a desire to, and is in quest of; for it cannot rest but in that which is, or at least is apprehended to be, "truth." When we "search the Scriptures," and attend the ministry of the word, it must be with this inquiry, "What is truth?" and with this prayer, "Lead me in thy truth; into all truth." 2. It is uncertain with what design Pilate asked this question. First, Perhaps he spake it as a learner, as one that began to think well of Christ, and to look upon him with some respect, and desired to be informed what new notions he advanced, and what improvements he pretended to in religion and learning. But while he desired to "hear some new truth" from him, as Herod to see some miracle, the clamour and outrage of the priests' mob at his gate, obliged him abruptly to let fall the discourse. Secondly, Some think he speaks it as a judge, inquiring further into the cause now brought before him; "Let me into this mystery, and tell me 'what the truth' of it is, the true state of this matter." Thirdly, Others think he speaks it as a scoffer, in a jeering way; "Thou talkest of 'truth;' canst thou tell 'what truth is,' or give me a definition of it?" Thus he makes a jest of the everlasting gospel, that great "truth" which "the chief priests" hated and persecuted, and which Christ was now witnessing to, and suffering for; and, like men of no religion, who take a pleasure in bantering all religions, he ridicules both sides; and therefore Christ made him no reply.—Henry.

CHAP. XIX. Jesus Scourged.—Ver. 1. "Pilate," seeing the people so outrageous, and being disappointed in his project of releasing him upon the people's choice, "took Jesus and scourged him," that is, appointed the lictors that attended him to do it. Bede is of opinion that "Pilate scourged Jesus" himself with his own hands, because it is said, "He took him and scourged him," that it might be done favourably. Matthew and Mark mention his scourging after his condemnation, but here it appears to have been before. St. Luke speaks of Pilate's offering to "chastise him, and let him go;" which must be before sentence. This scourging of him was designed only to pacify the Jews, and in it Pilate put a compliment upon them, that he would take their word against his own sentiments so far. The Roman scourgings were ordinarily very severe, not limited, as among "the Jews," to "forty stripes;" yet this pain and shame Christ submitted to "for our sakes."

Sentence of Death.—See Luke xxiii. 24.

The Indictment.—Ver. 19. It was written in Hebrew, and Greek, and Latin, which made it legible by all; they all understood one or other of these languages, and none were more careful to bring up their children to read than the Jews generally were. It likewise made it the more considerable; every one would be curious to inquire what it was, which was so industriously published in the three most known languages. In the Hebrew, the oracles of God were recorded; in Greek, the learning of the philosophers; and in Latin, the laws of the empire. In each of these Christ is proclaimed king, in whom are hid all the treasures of "revelation, wisdom," and "power:" God so ordering it, that this should be written in the three then most known tongues; it was intimated thereby that Jesus Christ should be a "Saviour to all nations," and not to the Jews only; and also that every nation should hear "in their own tongue the wonderful works" of the Redeemer. Hebrew, Greek, and Latin, were the vulgar languages at that time in this part of the world; so that this is so far from intimating (as the Papists would have it,) that the Scripture is still to be retained in these three languages, that on the contrary, it teaches us that the knowledge of Christ ought to be diffused throughout every nation in their own tongue, as the proper vehicle of it, that people may converse as freely with the Scriptures as they do with their neighbours.

The Seamless Vesture.—Ver. 23. It "was woven from the top throughout;" there was no curiosity therefore in the shape, but a contrived plainness. Tradition says, his mother wove it him, and adds this further, that it was made for him when he was a child, and, like the Israelites' clothes in the wilderness, "waxed not old;" but that is a groundless fancy. "The soldiers" thought it pity to "rend it," for then it would unravel, and a piece of it would be good for nothing; they would "therefore cast lots for it." While Christ was in his dying agonies, they were merrily dividing his spoils. The preserving of Christ's "seamless coat" is commonly alluded to, to show the care all Christians ought to take, that they rend not the church of Christ "with strifes and divisions;" yet some have observed, that the reason why "the soldiers" would not rend Christ's "coat," was not out of any respect to Christ, but because each of them hoped to have it entire for himself. And so many cry out against schism, only that they may engross all the wealth and power to themselves. Those who opposed Luther's separation from the church of Rome urged much the tunica inconsutilis—the seamless coat; and some of them laid so much stress upon it, that they were called the Inconsutilistæ—The seamless.

led, which saith, [r]They parted my raiment among them, and for my vesture they did cast lots. These things therefore the soldiers did.

25 ¶ Now there stood by the cross of Jesus [s]his mother, and his mother's sister, Mary the wife of [t]Cleophas,[8] [u]and Mary Magdalene.

26 When Jesus therefore saw his mother, and the disciple standing by whom he loved, he saith unto his mother, [y]Woman, behold thy son!

27 Then saith he to the disciple, [z]Behold thy mother! And from that hour that disciple [a]took her unto his own home.

28 ¶ After this, [c]Jesus knowing that all things were now accomplished, that the scripture might be fulfilled, saith, I thirst.

29 Now there was set a vessel full of vinegar: and they filled a spunge with vinegar, and put it upon [f]hyssop,[9] and put it to his mouth.

30 When Jesus therefore had received the vinegar, he said, [g]It is finished: [h]and he bowed his head, and gave up the ghost.

31 ¶ The Jews therefore, [i]because it was the preparation, that the bodies should not remain upon the cross on the sabbath-day, (for [l]that sabbath-day was an high day,) besought Pilate that [m]their legs might be broken, and that they might be taken away.

32 Then came the soldiers, and brake the legs[10] of the first, and of the other which was crucified with him.

33 But when they came to Jesus, and saw that he was dead already, they brake not his legs:

34 But one of the soldiers with a spear pierced his side, and forthwith [o]came there-out blood and water.

35 And he that saw it bare record, and his record is true; and he knoweth that he saith true, [q]that ye might believe.

36 For these things were done, that the scripture should be fulfilled, A bone of him shall not be broken.

37 And again another scripture saith, [s]They shall look on him whom they pierced.

38 ¶ And after this, [t]Joseph of Arimathea, (being a disciple of Jesus, but secretly for fear of the Jews,) besought Pilate that he might take away the body of Jesus: and Pilate gave him leave. He came therefore, and took the body of Jesus.

39 And there came also Nicodemus, (which at the first came to Jesus by night,) and brought [y]a mixture of myrrh and aloes, about an hundred pound weight.[11]

40 Then took they the body of Jesus, and wound it in linen clothes with the spices, as the manner of the Jews is to bury.

41 Now in the place where he was crucified there was a garden; [a]and in the garden a new sepulchre, wherein was never man yet laid.

42 There laid they Jesus therefore, because of the Jews' preparation-day; for the sepulchre was nigh at hand.

CHAP. XX.

Jesus appeareth to Mary, 11, and to his disciples, 19. Thomas's incredulity, 24, and confession, 26.

THE first day of the week [b]cometh Mary Magdalene[1] early, when it was yet dark, unto the sepulchre, and seeth [c]the stone taken away from the sepulchre.

2 Then she runneth, and cometh to Simon Peter, and to the other disciple whom Jesus loved, and saith unto them, They have taken away the Lord out of the sepulchre, and we know not where they have laid him.

3 Peter therefore went forth, and that other disciple, and came to the sepulchre.

4 So they ran both together: and the other disciple did outrun Peter, and came first to the sepulchre.

5 And he stooping down, and looking in, saw the linen clothes lying; yet went he not in.

6 Then cometh Simon Peter following him, and went into the sepulchre, and seeth the linen clothes lie,

7 And the napkin, that was about his head, not lying with the linen clothes, but wrapped together in a place by itself.

8 Then went in also that other disciple which came first to the sepulchre, [k]and he saw, and believed.

9 For as yet they knew not the scripture,[2] [m]that he must rise again from the dead.

10 Then the disciples went away again unto their own home.

11 ¶ But Mary stood without at the sepulchre weeping: and, as she wept, she stooped down, and looked into the sepulchre,

12 And [o]seeth two angels in white sitting, the one at the head, and the other at the feet, where the body of Jesus had lain.

13 And they say unto her, [q]Woman, [r]why weepest thou? She saith unto them, [s]Because they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him.

14 And when she had thus said, she turned herself back, and saw Jesus standing, and knew not that it was Jesus.[3]

15 Jesus saith unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? whom seekest thou? She, supposing him to be the gardener, saith unto him, Sir, if thou have borne him hence, tell me where thou hast laid him, and I will take him away.

16 Jesus saith unto her, [z]Mary. [a]She turned herself, and saith unto him, [b]Rabboni; which is to say, Master.

17 Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not;[4]

MARY AT THE CROSS.—Ver. 25—27. The inward anguish, and the conflicting thoughts and affections with which the mind of Mary must have been agitated on this most distressing occasion, can never be described or imagined; but, considering all the expectations excited by the conception, birth, and infancy of Jesus, and all the miracles, and other extraordinary circumstances of his public ministry, she could scarcely doubt, even when she saw him expire on the cross, but that he was the promised Messiah, the King of Israel. After Joseph's death, and our Lord's entrance on his ministry, it is probable that Mary had generally attended him: and being now present to behold his crucifixion, Jesus, amidst all his own sufferings, was tenderly mindful of her; and by turning her attention to John, the beloved disciple, as one who would be as a son to her, and by mentioning her to him as his mother, to whom he was to perform the duty of that relation for his sake, he influenced John to take her to his own home, to provide for her, and to treat her with all respect and affection as long as she lived. How long that was, or where John had a home, we are not informed.—Scott.

BLOOD AND WATER.—Ver. 34. "The blood and water" that flowed out of it were significant. They signified the two great benefits which all believers partake of through Christ—justification and sanctification; blood for remission, water for regeneration; blood for atonement, water for purification. "Blood and water" were used very much under the law. Guilt contracted must be expiated by blood; stains contracted must be done away by "the water of purification." These two must always go together. "Ye are sanctified, ye are justified," 1 Cor. vi. 11. Christ has joined them together, and we must not think to put them asunder. They both flow from "the pierced side" of our Redeemer. "To Christ crucified" we owe both merit for "our justification," and Spirit and grace for "our sanctification;" and we have as much need of the latter as of the former, 1 Cor. i. 30.

CHRIST'S BURIAL.—Ver. 41. 1. In a sepulchre in a garden Christ's body was laid. In the garden of Eden death and the grave first received their power, and now in the garden they are conquered, disarmed, and triumphed over. In a garden Christ began his passion, and from a garden he would rise, and begin his exaltation. 2. He was buried in a "new sepulchre." This was so ordered, (1.) For the honour of Christ; he was not a common person, and therefore must not mix with common dust. He that was born from a virgin-womb must rise from a virgin-tomb. (2.) For the confirming of the truth of his resurrection, that it might not be suggested that it was not he, but some other that rose now, when many bodies of saints rose; or that he rose by the power of some other, as the man that was raised by the touch of Elisha's bones, and not by his own power. He that has "made all things new," has new-made the grave for us. "There laid they Jesus," that is, the dead body of Jesus. Some think the calling of that Jesus, intimates the inseparable union between the divine and human nature. Even this dead body was Jesus—a Saviour, for his death is our life; Jesus is still the same, Heb. xiii. 8. There they laid him, because it was the preparation day.—Henry.

CHAP. XX. THE RESURRECTION.—See Matt. xxviii. 1.

MARY MAGDALENE AT THE LORD'S GRAVE.—Ver. 11—17. Mary Magdalene, who had followed the apostles, oppressed with the most inconsolable sorrow, at length looked into the sepulchre, and there saw two angels, (probably in the form of young men clothed in white,) sitting at each end of it: and they immediately accosted her, inquiring the cause of her excessive sorrow? Yet she seems not to have greatly attended to them, perhaps in her confusion supposing them to have been disciples, who had come to view the sepulchre: and therefore she answered them in the words which she had used to the apostles.—But as she turned from them, Jesus himself was pleased to appear to her: yet, through excessive weeping, and not at all expecting to see him, she did not know him. And, supposing that it was the person employed by Joseph to take care of the garden, it occurred to her, that perhaps he had removed the body to some other place; and therefore she desired, that if he had, he would inform her, and she would take it away, and be at the expense and trouble of the burial.—It is observable, that, though speaking to a supposed stranger, she did not mention the name of Jesus; but said him, as if every body must of course know whom she meant!—Jesus then called to her by name; and his voice and address made him known to her: turning herself therefore with joy and amazement, she called him "Rabboni," which seems to signify, "Master," or "Teacher," with particular respect and application: but when she was about to spend time in further expressing her affection, Matt. xxviii. 9, 10, or perhaps to satisfy herself that it was not merely an apparition; Jesus prevented her by saying, "Touch me not," &c. Thus intimating that she would have other opportunities: for, though he had repeatedly told his disciples, that he was about to go to his Father; yet he was not yet ascended, or about to ascend immediately, but should continue with them a short time on earth, for their satisfaction and comfort. In the meanwhile she ought without delay to carry the joyful news of his resurrection to the disconsolate disciples, whom he acknowledged as his brethren, notwithstanding they had so lately forsaken him; and she was further to inform them that he was risen, in order "to ascend to his Father, and their Father, and to his God, and their God."—Scott.

UNBELIEF OF THOMAS.—Ver. 24. 1. Thomas had either not heeded, or not duly regarded, what Christ had so often said, and that too according to the Old Testament, that he for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, •I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God.

18 Mary Magdalene came and told the disciples that she had seen the Lord, and that he had spoken these things unto her.

19 ¶ Then the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews, came Jesus, and stood in the midst, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you.

20 And when he had so said, [n]he shewed unto them his hands and his side. Then were the disciples glad when they saw the Lord.

21 Then said Jesus to them again, Peace be unto you: [p]as my Father hath sent me, even so send I you.

22 And when he had said this, he breathed on them, and saith unto them, [r]Receive ye the Holy Ghost.

23 Whose [s]soever sins ye remit,[4] they are remitted unto them; and whose soever sins ye retain, they are retained.

24 ¶ But Thomas, one of the twelve, called Didymus, was not with them when Jesus came.

25 The other disciples therefore said unto him, We have seen the Lord. But he said unto them, Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe.

26 ¶ And after eight days,[5] again his disciples were within, and Thomas with them. Then came Jesus, the doors being shut, and stood in the midst, and said, [b]Peace be unto you.

27 Then saith he to Thomas, Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands: and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side; and be not faithless, but believing.

28 And Thomas answered and said unto him, My Lord, and my God.[6]

29 Jesus saith unto him, Thomas, because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed: blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed.

30 ¶ And many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples, which are not written in this book:

31 But these are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that [t]believing ye might have life through his name.

CHAP. XXI.

Christ, appearing again, 1, giveth Peter a charge, whose death he foretels, 15.

Anno Domin. cir. 33.

AFTER [a]these things [b]Jesus shewed himself again to the disciples at [c]the sea of Tiberias; and on this wise shewed he himself.

2 There were together Simon Peter, [d]and Thomas called Didymus, [e]and Nathanael [f]of Cana in Galilee, [g]and the sons of Zebedee, and two other[1] of his disciples.

3 Simon Peter saith unto them, [h]I go a fishing. They say unto him, We also go with thee. They went forth, and entered into a ship immediately; [i]and that night they caught nothing.

4 But when the morning was now come, Jesus stood on the shore; [k]but the disciples knew not that it was Jesus.

5 Then Jesus saith unto them, *Children, [l]have ye any meat? They answered him, No.

6 And he said unto them, [m]Cast the net on the right side of the ship, and ye shall find. [n]They cast therefore; and now they were not able to draw it for [o]the multitude of fishes.

7 Therefore [p]that disciple whom Jesus loved saith unto Peter, [q]It is the Lord. Now, [r]when Simon Peter heard that it was the Lord, he girt his fisher's coat unto him, (for he was naked,) and did cast himself into the sea.

8 And the other disciples came in a little ship, (for they were not far from land, but as it were two hundred [s]cubits,) dragging the net with fishes.

9 As soon then as they were come to land, [t]they saw a fire of coals there, and fish laid thereon, and bread.

10 Jesus saith unto them, Bring of the fish which ye have now caught.

11 Simon Peter went up, and drew the net to land full of great fishes,[2] an hundred and fifty and three; [u]and for all there were so many, yet was not the net broken.

12 Jesus saith unto them, Come and dine. And none of the disciples [x]durst ask him, Who art thou? knowing that it was the Lord.

13 Jesus [y]then cometh, and taketh bread, and giveth them, and fish likewise.

14 This is now [z]the third time that Jesus shewed himself to his disciples after that he was risen from the dead.

15 ¶ So, when they had dined, Jesus saith to Simon Peter, Simon, [a]son of Jonas, [b]lovest thou me [c]more than these? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord; [d]thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, [e]Feed my [f]lambs.

16 He saith to him again [g]the second time, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, Feed [h]my sheep.

17 He saith unto him [i]the third time,[3] Si-

[4] "To remit sins," is here a part put for the whole, i.e., "remission of sins for the whole of the salvation obtained by Christ," which is frequently a custom of Scripture, especially in the discourses of Christ; therefore, "to remit sins" here denotes, "to declare, that pardon of sins, and salvation in general, will be granted to all those who seek it by the appointed means," &c.—BLOOMFIELD.

would "rise again the third day;" so that he ought to have said, "He is risen," though he had not seen him, nor spoken with any that had. 2. He did not pay a just deference to the testimony of his fellow-disciples, who were men of wisdom and integrity, and ought to be credited. He knew them to be honest men; they all ten of them concurred in the testimony with great assurance; and yet he cannot persuade himself to say that "their record is true." Christ had chosen them to be his witnesses of this very thing to all nations; and yet Thomas, one of their own fraternity, will not allow them to be competent witnesses, nor trust them further than he can see them. It was not, however, their veracity that he questioned, but their prudence; he feared they were too credulous. 3. He tempted Christ, and "limited the Holy One of Israel," when he would be convinced by "his own" method, or not at all. He could not be sure that the print of the nails, which the apostles told him they had seen, would admit the "putting of his finger" into them, or the wound in his side the "thrusting in of his hand;" nor was it fit to deal so roughly with a living body; yet Thomas ties up his faith to this evidence; either he will be humoured, and have his fancy gratified, or he will not believe; see Matt. xvi. 1; xxvii. 42. 4. The open avowing of this in the presence of the disciples, was an offence and discouragement to them. It was not only a sin, but a scandal. As one coward makes many, so does one unbeliever, one sceptic, "making his brethren's heart to faint like his heart," Deut. xx. 8. Had he only thought this evil, and then laid his hand upon his mouth, to suppress it, his error had "remained with himself:" but his proclaiming of his infidelity, and that so peremptorily, might be of ill consequence to the rest, who were as yet but weak and wavering.

HIS CONVICTION AND CONFESSION.—Ver. 28. 1. Thomas is now fully satisfied of the truth of Christ's resurrection; that the same Jesus that was crucified, is now alive, and this is he. His slowness and backwardness to believe may help to strengthen our faith; for hereby it appears that the witnesses of Christ's resurrection, who attested it to the world, and pawned their lives upon it, were not easy, credulous men, but cautious enough, who suspended their unbelief of it till they saw the utmost evidence of it they could desire. Thus "out of the eater came forth meat." 2. He therefore believed him to be Lord and God, and we are to believe him so. (1.) We must believe his deity—that he is God; not a man made God, but God made man, as this evangelist had laid down his thesis at first, chap. i. 1. (2.) His mediation—that he is Lord, the one Lord, 1 Cor. viii. 6; 1 Tim. ii. 5. He is sufficiently authorized, as plenipotentiary, to settle the great concerns that lie between God and man. 3. He consented to him as his Lord, and his God. In faith there must be the consent of the will to gospel-terms, as well as the assent of the understanding to gospel-truths. We must accept of Christ to be that to us, which the Father hath appointed him. My Lord refers to Adonai—my foundation and stay; My God, to Elohim—my prince and judge. God having constituted him the umpire and referee, we must approve the choice, and entirely refer ourselves to him. This is the vital act of faith, He is mine, Cant. ii. 16.—Henry.

CHAP. XXI. THE DRAUGHT OF FISHES.—Ver. 1—14. This transaction seems to have occurred after the disciples had returned into Galilee, and before Jesus had met them on the mountain, according to his appointment.—Peter being unemployed, and perhaps in want, proposed to go a-fishing, and his brethren accompanied him; but though they laboured during the whole night, the most proper time for fishing, they were entirely unsuccessful. This was a trial of their faith and patience, and also an emblem of the discouragements, which the most able, faithful, and laborious ministers often meet with in their work.—In the morning Jesus stood by the shore, near to the vessel, but he was pleased by some means to prevent their knowing him. As they drew near to land, he accosted them in a very friendly and familiar manner, (for so the term rendered children seems to have been used in common discourse, and not as signifying a father's address to his family;) and he asked them whether they had any meat? This might be understood either with reference to their success in fishing, or as an inquiry whether they had any provisions to dispose of? When they had answered in the negative, he directed them to cast the net on the right hand side of the ship, and then they would succeed better; and though he appeared as a stranger, and they, being weary with toiling all night, had probably desisted from fishing; yet they followed his directions, and inclosed so many fishes, that they were not able to draw the net into the vessel again. This unexpected success convinced John that it was "the Lord;" for probably it brought a former miracle of this kind to his remembrance. As soon as he had informed Peter of his opinion, the latter (full of love and gratitude to Jesus, who had so graciously forgiven his late base denial of him,) entirely disregarded the net and the fishes; and girding on his upper garment, (having been stripped for his work,) he leaped into the sea, and swam to shore, as they were not much above a hundred yards distant from it; but the other disciples abode in the vessel, to draw the net to land. When this was done, they found that Jesus had already made preparation for their refreshment after the labour of the night, probably by miracle; but he ordered them to bring also of the fish which they had then taken; and in doing this they found a great number of very large fishes; yet the net was wonderfully preserved from being broken; most likely it was borrowed. This draught of fishes might be sold for a considerable sum of money, which the apostles would have occasion for, on their return to Jerusalem, before the day of Pentecost, mon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me? Peter was grieved because he said unto him the third time, Lovest thou me? And he said unto him, [l]Lord, thou knowest all things; [m]thou knowest that I love thee. Jesus saith unto him, [n]Feed my sheep.

18 Verily, verily, I say unto thee, When thou wast young,[4] thou girdedst thyself, and walkedst whither thou wouldest: [o]but when thou shalt be old, thou shalt stretch forth thy hands, and another shall gird thee, and carry thee whither [p]thou wouldest not.

19 This spake he, signifying [q]by what death he should glorify God. And when he had spoken this, he saith unto him, [r]Follow me.[5]

20 Then Peter, turning about, [s]seeth the disciple whom Jesus loved following; [t]which also leaned on his breast at supper, and said, Lord, which is he that betrayeth thee?

21 Peter seeing him, saith to Jesus, Lord, and what shall this man do?

22 Jesus saith unto him, [x]If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? follow thou me.

23 Then went this saying abroad among the brethren, that that disciple should not die: yet Jesus said not unto him, He shall not die; but, If I will that he tarry till I come, [y]what is that to thee?

24 This is the disciple which testifieth of these things, and wrote these things; and [z]we know that his testimony is true.

25 And [a]there are also many other things which Jesus did, the which, if they should be written every one, I suppose [b]that even the world itself[6] could not contain the books that should be written. Amen.

THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.

LUKE, "the beloved physician," was undoubtedly the writer of this book; and, intending it as an appendix to his Gospel, he inscribes it likewise to Theophilus (Preface to the Gospel of St Luke). Indeed, the whole may be considered as one publication in two parts; but the convenience of having the four Gospels together seems to have induced Christians in early times to divide it, by inserting St John's Gospel between the parts. As the history terminates with St Paul's imprisonment at Rome, during two years, which certainly ended before A.D. 65, it may fairly be concluded that it was written within thirty or thirty-one years after our Lord's crucifixion: for it can hardly be supposed that the sacred writer would have closed his narrative so abruptly, and not have carried it on something further, had he composed it at a later period.

In the Acts of the Apostles, there is given us a history of the manner in which the most extraordinary revolution that ever took place in the moral and religious state of the world was first begun, the effects of which were afterwards extended far more widely, till Christianity became the religion of powerful and numerous nations, and superseded the idolatries and superstitions in which they were before enveloped; and if this account be true, the gospel must be divine.

After they had secured the fishes, Jesus called them to come, and partake of the repast prepared for them; and in his usual manner, he took the provisions and gave unto them; but they ventured not to ask him who he was, being satisfied it was their Lord, though he probably assumed for a time a different appearance than usual. This was the third time that he showed himself after his resurrection to several of his disciples at once; for he had twice come among them at Jerusalem, when they were met together on the evening of the first day of the week.

THE MOMENTOUS QUESTION AND ITS ANSWER.—Ver. 15—17. The case of Peter required a more particular address, than that of the other apostles; in order that both he and others might derive the greater benefit from his fall and recovery. Our Lord therefore on this occasion, (laying aside his disguise,) inquired of him, (by his original name, as if he had forfeited that of Peter through his instability,) whether "he loved him more than these?" The latter clause might be interpreted of his employment and gains as a fisherman, and be considered as a demand, whether he loved Jesus above all his secular interest? But Peter's answer determines us to another interpretation: he had, before his fall, in effect, said that he loved his Lord more than any of the other disciples did; for he had boasted, that "though all men forsook him, yet would not he." And Jesus now asked of him, whether he would now stand to this, and aver that he loved him more than the disciples then present did. To this he answered modestly, by saying that Jesus knew that he loved him; without professing to love him more than others. Our Lord therefore renewed his appointment to the ministerial and apostolical office; at the same time commanding him "to feed his lambs," or his little lambs, even the least of them, (for the word is a diminutive.) This intimated to him, that his late experience of his own weakness ought to render him peculiarly condescending, compassionate, tender, and attentive to the meanest and feeblest believers; and to such as were harassed with temptations, or overtaken with a fault, or manifested many and great infirmities: as the shepherd takes the greatest care of the most weak and sickly members of his flock. Luke xxii. 32. In a short time afterwards our Lord repeated his question; but as Peter had dropped the latter part of it, he urged that no further; which proves the interpretation above given to be the true one; for that is not true love of Christ, which is not decidedly superior to our love of earthly things. When Peter had again appealed to him that he knew he really did love him; Jesus ordered him to show that love, by feeding his sheep; or by diligently labouring to promote the edification of every description of believers, as well as to spread the knowledge of his salvation.—But as Peter had thrice denied Christ; so he was pleased to repeat the same question a third time: this grieved Peter, as it reminded him, that he had given sufficient cause for this repeatedly questioning the sincerity of his love to his Lord. Conscious, however, of his integrity, he more solemnly appealed to Christ, (as knowing all things, even the secrets of his heart,) that he knew that he loved him with a cordial affection, notwithstanding the inconsistency of his late behaviour. Our Lord then tacitly allowed the truth of this profession, and renewed his charge to him to feed his sheep.—Scott.

CHAP. I. THE PROMISE OF THE SPIRIT.—Ver. 4. Observe, 1. The command Jesus gives them to wait; this was to raise their expectations of something great; and something very great they had reason to expect from their exalted Redeemer. (1.) They must "wait till the time appointed," which is not "now many days hence." They that by faith hope promised mercies will come, must with patience wait till they do come: according "to the time, the set time." And when "the time draws nigh," as now it did, we must, as Daniel, look "earnestly for it," Dan. ix. 3. (2.) They must "wait in the place appointed, in Jerusalem," for "there the Spirit must be first poured out," because Christ was to be as "King upon the holy hill of Zion;" and because "the word of the Lord was to go forth from Jerusalem;" that must be the mother-church. There Christ was "put to shame," and therefore there he will have "this honour done him;" and this favour is done to Jerusalem, to teach us to forgive our enemies and persecutors. The apostles were more exposed to danger at Jerusalem than they would have been in Galilee; but we may cheerfully trust God with our safety, when we keep in the way of our duty. The apostles were now to put on a public character, and therefore must venture in a public station; Jerusalem was the fittest candlestick for those lights to be set up in. 2. The assurance he gives them that they shall not wait in vain; the blessing designed them shall come, and they shall find it was worth waiting for; "You shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost;" that is, "'The Holy Ghost' shall be 'poured out' upon you more plentifully than ever." They had already been "breathed upon with the Holy Ghost," John xx. 22, and they had found the benefit of it; but now they shall have larger measures of his gifts, graces, and comforts, and "be baptized with them."

THE ASCENSION.—Ver. 9. Observe, 1. Jesus began his ascension in "the sight of his disciples," even "while they beheld." They did not see him come up out of the grave, because they might see him after he was risen, which would be satisfaction enough; but they saw him go up toward heaven, and had actually their eye upon him, with so much care and intention of mind, that they could not be deceived. It is probable that he did not fly swiftly up, but moved upwards gently, for the further satisfaction of his disciples. 2. He "vanished out of their sight, in a cloud," either a thick cloud, for God said that he would "dwell in the thick darkness," or a bright cloud, to signify the splendour of his same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, [f]shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven.

12 Then returned they unto Jerusalem from the mount called Olivet, which is from Jerusalem a sabbath-day's journey.[5]

13 And when they were come in, they went up into an upper room, where abode both [k]Peter, and James, and John, and Andrew, [l]Philip, and [m]Thomas, Bartholomew, and [n]Matthew, [o]James the son of [p]Alpheus, and [q]Simon Zelotes, and [r]Judas the brother of James.

14 These all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication, with the women, and Mary the mother of Jesus, and with his brethren.

15 ¶ And in those days Peter stood up in the midst of the disciples, and said, (the number of the names together were about an hundred and twenty,)[6]

16 [b]Men and brethren, This scripture must needs have been fulfilled, [d]which the Holy Ghost, by the mouth of David, [e]spake before concerning Judas, which was guide to them that took Jesus.

17 For he was numbered with us, and had obtained part of [g]this ministry.

18 Now [h]this man purchased a field with the reward of iniquity; and falling headlong, he burst asunder in the midst, and all his bowels gushed out.

19 And it was known unto all the dwellers at Jerusalem; insomuch as that field is called, in their proper tongue, [m]Aceldama, that is to say, The field of blood.[7]

20 For it is written [n]in the book of Psalms, [o]Let his habitation be desolate, and let no man dwell therein: and, [p]His ‡bishoprick let another take.

21 Wherefore of these men which have companied with us all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among us,

22 Beginning [s]from the baptism of John, [t]unto that same day that he was taken up from us, must one be ordained to be [u]a witness with us of his resurrection.

23 And they appointed two, Joseph called [x]Barsabas, who was surnamed Justus, and Matthias.

24 And they prayed, and said, Thou, Lord, which knowest the hearts of all men, shew whether of these two thou hast chosen,

25 That he may take part of this ministry and apostleship, from which Judas by transgression fell, that he might go to his own place.

26 And [e]they gave forth their lots: and the lot fell upon [f]Matthias; and he was numbered with the eleven apostles.

CHAP. II.

The apostles, filled with the Holy Ghost, speak divers languages.

Anno Domini cir. 33.

AND when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all[1] with one accord in one place.

2 And [c]suddenly there came a sound from heaven, [d]as of a rushing mighty wind, and [e]it filled all the house where they were sitting.

3 And there appeared unto them [f]cloven tongues, [g]like as of fire, and it [h]sat upon each of them.

4 And they were all [i]filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance.

5 And there were dwelling at Jerusalem Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven.

6 Now, when this *was noised abroad, the multitude came together, and were †confounded, because that every man heard them speak in his own language.

7 And they were all amazed, and marvelled, saying one to another, Behold, are not all these which speak Galileans?

8 And how hear we every man in our own tongue, wherein we were born?

9 Parthians, and [g]Medes, and [t]Elamites, and the dwellers in [u]Mesopotamia, and in Judea, and [x]Cappadocia, in [y]Pontus, and [z]Asia,

10 [a]Phrygia, and [b]Pamphylia, in [c]Egypt, and in the parts of [d]Libya about [e]Cyrene, and strangers of [g]Rome, Jews and proselytes, 11 [l]Cretes, and [k]Arabians, we do hear them speak in our tongues the wonderful works of God.

12 And they were all amazed, and were in doubt, saying one to another, What meaneth this?

13 Others, mocking, said, [n]These men are full of new wine.

14 ¶ But Peter, standing up with the eleven, lifted up his voice, and said unto them, [q]Ye men of Judea, and all ye that dwell at Jerusalem, be this known unto you, and hearken to my words:

15 For these are not drunken, as ye suppose, seeing it is but the third hour of the day.[2]

16 But this is that which was spoken by [u]the prophet Joel:

17 And it shall come to pass in the last days,[3] (saith God,) [y]I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh: and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams:

18 And on my servants and on my handmaidens, I will pour out in those days of my Spirit; and they shall prophesy:

19 And I will shew wonders in heaven above, and signs in the earth beneath; blood, and fire, and vapour of smoke:

20 The sun shall be turned into darkness,

glorious body. It was a "bright cloud that overshadowed him" in his transfiguration, and most probably this was so, Matt. xvii. 5. This "cloud received him," it is probable, when he was gone about as far from the earth as the clouds generally are; yet it was not such a spreading cloud as we commonly see, but such as just served to enclose him. Now he "made the clouds his chariot," Ps. civ. 3. God had often come down in a cloud, now he went up in one. Dr. Hammond thinks that the clouds receiving him here, were the angels receiving him; for the appearance of angels is ordinarily described by a cloud, comparing Exod. xxv. 22, with Lev. xvi. 2. By the clouds there is a sort of a communication kept up between the upper and lower world, in them the vapours are sent up from the earth, and the dews sent down from heaven; fitly therefore does he ascend in a cloud, who is "the Mediator between God and man," by whom God's mercies come down upon us, and our prayers come up to him. This was the last that was seen of him, the eyes of a great many "witnesses" followed him "into the cloud."

Pious Exercise.—Ver. 14. Observe, 1. "They prayed, and made supplication." All God's people are praying people, and "give themselves to prayer." It was now a time of trouble and danger with "the disciples" of Christ, they were as sheep in the midst of wolves; and, "Is any afflicted? Let him pray;" that will silence cares and fears. They had new work before them, great work, and before they entered upon it, "they were instant in prayer to God" for his presence with them in it. Before they were first sent forth, Christ spent time in prayer for them, and now they in prayer for themselves. They were waiting for "the descent of the Spirit upon them," and therefore abounded thus in prayer. "The Spirit descended upon our Saviour" when he was praying, Luke iii. 21. 2. "They continued in prayer," spent much time in it more than ordinary, prayed frequently, and were long in prayer. They never missed an hour in prayer; they resolved to persevere herein till "the Holy Ghost" came, according to the promise; "to pray, and not to faint." It was said, Luke xxiv. 53, "They were praising and blessing God;" here, "They continued in prayer and supplication;" for as praise for the promise is a decent way of begging for the performance, and praise for former mercy of begging further mercy; so, in seeking to God, we give him the glory of the mercy and grace which we have found in him. 3. "They did this with one accord:" that intimates that they were together in holy love, and that there was no quarrel or discord among them; and those who so keep "the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace," are best prepared to "receive the comforts of the Holy Ghost."—Henry.

Chap. II. Pentecost.—Ver. 1. 1. This feast of Pentecost was kept in remembrance of the giving of the law upon mount Sinai, whence the incorporating of the Jewish church was to be dated, which Dr. Lightfoot reckons to be just one thousand four hundred and forty-seven years before this. Fitly, therefore, is the Holy Ghost given at that feast, in fire and in tongues, for the promulgation of the evangelical law, not as that, to one nation, but to "every creature." 2. This feast of Pentecost happened on the "first day of the week," which was an additional honour put on that day, and a confirmation of it to be the Christian Sabbath, "the day which the Lord hath made," to be a standing memorial in his church of those two great blessings—the resurrection of Christ, and the pouring out of the Spirit, both on that day of the week. This serves not only to justify us in observing that day under the style and title of "the Lord's day," but to direct us in the sanctifying of it to give God praise particularly for those two great blessings.—Henry.

Gift of Tongues.—Ver. 2—4. While the assembled disciples were thus waiting the performance of the promise, which their Lord had given them; there came a sound from heaven, resembling that of an impetuous wind, which entered and filled the house where they were sitting. This was an emblem of the invincible energy, with which the Holy Spirit works upon the minds of men; bearing down all opposition before him, in a manner that cannot be explained, but which is most manifest by its effects. At the same time there appeared the form of tongues, divided at the end of them, and resembling fire; one of which rested on each of the whole company: this was an emblem of the gift, at this time bestowed upon them, of speaking divers languages which they had never learned, in the most fluent and proper manner: and the appearance as of fire, denoted the fervent zeal, with which they were enabled to speak, and the effects which their words produced upon the minds of the hearers.—The shape of the mitre, worn by bishops, is by some thought to have been derived from the supposed form of these divided tongues; but if they sat on every one present, (as the original determines,) and others besides the apostles were present, the grounds of this distinction fails. Indeed it is more likely, that there appeared several divisions in the tongues, than merely two; as the former would be a more exact emblem of the gift conferred at the same time. At the time of this extraordinary appearance, the whole company were abundantly replenished with the gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit: so that they began to speak with other tongues, or in languages of which they had before been entirely ignorant; as also with more distinct views and lively affections, even as the Spirit suggested divine truths to their minds, and enabled them to discourse upon them in a suitable manner. A more stupendous miracle than this can scarcely be imagined; as every one must see, who carefully considers the subject, and recollects, with what difficulty an adult person acquires the accurate knowledge and pronunciation and the moon into blood, before that great and notable day of the Lord come:

21 And it shall come to pass, that [f]whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved.

22 Ye men of Israel, hear these words; Jesus of Nazareth, [l]a man approved of God among you by miracles, and wonders, and signs, which God did by him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know:

23 Him, [l]being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, [m]ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain:

24 Whom [n]God hath raised up, having [o]loosed the pains of death: because it was not possible[4] that he should be holden of it.

25 For David speaketh concerning him, I foresaw the Lord always before my face; for he is on my right hand, that I should not be moved:

26 Therefore did my heart rejoice, and my tongue was glad; moreover also, my flesh shall rest in hope:

27 Because thou wilt not [x]leave my soul in hell, neither wilt thou suffer [y]thine Holy One [z]to see corruption.

28 Thou hast made known to me the ways of life; thou shalt make me full of joy with thy countenance.

29 Men and brethren, *let me freely speak unto you of [d]the patriarch [c]David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day.

30 Therefore, being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne;

31 He seeing this before, [l]spake of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul was not left in hell, neither his flesh did see corruption.

32 This Jesus hath God raised up, [k]whereof we all are witnesses.

33 Therefore being [l]by the right hand[5] of God exalted, [m]and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, [n]he hath shed forth this, which ye now see and hear.

34 For David is not ascended into the heavens: but he saith himself, The LORD said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, 35 Until I make [p]thy foes thy footstool.

36 Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made [r]that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ.

37 ¶ Now when they heard this, they were pricked in their heart,[6] and said unto Peter, and to the rest of the apostles, [t]Men and brethren, [u]what shall we do?

CHAP. III.

Peter and John restore a lame man, 1; ascribing the cure to the name of Jesus, 12, and exhorting to repentance, 19.

NOW Peter and John went up together into the temple at the hour of prayer, being the ninth hour.

2 And a certain man, [d]lame from his mother's womb, was carried, whom they laid daily at the gate of the temple [f]which is called Beautiful,[1] to ask alms of them that entered into the temple;

3 Who, seeing Peter and John about to go into the temple, asked an alms.

4 And Peter, [h]fastening his eyes upon him, with John, said, [l]Look on us.

5 And he gave heed unto them, expecting to receive something of them.

6 Then Peter said, Silver and gold have I none; [l]but such as I have give I thee: [m]In the name of [n]Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk.

7 And he took him by the right hand, and lifted him up; and immediately his feet and ancle-bones received strength.

8 And he, leaping up, stood, and walked, and entered with them into the temple, walking, and leaping, [q]and praising God.

even of one language, so as to speak it with propriety and without hesitation. At the same time it was of the utmost importance to the end designed: for whilst it served to confirm the testimony of the witnesses of our Lord's resurrection; it qualified the apostles and first preachers of the gospel for their important service, to which their want of learning would have otherwise been an insurmountable hinderance. The diversity of languages introduced at Babel, hath always been the great obstacle to the diffusion of useful knowledge, and of true religion; such instruments therefore, as the Lord saw good to employ in propagating the Christian religion among the nations, could have made no progress in their work, without the knowledge of other languages besides their native dialect; as even the Jews dispersed in foreign countries generally spake the Greek tongue: but the deficiency being supplied in this miraculous manner, enabled them to show the credentials of their commission from God, along with their ability for the service to which they were called, in every place whither they went.—"As the confusion of tongues in Babel spread idolatry throughout the world, and made men lose the knowledge of God and true religion; so God provided by the gift of tongues in Zion, to repair the knowledge of himself among the nations." [Whitby.]—Scott.

PETER'S SERMON.—Ver. 14. We have here "the first fruits of the Spirit" in the sermon which Peter preached immediately, directed, not to those of other nations in a strange language, (we are not told what answer he gave to those that were amazed, and said, "What meaneth this?") but to the Jews in the vulgar language, even to them that mocked, for he begins with the notice of that, ver. 15, and addresses his discourse, ver. 14, "to the men of Judea and the inhabitants of Jerusalem;" but we have reason enough to think, that the other disciples continued to speak to those who understood them, (and therefore flocked about them,) in the languages of their respective countries, "the wonderful works of God." And it was not by Peter's preaching only, but that of all, or most, of the rest of "the hundred and twenty, that three thousand souls were" that day converted, "and added to the church;" but Peter's sermon only is recorded, to be an evidence for him that he was thoroughly recovered from his fall, and thoroughly restored to the divine favour; he that had sneakingly denied Christ, now as courageously confesses him.—Henry.

ITS RESULT.—Ver. 37—40. The apostle's arguments were indeed absolutely conclusive, and his application highly interesting; though in other respects his discourse was peculiarly plain and simple. But when we consider the complicated evidence of our Lord's doctrine and miracles, and the obstinate unbelief of the Jews, we shall perceive that neither Peter's words, nor yet the miracles which they witnessed, would have produced such effects as followed; had not the Holy Spirit been also communicated to the audience, to remove the veil of pride, prejudice, and sinful affections from their minds. "The Comforter being come, he convinced them of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment." The apostle's words therefore, attended by His powerful influences, penetrated their hearts like arrows, or as a sharp sword; and, being filled with terror on account of their enormous guilt, in rejecting and crucifying the Lord of glory, they cried out to the apostles, in deep distress, as to their friends and countrymen, inquiring with great earnestness, What must we do? Was there any hope for them of escaping the vengeance of their exalted Messiah, whom they had so deeply injured? If there were, by what means could it be done? To this the apostle replied, by exhorting them to repent of that and all their other sins; and to openly avow their firm belief that Jesus was indeed the Messiah, by being baptized in his name.—Scott.

IMMENSE ACCESSION OF CONVERTS.—Ver. 41. Hereby there were added to the disciples to the number of about "three thousand souls that same day." All those that had received the Holy Ghost had their tongues at work to preach, and their hands at work to baptize; for it was time to be busy, when such a harvest was to be gathered in. The conversion of these three thousand with these words, was a greater work than the feeding of four or five thousand with a few loaves. Now Israel began to multiply after the death of our Joseph. They are said to be "three thousand souls," which word is generally used for persons when women and children are included with men, as Gen. xiv. 21. "Give me the souls," Gen. xlvi. 27, "seventy souls," which intimates that those that were here baptized, were not so many men, but so many heads of families, as with their children and servants baptized, might make up "three thousand souls." These were "added to them." Note, They who are joined to Christ, are added to the disciples of Christ, and join with them. When we take God for our God, we must take his people to be our people.—Henry.

CHAP. III. THE MIRACLE. Ver. 1—11. The events, recorded in this and the following chapter, seem to have occurred soon after those that have been considered. The apostles and primitive believers generally attended the worship at the hours of prayer; of which the third and the ninth, or nine o'clock in the morning and three in the afternoon, when the morning and evening sacrifices were offered with burning of incense, were the chief. The two apostles seem, however, at this time to have gone up to the temple alone; perhaps to seek an opportunity of preaching to the people, as well as to offer their supplications before God. The lame man, healed at this time, was about forty years old, and had been a cripple from his birth, chap. iv. 22.—The beautiful gate of the temple was erected by Herod the Great: it was above fifteen yards high, and about eight yards wide, 9 And all the people saw him walking and praising God.

10 And they knew that it was he which sat for alms at the Beautiful gate of the temple: and they were filled with wonder and amazement at that which had happened unto him.

11 And as the lame man which was healed held Peter and John, all the people ran together unto them in the porch that is called Solomon's, greatly wondering.

12 ¶ And when Peter saw it, he answered unto the people, [z] Ye men of Israel, why marvel ye at this? or why look ye so earnestly on us, as though by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk?

13 The God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Jacob, the God of our fathers, hath glorified his Son Jesus; [d] whom ye delivered up, and denied him[2] in the presence of Pilate, when he was determined to let him go.

14 But ye denied [e] the Holy One and the Just, and desired a murderer to be granted unto you;

15 And killed the *Prince of life, [g] whom God hath raised from the dead; whereof we are witnesses.

16 And his name, [k] through faith in his name, hath made this man strong, whom ye see and know; yea, the faith which is by him hath given him this perfect soundness in the presence of you all.

17 And now, brethren, I wot that through ignorance[3] ye did it, as did also your rulers.

18 But those things, which God before had shewed by the mouth of all his prophets, that Christ should suffer, he hath so fulfilled.

19 Repent ye therefore, and be converted, [s] that your sins may be blotted out, [t] when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord;

20 And [u] he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you:

21 Whom the heaven must receive until [y] the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began.

22 For Moses truly said unto the fathers, [b] A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; [e] him shall ye hear in all things, whatsoever he shall say unto you.

23 And it shall come to pass, [f] that every soul, which will not hear that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people.

24 Yea, and all the prophets from Samuel,[4] and those that follow after, as many as have spoken, have likewise foretold of these days.

25 Ye are the children of the prophets, and of the covenant which God made with our fathers, saying unto Abraham, [l] And in thy seed shall all the kindreds of the earth be blessed.

CHAP. IV.

Peter and John imprisoned, 1. Their defence, 5. They are threatened, 13.

AND as they spake unto the people, the priests, and the *captain of the temple, and the Sadducees, came upon them,

2 Being grieved that they taught the people, and [o] preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead.[1]

3 And they laid hands on them, and put them in hold unto the next day: for it was now even-tide.

4 Howbeit [g] many of them which heard the word believed; [h] and the number of the men was about five thousand.

5 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, that their rulers,[2] and elders, and scribes,

6 And Annas the high priest, and Caiaphas, and John, and Alexander, and as many as were of the kindred of the high priest, were gathered together at Jerusalem.

7 And when they had set them in the midst, they asked, [n] By what power, or [o] by what name, have ye done this?

8 ¶ Then Peter, [p] filled with the Holy Ghost, said unto them, Ye rulers of the people, and elders of Israel,

9 If we this day be examined of the good deed done to the impotent man, by what means he is made whole;

10 Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, [s] that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, [t] whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you whole.

11 This is [u] the stone which was set at nought of you builders, which is become [y] the head of the corner.

12 Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name [s] under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved.

13 ¶ Now, when they saw the boldness of Peter and John, and perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant men,[3] they marvelled; [c] and they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus.

14 And, beholding the man which was healed standing with them, they could say nothing against it.

15 But when they had commanded them to go aside out of the council, they conferred among themselves,

16 Saying, What shall we do to these men? for that indeed a notable miracle hath been done by them is manifest to all them that dwell in Jerusalem; and we cannot deny it.

17 But, that it spread no further among the being formed of Corinthian brass, with the most exquisite workmanship: it is supposed to have separated the court of the Gentiles from the inner court. The purpose of the apostles to work a miracle in this man's behalf, seems to have arisen from an immediate divine suggestion to their mind. The declaration of Peter that he had no silver or gold to bestow upon him, as it was made after some of the possessions had been sold, and entrusted to the disposal of the apostles, may be considered as a proof that they were not in the least enriched by the liberality of their brethren. But though he could not answer the man's expectations in this way, he was willing to help him, according to the ability committed to him. The circumstances attending this miracle need no comment: we, as it were, see the man making trial of his limbs, and the strength thus unexpectedly communicated to them, in every way that he could imagine; and expressing in the most lively manner his admiring gratitude to God, and his affection for the instruments of this mercy to him.

THE DISCOURSE.—Ver. 22—26. "One cannot imagine a more masterly address than this; to warn the Jews of the dreadful consequence of their infidelity, in the very words of Moses their favourite prophet; out of a pretended zeal for whom they were ready to reject Christianity, and to attempt its destruction." [Doddridge.]—Samuel was the first prophet after Moses, who was employed as a writer of the sacred oracles; and from him the schools of the prophets seem to have originated.—It is not necessary to prove, that predictions concerning Christ are found in the writings of every one of the prophets, for the words imply a general, not an universal, proposition: yet Jonah and Nahum alone appear to be exceptions; for Obadiah certainly is not. The book of Jonah is a history, not a prophecy; and he was a remarkable type of Christ; and that of Nahum is the burden of Nineveh, and relates to no other subject.—The persons to whom the apostle spake, were the descendants of those to whom the prophets had been sent, and they had inherited from them the sacred oracles, as well as the advantages of the covenant first made with their fathers; especially that of the Messiah's arising from among them, who was that seed of Abraham, in whom all the nations of the earth were to be blessed. Indeed Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, were prophets; and the Jews were their children, and heirs of the covenant made with them; unless (like profane Esau,) they should despise and refuse their birthright and blessing. Therefore the first proposal of the gospel was ordered to be made to them. For God, having raised up his Son Jesus, to be a prophet, priest, and ruler, like to Moses, but unspeakably superior; and having raised him from the dead, and placed him upon his glorious throne, had sent him, by his gospel and by his Holy Spirit, to render them truly happy: not by advancing them to worldly authority and prosperity, as they had vainly expected; but by teaching, encouraging, and enabling them to turn away from all their sins, that they might walk before him as his accepted worshippers and adopted children, in the light of his countenance, and the enjoyment of his favour.—The last clause may be rendered "to bless you, in every one turning away from his iniquities." It is almost certain that Christ did not convert all present; much less every one of the nation: but the apostle might hope that he would.—Scott.

CHAP. IV. IMPRISONMENT OF THE APOSTLES.—Ver. 1—4. Miserable is their case, to whom the glory of Christ's kingdom is a grief; for since the glory of that kingdom is everlasting, it follows of course that their grief will be everlasting too. It grieved them that the apostles "preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead." "The Sadducees" were grieved that "the resurrection from the dead" was preached; for they opposed that doctrine, and could not bear to hear of a future state, to hear it so well attested. The chief priests were grieved that they preached the resurrection of the dead through Jesus, that he should have the honour of it; and though they professed to believe the resurrection of the dead against "the Sadducees," yet they would rather give up that important article than have it preached and proved to be "through Jesus." "They laid hands on them," (that is, their servants and officers did at their command,) and "put them in hold," committed them to the custody of the proper officer "until the next day;" they could not examine them now; "for it was even-tide," and yet would defer it no longer than till next day. See how God trains up his servants for sufferings by degrees, and by lesser trials prepares them for greater; now they resist unto bonds only, but afterward to blood.—Henry.

EXAMINATION BEFORE THE COUNCIL.—Ver. 5—12. Caiaphas seems to have performed the ordinary functions of the high priesthood, and Annas to have had the greater influence and authority in the council. The examination of Peter and John must have excited great attention; as all parties seem to have considered their interest, authority, reputation, and favourite systems to be in the most imminent danger. In the question which they asked, they virtually allowed, that an extraordinary cure had been performed; but they wanted to know whether it were the effect of a divine power, or of incantation by the use of some name, according to the notions which then prevailed: and Peter, "being filled with the Holy Ghost," felt none of those terrors which had formerly led him to deny his Lord; but spake before that great assembly with the utmost courage, liberty, and propriety, Luke xii. 11, 12; xxi. 12—15. He insisted that the action about which they were cited to answer as criminals, was a good deed, an act of genuine mercy as well as of divine power; and he would have all the priests, scribes, and rulers, people, let us straitly threaten them, that they speak henceforth to no man in this name.

18 And they called them, and commanded them [m] not to speak at all, nor teach, in the name of Jesus.

19 But Peter and John answered and said unto them, Whether it be right in the sight of God [o] to hearken unto you more than unto God, [p] judge ye.

20 For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard.

21 So when they had further threatened them, they let them go, finding nothing how they might punish them,[4] because of the people: [u] for all men glorified God for that which was done.

22 For the man was above forty years old on whom this miracle of healing was shewed.

23 ¶ And, being let go, they went to their own company, and reported all that the chief priests and elders had said unto them.

24 And when they heard that, [x] they lifted up their voice to God with one accord, and said, [a] Lord, thou art God, which hast made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all that in them is;

25 Who by the mouth of thy servant David hast said, [c] Why did the heathen rage, and the people imagine vain things?

26 The [d] kings of the earth stood up, and the rulers were gathered together, against the Lord, and [e] against his Christ.

27 For of a truth, against [f] thy holy child Jesus, [g] whom thou hast anointed, both Herod and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Israel, were gathered together,

28 For [l] to do whatsoever thy hand and thy counsel determined before to be done.[5]

29 And now, Lord, [n] behold their threatenings: and grant unto thy servants, [o] that with all boldness they may speak thy word,

30 By stretching forth thine hand to heal; [q] and that signs and wonders may be done by the name of thy holy child Jesus.

31 ¶ And when they had prayed, [s] the place was shaken where they were assembled together; and [t] they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, [u] and they spake the word of God with boldness.

32 And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul: neither said any of them, that ought of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common.

33 And [x] with great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus: and great grace was upon them all.[6]

34 Neither was there any among them that lacked: for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold,

The death of Ananias and Sapphira, 1. The apostles imprisoned again, and delivered, 17.

BUT a certain man named Ananias, with Sapphira his wife, sold a possession,

2 And kept back part of the price, his wife also being privy to it, and brought a certain part, [d] and laid it at the apostles' feet.

3 But Peter said, Ananias, [e] why hath Satan filled thine heart to [*] lie to the Holy Ghost,[1] and to keep back part of the price of the land?

4 Whiles it remained, was it not thine own? and after it was sold, was it not in thine own power? [b] Why hast thou conceived this thing in thine heart? [1] thou hast not lied unto men, but unto God.

5 And Ananias, hearing these words, fell down, and gave up the ghost: and great fear came on all them that heard these things.

6 And the young men arose, wound him up, and carried him out, and buried him.

7 And it was about the space of three hours after, when his wife, not knowing what was done, came in.

8 And Peter answered unto her, Tell me whether ye sold the land for so much? And she said, Yea, for so much.

9 Then Peter said unto her, [n] How is it that ye have agreed together to tempt the Spirit of the Lord? Behold, [q] the feet of them which have buried thy husband are at the door, and shall carry thee out.

10 Then [r] fell she down straightway at his feet, and yielded up the ghost: and the young men came in, and found her dead, and, carrying her forth, buried her by her husband.

11 And great fear came upon all the church, and upon as many as heard these things.[2]

12 ¶ And by the hands of the apostles were many signs and wonders wrought among the people; (and they were all with one accord in Solomon's porch.

13 And of the rest [y] durst no man join himself to them: [z] but the people magnified them.

14 And [a] believers were the more added to the Lord, [b] multitudes both of men and women;)

IMPRESSION MADE UPON THE COUNCIL.—Ver. 13. The judges "took knowledge of them that they had been with Jesus;" they themselves, it is probable, had seen them with him in the temple, and now recollected that they had seen them, or some of their servants, or those about them, informed them of it, for they would not be thought themselves to have taken notice of such inferior people. But when they understood "that they had been with Jesus," had been conversant with him, attendant on him, and trained up under him, they knew what to impute their boldness to; nay, their boldness in divine things was enough to show with whom they had had their education. Note, Those that have been with Jesus, in converse and communion with him, have been attending on his word, praying in his name, and celebrating the memorials of his death and resurrection, should conduct themselves, in every thing, so that those who converse with them may "take knowledge of them that they have been with Jesus." And that makes them so holy, and heavenly, and spiritual, and cheerful; that has raised them so much above this world, and filled them with another. One may know that they have been in the mount by the shining of their faces.

MUTUAL ASSISTANCE AND CHARITY.—Ver. 32—35. 1. They insisted not upon property, which even children seem to have a sense of, and a jealousy for, and which worldly people triumph in, as Laban, Gen. xxxi. 43, "All that thou seest is mine;" and Nabal, 1 Sam. xxv. 11, "My bread and my water." These believers were so taken up with the hopes of an inheritance in the other world, that this was as nothing to them. "No man said that aught of the things which he possessed was his own." They did not take away property, but they were indifferent to it. They did not call what they had their own, in a way of pride and vainglory, boasting of it, or trusting in it. They did not call it their own, because they had, in affection, forsaken all for Christ, and were continually expecting to be stripped of all for their adherence to him. They did not say that aught was their own; for we can call nothing our own but sin; what we have in the world is more God's than our own: we have it from him, must use it for him, and are accountable for it to him. "No man said what he had was his own;" for he was ready to distribute, willing to communicate, and desired not to eat his morsel alone, but what he had to spare for himself and family, his poor neighbours were welcome to. They that had estates were not solicitous to lay up, but very willing to lay out, and would straiten themselves to help their brethren. No marvel that "they were of one heart and soul," when they sat so loose to the wealth of this world—for meum, mine, and tuum, thine, are the great makebaits. Men's holding their own, and grasping at more than their own, are the rise of wars and fightings. 2. They abounded in charity, so that, in effect, "they had all things common;" for "there was not any among them that lacked," but care was taken for their supply. Those that had been maintained upon the public charity, when they turned Christians, probably were excluded, and therefore it was fit that the church should take care of them. As there were many poor that received the gospel, so there were some rich that were able to maintain them, and the grace of God made them willing. Therefore those that gather much have nothing over, because what they have over, they have for them who gather little, that they may have no lack, 2 Cor. viii. 14, 15. The gospel hath laid "all things common," not so that the poor are allowed to rob the rich, but so that the rich are appointed to relieve the poor.—Henry.

CHAP. V. FATE OF ANANIAS AND SAPPHIRA.—Ver. 1—11. Ananias and Sapphira, seeing how those persons were respected, who had parted with their whole substance, to supply the wants of their poor brethren, agreed together to sell their land, to secrete a part of the money, and to give the rest to the apostle as the whole price. In doing this they perhaps expected to have a maintenance from the common stock, and yet to reserve a part of their substance to themselves: yet the desire of reputation seems to have predominated. But Peter was immediately shown the deception which they were practising, and charged it upon Ananias in express terms. His language on this occasion implied, that whatever Satan might suggest, he could not have filled the heart of Ananias with this wickedness, had he not been consenting. Or "Why hath Satan emboldened thy heart?" &c., Esth. vii. v; Ec. viii. 11; Heb. The falsehood told to the apostles was a bold attempt to impose upon the Spirit of truth himself, who so manifestly spake and acted by them; and this was to lie unto God, and not unto men; which is a plain testimony to the deity and personality of the Holy Ghost. The estate continued Ananias's property even after his profession of Christianity; the sale of it was not a matter of compulsion, but of voluntary choice; and even the money, after it was sold, was at his own disposal: whence it appears that this liberality was not expressly required of the primitive Christians, but was the result of their abundant zeal and love. So that the crime of Ananias did not so much consist in retaining part of the price of the land, as in endeavouring, in so solemn a transaction, to impose upon the apostles with a pertinacious lie, the result of avarice combined with ostentation. As his death was the immediate effect of divine power, it struck terror into all who heard of it; and he was buried immediately in his own garments, without further preparation or mourning; as Sapphira was afterwards, when, persisting in the same horrid falsehood, she was struck dead by the awful judgment of God.—This apparent severity on two detected hypocrites was real of Peter passing by [s] might overshadow some of them.

16 There came also a multitude out of the cities round about unto Jerusalem, bringing sick folks, and them which were vexed with unclean spirits: and they were [t] healed every one.

17 ¶ Then [u] the high priest rose up, and [x] all they that were with him, (which is the sect of the Sadducees,) and were filled with [‡] indignation,

18 And laid their hands on the apostles, and put them in the common prison.

19 But the [z] angel of the Lord by night opened the prison-doors, and brought them forth, and said, 20 Go, [a] stand and speak in the temple to the people all the words of this life.

21 And when they heard that, [b] they entered into the temple early in the morning, and taught. But the high priest came, and they that were with him, and called the council together, and all the [c] senate of the children of Israel, [4] and sent to the prison to have them brought.

22 But when the officers came, and found them not in the prison, they returned, and told,

23 Saying, [d] The prison truly found we shut with all safety, and the keepers standing without before the doors: but, when we had opened, we found no man within.

24 Now, when the high priest, and the captain of the temple, and the chief priests, heard these things, [e] they doubted of them whereunto this would grow.

25 Then came one and told them, saying, [f] Behold, the men whom ye put in prison are standing in the temple, and teaching the people.

26 Then went the captain with the officers, and brought them without violence: (for [g] they feared the people, lest they should have been stoned:)

27 And when they had brought them, they set them before the council: and the high priest asked them,

28 Saying, [h] Did not we straitly command you, that ye should not teach in this name? and, behold, ye have filled Jerusalem with your doctrine, [i] and intend to bring this man's blood upon us.

29 ¶ Then Peter and the other apostles answered and said, [k] We ought to obey God rather than men.

30 The God of our fathers [l] raised up Jesus, whom [m] ye slew, and hanged on a tree:

31 Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be [n] a Prince and [o] a Saviour, for [p] to give repentance to Israel, [q] and forgiveness of sins.

32 And [r] we are his witnesses of these things; [5] [s] and so is also the Holy Ghost, [t] whom God hath given to them that obey him.

mercy to vast numbers: it excited a reverential fear and a holy jealousy in the whole company; it doubtless induced them to strict self-examination, prayer, and circumspection, and a dread of hypocrisy, covetousness, or vain-glory: it prevented the increase of scandals in the church, and the intrusion of hypocrites; and thus it tended to render the gospel honourable in the eyes of the people.—We may also observe, that this event was an evidence of the apostles' integrity and veracity, even to their enemies.—Scott.

RELEASE FROM PRISON.—Ver. 19. "The angel of the Lord by night," in spite of all the locks and bars that were upon the prisoners, "opened the prison-doors," and, in spite of all the vigilance and resolution of the keepers that "stood without before the doors, brought forth" the prisoners, gave them authority to go out without crime, and led them through all opposition. This deliverance is not so particularly related as that of Peter, chap. xii. 7, &c.; but the miracle here was the very same. Note, There is no prison so dark, so strong, but God can both visit his people in it, and, if he pleases, fetch them out of it. The discharge of the apostles out of prison by an angel was a resemblance of Christ's resurrection, and his discharge out of the prison of the grave, and would help to confirm the apostles' preaching of it. They are charged, and legally charged, to go on with their work, so as thereby to be discharged from the prohibition which the high priest laid them under; the angel bid them "Go, stand, and speak in the temple to the people the words of this life," ver. 20. When they were miraculously set at liberty, they must not think it was that they might save their lives by making their escape out of the hands of their enemies. No; it was that they might go on with their work with so much the more boldness.

BOLDNESS AND FIDELITY.—Ver. 29. "Peter and the other apostles" all spake to the same purport: whether severally examined, or answering jointly, they spake as one and the same Spirit gave them utterance, depending upon the promise their Master had made them, that, when they were brought before councils it should be "given them in that same hour what they should speak, and courage to speak it. 1. They justified themselves in their disobedience to the commands of the great Sanhedrim, great as it was, ver. 29. "We ought to obey God rather than men." They do not plead the power they had to work miracles, (that spake sufficiently for them, and therefore they humbly decline mentioning it themselves,) but they appeal to a maxim universally owned, and which even natural conscience subscribes to, and which comes home to their case. God had commanded them to teach in the name of Christ, and therefore they ought to do it, though the chief priests forbade them. Those rulers set up in opposition to God, and have a great deal to answer for, who punish men for disobedience to them, in that which was their duty to God. 2. They justify themselves in doing what they could to fill Jerusalem with the doctrine of Christ, though in preaching him up they did indeed reflect upon those that maliciously ran him down: and if they thereby bring his blood upon them, they may thank themselves. It is charged upon them as a crime that they preached Christ and his gospel: "Now," say they, "We will tell you who this Christ is, and what his gospel is, and then do you judge whether we ought not to preach it; nay, and we shall take this opportunity to preach it to you, 'whether you will hear, or whether you will forbear.'"—Henry.

GAMALIEL.—Ver. 33—39. The rulers were cut by the words of Peter; they were convicted, tortured, enraged, and alarmed, but not humbled or changed: "they gnashed their teeth, as if one drew a saw." [Beza.] And therefore they desperately counselled to put the whole company of the apostles to death. But Gamaliel, (whose reputation is very great among the Jews to this day, and who seems to have been a man of great judgment and prudence in secular matters,) advised them against so violent a measure. He seems at the time to have had some conviction of the truth of the gospel; but as he was Saul's tutor, who was a determined persecutor, it may be questioned whether he long retained his tolerating principles. However he was a Pharisee, and as such a decided opposer of the Sadducean system: and from recent instances he showed that the interposition of the council, in so decided a manner, was neither needful nor safe. According to his opinion, which was the verdict of common sense, and supported by the most conclusive arguments, the continuance of Christianity to this day, a religion neither supported by human authority, nor paying court to any of man's corrupt passions; nay, opposed by all the power, wealth, philosophy, learning, superstition, idolatry, false religion, vices, and popular prejudices of the whole world; and declaring exterminating war against all the corrupt propensities of the human heart, without favouring one more than another; and also the ruin of the Jewish church and nation, as well as of other persecuting powers, are irrefragable demonstrations, that it was no work or counsel of men, but indeed a revelation from God; and that they who opposed it actually fought against him, and incurred his righteous displeasure for so doing.—Scott.

CHAP. VI. WORK OF THE APOSTLES.—Ver. 4. "We will give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word." See here, 1. What are the two great gospel-ordinances—the word, and prayer; by these two communion between God and his people is kept up and maintained; by the word he speaks to them, and by prayer they speak to him; and these have a mutual reference to each other. By these two the kingdom of Christ must be advanced, and additions made to it; we must "prophesy upon the dry bones," and "then pray for a spirit of life" from God "to enter into them."

Timon, and Parmenas, and Nicolas a proselyte of Antioch;

6 Whom they set before the apostles: and when they had prayed, they laid their hands on them.[3]

7 And [y]the word of God increased; [z]and the number of the disciples multiplied in Jerusalem greatly: and a great company of [a]the priests were obedient to the faith.

8 ¶ And Stephen, [c]full of faith and power, [d]did great wonders and miracles among the people.

9 ¶ Then there arose certain of the synagogue, which is called the synagogue of the Libertines, and [g]Cyrenians, and [h]Alexandrians, and of them of [i]Cilicia and of [k]Asia, disputing with Stephen.[4]

10 And they were not able to resist the wisdom and the spirit by which he spake.

11 Then [o]they suborned men, which said, We have heard him speak [p]blasphemous words against Moses, and against God.

12 And they stirred up the people, and the elders, and the scribes, and came upon him, and caught him, and brought him to the council,

13 And [t]set up false witnesses, which said, This man ceaseth not to speak blasphemous words against this holy place, and the law:

14 For we have heard him say, [u]that this Jesus of Nazareth shall destroy this place, and shall [x]change the *customs which Moses delivered us.

15 And all that sat in the council, looking stedfastly on him, saw his face as it had been the face of an angel.

CHAP. VII.

Stephen answereth to his accusation, 1; they stone him to death, 54.

THEN said the high priest, Are these things so?

2 And he said, [b]Men, brethren, and fathers, hearken; [c]The God of glory appeared unto our father Abraham, [e]when he was in Mesopotamia, before he dwelt in [f]Charran,

3 And said unto him, [g]Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and come into the land which I shall shew thee.

4 Then [i]came he out of the land of the Chaldeans, and dwelt in Charran: and from thence, when his father was dead, he removed him into this land, wherein ye now dwell.

5 And he [k]gave him none inheritance in it,[l] no, [l]not so much as to set his foot on: [m]yet he promised that he would give it to him for a possession, and to his seed after him, when as yet he had no child.

6 And God spake on this wise, [o]That his seed should sojourn in a strange land; and that they should bring them into bondage, and entreat them evil four hundred years.[2]

7 And [q]the nation to whom they shall be in bondage will I judge, said God: and after that shall they come forth, [r]and serve me in this place.[3]

8 And he gave him the [s]covenant of circumcision: [t]and so Abraham begat Isaac, and circumcised him the eighth day; [u]and Isaac begat Jacob; and [x]Jacob begat the twelve patriarchs.

9 And the patriarchs, moved with envy, [a]sold Joseph into Egypt: [b]but God was with him,

10 And [c]delivered him out of all his afflictions, [d]and gave him favour and wisdom in the sight of Pharaoh king of Egypt; and he made him governor over Egypt, and all his house.

11 Now there came a dearth over all the land of Egypt and Chanaan, and great affliction: and our fathers found no sustenance.

12 But [f]when Jacob heard that there was corn in Egypt, he sent out our fathers first.

13 And at the second time [g]Joseph was made known to his brethren; and Joseph's kindred was made known unto Pharaoh.

14 Then sent Joseph, and called his father Jacob to him, and all his kindred, [i]threescore and fifteen souls.[4]

15 So [k]Jacob went down into Egypt, and died, he, and our fathers,

16 And were carried over into Sychem, and laid in the sepulchre that Abraham bought[5] for a sum of money of the sons of [o]Emmor, the father of Sychem.

17 But when the time of the promise drew nigh, which God had sworn to Abraham, [q]the people grew and multiplied in Egypt,

18 Till [r]another king arose, which knew not Joseph:

19 The same dealt subtilely with our kindred, and evil-entreated our fathers, so that they cast out their young children, to the end that they might not live.

20 In which time [t]Moses was born, [u]and was *exceeding fair, and nourished up in his father's house three months:

21 And [x]when he was cast out, Pharaoh's daughter took him up, and nourished him [y]for her own son.

22 And Moses was [z]learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and was mighty in words and in deeds.

23 And [b]when he was full forty years old, it came into his heart [d]to visit his brethren the children of Israel.

24 And [e]seeing one of them suffer wrong, he defended him, and avenged him that was oppressed, and smote the Egyptian:

25 For he supposed his brethren would have understood, how that [f]God by his hand would deliver them; but they understood not.

By the word and prayer other ordinances are sanctified to us, and sacraments have their efficacy. 2. What is the great business of gospel-ministers; "to give themselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word;" they must still be either fitting and furnishing themselves for those services, or employing themselves in them, either publicly or privately, in the stated times, or out of them. They must be God's mouth to the people "in the ministry of the word," and the people's mouth to God in prayer.

Ordination of the Deacons.—Ver. 6. The people presented them to the apostles, who approved their choice, and ordained them. 1. "They prayed with them," and "for them," that God would give them more and more of "the Holy Ghost," and "of wisdom;" that he would qualify them for the service to which they were called, and own them in it, and make them thereby a blessing to the church, and particularly "to the poor of the flock." All that are employed in the service of the church, ought to be committed to the conduct of the divine grace by the prayers of the church. 2. "They laid their hands on them," that is, "they blessed them in the name of the Lord;" for laying on hands was used in blessing; so Jacob blessed "both the sons of Joseph;" and, without controversy, "the less is blessed of the greater," Heb. vii. 7; the deacons are blessed by the apostles, and the overseers of the poor by the pastors of the congregation. Having by prayer implored a blessing upon them, they did by the laying on of hands assure them that the blessing was conferred in answer to the prayer; and this was giving them authority to execute that office, and laying an obligation upon the people to be observant of them therein.

Conversion of the Priesthood.—Ver. 7. "A great crowd of priests" were, by the grace of God, helped over their prejudices, and "were obedient to the faith," so their conversion is described. 1. They embraced the doctrine of the gospel; their understandings were captivated to the power of the truths of Christ, and every opposing, objecting thought, "brought into obedience" to him, 2 Cor. x. 4, 5. The gospel is said to be "made known for the obedience of faith," Rom. xvi. 26. Faith is an act of "obedience," for this is God's "commandment, that we believe," 1 John iii. 23. 2. They evinced the sincerity of their believing the gospel of Christ by a cheerful compliance with all the rules and precepts of the gospel. The design of the gospel is to refine and reform our hearts and lives: faith gives law to us, and we must be obedient to it. —Henry.

CHAP. VII. Stephen's Defence.—Ver. 2. In general we may observe, 1. That in this discourse he appears to be a man ready and mighty in the scriptures, and thereby thoroughly furnished for every good word and work. He can relate scripture-stories, and such as were pertinent to his purpose, off hand, without looking in his Bible. He was "filled with the Holy Ghost," not so much to reveal to him new things, or open to him the secret counsels and decrees of God concerning the Jewish nation, with them to convict these gainsayers; no, but to bring to his remembrance the scriptures of the Old Testament, and to teach him how to make use of them for their conviction. They that are full of the Holy Ghost, will be full of the scripture, as Stephen was. 2. Thus he quotes the scriptures, according to the Septuagint translation, by which it appears that he was one of the Hellenist Jews, who used that version in their synagogues. His following that, occasions divers variations from the Hebrew original in this discourse, which the judges of the court did not correct, because they knew how he was led into them; nor is it any derogation to the authority of that spirit by which he spake, for the variations are not material. We have a maxim, Apices juris non sunt jura—Mere points of law are not law itself.

For Explanations of the Points of Jewish History touched upon by Stephen, see corresponding Passages in the Old Testament.

Its Effect.—Ver. 54. As Caiaphas rent his clothes when Christ said, "Hereafter ye shall see the Son of man coming in glory," Matt. xxvi. 64, 65, so these here "stopped their ears" when Stephen said, "I now see the Son of man standing in glory;" both pretending that what was spoken was not to be heard with patience. Their stopping their ears was 1. A manifest specimen of their wilful obstinacy; they were resolved they would not hear what had a tendency to convince them, which was what the prophets often complained of; they were "like the deaf adder, that will not hear the voice of the charmer," Ps. lviii. 4, 5. 2. It was a fatal omen of that judicial hardness to which God would give them up. They stopped their ears, and then God, in a way of righteous judgment, stopped them. That was the work that was now in doing with the unbelieving Jews; "Make the heart of this people fat, and their ears heavy;" thus was Stephen's character of them answered, "Ye uncircumcised in heart and ears." They "ran upon him with one accord;" the people and the elders of the people, judges, prosecutors, witnesses, and spectators, they all flew upon him, as beasts upon the prey. See how violent they were, and in what haste; they "ran upon him," though there was no danger of his out-running them; and see how unanimous they were in this evil thing; they ran upon him "with one accord," one and all, hoping thereby to terrify him, and put him into confusion; envying him his composure, and comfort in soul, with which he wonderfully enjoyed himself in the midst of this hurry; they did all they could to ruffle him. They "cast him out of the city and stoned him;" as if he were not worthy to live in Jerusalem; nay, not worthy to live in this world: pretending herein to execute the law of Moses, Lev. xxiv. 16. "He that 26 And the next day he shewed himself unto them as they strove, and would have set them at one again, saying, Sirs, [1]ye are brethren; why do ye wrong one to another?

27 But he that did his neighbour wrong thrust him away, saying, [1]Who made thee a ruler and a judge over us?

28 Wilt thou kill me, as thou diddest the Egyptian yesterday?

29 Then [m]fled Moses at this saying, and was a stranger in the land of Madian, where he begat two sons.

30 And when forty years were expired,[6] [o]there appeared to him, in the wilderness of mount Sina, an angel of the Lord [q]in a flame of fire in a bush.

31 When Moses saw it, he wondered at the sight: [s]and as he drew near to behold it, the voice of the Lord came unto him, 32 Saying, [t]I am the God of thy fathers, the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. Then Moses trembled, and durst not behold.

33 Then said the Lord to him, [x]Put off thy shoes from thy feet: for the place where thou standest is holy ground.

34 [y]I have seen, I have seen the affliction of my people which is in Egypt, and I have heard their groaning, [z]and am come down to deliver them. And now, come, I will send thee into Egypt.

35 This Moses, whom they refused,[7] saying, Who made thee a ruler and a judge? [a]the same did God send to be a ruler and a deliverer, [b]by the hand of the angel which appeared to him in the bush.

36 He brought them out, [c]after that he had shewed wonders and signs in the land of Egypt, and in the Red sea, [g]and in the wilderness forty years.

37 ¶ This is that Moses which said unto the children of Israel, [i]A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren [*]like unto me; [k]him shall ye hear.

38 This is he[8] that was [l]in the church in the wilderness [m]with the angel which spake to him in the mount Sina, and with our fathers: [n]who received the lively oracles to give unto us:

39 To [p]whom our fathers would not obey, [q]but thrust him from them, [r]and in their hearts turned back again into Egypt,

40 Saying [s]unto Aaron, Make us gods to go before us: for as for this Moses, which brought us out of the land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him.

41 And [t]they made a calf in those days, and offered sacrifice unto the idol, and [u]rejoiced in the works of their own hands.

42 Then God turned, and gave them up to worship the host of heaven; as it is written in the book of the prophets, O ye house of Israel, have ye offered to me slain beasts and sacrifices by the space of forty years in the wilderness?

43 Yea, ye took up the tabernacle of Moloch,[9] and the star of your god Remphan, figures which ye made to worship them: [e]and I will carry you away beyond Babylon.

44 Our fathers had [f]the tabernacle of witness in the wilderness, as he had appointed, [†]speaking unto Moses, that he should make it according to the fashion that he had seen:

45 [h]Which also our fathers [‡]that came after brought in with Jesus[10] into the possession of the Gentiles, [k]whom God drave out before the face of our fathers, unto the days of David;

46 Who [m]found favour before God, [n]and desired to find a tabernacle for the God of Jacob.

47 But [o]Solomon built him an house.

48 Howbeit, the most High [q]dwelleth not in temples made with hands; as saith the prophet, 49 [s]Heaven is my throne, and earth is my footstool: [t]what house will ye build me? saith the Lord; or what is the place of my rest?

50 Hath not my hand made all these things?

51 ¶ Ye stiff-necked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always [z]resist the Holy Ghost; [a]as your fathers did, so do ye.

52 [b]Which of the prophets have not your fathers persecuted? and they have slain them [c]which shewed before of the coming of [d]the Just One; [e]of whom ye have been now the betrayers and murderers:

53 Who [f]have received the law by the disposition of angels, and have not kept it.

54 ¶ When they heard these things, they were cut to the heart, and they gnashed on him with their teeth.

55 But he, being [k]full of the Holy Ghost, [l]looked up stedfastly into heaven, [m]and saw the glory of God, and Jesus [n]standing on the right hand of God, 56 And said, Behold, [o]I see the heavens opened, [p]and the Son of man[11] standing on the right hand of God.

57 Then they cried out with a loud voice, and stopped their ears, and ran upon him with one accord, 58 And cast him out of the city, [t]and stoned him: [u]and the witnesses laid down their clothes at a young man's feet, whose name was Saul.

59 And they stoned Stephen, [y]calling upon God, and saying, [z]Lord Jesus, receive my spirit.[12]

60 And he kneeled down, and cried with a loud voice, [b]Lord, lay not this sin to their charge. And, when he had said this, he fell asleep.

blasphemeth the name of the Lord, shall surely be put to death, all the congregation of Israel shall certainly stone him." And thus they had put Christ to death, when this same court had found him guilty of blasphemy, but, that for his greater ignominy, they were desirous that he should be crucified, and God overruled it for the fulfilling of the Scripture. The fury with which they managed the execution, is intimated in that they cast him out of the city, as if they could not bear the sight of him; they treated him as an anathema, as the off-scouring of all things. The witnesses against him were the leaders in the execution, according to the law, Deut. xvii. 7. "The hands of the witnesses shall be first upon him, to put him to death," and particularly in the case of blasphemy, Lev. xxiv. 14; Dent. xiii. 9. Thus were they to confirm their testimony.

Stephen's Vision.—Ver. 56. Jesus, being the Son of man, having taken our nature with him to heaven, and being there clothed with a body, might be seen with bodily eyes, and so Stephen saw him. When the Old-Testament prophets saw the glory of God, it was attended with angels. The Shechinah or divine presence in Isaiah's vision was attended with seraphim; in Ezekiel's vision with cherubim; both signifying the angels, the ministers of God's providence. But here no mention is made of the angels, though they surround the throne and the Lamb; instead of them Stephen sees Jesus at the right hand of God, the great Mediator of God's grace, from whom more glory redounds to God than from all the ministration of the holy angels. The glory of God shines brightest in the face of Jesus Christ; for there shines the glory of his grace, which is the most illustrious instance of his glory. God appears more glorious with Jesus standing at his right hand, than with millions of angels about him. Now, 1. Here is a proof of the exaltation of Christ to the Father's right hand; the apostles saw him ascend, but they did not see him sit down, "a cloud received him out of their sight." We are told that he sat down on the right hand of God; but was he ever seen there? Yes, Stephen saw him there, and was abundantly satisfied with the sight. He saw Jesus at the right hand of God, noting both his transcendent dignity, and his sovereign dominion, his uncontrollable ability, and his universal agency; whatever God's right hand either gives to us, or receives from us, or does concerning us, it is by him; for he is the Right Hand. 2. He is usually said to "sit" there; but Stephen sees him "standing" there, as one more than ordinarily concerned at present for his suffering servant; he stood up as a Judge, to plead his cause against his persecutors; he is "raised up out of his holy habitation," Zech. ii. 13, "comes out of his place to punish," Isa. xxvi. 21. He stands ready to receive him and crown him, and in the mean time to give him a prospect of the joy set before him. 3. This was intended for the encouragement of Stephen; he sees Christ is for him, and then no matter who is against him. When our Lord Jesus was in his agony, an angel appeared to him, strengthening him; but Stephen had Christ himself appearing to him. Note, Nothing so comfortable to dying saints, nor so animating to suffering saints, as to see Jesus at the right hand of God; and, blessed be God, by faith we may see him there.

His Prayer for His Murderers.—Ver. 60. First, He "kneeled down;" which was an expression of his humility in prayer. Secondly, He "cried with a loud voice;" which was an expression of his importunity. But why should he thus show more humility and importunity in this request than in the former? The answer is this. None could doubt of his being in good earnest in his prayers for himself, and therefore there he needed not to use such outward expressions of it; but in his prayers for his enemies, because that is so much against the grain of corrupt nature, it was requisite he should give proofs of his being in earnest. "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge;" therein he followed the example of his dying Master, who prayed thus for his persecutors, "Father, forgive them;" and set an example to all following sufferers in the cause of Christ, thus to pray for those that persecute them. Prayer may preach; this did so to those who stoned Stephen: and "therefore" he kneeled down, that they might take notice he was going to pray, and cried with a loud voice, that they might take notice of what he said, and might learn, First, That what they did was a sin, a great sin, which, if divine mercy and grace did not prevent, would be laid to their charge, to their everlasting confusion. Secondly, That notwithstanding their malice and fury against him, he was in charity with them, and was so far from desiring that God would avenge his death upon them, that it was his hearty prayer to God, that it might not in any degree be laid to their charge. A sad reckoning there would be for it; if they did not repent, it would certainly be laid to their charge; but he, for his part, did not desire the woful day. Let them take notice of this, and when their thoughts were cool, surely they would not easily forgive themselves putting "him" to death, who could so easily forgive them. "The blood-thirsty hate the upright, but the just seek his soul," Prov. xxix. 10. Thirdly, That, though the sin was very heinious, yet they must not dispair of the pardon of it upon their repentance. If they would lay it to their hearts, God would not lay it to their charge. "Do you think, saith St. Austin, that Paul heard Stephen pray this prayer? It is likely he did, saith he, and ridiculed it then (audivit subsannans sed irrisit—he heard with scorn;) but afterward he had the benefit of it, and fared the better for it."

His Death.—Ver. 60. "When he had said this, he fell asleep;" or, as he was saying this, the blow came that was mortal. Note, Death is but a sleep to good people; not the sleep of the soul, (Stephen had given that up into Christ's hand,) but the sleep of the body; it is its rest from all its griefs and toils, it is perfect ease and indolence. Stephen

The church planted in Samaria, 1, is confirmed by Peter and John, 14. Philip sent to baptize an eunuch, 26.

AND [a]Saul was consenting unto his death. And at that time [b]there was a great persecution against the church which was at Jerusalem; [d]and they were all scattered abroad throughout the regions of Judea and Samaria, [f]except the apostles.

2 And [g]devout men carried Stephen to his burial, and made great lamentation over him.

3 As for Saul, he made havock of the church, entering into every house, and haling men and women, committed them to prison.

4 Therefore [k]they that were scattered abroad went every where preaching the word.

5 ¶ Then Philip[1] went down to the city of Samaria, [n]and preached Christ unto them.

6 And the people [o]with one accord gave heed unto those things which Philip spake, hearing and seeing the miracles which he did.

7 For [p]unclean spirits, crying with loud voice, came out of many that were possessed with them: and many taken with [q]palsies, and that were [r]lame, were healed.

8 And there was great joy in that city.

9 ¶ But there was a certain man, called Simon, which beforetime in the same city used sorcery,[2] and bewitched the people of Samaria, giving out that himself was some great one:

10 To whom [x]they all gave heed, from the least to the greatest, saying, This man is [z]the great power of God.

11 And to him they had regard, because that of long time he had bewitched them with sorceries.

12 But when [b]they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women.

13 Then Simon himself [e]believed also;[3] and when he was baptized, he continued with Philip, and wondered, beholding the *miracles and signs which were done.

14 ¶ Now, when the apostles which were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria[s] had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John:[4]

15 Who, when they were come down, [k]prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Ghost.

16 (For as yet [l]he was fallen upon none of them: only they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.)

17 Then laid they their hands on them, [o]and they received the Holy Ghost.

18 And when Simon saw that through laying on of the apostles' hands the Holy Ghost was given, he offered them money,[5]

19 Saying, [q]Give me also this power, that on whomsoever I lay hands, he may receive the Holy Ghost.

20 But Peter said unto him, Thy money perish with thee, because [s]thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money.

21 Thou [u]hast neither part nor lot in this matter: [x]for thy heart is not right in the sight of God.

22 [y]Repent therefore of this thy wickedness, and pray God, [a]if perhaps the thought of thine heart may be forgiven thee.

23 For I perceive that thou art in [c]the gall of bitterness, and in [d]the bond of iniquity.

24 Then answered Simon, and said, [e]Pray ye to the Lord for me, that none of these things which ye have spoken come upon me.

25 And they, when they had testified and preached the word of the Lord, returned to Jerusalem, and preached the gospel in many villages of the Samaritans.

26 ¶ And the angel of the Lord spake unto Philip, saying, [i]Arise, and go toward the south, unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza, which is desert.

27 And he arose and went: and, behold, [n]a man of Ethiopia, an eunuch of great authority under Candace queen of the Ethiopians,[6] who had the charge of all her treasure, [p]and had come to Jerusalem for to worship, 28 Was returning, and sitting in his chariot, read [r]Esaias the prophet.

29 Then [s]the Spirit said unto Philip, Go near, and join thyself to this chariot.

30 And Philip ran thither to him, and heard him read the prophet Esaias, and said, [u]Understandest thou what thou readest?[7]

31 And he said, [x]How can I, except some man should guide me? [y]And he desired Philip that he would come up and sit with him.

32 The place of the scripture which he read was this, [z]He was led as a sheep to the slaughter; [b]and like a lamb dumb before his shearer, so [c]opened he not his mouth:

33 In [d]his humiliation his judgment was taken away; [f]and who shall declare his generation? [g]for his life is taken from the earth.

34 And the eunuch answered Philip, and said, I pray thee, of whom speaketh the prophet this? of himself, or of some other man?

35 Then Philip opened his mouth, and began at the same scripture, and [l]preached unto him Jesus.

36 And as they went on their way, they came unto a certain water: and the eunuch said, See, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized?

37 And Philip said, [n]If thou believest with died as much in a hurry as ever any man did, and yet, when he died, he fell asleep; he applied himself to his dying work with as much composure of mind as if he had been going to sleep; it was but closing his eyes, and dying. Observe, he fell asleep when he was praying for his persecutors; it is expressed as if he thought he could not die in peace till he had done that. It contributes very much to our dying comfortably, to die in charity with all men; we are then found of Christ in peace; let not the sun of life go down upon our wrath. He fell asleep; the vulgar Latin adds, "in the Lord;" in the embraces of his love. If he thus sleep, he shall do well; he shall awake again in the morning of the resurrection.—Henry.

CHAP. VIII. STEPHEN'S FUNERAL.—Ver. 2. It is an ill symptom, if, when such men are taken away, it is not laid to heart. Those devout men paid these their last respects to Stephen, 1. To show that they were not ashamed of the cause for which he suffered, nor afraid of the wrath of those that were enemies to it; for, though they now triumph, the cause is a righteous cause, and will be at last a victorious one. 2. To show the great value and esteem they had for this faithful servant of Jesus Christ, this first martyr for the gospel, whose memory shall always be precious to them, notwithstanding the ignominy of his death. They study to do honour to him whom God put honour upon. 3. To testify their belief and hope of the resurrection of the dead, and the life of the world to come.

SAUL.—Ver. 3. Saul was a bred scholar, a gentleman, and yet did not think it below him to be employed in the vilest work of that kind. 1. He "entered into every house," making no difficulty of breaking open doors, night or day, and having a force attending him for that purpose. He entered into every house where they used to keep their meetings, or every house that had any Christians in it, or was thought to have. No man could be secure in his own house, though it is his castle. 2. He haled, with the utmost contempt and cruelty, both men and women, dragging them along the streets, without any regard to the tenderness of the weaker sex; he stooped so low as to take cognizance of the meanest that were leavened with the gospel, so extremely bigoted was he. 3. He committed them to prison, in order to their being tried and put to death, unless they would renounce Christ; and some, we find, were compelled by him to blaspheme, chap. xxvi. 11.—Henry.

SIMON MAGUS.—Ver. 18—24. When Simon saw the effects which followed from the laying on of their hands, he concluded that they could impart to him a similar power, if they chose. This, he supposed, would admirably subserve his purposes of obtaining honour and wealth; for, by enabling men to speak foreign languages, without the trouble of learning them, and to cure diseases by a word, he should not only carry on a most lucrative trade, but be almost adored as a deity. Judging, therefore, of the apostles by himself, and seeing that they were poor men, he supposed that they would willingly confer this power on him for a sum of money, and ventured to make this infamous proposal to them. His ambitious mind could not be satisfied with the power of working miracles himself, (though indeed this seems not to have been conferred on him,) but he wanted the unrestricted power of communicating the Holy Spirit for the same purposes, to whom he pleased. Instead of deeming the lowest place among the people of God too great an honour for one whose sorcery, impiety, and blasphemy had been so atrocious, as he certainly would have done if he had been truly converted, he aspired, with horrible pride and ambition, at equality with the apostles in power and authority; whilst he meant to prostitute the sacred operations of the Holy Spirit to gratify his love of filthy lucre and of human applause, and would have seduced the apostles to concur in the detestable sacrilege!—Whatever miraculous power of discerning men's spirits Peter might possess, and on some occasions exercise, he had no need of it in this case; but, perceiving the extreme wickedness and hypocrisy of Simon, he expressed his abhorrence of his money and of his crime, in the most decided manner. Let him take his treasure with him, if he could, into that perdition to which he was evidently hastening, for Peter would have none of it. This was not a wish that he might perish; but an awful warning that he was in most extreme danger of perdition, which he could not escape, if he proceeded further in his present course. Peter added, that he made such a proposal, because, being utterly ignorant of God and spiritual things, and awfully blinded by Satan, he had blasphemously thought, that the free and most precious gift of God's Spirit might be bought and sold by a mercenary traffic. He was therefore evidently destitute of true faith, and had neither part or lot in the blessings of the gospel; as his heart was not right in the sight of a holy God, nor was his profession of Christianity sincere.—Scott.

THE ETHIOPIAN EUNUCH.—Ver. 27. 1. He was a foreigner, "a man of Ethiopia;" there were two Ethiopias, one in Arabia, but that lay east from Canaan; it should seem this was of Ethiopia in Africa, which lay south, beyond Egypt, a great way off from Jerusalem; for "in Christ they that were afar off were made nigh," according to the promise, "that the ends of the earth should see the great salvation." The Ethiopians were looked upon as the meanest and most despicable of the nations, black-moors, as if nature had stigmatized them; yet the gospel is sent to them, and divine grace looks upon them, "though they are black, though the sun has looked upon them." 2. He was a person of quality, a great man in his own country, "an eunuch;" not in body, all thine heart, thou mayest. And he answered and said, [p]I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God.

38 And he commanded the chariot to stand still: and they went down both into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; [q]and he baptized him.

39 And when they were come up out of the water, [s]the Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip, that the eunuch saw him no more: [t]and he went on his way rejoicing.

40 But Philip was found [u]at Azotus:[7] and passing through, he preached in all the cities, till he came to Cesarea.

CHAP. IX.

Saul, going towards Damascus, is called to the apostleship, 1. The Jews lay wait for him, 23. Tabitha raised, 36.

AND Saul, yet [b]breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord, went unto the high priest,

2 And desired of him letters to Damascus[1] to the synagogues, that if he found any *[c] of this way, whether they were men or women, he might bring them bound unto Jerusalem.

3 And as he journeyed, he came near Damascus; and suddenly there shined round about him [f]a light from heaven:

4 And he fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying unto him, [h]Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?

5 And he said, Who art thou, Lord? And the Lord said, [l]I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest. It is hard for thee to kick against the pricks.

6 And he, trembling and astonished, said, [o]Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? And the Lord said unto him, Arise, and go into the city, [q]and it shall be told thee what thou must do.

7 And [r]the men which journeyed with him stood speechless, hearing a voice, but seeing no man.

8 And Saul arose from the earth; and when his eyes were opened, [s]he saw no man: but they led him by the hand, and brought him into Damascus.

9 And he was [t]three days without sight, and neither did eat nor drink.

10 ¶ And there was a certain disciple at Damascus, named Ananias; and to him said the Lord in a vision, Ananias. And he said, [x]Behold, I am here, Lord.

11 And the Lord said unto him, Arise, and go into the street which is called Straight, and enquire in the house of Judas for one called [b]Saul of Tarsus:[2] [c]for, behold, he prayeth, 12 And [d]hath seen in a vision a man named Ananias coming in, and putting his hand on him, that he might receive his sight.

13 Then Ananias answered, Lord, I have heard by many of this man, [f]how much evil he hath done to thy saints at Jerusalem:

14 And here he hath authority from the chief priests to bind all that [h]call on thy name.

15 But the Lord said unto him, Go thy way: for he is [k]a chosen vessel unto me, [l]to bear my name before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel:

16 For [n]I will shew him how great things he must suffer [o]for my name's sake.

17 And Ananias went his way, and entered into the house; and putting his hands on him, said, Brother Saul, [r]the Lord, even Jesus, that appeared[3] unto thee in the way as thou camest, hath sent me, [s]that thou mightest receive thy sight, [t]and be filled with the Holy Ghost.

18 And immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales; and he received sight forthwith, and arose, [x]and was baptized.

19 And when he had received meat, he was strengthened. Then was Saul certain days with the disciples which were at Damascus.

20 And [a]straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues, [b]that he is the Son of God.

21 But all that heard him were amazed, and said, [d]Is not this he that destroyed them which called on this name in Jerusalem, and came hither for that intent, that he might bring them bound unto the chief priests?

22 But Saul increased the more in strength, [g]and confounded the Jews which dwelt at Damascus, [h]proving that this is very Christ.

23 ¶ And after that many days were fulfilled,[4] the Jews took counsel to kill him:

24 But their laying await was known of Saul: and they watched the gates day and night to kill him.

25 Then the disciples took him by night, and let him down by the wall in a basket.

26 ¶ And when Saul was come to Jerusalem, [n]he assayed to join himself to the disciples: [o]but they were all afraid of him, and believed not that he was a disciple.

27 But Barnabas took him, and brought him to the apostles, and declared unto them [r]how he had seen the Lord in the way, and that he had spoken to him, [s]and how he had preached boldly at Damascus in the name of Jesus.

28 And he was with them coming in and going out at Jerusalem.

29 And he spake boldly in the name of the Lord Jesus, and disputed against the Grecians:[5] but they went about to slay him.

30 Which [z]when the brethren knew, they brought him down to Cesarea, and sent him forth to Tarsus.

but in office; lord chamberlain or steward of the household; and, either by the dignity of his place, or by his personal character, which commanded respect, he was "of great authority," and bore a mighty sway "under Candace, queen of the Ethiopians," who probably was successor to the queen of Sheba, who is called "the queen of the south;" that country being governed by queens, to whom Candace was a common name, as Pharaoh to the kings of Egypt; "he had the charge of all her treasure;" so great a trust did she repose in him. CHAP. IX. SAUL'S CONVERSION.—Ver. 3—22. When Saul drew near to Damascus, and doubtless pleased himself with the idea of the consternation which he was about to occasion, he was at once surrounded with a dazzling splendour, brighter than that of the meridian sun: and, falling to the ground with terror and amazement, he heard the voice of one calling to him by name repeatedly, and demanding why he persecuted him?—Saul, astonished by this expostulation, inquired who that glorious Lord was, who thus appeared and spake to him. To which it was answered that he was Jesus, whom he had no doubt often derided and blasphemed, and whom he now persecuted in his disciples. But as it would be hard or painful for a man to kick against the spikes, by which he could only wound himself, thus Saul could only injure and ruin himself by contending with one who possessed all power in heaven and earth. On hearing this, Saul was most exceedingly terrified and astonished; probably he dreaded the immediate vengeance of that glorious Lord whom he had so deeply offended: his guilt was undeniable, his pleas were all silenced; and the concurring influence of the Holy Spirit enlightening, convincing, and humbling his heart, he submitted without reserve, and only desired to know what the Lord Jesus would have him to do. If mercy could be extended to him, he was prepared to submit to any thing required of him. Accordingly, he was directed to go into the city and there to wait for further orders.—Saul's attendants, who at first fell to the ground, as well as he, having recovered themselves, rose up, but stood speechless with terror and amazement: they indeed heard a voice, though they understood nothing of what was spoken, but they saw no man; whereas it is probable that Saul in vision saw Jesus in human form, as Stephen had done; and we find from the account which he afterwards repeatedly gave of this transaction, that much more passed between Jesus and him than is here recorded. Saul now arose from the earth: but though his eyes were open, he found that the splendour with which he had been surrounded had blinded him. This effect proved the whole transaction to have been a reality, and not merely an illusion of the imagination. He was therefore led to Damascus; and he entered that city a harmless lamb, though he had set out to journey thither with the fierceness of a tiger! We are not informed whether his attendants were or were not converted; but this silence seems to indicate that they were not. After his arrival in the city, terror, remorse, anxiety, prayer, and divine visions, so occupied his mind, and his body also was so disordered, that he took no sustenance of any kind for three days; for it pleased the Lord to leave him so long to his reflections, before he sent him any relief, or further instruction.—It is impossible to describe what Saul thought, felt, and experienced, during this awful and important interval. There is, however, abundant reason to conclude, that the Holy Spirit enlightened his mind at this time with a just view of the Divine law, in its spirituality and excellency; and thus showed him the worthlessness of pharisaical righteousness, and his exceeding guilt, not only in persecuting the Messiah in his followers, but also in all his conduct, and the state of his heart. This seems to be intimated in several parts of his epistles, and indeed was essentially necessary to a right understanding of that gospel, which he was to spend the rest of his life in preaching.—Ananias had been a very devout person, according to the law of Moses, and was now become a disciple of Christ, and probably a preacher of the gospel; though it is not likely that he was one of the seventy disciples. To him the Lord Jesus appeared in a vision, and directed him to go to Saul of Tarsus, who was employed in fervent prayer, and was prepared by a coincident vision for his coming to restore his sight, of which he had lately been bereaved.—Saul, having been a strict Pharisee, had doubtless made long, formal, and constant prayers before this; but he now prayed as a sinner for salvation, and probably to that Saviour whom he had before persecuted. It was indeed most wonderful that he, who before breathed out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of Jesus, should now pour out humble prayers to him; and it was a sufficient proof that he had submitted and was changed, and therefore ought to be encouraged. Ananias, however, was astonished at hearing the name of Saul in this connection; he considered the message on which he was sent as replete with peril; and he spake as if Jesus had been ignorant of Saul's previous conduct, or the intent of his journey to Damascus.—Our Lord silenced Ananias's objection, and commanded him to go without delay; as this violent persecutor was a vessel of election, whom the Lord had foreknown, and meant to employ; that being filled with the treasure of the gospel, he might convey his name and doctrine among the nations of the earth, and even to their kings, as well as to his people the Jews.—Ananias, thus admonished, obeyed Christ without further hesitation. He no longer considered Saul as a persecutor, but as a disciple; and, laying his hands upon him, he called him "Brother

31 Then had the churches rest[g] throughout all Judea, and Galilee, and Samaria, and were edified; [e]and walking in the fear of the Lord, [f]and in the comfort of the Holy Ghost, [g]were multiplied.

32 ¶ And it came to pass, as Peter passed throughout all quarters, he came down also to [l]the saints which dwelt at Lydda.

33 And there he found a certain man named Eneas, which had kept his bed eight years, [m]and was sick of the palsy.

34 And Peter said unto him, Eneas, [n]Jesus Christ maketh thee whole: arise, and make thy bed. And he arose immediately.

35 And all that dwelt in Lydda[7] and Saron[8] saw him, and turned to the Lord.

36 ¶ Now there was at Joppa a certain disciple named Tabitha, which, by interpretation, is called *Dorcas: this woman was [r]full of good works and alms-deeds which she did.

37 And it came to pass in those days, that [t]she was sick, and died: whom when they had washed, they laid her in an upper chamber.

38 And forasmuch as [x]Lydda was nigh to Joppa, and the disciples had heard that Peter was there, they sent unto him two men, desiring him that he would not [†]delay to come to them.

39 Then Peter arose, and went with them. When he was come, they brought him into the upper chamber: and all the widows stood by him weeping, and shewing the coats and garments which Dorcas made while she was with them.

40 But Peter put them all forth, [d]and kneeled down, [e]and prayed; and, turning him to the body, said, Tabitha, arise. And [f]she opened her eyes: and when she saw Peter, she sat up.

41 And [g]he gave her his hand, and lifted her up; and when he had called the saints and widows, [l]he presented her alive.

42 And it was known throughout all Joppa; [k]and many believed in the Lord.

43 And it came to pass, that he tarried many days in Joppa with [l]one Simon a tanner.[9]

CHAP. X.

Cornelius sendeth for Peter, 1. Peter's vision, 9. He preacheth, 34. The Holy Ghost falleth on the hearers, 44.

THERE was a certain man in Cesarea called Cornelius, [b]a centurion of the band called the [c]Italian band.

2 A devout man, [e]and one that feared God with all his house, [g]which gave much alms to the people, [h]and prayed to God alway.

3 He saw in a vision evidently, about the ninth hour of the day, [l]an angel of God coming in to him, and saying unto him, Cornelius.

4 And when he looked on him, he was afraid, and said, [o]What is it, Lord? And he said unto him, [p]Thy prayers and thine alms are come up for a memorial before God.

5 And now send men to Joppa, and call for one Simon, [s]whose surname is Peter:

6 He lodgeth with one Simon a tanner, whose house is by the sea-side: [u]he shall tell thee what thou oughtest to do.

7 And when the angel which spake unto Cornelius was departed, he called two of his household servants, [y]and a devout soldier of them that waited on him continually;

8 And when he had declared all these things unto them, [z]he sent them to Joppa.

9 ¶ On the morrow, as they went on their journey, and drew nigh unto the city, [a]Peter went up upon the house-top to pray about the sixth hour.

10 And he became very hungry, and would have eaten: but, while they made ready, he fell into a trance,

11 And [e]saw heaven opened, [f]and a certain vessel descending unto him, as it had been a great sheet[1] knit at the four corners, and let down to the earth;

12 Wherein [g]were all manner of four-footed beasts of the earth, and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air.

13 And there came a voice to him, [h]Rise, Peter; kill, and eat.

14 But Peter said, [i]Not so, Lord; [k]for I have never eaten any thing that is common or unclean.

15 And the voice spake unto him again the second time, [l]What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common.

16 This was done thrice:[2] and the vessel was received up again into heaven.

17 Now, while Peter doubted in himself what this vision which he had seen should mean, behold, the men which were sent from Cornelius had made enquiry for Simon's house, and stood before the gate,

18 And called, and asked whether Simon, which was surnamed Peter, were lodged there.

19 ¶ While Peter thought on the vision, the [q]Spirit said unto him, Behold, three men seek thee.

20 Arise therefore, and get thee down, and go with them, doubting nothing: [s]for I have sent them.

21 Then Peter went down to the men which were sent unto him from Cornelius, and said, Behold, I am he whom ye seek: [u]what is the cause wherefore ye are come?[3]

22 And they said, [x]Cornelius the centurion, [y]a just man, and one that feareth God, and [z]of good report among all the nation of the Jews, was warned from God by an holy angel to send for thee into his house, and to hear words of thee.

Saul."—At the words of Ananias, however, there fell from the eyes of Saul, as it were, scales, which had occasioned his blindness. These had been an emblem of the benighted state of his soul, amidst the full light of the gospel; as the recovery of his sight, by the power and mercy of Christ, were of his spiritual illumination. When this token of reconciliation had been granted him, he arose, and, by receiving baptism, professed himself a disciple of the Lord Jesus; and having thus obtained hope and peace, he took proper refreshment, and found his vigour and strength of body restored to him.—Scott.

DORCAS.—Ver. 39. The commendation of Tabitha was like her own virtues, not in word, but in deed. Here were no encomiums of her in orations, or poems inscribed to her memory; but "the widows showed the coats and garments which she made" for them, and bestowed upon them "while she was with them." It was the comfort of Job, while he lived, that "the loins of the poor blessed him," because they were "warmed with the fleece of his sheep," Job xxxi. 20. And here it was the credit of Tabitha, when she was dead, that the backs of the widows praised her for the garments which she made them. And those are certainly best praised, "whose own works praise them in the gates," whether the words of others do or no. And it is much more honourable to clothe a company of decrepit widows with needful clothing for night and day, who will pray for their benefactors when they do not see them, than to clothe a company of lazy footmen with rich liveries, who perhaps behind their backs will curse them that clothe them, Eccl. vii. 21, and it is what all that are wise and good will take a greater pleasure in; for goodness is true greatness, and will pass better in the account shortly. What a grateful sense the poor had of her kindness; "They showed the coats," not ashamed to own that they were indebted to her for the clothes on their backs. Their showing the coats and garments which Dorcas made, tended to the praise not only of her charity, but of her industry, according to the character of the virtuous woman, that she "lays her hands to the spindle," or at least to the needle, and then "stretches out her hand to the poor," and "reaches forth her hand to the needy," of what she has worked; and when God and the poor have thus had their due, "she makes herself coverings of tapestry," and "her" own "clothing is silk and purple." Prov. xxxi. 19—22.—Henry.

CHAP. X. CORNELIUS.—Ver. 2. He was no idolater, no worshipper of false gods or images, nor allowed himself in any of those immoralities which the greater part of the Gentile world were given up to, to punish them for their idolatry. 1. He was possessed with a principle of regard to the true and living God; he was "a devout man, and one that feared God;" he believed in one God, the Creator of heaven and earth, and had a reverence for his glory and authority, and a dread of offending him by sin; and though he was a soldier, it was no diminution to the credit of his valour to tremble before God. 2. He kept up religion in his family; he "feared God with all his house." He would not admit any idolaters under his roof; but took care that not himself only, but all his, should serve the Lord. Every good man will do what he can that those about him may be good too. 3. He was a very charitable man; he "gave much alms to the people," the people of the Jews, notwithstanding the singularities of their religion. Though he was a Gentile, he was willing to contribute to the relief of one that was a real object of charity, without asking what religion he was of. 4. He was much in prayer; he "prayed to God always." He kept up stated times for prayer, and was constant to them. Note, Wherever the fear of God rules in the heart, it will appear both in works of charity and of piety, and neither will excuse us from the other.

DEVOUT SOLDIERS.—Ver. 7. Observe, A devout centurion had devout soldiers; a little devotion commonly goes a great way with soldiers, but there would be more of it in the soldiers, if there were but more of it in the commanders. Officers in an army, that have such a great power over the soldiers, as we find the centurion had, Matt. viii. 9, have a great opportunity of promoting religion, at least of restraining vice and profaneness, in those under their command, if they would but improve it. Observe, When this centurion was to choose some of his soldiers to attend his person, and to be always about him, he pitched upon such of them as were devout; they shall be preferred and countenanced, to encourage others to be so.—Henry.

PETER'S VISION.—Ver. 9—16. When the messengers of Cornelius drew near to Joppa, Peter had retired for prayer to some convenient solitude, which he had upon the top of the house, it being then about noon; for, like David and Daniel, he prayed at least three times a-day. Whilst he was there he became uncommonly hungry, and would gladly have eaten; but before his ordinary repast was ready, he fell into a trance or ecstacy; in which his senses were closed to external objects, but invisible things were presented to his mind, as if he saw them with his eyes. In this state there appeared to him a great vessel, resembling a vast sheet or wrapper, of which the four corners were fastened together; this seemed to come down from heaven to the earth; and upon further observing it, he found that it contained all kinds of living creatures. At the same time he heard a voice directing him to satisfy his hunger, by immediately killing and eating whatever he chose. To this he decidedly objected, though he supposed it to be the voice of the Lord; as he had always observed the ceremonial law, in this matter, with the most scrupulous exactness. To this objection, it was replied, "What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common," or polluted. To impress his mind more deeply, and to show the certainty of the inference to be drawn from it, the transaction

23 Then called he them in, and lodged them. And on the morrow Peter went away with them, and certain brethren from Joppa accompanied him.

24 And [o]the morrow after they entered into Cesarea. And Cornelius waited for them, [f]and had called together his kinsmen and near friends.

25 And as Peter was coming in, Cornelius met him, [g]and fell down at his feet, and worshipped[4] him.

26 But Peter took him up, saying, [h]Stand up; I myself also am a man.

27 And as he talked with him, he went in, and found many that were come together.

28 And he said unto them, Ye know how that it is an unlawful thing for a man that is a Jew to keep company, or come unto one of another nation; [l]but God hath shewed me that I should not call any man common or unclean.

29 Therefore came I unto you without gainsaying, as soon as I was sent for: [n]I ask therefore for what intent ye have sent for me?

30 And Cornelius said, Four days ago [p]I was fasting until this hour; and at the ninth hour I prayed in my house, [q]and, behold, a man stood before me in bright clothing,

31 And said, Cornelius, [r]thy prayer is heard, and thine alms [s]are had in remembrance in the sight of God.

32 Send therefore to Joppa, and call hither Simon, whose surname is Peter; he is lodged in the house of one Simon a tanner by the sea-side: who, when he cometh, shall speak unto thee.

33 Immediately therefore I sent to thee; and thou hast well done that thou art come. Now therefore [u]are we all here present before God, to hear all things that are commanded thee of God.

34 ¶ Then Peter opened his mouth, and said, [y]Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons:

35 But in every nation he that [a]feareth him, and worketh righteousness, [b]is accepted of him.

36 The [c]word which God sent unto the children of Israel, [d]preaching peace[5] by Jesus Christ; (he is Lord of all;)

37 That word, I say, ye know, [g]which was published throughout all Judea, and began from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached;

38 How [i]God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Ghost, and with power; [k]who went about doing good, [l]and healing all that were oppressed of the devil: [m]for God was with him.

39 And we are witnesses of all things which he did both in the land of the Jews, and in Jerusalem; [o]whom they slew, and hanged on a tree:

40 Him [p]God raised up the third day, and shewed him openly;

41 Not to all the people, but unto witnesses chosen before of God, [r]even to us, who did eat and drink with him after he rose from the dead.

42 And [s]he commanded us to preach unto the people, and to testify [t]that it is he which was ordained of God to be the Judge of quick and dead.

43 To [u]him gave all the prophets witness, that through his name, [y]whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins.

44 ¶ While Peter yet spake these words, [z]the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word.

45 And they of the circumcision which believed were astonished, as many as came with Peter, because that on the Gentiles also was poured out the gift of the Holy Ghost.

46 For they heard them [c]speak with tongues, and magnify God. Then answered Peter, 47 Can any man forbid water,[6] that these should not be baptized, which have received the Holy Ghost as well as we?

48 And [c]he commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord. Then prayed they him to tarry certain days.

Peter accused for going to the Gentiles, 1. The gospel is spread, 19. Agabus prophesieth, 27.

AND [a]the apostles and brethren that were in Judea heard that [b]the Gentiles had also received the word of God.

2 And when Peter was come up to Jerusalem, they that were of the circumcision contended with him,[1]

3 Saying, [d]Thou wentest in to men uncircumcised, and didst eat with them.

4 But Peter [e]rehearsed the matter from the beginning, and expounded it by order unto them, saying,

5 I was in the city of Joppa praying: and in a trance I saw a vision, A certain vessel descend, as it had been a great sheet, let down from heaven by four corners; [h]and it came even to me:

6 Upon the which when I had fastened mine eyes, I considered, and saw four-footed beasts of the earth, and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air.

7 And I heard a voice saying unto me, Arise, Peter; slay, and eat.

8 But I said, Not so, Lord: for nothing [k]common or unclean hath at any time entered into my mouth.

9 But the voice answered me again from

[1] We here observe, that the Christians who had been converted from Judaism took upon them to call St Peter to account. But surely they would not have dared to do this, or to contend with him, if he had been then acknowledged for supreme head of the church, and infallible judge of controversies. That doctrine was certainly unknown in those days. Nor does St Peter's conduct on this occasion at all countenance such an opinion; for, instead of silencing them by his authority, he patiently pleads his cause before them, and convinces their understandings by his reasoning.—MANN.

was thrice repeated, and then the whole vision disappeared.—The same law which established the distinction between clean and unclean meats, had also marked that between Jews and Gentiles, and restricted the intercourse between them: but the pride and bigotry of the Jews had carried the separation further than the law required; and even produced a contempt of the Gentiles, however friendly or conscientious. The law also concerning the distinction of meats and of animals had both been an emblem of, and a means of preserving a distinction between clean and unclean persons. To inform a Jew, that God had cleansed those animals that had been declared unclean, and that they were no longer to be deemed common, or rejected as such, was in fact to announce the abrogation of the Mosaic law, and the introduction of another and more enlarged dispensation: and it plainly intimated, that uncircumcised Gentiles, whom God had cleansed by faith and grace, were to be received into the church, without regard to the ceremonial law, or to their uncleanness according to it.

GOD'S IMPARTIALITY.—Ver. 34, 35. The circumstances of this transaction so impressed the apostle's mind, that he opened his discourse by allowing, that he had been erroneously prejudiced in favour of the Jews and against the Gentiles: for he was now assured, that "God was no respecter of persons." To respect persons, is entirely different from discriminating characters, or conferring unmerited favours on one man, and not on another. A judge respects persons, if he condemns one and acquits another, or decides in favour of the injurious party, from partiality to his friend, or to one of his own nation, sect, or party: yet in private life, he may send a present to what friend he pleases, or dispense his alms to what poor persons he chooses, without giving others a ground for charging him with respect of persons. If the Lord had accepted a man's worship because he was a Jew, and rejected that of another man of exactly the same dispositions and character, because he was a Gentile; there would have been some cause to assert, that he was "a respecter of persons:" but if he had favoured a proud, wicked, or hypocritical Jew, merely on account of his circumcision, or relation to Abraham; and rejected a humble, pious, believing, sincere worshipper, because of his uncircumcision, or Gentile extraction; there would have been an evident ground for the charge. Yet the Jews in general carried so far their ideas of God's special favour to their nation, as to involve these consequences. It does not, however, follow that God will accept from any man that service, which is destitute of spiritual good.—Scott.

BAPTISM OF CORNELIUS AND HIS COMPANY.—Ver. 44—48. Peter owns God's work in [illegible] those on whom the Holy Ghost fell. Observe, 1. Though they had received [illegible] yet it was [illegible] they should be baptized; though God is not tied to [illegible] yet [illegible] ordinary rule sets us above them, but [illegible] oblige us so much the more to conform to them. 2. Though they were Gentiles, yet, having received the Holy Ghost, they might be admitted to baptism; "Can any man," though ever so rigid a Jew, "forbid water, that these should not be baptized, who have received the Holy Ghost as well as we?" The argument is conclusive; can we deny the sign to those who have received the thing signified? Are not those on whom God has bestowed the grace of the covenant plainly entitled to the seals of the covenant? Surely they that have "received the Spirit as well as we," ought to receive baptism as well as we; for it becomes us to follow God's indications, and to take those into communion with us, whom he hath taken into communion with himself. God hath promised to pour his Spirit upon the seed of the faithful, upon their offspring; and who then can forbid water, that they should not be baptized, who have "received the promise of the Holy Ghost as well as we?" Now it appears why the Spirit was given them before they were baptized—because otherwise Peter could not have persuaded himself to baptize them, any more than to have preached to them, if he had not been ordered to do it by a vision; at least, he could not have avoided the censure of "those of the circumcision that believed." Thus is there one unusual step of divine grace taken after another to bring the Gentiles into the church. How well is it for us that the grace of a good God is so much more extensive than the charity of some good men! 3. Peter did not then baptize them himself, but "commanded them to be baptized." It is probable that some of the brethren who came with him, did it by his order, and that he declined it for the same reason that Paul did—lest those that were baptized by him should think the better of themselves for it; or he should seem to "have baptized in his own name."—Scott.

CHAP. XI. EARLY MISSIONARIES.—Ver. 19. The first preachers of the gospel there, were such as were dispersed from Jerusalem, by persecution, that persecution which arose five or six years ago, (as some compute,) at the time of Stephen's death. "They travelled as far as Phenice" and other places "preaching the word." Therefore God suffered them to be persecuted, that thereby they might be dispersed in the world, sown as seed to God, in order to their bringing forth much fruit. Thus what was intended for the hurt of the church, was made to work for its good: as Jacob's curse of the tribe of Levi, ("I will divide them in Jacob, and scatter them in Israel,") was turned into a blessing. The enemies designed to scatter and lose them, Christ designed to scatter and use them. Thus the wrath of man is made to praise God.

heaven, [m]What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common.

10 And this was done three times: and all were drawn up again into heaven.

11 And, behold, immediately there were three men already come unto the house where I was, sent from Cesarea unto me.

12 And [p]the Spirit bade me go with them, nothing doubting. Moreover, these six brethren accompanied me, and we entered into the man's house:

13 And [q]he shewed us how he had seen an angel in his house, which stood and said unto him, Send men to Joppa, and call for Simon, whose surname is Peter;

14 Who shall tell thee words, whereby thou and [x]all thy house shall be saved.[2]

15 And as I began to speak, [z]the Holy Ghost fell on them, [a]as on us at the beginning.

16 Then [c]remembered I the word of the Lord, [d]how that he said, John indeed baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost.

17 Forasmuch then [e]as God gave them the like gift as he did unto us, who believed on the Lord Jesus Christ, [f]what was I, that I could withstand God?

18 When they heard these things, they held their peace, [h]and glorified God, saying, Then [i]hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life.

19 ¶ Now they which were scattered abroad, upon the persecution that arose about Stephen, travelled as far as [m]Phenice,[3] and [n]Cyprus, and [o]Antioch, preaching the word [p]to none but unto the Jews only.

20 And some of them were men of Cyprus and [q]Cyrene, which, when they were come to Antioch, spake unto [r]the Grecians, [s]preaching the Lord Jesus.

21 And [t]the hand of the Lord was with them: [u]and a great number believed, and [x]turned unto the Lord.

22 ¶ Then tidings of these things came unto the ears of the church which was in Jerusalem; and they sent forth Barnabas, that he should go as far as Antioch:

23 Who, when he came, and had [a]seen the grace of God,[4] was glad, and exhorted them all, that with purpose of heart they would [d]cleave unto the Lord.

24 For he was a good man, and [f]full of the Holy Ghost and of faith: [g]and much people was added unto the Lord.

25 Then departed Barnabas to Tarsus, for to seek Saul:

26 And when he had found him, he brought him unto Antioch. And it came to pass, that a whole year they assembled themselves *with the church, and taught much people. And the disciples [k]were called Christians first in Antioch.

27 ¶ And in these days came prophets from Jerusalem unto Antioch.

28 And there stood up one of them, [m]named Agabus, and signified by the Spirit that there should be [n]great dearth throughout all the world:[5] which came to pass in the days of [o]Claudius Cesar.

29 Then the disciples, every man according to his ability, determined [q]to send relief unto the brethren which dwelt in Judea:

30 Which also they did, and sent it to the elders by the hands of Barnabas and Saul.

Herod persecuteth the Christians, 1. His pride, and miserable death, 20.

NOW, about that time, Herod the king *stretched forth his hands [a]to vex certain of the church.

2 And he killed [b]James, the brother of John, with the sword.[1]

3 And because he saw it pleased the Jews, [c]he proceeded further to take Peter also. (Then were the days of unleavened bread.)

4 And when he had apprehended him, [g]he put him in prison, and delivered him to four quaternions of soldiers to keep him; [i]intending after Easter to bring him forth to the people.

5 Peter therefore was kept in prison; but †prayer was [k]made without ceasing of the church unto God for him.

6 And when Herod would have brought him forth, [l]the same night Peter was sleeping between two soldiers, [m]bound with two chains: [n]and the keepers before the door kept the prison.

7 And, behold, [o]the angel of the Lord came upon him, [p]and a light shined in the prison: and he smote Peter on the side, and raised him up,[2] saying, [q]Arise up quickly. And his chains fell off from his hands.

8 And the angel said unto him, Gird thyself, and bind on thy sandals: and so he did. And he saith unto him, Cast thy garment about thee, and follow me.

9 And he went out, and followed him; and wist not that it was true which was done by the angel; but thought he saw a vision.

10 When they were past the first and the second ward, they came unto the iron gate that leadeth unto the city; which opened to them of his own accord: and they went out, and passed on through one street; and forthwith the angel departed from him.

11 And when Peter was come to himself, he said, Now I know of a surety, [a]that the Lord hath sent his angel, [b]and hath delivered to the Lord." Note, Those that have "turned to the Lord," are concerned to "cleave unto the Lord," not to fall off from following him, not to flag and tire in following him. To cleave to the Lord Jesus, is to live a life of dependence upon him, and devotedness to him; not only to hold him fast, but to hold fast by him, to "be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might." 2. To cleave to him with purpose of heart, with an intelligent, firm, and deliberate resolution, founded upon good grounds, and fixed upon that foundation, Ps. cviii. 1. It is to bind our souls with a bond to be the Lord's, and to say, as Ruth, "Entreat me not to leave" him, or to return from following after him. Herein he gave a proof of his good character. "He was a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost, and of faith," and approved himself so upon this occasion. 1. He showed himself to be a man of a very sweet, affable, courteous disposition, that had himself, and could teach others, the art of obliging. "He was" not only a "righteous man," but a "good man," a good-tempered man. Ministers that are so, recommend themselves and their doctrine very much to the good opinion of those that are without. He was a good man, that is, a charitable man; so he had approved himself, when he sold an estate, and gave the money to the poor, chap. iv. 37. 2. By this it appeared that he was richly endued with the gifts and graces of the Spirit. The goodness of his natural disposition would not have qualified him for this service, if he had not been "full of the Holy Ghost, and so full of power, by the Spirit of the Lord." 3. He was full of faith, full of the christian faith himself, and therefore desirous to propagate it among others; full of the grace of faith, and full of the fruits of that faith that works by love. He was "sound in the faith," and therefore pressed them to be so.

Peter's Vision and Baptism of Cornelius.—See previous Chapter.

The Name Christian.—Ver. 23, 24. Barnabas saw the grace of God, in its happy effects on the conduct and disposition of these converted Gentiles, and this greatly rejoiced his benevolent mind. But he was aware that their faith would be assaulted by manifold temptations and persecutions; and that they would be discouraged through the prejudices of their Jewish brethren; he therefore exhorted, encouraged, and besought them, by every argument and motive that he could devise, to cleave to the Lord Jesus, or abide with him, by a continued exercise of faith, and a bold profession of his name and obedience to his commandments, whatever they might be called to renounce, venture, or suffer for his sake; assured that he would not fail to accept, comfort, support, and reward them. For he was a good man, a person of remarkable affection, philanthropy, and genuine candour, as well as eminent for the miraculous gifts of the Holy Spirit, and the exercise of a vigorous faith in the midst of danger and persecution. So that, through his labours, and those of the other teachers, great accessions were made to the number of Christians at Antioch; and a flourishing church was planted there, from which preachers were afterwards sent forth to evangelize the nations.

The Famine foretold by Agabus.—Ver. 27—30. These prophets were evidently endowed by the Holy Spirit with the power of foretelling future events; and were a superior order of extraordinary ministers, however the word may sometimes be used, chap. xxi. 10, 12.—The scarcity predicted by Agabus was to be throughout all the world, as the Roman empire was ostentatiously called. Some, indeed, would explain the original word, of the land of Judea and Galilee, &c.; but the expression seems incapable of that meaning: and the famine might be very general, and severely felt in the various provinces of the empire, though some places might be less straitened than others—"Eusebius saith of this famine, that it oppressed almost the whole empire; and that it was recorded by historians most adverse to our religion; that is, by Suetonius, in the life of Claudius, who saith, it happened (ob assiduas sterilitates,) through a long barrenness. Josephus saith that it raged so much in Judea, that many perished for want of victuals: and Dion Cassius, that it was a very great famine."—[Whitby.]—Scott.

CHAP. XII. Martyrdom of James.—Ver. 2. James was slain "with the sword," his head was cut off with a sword, which was looked upon by the Romans to be a more disgraceful way of being beheaded than with an axe; so Lorinus. Beheading was not ordinarily used among the Jews; but when kings gave verbal orders for private and sudden executions, this manner of death was used, as most expeditious; and it is probable that this Herod killed James, as the other Herod killed John Baptist, privately in the prison. It is strange that we have not a more full and particular account of the martyrdom of this great apostle, as we had of Stephen. But even this short mention of the thing is sufficient to let us know, that the first preachers of the gospel were so well assured of the truth of it, that they sealed it with their blood, and thereby have encouraged us, if at any time we are called to it, to resist unto blood too. The Old Testament martyrs were "slain with the sword," Heb. xi. 37, and Christ "came not to send peace, but a sword," Matt. x. 34; in preparation for which we must arm ourselves with the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God, and then we need not fear what the sword of men can do unto us.—Henry.

Peter's Miraculous Deliverance.—Ver. 5—11. The time of Peter's imprisonment gave the church an opportunity, not of concerting measures for his rescue, but of pouring out their fervent prayers for the preservation of his useful life. Probably they me out of the hand of Herod, and from all the expectation of the people of the Jews.

12 And when he had considered the thing, he came to the house of Mary the mother of John, whose surname was Mark; [f]where many were gathered together praying.[3]

13 And as Peter knocked at the door of the gate, a damsel came to [‡]hearken, named Rhoda.

14 And when she knew Peter's voice, she opened not the gate for gladness, but ran in, and told how Peter stood before the gate.

15 And they said unto her, [l]Thou art mad. But she constantly affirmed that it was even so. Then said they, [k]It is his angel.

16 But Peter continued knocking: and when they had opened the door, and saw him, they were astonished.

17 But he, beckoning unto them with the hand to hold their peace, [m]declared unto them how the Lord had brought him out of the prison. And he said, Go shew these things unto James, and to the brethren. And he departed, and went into another place.

18 Now, as soon as it was day, there was no small stir among the soldiers, what was become of Peter.

19 And when Herod had sought for him, and found him not, he examined the keepers, and [s]commanded that they should be put to death. And he went down from Judea to Cesarea,[4] and there abode.

20 ¶ And Herod was highly [§]displeased with them of Tyre and Sidon: [x]but they came with one accord to him, and, having made Blastus [‖]the king's chamberlain their friend, desired peace; because their country was nourished by the king's country.

21 And upon a set day Herod, arrayed in royal apparel, sat upon his throne, and made an oration unto them.

22 And the people gave a shout, saying, It is the voice of a god, and not of a man.

23 And immediately [a]the angel of the Lord smote him, [b]because he gave not God the glory:[5] and he was eaten of worms, and gave up the ghost.

24 ¶ But [d]the word of God grew and multiplied.

25 And Barnabas and Saul returned from Jerusalem, when they had fulfilled their *ministry, and took with them John, whose surname was Mark.

CHAP. XIII.

Paul and Barnabas go to the Gentiles, 1. The Gentiles believe, 42. The Jews blaspheme, 45.

NOW there were in the church that was at Antioch certain prophets and teachers; as Barnabas, and Simeon that was called Niger, and [d]Lucius of Cyrene, and Manaen, *which had been brought up with [e]Herod the tetrarch, [f]and Saul.

2 As they ministered to the Lord, and fasted, [l]the Holy Ghost said, [k]Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them.

3 And when [m]they had fasted and prayed, and laid their hands on them, they sent them away.

4 ¶ So they, [o]being sent forth by the Holy Ghost, departed unto Seleucia,[1] and from thence they sailed to [p]Cyprus.

5 And when they were at Salamis, they preached the word of God in the synagogues of the Jews: and they had also John to their minister.

6 And when they had gone through the isle unto Paphos,[2] they found a certain sorcerer, [u]a false prophet, a Jew, [x]whose name was Bar-jesus:

7 Which was with the deputy of the country, Sergius Paulus, a prudent man; who called for Barnabas and Saul, and desired to hear the word of God.

8 But Elymas the sorcerer (for so is his name by interpretation) withstood them, seeking to turn away the deputy[3] from the faith.

9 Then Saul, (who also is called Paul,) [d]filled with the Holy Ghost, set his eyes on him,

10 And said, O full of all subtilty and all mischief, [g]thou child of the devil, thou enemy of all righteousness, [h]wilt thou not cease to pervert [l]the right ways of the Lord?

11 And now, behold, [k]the hand of the Lord is upon thee, [l]and thou shalt be blind, not seeing the sun for a season. And immediately there fell on him a mist and a darkness; and he went about seeking some to lead him by the hand.

12 Then the deputy, [o]when he saw what was done, believed, being astonished at the doctrine of the Lord.

13 Now when Paul and his company loosed from Paphos, they came to Perga in Pamphylia:[4] and John, departing from them, returned to Jerusalem.

14 ¶ But when they departed from Perga, they came to Antioch in Pisidia, and [u]went into the synagogue on the sabbath-day, and sat down.[5]

15 And after the reading of the law and the prophets, the rulers of the synagogue sent unto them, saying, Ye men and brethren, [a]if ye have any word of exhortation for the people, say on.

16 Then Paul stood up, and beckoning with his hand, said, Men of Israel, [d]and ye that fear God, give audience.

met together in different places for that purpose; and one company succeeding to another, there was literally no intermission of their prayers for him, day or night. Yet he was free from anxiety about the event; and the night before his intended execution, whilst others were earnestly praying for his life, he went to sleep with the utmost composure; though his posture must have been very uneasy, being chained with two chains, one on each hand, to the two soldiers between whom he lay. Even the great light, which attended the angel's entrance into the dungeon, did not immediately awake him; but when the angel, gently smiting his side, caused him to arise, he found his chains immediately loosed. Yet neither the voice of the angel, the light in the prison, the falling of the chains, nor the preparation of Peter to depart, was noticed by the keepers, who were supernaturally thrown into a deep sleep. Nay, Peter himself supposed that he only saw a vision, as he had sometimes before done; and that it was not a reality. The wards or watches here mentioned, seem to have included the stated guard of the prison, as well as the other soldiers appointed to keep Peter: these too were rendered insensible to the whole transaction. The great iron gate separated the environs of the prison from the city, and was doubtless barred in the strongest manner; yet it opened of its own accord! When the angel had led Peter out of the reach of his keepers, and into a part of the city which he knew, he departed from him, and then he became sensible of the reality of his deliverance.

DEATH OF HEROD.—Ver. 25. Many heathen princes had received, nay, arrogated to themselves, divine honours; but it was far more horrible impiety in Herod, who was acquainted with the word and worship of the living God, to accept and be pleased with such idolatrous and sacrilegious adorations; without rebuking the blasphemy, and giving God the glory. Immediately therefore an angel smote him with an incurable disease; so that his bowels bred worms, which consumed them; and after lying for some time a most abject and loathsome spectacle, in excruciating pain, he died in the most degraded and wretched manner that can be conceived. Josephus ascribes his miserable end to the judgment of God on him for the impiety here recorded; but he suppresses some circumstances, probably from regard to his family; and it was reserved for an inspired writer to inform us, that his disease arose from a stroke inflicted by an angel.—It is, however, remarkable, that the sacred historian does not represent the awful death of Herod as a judgment on him for persecuting the church; though he had so inviting and so just an occasion of doing it: but, on the contrary, assigns another cause of that event. This is a striking contrast to the usual practice of enthusiasts; who generally, without adequate reason, take pleasure in representing all the calamities which befall those who even in a slight degree oppose them, as divine judgments on them for so doing. Many persecutors have ended their days by a similar disease, which has rendered them as loathsome whilst alive, as any putrid corpse can be; as well as filled them with the most intolerable pains.—After the death of Herod, the word of God continued to grow and multiply; like seed, the produce of which is sown again next year, and so on, from year to year.—Scott.

CHAP. XIII. DESIGNATION OF EARLY MISSIONARIES.—Ver. 1—3. Whilst the office-bearers in the church were employed in the sacred ministry, and were observing a season of solemn fasting and prayer, in order to seek a blessing on their labours, and direction concerning their future progress; they were ordered by an immediate suggestion of the Holy Spirit, to separate Barnabas and Saul for the work unto which he had called them. This language evidently implies the personality and deity of the Holy Spirit.—The work intended was the preaching of the gospel to the Gentiles at large, of which Saul had some previous information when he was converted, chap. xxvi. 17, 18.—The prophets and teachers, in laying their hands on them with fasting and prayer, acted by immediate orders from the Holy Spirit; thus giving a public testimony to their assurance of their divine appointment to that service, and expressing fervent desires for their success in it. Accordingly in the next verse, they are said to have been sent forth by the Holy Ghost.—Barnabas and Saul had for a considerable time been ministers of the word: so that this imposition of hands could not be for the purpose of ordaining them; nor does it appear, that any spiritual gift, or new authority, was conferred by it.—St. Paul was "an apostle, not by man," &c.: his apostolical office could not then be conferred at this time; but his appointment by the Lord Jesus himself, as the apostle of the Gentiles, might thus be publicly acknowledged in the principal church of Gentile converts. Barnabas also is afterwards spoken of as an apostle, chap. xiv. 4—14. Perhaps he was appointed by the Holy Spirit to that office, on this occasion, with some reference to the martyrdom of James, by which the number of the apostles was diminished.

ELYMAS THE SORCERER.—Ver. 6—12. The apostles went through the large and populous island of Cyprus, preaching in most of the cities as they had opportunity, (doubtless with some success, both among the Jews and the Gentiles,) till they arrived at Paphos, on the opposite side of it. This city was celebrated for the temple there dedicated to Venus, and infamous for the licentiousness practised at it. Here the apostles met with a noted sorcerer, or magician, named Bar-jesus, or the son of Jesus, or Joshua; this man, being a Jew, pretended to be a prophet, and, confirming his pretensions by magical arts, was endeavouring to gain the attention of the proconsul of Cyprus, (or the Roman governor appointed by the senate.) The proconsul, however, was an intelligent and considerate

21 And afterward they desired a king: and God gave unto them [q]Saul the son of Cis, a man of the tribe of Benjamin, by the space of forty years.[6]

26 Men and brethren, children of the stock of Abraham, [e]and whosoever among you feareth God, [f]to you is the word of this salvation sent.[8]

27 For they that dwell at Jerusalem, and their rulers, because they knew him not, nor yet the voices[9] of the prophets [i]which are read every sabbath-day, [k]they have fulfilled them in condemning him.

28 And [l]though they found no cause of death in him, yet desired they Pilate that he should be slain.

29 And when they had fulfilled all that was written of him, [n]they took him down from the tree, and laid him in a sepulchre.

30 But [o]God raised him from the dead:

31 And he was seen many days of them which came up with him from Galilee to Jerusalem, who are his witnesses unto the people.

32 And we declare unto you glad tidings, [s]how that the promise which was made unto the fathers, 33 God hath fulfilled the same unto us their children, in that he hath raised up Jesus again; as it is also written in the second psalm, [t]Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee.

36 For David, after he had [†]served his own generation by the will of God, fell on sleep, and was laid unto his fathers, and saw corruption:

37 But [c]he, whom God raised again, saw no corruption.

38 ¶ Be it known unto you therefore, men and brethren, [g]that through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins:[11]

39 And [b]by him all that believe are justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses.

40 Beware therefore, lest that come upon you which is spoken of in the prophets;

41 Behold, ye despisers, and wonder, and perish: [n]for I work a work in your days, a work which ye shall in no wise believe, though a man declare it unto you.

42 ¶ And when the Jews were gone out of the synagogue, the Gentiles besought that these words might be preached to them [‡]the next sabbath.

43 Now, when the congregation was broken up, many of the Jews and religious proselytes followed Paul and Barnabas: who, speaking to them, persuaded them to continue in [z]the grace of God.[12]

44 ¶ And the next sabbath-day came almost the whole city together to hear the word of God.

45 But when the Jews saw the multitudes, they were filled with envy, and spake against those things which were spoken by Paul, contradicting and blaspheming.

46 Then Paul and Barnabas waxed bold,[13] and said, [z]It was necessary that the word of God should first have been spoken to you: but seeing ye put it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we [b]turn to the Gentiles:

47 For [c]so hath the Lord commanded us, saying, [d]I have set thee to be a light of the Gentiles, [e]that thou shouldest be for salvation unto the ends of the earth.

48 And when the Gentiles heard this, they were glad, and glorified the word of the Lord: and as many as were ordained to eternal life believed.

49 And the word of the Lord was published throughout all the region.

50 But the Jews stirred up the devout and honourable women,[14] and the chief men of the city, and raised persecution against Paul person, who desired to know the truth in such interesting matters; and having heard of Saul and Barnabas, he invited them to come, and declare the word of God unto him. But Bar-jesus, (who was also called Elymas, from an Arabic word signifying a sorcerer, as it is generally supposed;) foreseeing the ruin of his own character and influence, in case the proconsul should embrace the gospel, did all he could to oppose the apostles, and to prejudice him against their doctrine. It may be supposed, that he disputed against the truth of the facts which they testified, misrepresented the nature and tendency of their doctrine, insinuated many things in a subtle and malicious manner against their intentions, and to their disadvantage; and perhaps he performed some of his lying miracles, to support his own pretensions against them. But Saul, under the immediate influence of the Holy Spirit, fixed his eyes upon him, as expressing his abhorrence of his crimes; declared him to be a man, full of subtlety, malignity, and mischief; a child of the devil, that bare his image and supported his cause; and an enemy of all righteousness, notwithstanding his plausible pretences; at the same time sharply expostulating with him, for thus pertinaciously misrepresenting and vilifying the right ways of the Lord, that he might countenance his own vile impostures! He then denounced sentence upon him, as in the name of God, that he should be struck blind, so that, "for a season," he should be unable to see the light of the sun; though in case he repented, the calamity might at length be removed, as a similar one had been the case of the apostle himself. This sentence was immediately executed by the power of God; and being enveloped in darkness, and filled with horror and confusion, he sought some person to lead him out of the place; an apt emblem of the benighted state of his soul! This evident victory of the apostles over their opponent, being connected with the other evidences of the truth of the gospel, and made effectual by the power of the Holy Spirit, induced the proconsul to embrace and profess Christianity: for he was astonished both at the energy of the doctrine upon his heart and conscience, and at the power of God by which it was confirmed.—Scott.

Paul—Change of Name.—Ver. 9. "Saul who also is called Paul." Saul was his name as he was "a Hebrew," and "of the tribe of Benjamin;" Paul was his name as he was a citizen of Rome. Hitherto we have had him mostly conversant among the Jews, and therefore called by his Jewish name; but now when he is sent forth among the Gentiles, he is called by his Roman name, to put somewhat of a reputation upon him in the Roman cities; Paulus being a very common name among them. But, some think, he was never called Paul till now that he was instrumental in the conversion of Sergius Paulus to the faith of Christ, and that he took that name Paulus as a memorial of that victory obtained by the gospel of Christ; as among the Romans he that had conquered a country, took his denomination from it, as Germanicus, Britannicus, Africanus; or rather, Sergius Paulus himself gave him the name, Paulus, in token of his favour and respect to him, as Vespasian gave his name Flavius to Josephus the Jew.

Preaching.—Ver. 15. They sent a messenger to them with this respectful message, "Men and brethren, if ye have any word of exhortation for the people, say on." It is probable that the rulers of the synagogue had met with them, and been in private conversation with them before; and if they had not an affection to the gospel, yet they had at least the curiosity to hear Paul preach; and therefore, not only gave him permission, but begged the favour of him, that he would speak a "word of exhortation to the people." Note, 1. The bare reading of the Scriptures in the public assemblies is not sufficient, but they should be expounded, and the people exhorted out of them. This is spreading the net, and assisting people in doing that which is necessary to the making of the word profitable to them—that is, the applying of it to themselves. 2. Those that preside, and have power in public assemblies, should provide for a word of exhortation to the people, whenever they come together. 3. Sometimes a word of exhortation from a strange minister may be of great use to the people, provided he be well approved. It is likely, Paul did "often preach in the synagogue," when he was not thus invited to it by the rulers of the synagogues; for he often preached "with much contention," 1 Thess. ii. 2. But, these were more noble, more generous, than the rulers of the synagogues commonly were.

Unbelief of the Jews—The Inbringing of the Gentiles.—Ver. 45—47. "Since you will not accept eternal life as it is offered, our way is plain, 'Lo, we turn to the Gentiles.' If one will not, another will. If those that were first invited to the wedding-feast will not come, we must invite out of the high-ways and hedges those that will, for 'the wedding must be furnished with guests.' If he that is next of kin will not do the kinsman's part, he must not complain that another will," Ruth iv. 4. They justify themselves in this by a divine warrant. "'For so hath the Lord commanded us;' the Lord Jesus gave us directions to witness to him in Jerusalem and Judea, first, and after that, 'to the utmost part of the earth,' to preach the gospel to 'every creature,' to 'disciple all nations.'" This is according to what is foretold in the Old Testament; when the Messiah, in the prospect of the Jews' infidelity, was ready to say, "I have laboured in vain," he was told, to his satisfaction, that though "Israel was not gathered," yet "he should be glorious;" that his blood should not be shed in vain, nor his purchase made in vain, nor his doctrine preached in vain, nor his spirit sent in vain; "'For I have set thee,' not only raised thee up, but established thee, to be 'a Light of the Gentiles,' not only a shining Light for a time, but a standing Light, set thee for a Light, 'that thou shouldest and Barnabas, and expelled them out of their coasts.

51 But they shook off the dust of their feet against them, and came unto Iconium.

52 And the disciples were filled with joy, and [t]with the Holy Ghost.

CHAP. XIV.

Paul and Barnabas are persecuted, 1. Paul healing a cripple, they are reputed as gods, 8. Paul is stoned, 19. They pass through divers churches, and return to Antioch, 21.

AND it came to pass [a]in Iconium, that they [b]went both together into the synagogue of the Jews, and so spake, [c]that a great multitude both of the Jews and also of the Greeks believed.

2 But [e]the unbelieving Jews stirred up the Gentiles, and made their minds evil affected against the brethren.

3 Long time therefore abode they [g]speaking boldly in the Lord, [h]which gave testimony unto [i]the word of his grace, [k]and granted signs and wonders to be done by their hands.

4 But [l]the multitude of the city was divided:[1] and part held with the Jews, and part with the apostles.

5 And [n]when there was an assault made both of the Gentiles, and also of the Jews, with their rulers, to use them [o]despitefully, and to stone them,

6 They were ware of it, and fled unto [r]Lystra and Derbe, cities of [s]Lycaonia, and unto the region that lieth round about:

7 And [t]there they preached the gospel.

8 ¶ And there sat a certain man at Lystra, impotent in his feet, [x]being a cripple from his mother's womb, who never had walked:

9 The same heard Paul speak; who stedfastly beholding him, and perceiving that [z]he had faith to be healed,

10 Said with a loud voice, [a]Stand upright on thy feet. And he leaped and walked.

11 And when the people saw what Paul had done, they lifted up their voices, saying in the speech of Lycaonia, [b]The gods are come down to us in the likeness of men.

12 And they called Barnabas, [c]Jupiter;[2] and Paul, Mercurius, because he was the chief speaker.

13 Then the priest of Jupiter, which was before their city, brought oxen and garlands unto the gates, and would have done sacrifice with the people.

14 Which when the apostles, Barnabas and Paul, heard of, they rent their clothes,[3] and ran in among the people, crying out,

15 And saying, Sirs, why do ye these things? We also are men of like passions with you, [l]and preach unto you, that ye should turn [m]from these vanities unto the living God, [o]which made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all things that are therein:

16 Who in times past suffered all nations to walk in their own ways.[4]

17 Nevertheless [q]he left not himself without witness, in that he did good, [s]and gave us rain from heaven, and fruitful seasons, [t]filling our hearts with food and gladness.

18 And with these sayings scarce restrained they the people, that they had not done sacrifice unto them.

19 ¶ And there came thither certain Jews from Antioch and Iconium, who persuaded the people; and having stoned Paul, [a]drew him out of the city, [b]supposing he had been dead.

20 Howbeit, as the disciples stood round about him, he rose up, and came into the city: and the next day he departed with Barnabas to Derbe.

21 And when they had preached the gospel to that city, and had *taught many, they returned again to Lystra, and to Iconium, and Antioch,

22 Confirming the souls of the disciples, and [h]exhorting them to continue in the faith, and that [l]we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God.

23 And when [l]they had ordained[5] them elders in every church, and had prayed with fasting, [o]they commended them to the Lord, on whom they believed.

24 And after they had passed throughout Pisidia, they came to Pamphylia.

25 And when they had preached the word in Perga, they went down into Attalia;[6]

26 And thence sailed to Antioch, from whence they had been [r]recommended to the grace of God for the work which they fulfilled.

27 And when they were come, and had gathered the church together, [u]they rehearsed all that God had done with them, and how he had [x]opened the door of faith unto the Gentiles.

28 And there they abode long time with the disciples.

be for salvation unto the ends of the earth.'" Note, Christ is not only the Saviour, but the Salvation, is himself our Righteousness, and Life, and Strength.

Female Persecutors.—Ver. 50. "They stirred up the devout and honourable women" against them. These, according to the genius of their sex, were zealous in their way, and bigoted; and it was easy, by false stories and misrepresentations, to incense them against the gospel of Christ, as if it had been destructive of all religion, of which really it is perfective. It is good to see "honourable women devout," and well affected to religious worship; the less they have to do in the world, the more they should do for their souls, and the more time they should spend in communion with God; but it is sad, when, under colour of devotion to God, they conceive an enmity to Christ, as those here did. What, "women" persecutors! Can they forget the tenderness and compassion of their sex? What, "honourable women!" Can they thus stain their honour, and disgrace themselves, and do so mean a thing? But, which is strangest of all, "devout women!" Will "they" kill Christ's servants, and "think therein they do God service?" Let those therefore that have "zeal," see that it be "according to knowledge."—Henry.

CHAP. XIV. Iconium.—Ver. 3—4. The apostles deemed it necessary to continue at Iconium for a considerable time, boldly exercising their ministry in dependence on the Lord; in order to encourage and establish the new converts, that the opposition to which they were exposed might not subvert them; and God was pleased at this time to enable them to work many miracles, which perhaps they had not done in other places. Thus a considerable part of the inhabitants either embraced the gospel, or favoured the cause; and these counteracting the machinations of their opponents, the apostles were for a time protected.—"Our constancy ought to equal the obstinate perverseness of the wicked. We should not give place, because of threatenings, no, nor even of open violence, except there be an evident necessity; and then, not for the sake of enjoying quiet, but that the gospel may be more extensively propagated." [Beza.]

Heathenish Superstition.—Ver. 11—18. When the idolaters saw the astonishing effect upon the cripple, follow upon the speaking of a word, they concluded, according to their fabulous traditions, that two of their deities had become visible in human form. The age and gravity of Barnabas suggested to them the opinion that he was Jupiter, their supreme deity; and Paul's promptitude in speaking led them to suppose that he was Mercury, the patron of eloquence, and the interpreter, as they imagined, of the gods. And so firmly were they persuaded of these things, that the priest of Jupiter, whose temple was near the gates of the city, was induced to bring oxen and garlands (either to decorate the sacrifices, or the intended objects of their worship;) and they were about immediately to seek the favour of the apostles, by divine honours, and a propitiatory offering! But they discovering the intention of the idolaters, were more discomposed by it, than by all the persecution which they had experienced; and to express their detestation of these idolatrous practices, they rent their clothes, and ran in among the people, expostulating with them about their conduct, protesting against the sacrilegious honours intended them; declaring that they were mere men like themselves, liable to the same passions, infirmities, sufferings, and death; and reminding them that they came to preach to them, that they should relinquish such vanities and delusions, and worship the great Creator of the universe. This was very bold and decided language to zealous idolaters and their priests, in such a critical juncture: and it has been properly contrasted with the temporizing conduct of heathen philosophers; who, being convinced of the folly and falsehood of the vulgar superstition, not only conformed to it, but instructed their disciples to do the same, as a part of their duty to the republic. Thus they made hypocrisy and dissimulation, in so important a matter, an essential part of their instructions, confirmed it by their example, and perpetuated, as much as they could, the most stupid idolatry, connected with the most abominable vices, from generation to generation!—Scott.

Paul Stoned.—Ver. 19. Now observe here, 1. How the people were incensed against Paul; not by any injury they pretended he had done them; if they took it for an affront that he would not let them misplace divine honours upon him, when they considered themselves they would easily forgive him that wrong. But "there came certain Jews from Antioch," hearing, it is likely, and vexed to hear, what respect was showed to Paul and Barnabas at Lystra; and they incensed the people against them, as factious, seditious, dangerous persons, not fit to be harboured. See how restless the rage of the Jews was against the gospel of Christ; they could not bear that it should have footing anywhere. 2. To what degree they were incensed by these barbarous Jews; they irritated them to that degree, that the mob rose and "stoned Paul," not by a judicial sentence, but in a popular tumult; they threw stones at him, with which they knocked him down, and then "threw him out of the city," as one not fit to live in it, or drew him out upon a sledge, or in a cart, to bury him, "supposing he had been dead." So strong is the bent of the corrupt and carnal heart to that which is evil, even in contrary extremes, that as it is with great difficulty that men are restrained from evil on one side, so it is with great ease that they are persuaded to evil on the other side. See how fickle and mutable the minds of carnal, worldly people are, that do not know and consider things! Those that but the other day would have treated the apostles as more than men, now treat them as worse than brutes, as the worst of men, as the worst of malefactors. To-salem, unto the apostles and elders about this question.

3 And being brought on their way by the church, they passed through Phenice and Samaria, declaring the conversion of the Gentiles: and they caused great joy unto all the brethren.

4 And when they were come to Jerusalem, they were received of the church, and of the apostles and elders, and they declared [q]all things that God had done with them.

5 ¶ But there rose up certain of [r]the sect of the Pharisees which believed, saying, [s]That it was needful to circumcise them, and to command them to keep the law of Moses.

6 And [t]the apostles and elders[3] came together for to consider of this matter.

7 And when there had been much disputing, Peter rose up, and said unto them, Men and brethren, ye know how that a good while ago [y]God made choice among us, that the Gentiles [z]by my mouth should hear the word of the gospel, and believe.

8 And God, [a]which knoweth the hearts, bare them witness, [c]giving them the Holy Ghost, even as he did unto us;

9 And [d]put no difference between us and them, [e]purifying their hearts by faith.

10 Now therefore [f]why tempt ye God, to put a yoke upon the neck of the disciples, [h]which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear?

11 But we believe [l]that, through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, we shall be saved, even as they.

12 ¶ Then all the multitude kept silence, and gave audience to Barnabas and Paul, [k]declaring what miracles and wonders God had wrought among the Gentiles by them.

13 ¶ And after they had held their peace, James answered, saying, Men and brethren, hearken unto me:

14 Simeon hath [p]declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles, [q]to take out of them a people for his name.

15 And to this agree the words of the prophets; as it is written,

16 After this I will return, and will [t]build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up:

17 That [u]the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles, upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord, who doeth all these things.

18 [x]Known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world.

19 Wherefore my sentence is,[4] that we trouble not them which from among the Gentiles are turned to God:

20 But that we write unto them, that they abstain [c]from pollutions of idols, and from [d]fornication, and from [e]things strangled, and from blood.

21 For Moses of old time hath in every city them that preach him, being read in the synagogues every sabbath-day.

22 ¶ Then pleased it the apostles and elders, with the whole church,[5] [h]to send chosen men of their own company to Antioch with Paul and Barnabas; namely, Judas surnamed Barsabas, and Silas, chief men among the brethren:

23 And they wrote letters by them after this manner; The apostles, and elders, and brethren, send greeting unto [n]the brethren which are of the Gentiles in Antioch, and Syria, and Cilicia:

24 Forasmuch as we have heard [p]that certain which went out from us have troubled you with words, subverting your souls, saying, Ye must be circumcised, and keep the law; to whom we gave no such commandment:

25 It seemed good unto us, being assembled with one accord, [t]to send chosen men unto you with our beloved Barnabas and Paul;

26 Men that have [y]hazarded their lives for the name of our Lord Jesus Christ.

27 We have sent therefore Judas and Silas, who shall also tell you the same things by *mouth.

28 For [b]it seemed good to the Holy Ghost,[6] and to us, to lay upon you no [c]greater burden than these necessary things;

29 That ye abstain from meats offered to idols,[7] and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication: from which, [e]if ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well. Fare ye well.

30 So when they were dismissed, they came to Antioch; and when they had gathered the multitude together, they delivered the epistle:

31 Which when they had read, [l]they rejoiced for the †consolation.

32 And Judas and Silas, [k]being prophets[8] also themselves, exhorted the brethren with many words, and [m]confirmed them.

33 And after they had tarried there a space, they were let go in peace from the brethren unto the apostles.

34 Notwithstanding, it pleased Silas to abide there still.

35 Paul also and Barnabas continued in Antioch, [q]teaching and preaching the word of the Lord, with many others also.

36 ¶ And some days after, Paul said unto Barnabas, Let us go again and visit our brethren in every city where we have preached the word of the Lord, and see how they do.

37 And Barnabas determined to take with them John, whose surname was Mark.[9]

38 But Paul thought not good to take him

day, "Hosanna," to-morrow, "Crucify;" to-day, sacrificed to, to-morrow, sacrificed. We have an instance of a change the other way, chap. xxviii. "This man is a murderer," ver. 4; no doubt "he is a god," ver. 6. Popular breath turns like the wind. If Paul would have been Mercury, he might have been enthroned, nay, he might have been enshrined; but if he will be a faithful minister of Christ, he shall be stoned, and thrown out of the city. Thus they who easily submit to strong delusions, hate to receive the truth in the love of it. 3. How he was delivered by the power of God: when he was "drawn out of the city, the disciples stood round about him," ver. 20. It seems there were some here at Lystra that became disciples, that found the mean between deifying the apostles and rejecting them; and even these new converts had courage to own Paul when he was thus run down, though they had reason enough to fear that the same that stoned him would stone them for owning him.—Henry.

CHAP. XV. JUDAIZING TEACHERS.—Ver. 1—6. The persons who taught the Gentile converts at Antioch, that they could not be saved, unless they were circumcised and observed the whole ceremonial law, came from Judea, and professed to speak the sentiments of the apostles and church at Jerusalem; but they were false brethren, who came to spy out and destroy Christian liberty. Their doctrine could not but prove a great discouragement and temptation to the Gentile converts, and an immense hinderance to the success of the gospel; at the same time it tended to false sentiments concerning justification, and would eventually have been subversive of genuine Christianity. For these and similar reasons, Paul and Barnabas vigorously opposed them, and used all their authority, and every proper argument, to satisfy the minds of the people, and to silence the false teachers: yet this did not suffice; and therefore it was determined that they should go up to Jerusalem, and refer the matter to the apostles and elders; that by their authority and influence the controversy might be terminated, and the peace of the church preserved.—Scott.

THE FIRST COUNCIL.—Ver. 6. "The apostles and presbyters came together to consider of this matter." They did not give their judgment separately, but "came together" to do it, that they might hear one another's sense in this matter; for in the multitude of counsellors there is safety and satisfaction. They did not give their judgment rashly, but considered of this matter. Though they were clear concerning it in their own minds, yet they would take time to consider of it, and to hear what was to be said by the adverse party. Nor did the apostles give their judgment concerning it without the elders, the inferior ministers, to whom they thus condescended, and on whom they thus put an honour. Those that are most eminent in gifts and graces, and are in the most exalted stations in the church, ought to show respect to their juniors and inferiors; for though "days should speak," yet "there is a spirit in man," Job xxxii. 7, 8. Here is a direction to the pastors of the churches, when difficulties arise, to "come together" in solemn meetings for mutual advice and encouragement, that they may know one another's mind, and strengthen one another's hands, and may act in concert.—Henry.

OPINION OF THE APOSTLE JAMES.—Ver. 19—21. James's opinion therefore was, that the Gentile converts ought not to be molested about circumcision or the ritual law; but that it might be expedient and proper to point out to them some particulars, which they would do well to observe. He therefore proposed to write to them, that they should abstain from meats which had been offered to idols, and polluted in that abominable worship; that they might decidedly show their entire renunciation and abhorrence of idolatry; and also to caution them against fornication. This was not in general held in such abhorrence among the Gentiles as it ought to be, and it was especially connected with their idolatrous feasts; the new converts might therefore be in danger of being seduced into it, to the dishonour of their profession, the injury of their own souls, and the great detriment of domestic comfort and union in the worship of God. This was no doubt a moral injunction, independent of the ceremonial law; and so was the prohibition to eat of things sacrificed to idols, as connected with its consequences; being in reality communion with idolaters in idolatry. And no doubt it is in force at this day, as a command of the moral law; and must be charged on the consciences of all such as live among idolaters.—The subsequent injunctions are of another nature, and enforced by other reasons. The law of Moses had long been published in the several cities, where the gospel was then planted, being read in their synagogues every Sabbath; the people, therefore, everywhere knew that the eating of blood was prohibited very strictly. This prohibition was given from reverence to the blood of the sacrifices, which being the life of the animal, was as it were the essence of the atonement, as typical of that of Christ. It would therefore have needlessly grieved and stumbled the Jewish converts, and prevented their friendly intercourse with their brethren, and further prejudiced the unconverted Jews against the gospel; if the Gentile converts had shown so open a disregard to the solemn sacrifices which were still offered at the temple. This seems to have been the reason of this restriction.—Scott.

DISPUTE BETWEEN PAUL AND BARNABAS.—The best of men are but men, "subject to like passions" as we are, as these two good men had expressly owned concerning themselves, chap. xiv. 15; and now it appeared too true. I doubt there was (as usually there is in such contentions) a fault on both sides; perhaps Paul was too severe upon the young man, and did not allow his fault the extenuation it was capable of, did not with them, who departed from them from Pamphylia, and went not with them to the work.

39 And [y]the contention was so sharp between them, that they departed asunder one from the other: and so Barnabas took Mark, and sailed unto Cyprus;

40 And Paul chose Silas, and departed, [b]being recommended[10] by the brethren unto the grace of God.

41 And he went through Syria and Cilicia, [d]confirming the churches.

Paul circumciseth Timothy, 1; converteth Lydia, 14; casteth out a spirit of divination, 16; is imprisoned with Silas, 19, and released, 25.

THEN came he [a]to Derbe and Lystra: and, behold, a certain disciple was there, [b]named Timotheus, the son of a certain woman, [c]which was a Jewess, and believed; [d]but his father was a Greek:

2 Which was well reported of by the brethren that were at Lystra and Iconium.

3 Him [g]would Paul have to go forth with him; [h]and took and circumcised him,[1] because of the Jews which were in those quarters: for they knew all that his father was a Greek.

4 And as they went through the cities, [l]they delivered them the decrees for to keep, that were ordained of the apostles and elders which were at Jerusalem.

5 And [k]so were the churches established in the faith, [l]and increased in number daily.

6 Now, when they had gone throughout Phrygia and the region of Galatia,[2] and were [o]forbidden of the Holy Ghost to preach the word in Asia,

7 After they were come to Mysia, they assayed to go into Bithynia: but the Spirit suffered them not.

8 And they, passing by Mysia, came down to Troas.

9 ¶ And [s]a vision appeared to Paul in the night: There stood a man of Macedonia, and prayed him, saying, [u]Come over into Macedonia, and help us.

10 And after he had seen the vision, immediately we endeavoured to go into Macedonia, assuredly gathering that the Lord had called us for to preach the gospel unto them.

11 Therefore, loosing from Troas, we came with a straight course to Samothracia,[3] and the next day to Neapolis;

12 And from thence to [y]Philippi,[4] which is the [*]chief city of that part of Macedonia, and a colony: and we were in that city abiding certain days.

13 ¶ And [a]on the [†]sabbath we went out of the city by a river-side, [b]where prayer was wont to be made; and we sat down, and spake unto the women which resorted thither.

14 ¶ And a certain woman named [e]Lydia, a seller of purple, of the city of [f]Thyatira,[5] which [g]worshipped God, heard us: [h]whose heart the Lord opened, that she attended unto the things which were spoken of Paul.

15 And [i]when she was baptized, and her household, she besought us, saying, [k]If ye have judged me to be faithful to the Lord, come into my house, and abide there. And she constrained us.

16 ¶ And it came to pass, [n]as we went to prayer, a certain damsel possessed with a spirit of [‡]divination[6] met us, which brought her masters much gain by soothsaying:

17 The same followed Paul and us, and cried, saying, [q]These men are the servants of the most high God, which shew unto us [t]the way of salvation.

18 And this did she many days. But Paul, being grieved, turned, and said to the spirit, [x]I command thee in the name of Jesus Christ to come out of her. And he came out the same hour.

19 ¶ And when her masters saw that the hope of their gains was gone, they caught Paul and Silas, and drew them into the [§]market place unto the rulers,

20 And brought them to the magistrates, saying, These men, being Jews, do exceedingly trouble our city,

21 And teach [c]customs which are not lawful for us to receive, neither to observe, being Romans.

22 And the multitude rose up together against them; [e]and the magistrates rent off their clothes, and commanded to beat them.

23 And when they had laid many stripes upon them, [f]they cast them into prison, charging the jailor to keep them safely:

24 Who, having received such a charge, thrust them into the inner prison, [l]and made their feet fast in the stocks.

25 ¶ And at [k]midnight Paul and Silas [m]prayed, and sang praises unto God: [n]and the prisoners heard them.

26 And [o]suddenly there was a great earthquake,[7] so that the foundations of the prison were shaken: and immediately all the doors were opened, [p]and every one's bands were loosed.

27 And [q]the keeper of the prison awaking out of his sleep, and seeing the prison-doors open, he drew out his sword, and would have killed himself, supposing that the prisoners had been fled.

28 But Paul [r]cried with a loud voice, saying, [t]Do thyself no harm; for we are all here.

29 Then he called for a light, and sprang consider what a useful woman his mother was in Jerusalem, chap. xii. 12, nor make the allowances he might have made to Barnabas's natural affection. But it was Barnabas's fault that he took that into consideration in a case wherein the interest of Christ's kingdom was concerned, and indulged it too much. And they were certainly both in fault to be so hot as to let the contention be so sharp, (it is to be feared they gave one another some hard words) as also to be so stiff as each to stick so resolutely to his opinion, and neither to yield. It was a pity that they did not refer the matter to a third person; or that some friend did not interpose to prevent its coming to an open rupture. Is there never a wise man among them to interpose his good offices, and to accommodate the matter and to put them in mind of the Canaanite and the Perizzite that were "now in the land;" and that not only Jews and heathens, but the false brethren among themselves, would warm their hands at the flames of the contention between Paul and Barnabas? We must own it was their infirmity, and it is recorded for our admonition.—Henry.

CHAP. XVI. TIMOTHY.—Ver. 1—3. Timothy had been piously educated, and acquainted with the Scriptures from his youth; and had doubtless been brought to believe in Christ, when Paul and Barnabas were before at Lystra.—As he bore an excellent character among his fellow-Christians, and was endowed with very promising abilities, St. Paul chose him to accompany him in his travels and labours: but as his father was an uncircumcised Gentile, it was known that he had not been circumcised in his infancy; and he therefore judged it expedient for him to receive circumcision, previous to his entrance on his public ministry. Not that this was at all needful for him as a Gentile convert, or that the apostle thought the Jewish believers were bound to observe the ceremonial law: but lest the knowledge of his father, as a Gentile, should prejudice the Jews in the adjacent cities against Paul and his ministry, if they had supposed that he had taken an uncircumcised person to be his intimate companion and assistant; and likewise exclude Timothy from preaching in the synagogues, for which he seems to have been peculiarly qualified. He therefore thus far condescended to the prejudices of the Jews; though some time before at Jerusalem, he would not agree to the circumcision of Titus, when it was considered as requisite to salvation.

GOSPEL PREACHED IN EUROPE—LYDIA.—Ver. 13—15. This is the first account, transmitted to us, of the gospel being preached in Europe: though the church at Rome, it is probable, was planted before this time. There were Jews residing in most, if not all, the cities which the apostles and evangelists visited; though they appear to have been but few at Philippi. It seems they had not a synagogue with rulers; but there was a small oratory without the city, by the river-side, where a few people were accustomed to assemble for the worship of God on the Sabbath-days. Thither the apostle and his friends resorted, and took the opportunity of discoursing to the women concerning the gospel of Christ; for, it does not appear that there were any men in the assembly. Among the rest there was a native of Thyatira, a city of Asia, who resided at Philippi, to traffic in purple clothes, which were then in great estimation. She seems to have been of Gentile extraction, but proselyted to the Jewish religion; and the Lord was pleased to open her heart to attend on and believe the apostle's doctrine. This implies that pride, prejudice, the love of sin, and the love of the world, close the heart against the truth of God; till his grace makes way for their admission into the understanding and affections. Thus she was led to embrace the gospel, and was baptized with her household; the adult part of which no doubt were instructed in Christianity, along with her. There is no proof that there were any children in her family, though it is probable there were: the Syriac version indeed renders it "the children of her house;" but this only shows the sentiments of those who formed that early translation. After this she besought the apostle and his company to "lodge in her house;" for probably they before were but poorly accommodated: and by her urgent invitations she overcame their reluctancy to put her to so much trouble and expense.

THE PYTHONESS. Ver. 16—18. As the apostle and his friends went from the house of Lydia to the oratory above mentioned; they were met by a female slave, who was influenced by an evil spirit to utter ambiguous predictions, or divinations, after the manner of the priestesses of the Pythian Apollo. Thus she had acquired great reputation as a kind of oracle or fortune-teller, for making strange discoveries; which were probably accompanied by various agitations and distortions of body, and a peculiar kind of voice and articulation: for these were common on such occasions. By this practice she brought her masters a considerable gain, and became exceedingly valuable to them. But being instigated by the evil spirit, who desired to discredit, and bring into suspicion the ministry and miracles of the apostle and his coadjutors, she cried aloud, that "they were the servants of the most High God, who came to show men the way of salvation." For some days Paul waited, perhaps to see in what manner the Lord would silence so disgraceful a testimony to his truth: at length being grieved by the damsel's perseverance, he cast out the evil spirit by the power of Christ; and she returned to the full possession of her faculties, so that she could utter no more divinations: perhaps she was converted to Christianity. Ver. 19—24. The owners of this damsel, being sensible that no further lucre could be made by her, were exceedingly exasperated by their loss: and when they had seized on Paul and Silas, and accused them before the magistrates, as disturbers of the peace, and teachers of unlawful customs; the multitude also, in, and came trembling, [x]and fell down before Paul and Silas, 30 And brought them out, and said, Sirs, [a]what must I do to be saved?

31 And they said, [b]Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, [c]and thy house.

32 And [d]they spake unto him the word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house.

33 And he took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes; [f]and was baptized,[8] he and all his,[9] straightway.

34 And when he had brought them into his house, he set meat before them, and rejoiced, believing in God with all his house.

35 ¶ And when it was day, the magistrates sent the serjeants,[10] saying, Let those men go.

36 And the keeper of the prison told this saying to Paul, The magistrates have sent to let you go: now therefore depart, and go in peace.

37 But Paul said unto them, [l]They have beaten us openly uncondemned, being Romans, and have cast us into prison; and now do they thrust us out privily? nay verily; but let them come themselves and fetch us out.

38 And the serjeants told these words unto the magistrates: and they feared, when they heard that they were Romans.

39 And they came and besought them, and brought them out, [q]and desired them to depart out of the city.

40 And they went out of the prison, and entered into the house of Lydia: and when they had seen the brethren, they comforted them, and departed.

Paul preacheth at Thessalonica, 1, Berea, 10, and at Athens, 16. Some are converted, 34.

NOW, when they had passed through Amphipolis[1] and Apollonia, they came to Thessalonica, [b]where was a synagogue of the Jews:

2 And Paul, as his manner was, went in unto them, and three sabbath-days [c]reasoned with them out of the scriptures;

3 [f]Opening and alleging[2] that Christ must needs have suffered, and risen again from the dead; and that [h]this Jesus, *whom I preach unto you, is Christ.

4 And some of them believed, and consorted with Paul and Silas; and of [l]the devout Greeks a great multitude, [m]and of the chief women not a few.

5 ¶ But the Jews which believed not, moved with envy, took unto them certain lewd fellows of the baser sort, and gathered a company, and set all the city on an uproar, and assaulted the house of [q]Jason, and sought to bring them out to the people.

6 And when they found them not, [r]they drew Jason and certain brethren unto the rulers of the city, crying, [s]These that have turned the world upside down are come hither also;[3]

7 Whom Jason hath received: and these all do contrary to the decrees of Cesar, saying that there is another king, one Jesus.

8 And they troubled the people, and the rulers of the city, when they heard these things.

9 And when they had taken security of Jason, and of the other, they let them go.

10 ¶ And the brethren immediately sent away Paul and Silas by night into [y]Berea: who, coming thither, [a]went into the synagogue of the Jews.

11 These were [a]more noble[4] than those in Thessalonica, in that [b]they received the word with all readiness of mind, [c]and searched the scriptures daily, whether those things were so.

12 Therefore many of them believed; also of [e]honourable women which were Greeks, and of men, not a few.

13 But when the Jews of Thessalonica had knowledge that the word of God was preached of Paul at Berea, they came hither also, and stirred up the people.

14 And then immediately the brethren sent away Paul, to go as it were to the sea: [k]but Silas and Timotheus abode there still.

15 And they that conducted Paul brought him unto [l]Athens: and receiving a commandment unto Silas and Timotheus for to come to him with all speed, they departed.

16 ¶ Now, while Paul waited for them at Athens, [n]his spirit was stirred in him, when he saw the city [†]wholly given to idolatry.[5]

17 Therefore disputed he in the synagogue with the Jews, and with [p]the devout persons, and in the market [q]daily with them that met with him.

18 Then certain philosophers of the Epicureans, and of the Stoicks,[6] encountered him. And some said, What will this [‡]babbler say? other some, He seemeth to be a setter forth of strange gods: because he preached unto them Jesus and the resurrection.

19 And they took him, and brought him unto [§]Areopagus,[7] saying, [u]May we know what this new doctrine, whereof thou speakest, is?

20 For thou bringest certain strange things to our ears: we would know therefore [x]what these things mean.

being enraged at the loss of their prophetess, joined in the tumultuous accusation. Whereas, had the apostle satisfactorily detected an artful impostor, they, who had been convinced of the cheat, would have been enraged at those who had duped them of their money, and not at him who had undeceived them.

The Philippian Jailor.—Ver. 25—28. It might have been expected that Paul and Silas would have vented their feelings in bitter lamentations and exclamations against the cruelty and injustice of the treatment which they had received. Yet at midnight, when their wounds and bruises must have become doubly painful, they first poured out their hearts in prayer, and doubtless remembered their persecutors, especially the jailor: and being thus filled with divine consolation, they joyfully sang praises to God, and so loudly that the other prisoners heard them. At this very time the Lord was pleased to bear testimony to their innocency, by an extraordinary earthquake which probably was felt all over the city; but which especially shook the foundations of the prison, burst open all the doors, and in a wonderful manner brake off the bonds and fetters of all the prisoners: and yet no person seems to have been hurt by it! This tremendous concussion awakened the jailor, who, supposing from the doors being open, that the prisoners had fled, was about to murder himself. Ver. 29—34. The friendly conduct of Paul and Silas to the jailor, connected with the extraordinary interposition of God in their favour, seems to have been made effectual by the Holy Spirit, at once to convince him, that these were indeed "the servants of the most high God;" though he had probably before derided that pretension, and concurred with those who persecuted them on that account. Thus was he led to a conviction of his guilt, in treating them with cruelty and contempt, as well as to a sense of his former sins: and he began to tremble, lest he should immediately be destroyed by the righteous vengeance of God, and sink into misery in another world. Yet remembering, that they came to show men the way of salvation, he seems to have conceived hopes of that deliverance. Calling therefore for lights, in great haste and terror, he came in and fell down before Paul and Silas; and first, (as a proof that he began to relent and be sorry for his sin,) bringing them out of the stocks and the inner prison, he addressed them in the most respectful manner, and inquired, "What he must do that he might be saved?" The Lord so blessed the word, that he was immediately humbled, softened, and changed from a lion, as it were, into a lamb: so that he first compassionately washed and dressed their stripes, and then professing faith in Christ, he was baptized in his name: though he might fear the heavy displeasure of the magistrates for thus embracing the cause, which they had set themselves to oppose: and at the same time all his household was baptized likewise.—Scott.

CHAP. XVII. Persecution at Thessalonica.—Ver. 5. Observe, 1. Who were the authors of their trouble; the "Jews which believed not," that were "moved with envy." The Jews were in all places the most inveterate enemies to the Christians, especially to those Jews that turned Christians, whom they had a particular spleen against, as deserters. Now see what that division was, which Christ came to "send upon earth;" some of the Jews believed the gospel, and pitied and prayed for those that did not; while those that did not, envied and hated those that did. 2. Who were the instruments of the trouble; the Jews made use of "certain lewd persons of the baser sort," whom they picked up, and got together, and who must undertake to give the sense of the city against the apostles. All wise and sober people looked upon them with respect, and valued them, and none would appear against them but such as were the scum of the city, a company of vile men, that were given to all manner of wickedness. Tertullian pleads this with those that opposed Christianity, that the enemies of it were generally the worst of men.

Jews in Berea.—Ver. 11. "They searched the Scriptures daily whether those things were so." Their readiness of mind to receive the word, was not such, as that they took things upon trust, swallowed them upon an implicit faith: no; but since Paul reasoned out of the Scriptures, and referred them to the Old Testament for the proof of what he said, they had recourse to their Bibles, turned to the places he referred them to, read the context, considered the scope and drift of them, compared them with other places of Scripture, examined whether Paul's inferences from them were natural and genuine, and his arguments upon them cogent, and determined accordingly. Observe, 1. The doctrine of Christ does not fear a scrutiny; we that are advocates for his cause, desire no more than that people will not say, "These things are not so," till they have first, without prejudice and partiality, examined "whether they be so," or no. 2. The New Testament is to be examined by the Old.—Henry.

Idolatry of Athens.—Ver. 16, 17. Whilst Paul continued in this renowned city, the centre of polite learning, philosophy, and the fine arts, which was, as it were, the university of the Roman empire and of the world; he took little notice of their sculpture and edifices, the fragments of which to this day are considered as the most perfect models in their kind; or of their paintings and exhibitions. He is generally allowed to have been a man of fine taste and cultivated genius; but his thoughts were too much occupied about more sublime and interesting subjects, to make observations on these elegant or magnificent trifles; for, his spirit was agitated, grieved, sharpened, and filled with indignation and astonishment to see a city, that was deemed so enlightened, entirely enslaved to the most stupid idolatry. It hath been asserted that there were else, but either to tell, or to hear some new thing.)

22 ¶ Then Paul stood in the midst of [1]Mars' hill, and said, Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious.

23 For as I passed by, and beheld your [c]devotions, I found an altar with this inscription, [d]TO THE UNKNOWN GOD.[5] Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you.

24 God, [f]that made the world, and all things therein, seeing that he is Lord of heaven and earth, [h]dwelleth not in temples made with hands;

25 Neither [i]is worshipped with men's hands, as though he needed any thing, [k]seeing he giveth to all life, and breath, and all things;

26 And [l]hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation;

27 That [n]they should seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after him, and find him, though [o]he be not far from every one of us:

28 For [p]in him we live, and move, and have our being; as certain also of your own poets have said, For we are also his offspring.[6]

29 Forasmuch then as we are the offspring of God, [r]we ought not to think that the Godhead is like unto gold, or silver, or stone, [t]graven by art and man's device.

30 And the times of this ignorance God winked at; [x]but now commandeth all men every where to repent:

31 Because [y]he hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath *given assurance unto all men, [z]in that he hath raised him from the dead.

32 ¶ And when they heard of the resurrection of the dead, some mocked: and others said, We will hear thee again of this matter.

33 So Paul departed from among them.

34 Howbeit certain men clave unto him, and believed: among the which was Dionysius the Areopagite,[7] and a woman named Damaris, and others with them.

CHAP. XVIII.

Paul laboureth with his hands; and, preaching at Corinth, 1, is encouraged in a vision, 9. He is accused before the deputy, but dismissed, 12. Of Apollos, 24.

AFTER these things, Paul departed from Athens, and came to Corinth;

2 And found a certain Jew, named Aquila, born in Pontus, lately come from Italy, with his wife Priscilla, (because that Claudius had commanded all Jews to depart from Rome,[1]) and came unto them.

3 And because he was of the same craft, he abode with them, and wrought: (for by their occupation they were tent-makers.)[2]

4 And he reasoned in the synagogue every sabbath, and persuaded the Jews and the Greeks.

5 And when Silas and Timotheus were come from Macedonia, Paul [k]was pressed in the spirit, [l]and testified to the Jews that Jesus was* Christ.

6 And when they opposed themselves, and blasphemed, [n]he shook his raiment, and said unto them, [o]Your blood be upon your own heads; I am clean: [p]from henceforth I will go unto the Gentiles.

7 ¶ And he departed thence, and entered into a certain man's house, named Justus, one that [r]worshipped God, whose house joined hard to the synagogue.

8 And Crispus, the chief ruler of the synagogue, [u]believed on the Lord with all his house: and many of the Corinthians [x]hearing believed, and were baptized.

9 ¶ Then [y]spake the Lord to Paul in the night by a vision, Be not afraid, but speak, and hold not thy peace:

10 For [a]I am with thee, and no man shall set on thee to hurt thee; [c]for I have much people in this city.

11 And he [†]continued there a year and six months, teaching the word of God among them.

12 ¶ And when Gallio[3] was the deputy of Achaia, the Jews made insurrection with one accord against Paul, and brought him to the judgment-seat, 13 Saying, [l]This fellow persuadeth men to worship God contrary to the law.

14 And when Paul was now about to open his mouth, Gallio said unto the Jews, If it were a matter of wrong or wicked lewdness, O ye Jews, reason would that I should bear with you:

15 But if it be [n]a question of words and names, and of your law, look ye to it; for I will be no judge of such matters.

16 And he drave them from the judgment-seat.

17 Then all the Greeks took Sosthenes, the chief ruler of the synagogue, and beat him before the judgment-seat: and Gallio cared for none of those things.

18 ¶ And Paul after this tarried there yet a good while, and then took his leave of the brethren, and sailed thence into Syria, and with him Priscilla and Aquila; having shorn his head in Cenchrea: for he had a vow.[4] more idols at Athens, than in all the rest of Greece: the Athenians always imported the deities and superstitions of every nation, along with their arts and learning, so that a satirist ludicrously observed, "It was easier to find a god than a man in that city." This fact most completely demonstrates the insufficiency of science and philosophy to guide men in matters of religion. The barbarous Scythians, the wild Indians, nay, the stupid Hottentots, have never deviated further from truth, or sunk into grosser darkness in respect of God and religion, than the ingenious and philosophical Athenians did.—Scott.

Its False Philosophy.—Ver. 18. Observe, 1. Who they were, "that encountered him," (1.) "The Epicureans," who "thought God altogether such a one as themselves," an idle, inactive Being, that minded nothing, nor put any difference between good and evil; that would not own, either that God made the world, or that he governs it. (2.) "The Stoics," who thought themselves altogether as good as God, and indulged themselves as much in the pride of life as the Epicureans did in "the lusts of the flesh" and "of the eye." 2. What their different sentiments were of him; such there were as there were of Christ. 1. "Some call him a babbler," and thought he spoke, without any design, whatever came uppermost, as men of crazed imaginations do. They looked upon him as an idle fellow, and regarded him, as we say, no more than a ballad-singer. 2. "Others" called him "a setter forth of strange gods," and thought he spoke with design to make himself considerable by that means. And if he had "strange gods" to set forth, he could not bring them to a better market than to Athens. He did not, as many did, directly set forth new gods, nor avowedly; but they thought "he seemed to" do so, "because he preached unto them Jesus, and the resurrection;" from his first coming among them he ever and anon harped upon these two strings, which are indeed the principal doctrines of Christianity—Christ and a future state; Christ our Way, and heaven our end; and though he did not call "these gods," yet they thought he meant to make them so.

Paul's Discourse.—Ver. 22—31. We have here St. Paul's sermon at Athens; divers sermons we have had, which the apostles preached to the Jews, or such Gentiles as had an acquaintance with and veneration for the Old Testament, and were worshippers of "the true and living God;" and all they had to do with them, was to open and allege "that Jesus is the Christ;" but here we have a sermon to heathens, that worshipped false gods, and "were without the true God in the world," and to them the scope of their discourse was quite different from what it was to the other. In the former case their business was to lead their hearers, by prophecies and miracles, to the knowledge of the Redeemer, and faith in him; in the latter, it was to lead them by the common works of providence to the knowledge of the Creator, and worship of him.—Henry.

CHAP. XVIII. Paul's Occupation.—Ver. 3. Dr. Lightfoot shows that it was the custom of the Jews to bring up their children to some trade, yea, though they gave them learning or estates. Rabbi Judah says, "He that teaches not his son a trade, is as if he taught him to be a thief." And another saith, "He that has a trade in his hand, is a vineyard that is fenced." An honest trade by which a man may get his bread, is not to be looked upon by any with contempt. Paul, though a Pharisee, and brought up at the feet of Gamaliel, yet, having in his youth learned to make tents, did not by disuse lose the art. Though he was entitled to a maintenance from the churches he had planted, and from the people he preached to, yet he worked at his calling to get bread; which is more to his praise who did not ask for supplies, than to theirs who did not supply him unasked, knowing what straits he was reduced to. See how humble Paul was, and wonder that so great a man could stoop so low; but he had learned condescension of his Master, who came not to be ministered to, but to minister. See how industrious he was, and how willing to take pains.—Henry.

Gallio.—Ver. 12—17. Gallio is supposed to have been brother to Seneca the renowned pagan moralist, and he bears a fair character in history. As the Jews were allowed the free exercise of their religion at Corinth, they supposed that he would have exerted his authority against those, who innovated on their ancient customs: they therefore tumultuously seized on Paul, and dragged him to the Roman tribunal, and with much contempt accused him of inducing men to worship God, in a manner contrary to their law. But when the apostle was about to plead his own cause, and to embrace the opportunity of declaring the gospel before Gallio; that magistrate refused to take any cognizance of such matters. Gallio's conduct in this transaction hath been considered in very different lights; some having severely condemned it, and others having highly approved it. Doubtless he acted properly, in refusing, as a magistrate, to give any assistance to persecutors, or to interfere with the determination of religious controversies; but there seems to have been a contemptuous disregard of all such topics, as beneath his notice: he probably deemed both Jews and Christians to be ignorant and deluded fanatics; and that it was of no consequence who was right or wrong in disputes of such a nature. A mixture of philosophical scepticism, and of political contempt of religious matters compared with affairs of state, seems to have influenced his conduct.—Scott.

Paul's First Visit to Ephesus.—Ver. 19. Paul came at length to "Ephesus," which was the metropolis of the Lesser Asia, and a seaport. 1. "There he left Aquila and Priscilla;" not only because they would be but burdensome to him in his journey, but because they might be serviceable to the interests of the gospel at Ephesus. Therefore he calls them his "helpers in Christ Jesus," Rom. xvi. 3. 2. There he preached 19 And he came to Ephesus, and left them there: but he himself entered into the synagogue, and reasoned with the Jews.

20 When they desired him to tarry longer time with them, he consented not;

21 But bade them farewell, saying, [e]I must by all means keep this feast that cometh in Jerusalem: but I will return again unto you, [f]if God will. And he sailed from Ephesus.

22 And when he had landed at Cesarea, and [h]gone up, and saluted the church,[5] [k]he went down to Antioch.

23 And after he had spent some time there, he departed, and went over all [l]the country of Galatia and Phrygia in order, [m]strengthening all the disciples.

24 ¶ And a certain Jew, named [n]Apollos, born at Alexandria,[6] an eloquent man, and [q]mighty in the scriptures, came to Ephesus.

25 This man was [r]instructed[7] in the way of the Lord; and, being [s]fervent in the spirit, he spake and taught diligently the things of the Lord, [t]knowing only the baptism of John.[8]

26 And he began to speak boldly in the synagogue: whom when [x]Aquila and Priscilla had heard, they took him unto them, and [y]expounded unto him the way of God more perfectly.

27 And when he was disposed to pass into Achaia, the brethren wrote, [a]exhorting the disciples to receive him: who, when he was come, helped them much which had [c]believed through grace:

28 For he mightily [d]convinced the Jews, and that publickly, shewing by the scriptures that Jesus [‡]was Christ.

CHAP. XIX.

The Holy Ghost is given by Paul's hands.

AND it came to pass, that while Apollos was at Corinth, Paul, having passed through the upper coasts, came to Ephesus: and finding certain disciples,

2 He said unto them, [d]Have ye received the Holy Ghost[1] since ye believed? And they said unto him, [e]We have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost.[2]

3 And he said unto them, Unto what then were ye baptized? And they said, [g]Unto John's baptism.

4 Then said Paul, [h]John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people, That they should believe on him which should come after him, that is, on Christ Jesus.

5 When they heard this, [i]they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.

6 And when Paul had laid his hands upon them, [l]the Holy Ghost came on them; and they spake with tongues, and prophesied.

7 And all the men were about twelve.

8 And he went into the synagogue, and spake boldly for the space of three months, [n]disputing and persuading the things concerning the kingdom of God.

9 But when [o]divers were hardened, and believed not, but spake evil of that way before the multitude, [q]he departed from them, and separated the disciples, disputing [r]daily in the school of one Tyrannus.[3]

10 And this continued by the space of two years; so that all they which dwelt in Asia heard the word of the Lord Jesus, both Jews and Greeks.

11 And [x]God wrought special miracles by the hands of Paul:

12 So [y]that from his body[4] were brought unto the sick handkerchiefs or aprons, and the diseases departed from them, and the evil spirits went out of them.

13 ¶ Then certain of the vagabond Jews, [a]exorcists, took upon them to call over them which had evil spirits the name of the Lord Jesus, saying, We [c]adjure you by Jesus, whom Paul preacheth.

14 And there were seven sons of one Sceva, a Jew, and chief of the priests, which did so.

15 And the evil spirit answered and said, Jesus I know, and Paul I know; but who are ye?

16 And the man in whom the evil spirit was leaped on them, and overcame them, and prevailed against them, so that they fled out of that house naked and wounded.

17 And this was known to all the Jews and Greeks also dwelling at Ephesus; and fear fell on them all, [h]and the name of the Lord Jesus was magnified.

18 And many that believed came, and [i]confessed, and shewed their deeds.

19 Many of them also which [k]used curious arts,[5] brought their books together, and burned them before all men: and they counted the price of them, and found it fifty thousand pieces of silver.[6]

20 So [m]mightily grew the word of God, and prevailed.

21 ¶ After these things were ended, Paul [o]purposed in the spirit, when he had passed through Macedonia and Achaia, [q]to go to Jerusalem, saying, After I have been there, [r]I must also see Rome.

22 So he sent into [s]Macedonia two of them [t]that ministered unto him, Timotheus and Erastus; but he himself stayed in Asia[7] for a season.

23 And the same time there arose no small stir about that way.

"to the Jews in their synagogue;" though he did but call there in his journey, yet he would not go without giving them a sermon; "he entered into the synagogue," not as a hearer, but as a preacher, for "there he reasoned with the Jews." Though he had abandoned the Jews at Corinth, who opposed themselves, and blasphemed, yet he did not, for their sake, decline the synagogues of the Jews in other places, but still made the first offer of the gospel to them. We must not condemn a whole body or denomination of men, for the sake of some that conduct themselves ill.—Henry.

Apollos and Aquila.—Ver. 24—28. Whilst Paul was thus employed, Apollos, a native of Alexandria in Egypt, a person of a ready and graceful elocution, and of great acquaintance with the Scriptures of the Old Testament, arrived at Ephesus. He had got some knowledge of the way of salvation by faith in the Messiah, as far as it could be learned from John's ministry, baptism, and testimony to Jesus, whom he pointed out, as "the Lamb of God," "the Son of God," "the bridegroom of the church," and the promised Messiah. It does not, however, appear, that he had ever been among the Christians; nor is it known when and by whom he received Christian baptism; and there is no proof that he had at this time any miraculous powers. But being very zealous for the honour of God, and the interests of true religion, he went from place to place, diligently teaching the Jews what he knew of the necessity of repentance, and fruits meet for repentance, as a preparation for the blessings of the Messiah's kingdom. Of these subjects he boldly preached in the synagogue at Ephesus, in the hearing of Aquila and Priscilla: and, perceiving his ability, zeal, and piety, they said nothing to his disadvantage, though they found that he had very imperfect views of the subjects on which he spoke. On the contrary, they formed an acquaintance with him, and so showed him more completely the doctrine of the gospel, and the things which had taken place in respect of Jesus Christ: and he, with the most amiable humility received their instructions, and so obtained more accurate qualifications for his important work. At length he determined to go into Achaia and to Corinth: and by their recommendatory letters he was introduced to the Christians there; and proved very useful to them, and successful in convincing the Jews, in the most public manner, that Jesus was indeed their promised Messiah. Believed through grace. "The best comment on these words, is what we are told elsewhere: 'Paul planted, Apollos watered; but God gave the increase.'" [Doddridge.]—Scott.

CHAP. XIX. The Converts at Ephesus.—Ver. 1—7. After Christ's ascension no inquiry was made, that we read of, whether the converts had been baptized by John or no; and if but one of the three thousand who were baptized on the day of Pentecost, had been John's disciple, (and probably numbers were such,) the baptism of John and that of Jesus must have been distinct ordinances. The difference between that introductory institution to the Christian dispensation, and the initiatory external seal of that dispensation, has been already considered. Some have indeed said, that if John's baptism and Christ's were different, our Lord had no communion with the New Testament church in baptism, as he had with the Old Testament church in circumcision. But he was made under the law, to fulfil its righteousness, as our surety; and must therefore, both on that account and as our example, obey every command, and attend on every institution of God then in force; but there was not the same reason for his joining in the ordinances of the gospel, which he appointed merely as our Lord and King. Doubtless he ate the passover with his disciples, yet it does not appear that he partook of the eucharist: it is not probable that he did; neither can it be supposed that he was "baptized into the name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost," which seems essential to Christian baptism. I apprehend therefore that these persons, being further instructed by Paul, were admitted into the church by baptism, previously to the communication of the Holy Spirit to them, by the imposition of the apostle's hands.—Scott.

Sons of Sceva.—Ver. 14. It is sad to see the house of Jacob thus degenerated, much more the house of Aaron, the family that was in a peculiar manner consecrated to God; it is truly sad to see any of that race in league with Satan. Their father was a "chief of the priests," head of one of the twenty-four courses of priests. One would think the temple would find both employment and encouragement enough for the sons of a chief priest, if they had been twice as many. But probably it was a vain, rambling, rakish humour that took them all to turn mountebanks, and wander all the world over to cure mad folks.—Henry.

Burning of the Books of Magic.—Ver. 18—20. Many who had embraced the gospel before, or who were then led to believe it, came and confessed the sins which they had committed, especially in practising magic and sorcery; and showed the arts which they had employed. Many also of those who had been more eminent for these impious and wicked arts, brought the books which treated on such subjects, and which were highly esteemed at Ephesus; and being determined no more to use them, or to make any gain of them, or to throw temptation in the way of others, but rather desirous of expressing their abhorrence of such practices, they publicly burned them. The sum at which they were valued, upon the lowest computation, amounted to above fifteen hundred pounds: some reckon it to have been almost seven thousand; the one supposing drachmas to be meant, the other shekels, of four times the value. This was a mighty triumph of the gospel over men's prejudices, favourite pursuits, and love of money; when they were 24 For a certain man, named Demetrius, a silversmith, which made silver shrines[8] for [x]Diana, [a]brought no small gain unto the craftsmen;

25 Whom he called together with the workmen of like occupation, and said, Sirs, ye know that by this craft we have our wealth.

26 Moreover, ye see and hear, [c]that not alone at Ephesus, but almost throughout all Asia, this Paul hath persuaded and turned away much people, saying [d]that they be no gods which are [e]made with hands:

27 So [f]that not only this our craft is in danger to be set at nought; but also that the temple of the great goddess Diana should be despised, and her magnificence should be destroyed, whom all Asia and the world worshippeth.

28 And when they heard these sayings, [h]they were full of wrath, and cried out, saying, Great is Diana of the Ephesians.

29 And [k]the whole city was filled with confusion: and, having caught [l]Gaius and [m]Aristarchus,[9] men of Macedonia, Paul's companions in travel, they rushed with one accord into [n]the theatre.

30 And when [o]Paul would have entered in unto the people, [p]the disciples suffered him not.

31 And certain of [q]the chief of Asia[10] which were his friends, sent unto him, desiring him that he would not adventure himself into the theatre.

32 Some therefore cried one thing, and some another: for the assembly was confused; and the more part knew not wherefore they were come together.

33 And they drew [r]Alexander out of the multitude, the Jews putting him forward. And Alexander beckoned with the hand, and would have made [s]his defence unto the people.

34 But when [y]they knew that he was a Jew, all with one voice, about the space of two hours, cried out, [a]Great is Diana of the Ephesians.

35 And when the town clerk[11] had appeased the people, he said, Ye men of Ephesus, what man is there that knoweth not, how that the city of the Ephesians is [*]a worshipper of the great goddess Diana, [b]and of the image which fell down from [c]Jupiter?

36 Seeing then that these things cannot be spoken against, ye ought to be quiet, and to do nothing rashly.

37 For ye have brought hither these men, which are neither robbers of churches, nor yet blasphemers of your goddess.

38 Wherefore if [f]Demetrius, and the craftsmen which are with him, have a matter against any man, [†]the law is open, and there are deputies: let them implead one another.

39 But if ye enquire any thing concerning other matters, it shall be determined in a [‡]lawful assembly.

40 For we are in danger to be called in question for this day's uproar, there being no cause whereby we may give an account of this concourse.[12]

41 And when he had thus spoken, he dismissed the assembly.

CHAP. XX.

Paul goeth to Macedonia, 1. At Troas he celebrateth the Lord's supper, preacheth, and raiseth Eutychus, fallen from a window, to life, 6. At Miletus, Paul committeth the flock to the elders, 17, and prayeth with them, 36.

AND after the uproar was ceased, Paul called unto him the disciples, and embraced them, and departed for to go into Macedonia.

2 And when he had gone over those parts, and had [e]given them much exhortation, he came into Greece,

3 And there abode three months: and when the Jews laid wait for him, as he was about to sail into Syria, he purposed to return through Macedonia.

4 And there accompanied him into Asia, Sopater of Berea;[1] and of the Thessalonians, Aristarchus and Secundus; and Gaius of Derbe, and Timotheus; and of Asia, Tychicus and Trophimus.

5 These, going before, tarried for us at Troas.

6 And we sailed away from Philippi, after [u]the days of unleavened bread, and came unto them to Troas in five days; where we abode seven days.

7 ¶ And upon the first day of the week,[2] when [z]the disciples came together [a]to break bread,[3] Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow; [b]and continued his speech until midnight.

8 And there were many lights in the upper chamber, where they were gathered together.

9 And there sat in a window a certain young man named Eutychus, being fallen into a deep sleep: and as Paul was long preaching, he sunk down with sleep, and fell down from the third loft, and was taken up dead.

10 And Paul went down, [g]and fell on him, and, embracing him, said, [h]Trouble not yourselves; for his life is in him.

11 When he therefore was come up again, and had broken bread, and eaten, and talked a long while, even till break of day, so he departed.

12 And [l]they brought the young man alive, and were not a little comforted.

13 ¶ And we went before to ship, and sailed unto Assos, there intending to take in Paul: for so had he appointed, minding himself to go afoot.

thus at once induced to commit to the flames books which might have been sold for so large a sum, lest they should do further mischief to mankind.—I think it evident that these books did not merely contain an account of the tricks by which jugglers of any description imposed on men's senses; for in that case the persons concerned might have used the books to detect the artifices of such impostors; but they doubtless contained the rules and forms of those abominable incantations, by which an intercourse with evil spirits has continually been attempted or conducted.—Scott.

DEMETRIUS.—Ver. 24. Demetrius, a silversmith, a principal man it is likely of the trade, and one that would be thought to understand and consult the interests of it more than others of the company, complains against the apostle. Whether he worked in other sort of plate or no, we are not told; but the most advantageous branch of his trade was "making silver shrines for Diana." Some think these were medals stamped with the effigies of Diana, or her temple, or both; others think they were representations of the temple, with the image of Diana in it in miniature; all of silver, but so small, that people might carry them about with them, as the papists do their crucifixes. Those that came from far to pay their devotions at the temple of Ephesus, when they went home bought these little temples or shrines, to carry home with them, for the gratifying of the curiosity of their friends, and to preserve in their own mind the idea of that stately edifice. See how craftsmen, and crafty men too above the rank of silversmiths, make an advantage to themselves of people's superstition, and serve their worldly ends by it.

THE TUMULT.—Ver. 28—34. On this occasion they showed, 1. A great displeasure against the gospel and the preachers of it: "They were full of wrath," full of fury and indignation, so the word signifies. The craftsmen went stark mad when they were told that their trade and their idol were both in danger. 2. A great jealousy for the honour of their goddess. "They cried out, 'Great is Diana of the Ephesians,' and we are resolved to stand by her, and live and die in the defence of her. Are there any that expose her to contempt, or threaten her destruction? Let us alone to deal with them. Let Paul say ever so much to prove 'that those are no gods which are made with hands,' we will abide by it, that whatever comes of other gods and goddesses, 'Great is Diana of the Ephesians!' We must and will stand up for the religion of our country, which we have 'received by tradition from our fathers.'" Thus all people "walked every one in the name of their god," and thought well of their own; much more should the servants of the true God do so, who can say, "This God is our God for ever and ever." 3. A great disorder among themselves. "The whole city was full of confusion," the common and natural effect of an intemperate zeal for false religion; it throws all into confusion, dethrones reason, and enthrones passion; and men run together, not only not knowing one another's minds, but not knowing their own.—Henry.

THE TOWN CLERK.—Ver. 32—41. At length the town-clerk, or scribe, some magistrate of great authority, was enabled to appease the tumult, after which he spoke to the people with great address and ingenuity. He seemed to allow the truth and importance of their absurd traditions and idolatries, though it may be doubted whether he really believed any of them. He observed, that it was universally allowed that their city deemed it her chief honour, to support the temple and worship of Diana, and of her image, which immemorial tradition declared to have fallen down from Jupiter. As these things were undeniable, they ought to behave more quietly and cautiously. They had indeed apprehended two men, and were about to wreak their vengeance upon them; yet they had neither sacrilegiously robbed the temple of Diana, nor those of any other of their deities, nor had they uttered any blasphemies against their goddess. The apostle was not present, yet doubtless he too was meant; but while his doctrine undermined the foundations of idolatry, we may suppose that he never went out of his way to rail at any particular idol.—The town-clerk, or scribe, proceeded to show, that if any persons were injured in their property or business, they might bring the matter before the proconsuls in a regular course of law, and thus obtain satisfaction. But if the complaint related to matters of religion, or other public interests, they ought to be decided in a regular meeting of the people, and not before the populace. So that, in fact, the law had been violated that day by these riotous proceedings, and the city and magistrates were liable to be called into question by the Romans for it, as they could assign no sufficient cause for the insurrection. By this politic harangue the multitude were prevailed with to disperse; and Paul and his friends were preserved from the most imminent danger.—Scott.

CHAP. XX. EUTYCHUS.—Ver. 9. Observe, 1. The infirmity with which he was overtaken. It is probable that his parents brought him, though but a boy, to the assembly, out of a desire to have him well instructed in "the things of God," by such a preacher as Paul. Parents should "bring their children to hear sermons as soon as they can hear with understanding," Neh. viii. 2; even "the little ones," Deut. xxix. 11. Now this youth was to be blamed, (1.) That he presumptuously "sat in the window," unglazed, perhaps, and so exposed himself; whereas if he could have been content to sit on the floor, he had been safe. Boys that love to climb, or otherwise endanger themselves, to the grief of their parents, consider not how much it is also an offence to God. (2.) That he slept, nay, he "fell into a deep sleep, when Paul was preaching;" which was a sign

14 And when he met with us at Assos,[4] we took him in, and came to Mitylene.

15 And we sailed thence, and came the next day over against Chios; and the next day we arrived at Samos, and tarried at Trogyllium; and the next day we came to Miletus.

16 For Paul had determined to sail by Ephesus, because he would not spend the time in Asia; for he hasted, if it were possible for him, to be at Jerusalem [q]the day of Pentecost.

17 ¶ And from Miletus he sent to Ephesus, and called the elders[5] of the church.

18 And when they were come to him, he said unto them, Ye know, from the first day that I came into Asia, after what manner I have been with you at all seasons,

19 [u]Serving the Lord with all humility of mind, and with many tears, and temptations, which befell me [x]by the lying in wait of the Jews;

20 And how I kept back nothing that was [c]profitable unto you, but have shewed you, and have taught you publickly, and from house to house,

21 Testifying both to the Jews, and also to the Greeks, [g]repentance toward God, and [h]faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ.

22 And now, behold, [i]I go bound in the spirit unto Jerusalem, not knowing the things that shall befall me there:

23 Save that [l]the Holy Ghost witnesseth in every city, saying that bonds and afflictions *abide me.

24 But none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that [o]I might finish my course with joy, [p]and the ministry, which I have received of the Lord Jesus, [q]to testify the gospel of the grace of God.

25 And now, behold, [s]I know that ye all, among whom I have gone, [t]preaching the kingdom of God, shall [u]see my face no more.

26 Wherefore I take you to record this day, that I am pure from the blood of all men.

27 For I have not shunned to declare unto you [x]all the counsel of God.

28 ¶ Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, [d]over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers,[6] [f]to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood.

29 For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous [l]wolves[7] enter in among you, not sparing the flock.

30 Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things [m]to draw away disciples after them.

31 Therefore [n]watch, and remember, that, by the space of three years, I ceased not to warn every one night and day with tears.

AND it came to pass, that, after we were gotten from them, and had launched, we came with a straight course unto Coos,[1] and the day following unto Rhodes, and from thence unto Patara:

2 And finding a ship sailing over unto [d]Phenicia, we went aboard, and set forth.

3 Now, when we had discovered [e]Cyprus, we left it on the left hand, and sailed into [f]Syria, and landed at [g]Tyre: for there the ship was to unlade her burden.

4 And finding disciples, we tarried there seven days; who [k]said to Paul through the Spirit, that he should not go up to Jerusalem.

5 And when we had accomplished those days, we departed, and went our way; and they all brought us on our way, with wives and children, till we were out of the city: and [n]we kneeled down on the shore, and prayed.

6 And when we had taken our leave one of another, we took ship; and they returned home again.

e had not duly "attended to the things that Paul spake of," though they were reighty things. The particular notice taken of his sleeping makes us willing to hope one of the rest slept, though it was sleeping time, and after supper; but this youth fell ast asleep, he was carried away with it; so the word is; which intimates, that he strove gainst it, but was overpowered by it, and at last "sunk down with sleep." 2. The alamity with which he was seized herein; "He fell down from the third loft, and was aken up dead." Some think that the hand of Satan was in it, by the divine permission, and that he designed it for a disturbance to this assembly, and a reproach to Paul nd it. Others think that God designed it for a warning to all people to take heed of eeping when they are hearing the word preached; and certainly we are to make that se of it. 3. The miraculous mercy showed him in his recovery "to life again," ver. 10. t gave a present distraction to the assembly, and an interruption to Paul's preaching: ut it proved an occasion of that which was a great confirmation to his preaching, and elped to set it home, and make it effectual. "Paul fell on the dead body, and embraced it," thereby expressing a great compassion to, and an affectionate concern for is young man; so far was he from saying, "He was well enough served for minding little what I said!" Before they parted, "they brought the young man alive" into the ongregation, every one congratulating him upon his return to life from the dead, and they were not a little comforted," ver. 12.

PAUL'S COURSE.—Ver. 24. He cares not when the period of his life comes, nor how; it ever so soon, ever so sudden, ever so sad, as to outward circumstances, so that he ay but "finish his course with joy." 1. He looks upon his life as "a course, a race," the word is. Our life is "a race set before us," Heb. xii. 1. This intimates that we ave our labours appointed us, for we were not sent into the world to be idle; and our mits appointed us, for we were not sent into the world to be here always; but to pass hrough the world, nay, to run through it; and it is soon run through; I may add, to n the gauntlet through it. 2. He counts upon the "finishing of his course," and speaks f it as sure and near, and that which he had his thoughts continually upon. Dying is e end of our "race," when we come off either with honour or shame. 3. He is full of are to finish it well, which implies a holy desire of obtaining, and a holy fear of coming hort. "Oh that I may but finish my course with joy, and then all will be well, perectly and eternally well." 4. He thinks nothing too much to do, or too hard to suffer, that he might but finish well, finish with joy. We must look upon it as the business of our fe to provide for a joyful death, that we may not only die safely, but die comfortably.

PARTING PRAYER.—Ver. 36. "And when Paul had thus spoken, he kneeled down and rayed with them all." And no doubt it was a prayer every way suited to the present mournful occasion. He committed them to God in his prayer, prayed that he would not leave them, but continue his presence with them. 1. It was a joint prayer; he not only "prayed for them" but "prayed with them, prayed with them all;" that they might put up the same petitions for themselves and one another, that he put up to God for "them all;" and that they might learn what to ask of God for themselves when he was gone. Public prayers are so far from being intended to supersede our own secret prayers, and make them needless, that they are designed to quicken and encourage them, and to direct us in them. When we are alone, we should pray over the prayers that our ministers have put up with us. 2. It was a humble, reverent prayer; this was expressed by the posture they used; "he kneeled down and prayed with them;" which is the most proper gesture in prayer, and significant both of adoration and of petition, especially petition for the forgiveness of sin. St. Paul used it much; "I bow my knees," Eph. iii. 14. 3. It was a prayer after sermon; and we may suppose he prayed over what he had preached; he had committed the case of the church at Ephesus to those elders, and now he prays that God would enable them faithfully to discharge this great trust reposed in them, and would give them those measures of wisdom and grace which it required; he prayed for the flock, and all that belonged to it, "that the great Shepherd of the sheep" would take care of them all, and keep them from being a prey "to the grievous wolves." Thus he taught those ministers to pray for those they preached to, "that they might not labour in vain." 4. It was a parting prayer, which might be likely to leave lasting impressions, as the farewell sermon did. It is good for friends, when they part, to part with prayer. They parted with tears, abundance of tears, and most affectionate embraces. "They all wept sore;" we have reason to think that Paul himself began; though he was determined to go, and saw his call clear to other work, yet he was sorry in his heart to leave them, and many a tear it cost him; he that was so often "in tears," while he was with them, no doubt shed many at parting, so watering what he had sown among them. But the notice is taken of their tears, "they all wept sore;" there was not a dry eye among them; and it is probable the affectionate expressions Paul used in prayer set them a-weeping.—Henry.

CHAP. XXI. PAUL'S JOURNEY.—Ver. 1—6. The words translated "after we had gotten from them," literally mean, "being torn from them;" and denote that powerful reciprocal affection, which cemented the hearts of these Christian friends, and rendered their final separation at the call of duty so very painful, and the effect of so violent an effort.—Coos and Rhodes were well known islands in the Egean Sea: Patara was a city of Lycia upon the continent of Asia. Perhaps the ship, in which Paul and his friends

10 And as we tarried there many days, there came down from Judea a certain prophet named [b]Agabus.[4]

11 And when he was come unto us, [c]he took Paul's girdle, and bound his own hands and feet, and said, [d]Thus saith the Holy Ghost, [e]So shall the Jews at Jerusalem bind the man that owneth this girdle, [f]and shall deliver him into the hands of the Gentiles.

12 And when we heard these things, both we, and they of that place, besought him not to go up to Jerusalem.

13 Then Paul answered, [h]What mean ye, to weep, and to break mine heart? for I am ready not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus.

14 And when he would not be persuaded, we ceased, saying, [i]The will of the Lord be done.

15 And after those days we took up our carriages,[5] and went up to Jerusalem.[6]

16 [l]There went with us also certain [n]of the disciples of Cesarea, and brought with them one Mnason of [o]Cyprus, an old disciple, with whom we should lodge.

17 And when we were come to Jerusalem, the brethren received us gladly.

18 And the day following, Paul went in with us [r]unto James;[7] and [s]all the elders were present.

19 And when he had saluted them, [t]he declared particularly what things God had wrought among the Gentiles by his ministry.

20 And when they heard it, [u]they glorified the Lord, and said unto him, Thou seest, brother, [x]how many thousands of Jews there are which believe; [z]and they are all zealous of the law;

21 And they are informed of thee, that thou teachest all the Jews which are among the Gentiles to forsake Moses, saying, that they ought not to circumcise their children, neither to walk after the customs.

22 What is it therefore? the multitude must needs come together: for they will hear that thou art come.

23 Do therefore this that we say to thee: [c]we have four men which have a vow on them;

24 Them take, and purify thyself with them, and be at charges with them,[8] [e]that they may shave their heads: and all may know that those things, whereof they were informed concerning thee, are nothing; [f]but that thou thyself also walkest orderly, and keepest the law.

25 As touching the Gentiles which believe, we have written and concluded that they observe no such thing, save only that they keep themselves from things offered to idols, and from blood, and from strangled, and from fornication.

26 Then Paul took the men, and the next day purifying himself with them, entered into the temple, [i]to signify the accomplishment of the days of purification, until that an offering should be offered for every one of them.

27 ¶ And when the seven days were almost ended, the Jews which were of Asia,[9] when they saw him in the temple, [l]stirred up all the people, [m]and laid hands on him,

28 Crying out, Men of Israel, help: this is the man that teacheth all men every where against the people, and the law, and this place: and further, brought Greeks also into the temple, and hath polluted this holy place.

29 (For they had seen before with him in the city, [q]Trophimus an Ephesian, whom they supposed that Paul had brought into the temple.)

30 And all the city was moved, and the people ran together; [s]and they took Paul, and drew him out of the temple: and forthwith the doors were shut.

31 And [t]as they went about to kill him, tidings came unto the chief captain of the band, [x]that all Jerusalem was in an uproar;

32 Who immediately [y]took soldiers and centurions, and ran down unto them: and when they saw the chief captain and the soldiers, they left [a]beating of Paul.

33 Then the chief captain came near, and took him, and commanded him to be [b]bound with two chains; and demanded who he was, and what he had done.

34 And some cried one thing, some another, among the multitude: and when he could not know the certainty for the tumult, he commanded him to be carried into the castle.[10]

35 And when he came upon the stairs, so it was, that he was borne of the soldiers [g]for the violence of the people.

36 For the multitude of the people followed after, crying, [h]Away with him.

37 And as Paul was to be led into the castle, he said unto the chief captain, May I speak unto thee? Who said, Canst thou speak Greek?

38 Art not thou that Egyptian,[11] which before these days madest an uproar, and leddest out into the wilderness four thousand men that were murderers?

39 But Paul said, [l]I am a man which am a Jew of Tarsus, a city in [m]Cilicia, [n]a citizen of no mean city: and I beseech thee, [o]suffer me to speak unto the people.

40 And when he had given him licence, Paul stood [p]on the stairs, [q]and beckoned with the hand unto the people. And when there was made [r]a great silence, he spake unto them in the [s]Hebrew tongue, saying, had passed thus far, was bound to this port: they, however, met with another, that was about to sail directly into Phenicia, in which they embarked; and, passing between the island of Cyprus and the coast of Syria, they landed at Tyre. Here they sought out the disciples of their Lord; and as the most dangerous part of their voyage was past, and time enough remained for their journey to Jerusalem before the Pentecost, they continued here a week; in order to spend one Lord's day with their brethren, as well as to confer together on the interesting subject of their common faith. Some disciples here also cautioned Paul not to go up to Jerusalm; they were shown by the spirit of prophecy, that he would meet with great sufferings and trials, if he went thither; and they supposed that he might lawfully decline the journey, and avoid the danger; but he judged otherwise.

AGABUS.—Ver. 7—14. The apostle and his friends finished their course by sea, by sailing from Tyre to Ptolemais, a city on the sea-coast of Galilee, so called, because rebuilt by Ptolemy, king of Egypt; having before been called Accho. Here too they met with disciples, with whom they spent but one day, and on the next they journeyed by land to Cesarea. Philip, one of the seven first deacons, whose usefulness as an evangelist is before recorded, now resided in this city; and probably he had laboured there and in the adjacent parts, during the intervening years. He had the peculiar honour of having four daughters, all endued with the gift of prophecy: and perhaps they gave intimations to Paul of his approaching trials. As, however, he and his friends stayed at Cesarea several days, Agabus, of whom we read before, chap. xi. 28, came from Judea, properly so called, (for Cesarea lay in that part of the land which belonged to the kings of Israel, not in that belonging to the kings of Judah;) and, with a significant emblem, he certified Paul by the Holy Spirit, that at Jerusalem, he would be seized as a malefactor by the Jews, who would cause him to be fettered, hand and foot, and delivered to the Gentiles, as the Lord Jesus had been. This prediction induced both the apostle's companions and the Christians of Cesarea earnestly to dissuade him from the intended journey, out of love to him, and the value which they set on his useful life and labours. But he considered himself bound in duty to accomplish the service with which he had been intrusted, of conveying the oblations of the Gentile converts to the church at Jerusalem; and on this and other accounts, he was steadfastly purposed to proceed, whatever persecutions might await him. The prospect indeed of bonds and imprisonment could not move him; yet the affectionate entreaties of his friends exceedingly distressed his feeling mind: and he earnestly expostulated with them, for thus weeping, and breaking his heart with their ill-timed sorrows; which unfitted him for his duty, when they ought to have encouraged him in it: for, by the grace of God, he was ready either to be bound, or put to death as a martyr, for the honour of his beloved Saviour, either now at Jerusalem, or whenever he should be called to do it. When therefore they saw him fixed in his purpose, they no more attempted to dissuade him from it; but submitted to the will of God, as to the event, being satisfied that he could and would overrule it for good.—Scott.

CONVERTED JEWS.—Ver. 20. "Thou seest, brother, how many thousands of the Jews there are which believe." They call him "brother," for they looked upon him as a joint commissioner with them in gospel-work, though they were of the circumcision, and he the apostle of the Gentiles, though they were conformists, and he a nonconformist; yet they were brethren, and owned the relation. Thou hast been in some of our assemblies, and seest how numerous they are; "how many myriads of Jews believe." The word signifies, not "thousands," but "ten thousands." Even among the Jews, who were most prejudiced against the gospel, there were great multitudes that received it; for the grace of God can break down the strongest holds of Satan. The number of the names at first was but "one hundred and twenty," yet now "many thousands." Let none therefore despise the day of small things; for though the beginning be small, God can make the latter end greatly to increase. Hereby it appeared that God had not quite "cast away his people" the Jews, for among them there was "a remnant," an "election" that "obtained;" see Rom. xi. 1, 5, 7, "many thousands that believed." And this account which they could give to Paul of the success of the gospel among the Jews, no doubt was as grateful to Paul as the account which he gave them of the conversion of the Gentiles was to them; for his heart's desire and prayer to God for the Jews was, "that they might be saved."

FALSE CHARGE AGAINST PAUL.—Ver. 28. He "has brought Gentiles also into the temple;" into the inner court of the temple, which none that were uncircumcised were admitted, under any pretence, to come into; there was written upon the wall that enclosed this inner court, in Greek and Latin, "It is a capital crime for strangers to enter," Joseph. Antiq. lib. 15, cap. 14. Paul was himself a Jew, and had right to enter into the court of the Jews. And they, seeing some with him there that joined with him in his devotions, concluded that Trophimus an Ephesian, who was a Gentile, was one of them. Why? did they see him there? Truly, no; but they had seen him with Paul in the streets of the city, which was no crime at all, and therefore they affirm that he was with Paul in the inner court of the temple, which was a heinous crime. They had "seen him with him in the city," and therefore they "supposed that Paul had brought him" with him "into the temple," which was utterly false.—Henry.

CHAP. XXII.

Paul declareth his conversion, 1. He escapeth scourging by pleading his privilege as a Roman, 25.

MEN, brethren, and fathers, hear ye my defence which I make now unto you.

2 (And when they heard that he spake in the Hebrew tongue to them, they kept the more silence: and he saith,)

3 I am verily a man which am a Jew, born in Tarsus, a city in Cilicia, yet brought up in this city [s]at the feet of [h]Gamaliel,[1] and taught according to the perfect manner of the law of the fathers, [k]and was zealous toward God, as ye all are this day.

4 And [l]I persecuted this way unto the death,[2] binding and delivering into prisons both men and women.

5 As also the high priest doth bear me witness, and all the estate of the elders: from whom also I received letters unto the brethren, and went to Damascus, to bring them which were there bound unto Jerusalem for to be punished.

6 And it came to pass, [q]that, as I made my journey, and was come nigh unto Damascus, about noon, suddenly there shone from heaven a great light round about me.

7 And I fell unto the ground, and heard a voice saying unto me, Saul, Saul, [u]why persecutest thou me?

8 And I answered, Who art thou, Lord? And he said unto me, [x]I am Jesus of Nazareth,[3] [y]whom thou persecutest.

9 And they that were with me saw indeed the light, and were afraid; [a]but they heard not the voice of him that spake to me.

10 And I said, What shall I do, Lord? And the Lord said unto me, Arise, and go into Damascus; [c]and there it shall be told thee of all things which are appointed for thee to do.

11 And [d]when I could not see for the glory of that light, being led by the hand of them that were with me, I came into Damascus.

12 And one Ananias, [g]a devout man according to the law, having a good report of all the Jews which dwelt there,

13 Came unto me, and stood, and said unto me, [i]Brother Saul, receive thy sight. And the same hour I looked upon him.

14 And he said, The God of our fathers [j]hath chosen thee, that thou shouldest know his will, and see [n]that Just One,[4] and shouldest [o]hear the voice of his mouth.

15 For [p]thou shalt be his witness unto all men of what thou hast seen and heard.

16 And now, [r]why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, [t]calling on the name of the Lord.[5]

17 And it came to pass, that, when I was come again to Jerusalem, even [z]while I prayed in the temple, I was in a trance;

18 And saw him saying unto me, [b]Make haste, and get thee quickly out of Jerusalem: [e]for they will not receive thy testimony concerning me.

19 And I said, Lord, they know that I imprisoned and beat in every synagogue them that believed on thee:

20 And when the blood of thy [e]martyr Stephen was shed, I also was standing by, [e]and consenting unto his death, and kept the raiment of them that slew him.

21 And he said unto me, Depart: [f]for I will send thee far hence unto the Gentiles.

22 ¶ And they gave him audience unto this word, and then lifted up their voices, and said, Away with such a fellow from the earth; for it is not fit that he should live.

23 And as they cried out, and cast off their clothes,[6] and threw dust into the air,

24 The chief captain commanded him to be brought into the castle, and bade [l]that he should be examined by scourging;[7] that he might know wherefore they cried so against him.

25 And as they bound him with thongs, Paul said unto the centurion that stood by, [n]Is it lawful for you to scourge a man that is a Roman, and uncondemned?

26 When the centurion heard that, he went and told the chief captain, saying, Take heed what thou doest: for this man is a Roman.

27 Then the chief captain came, and said unto him, Tell me, art thou a Roman? He said, Yea.

28 And the chief captain answered, With a great sum obtained I this freedom.[8] And Paul said, But I was free-born.[9]

29 Then straightway they departed from him which should have *examined him: and the chief captain also was afraid, after he knew that he was a Roman, and because he had bound him.

30 On the morrow, because he would have known the certainty wherefore he was accused of the Jews, he loosed him from his bands, and commanded the chief priests and all their council to appear, and brought Paul down, and set him before them.

CHAP. XXIII.

Paul pleadeth his cause, 1. Dissension among his accusers, 7. He is sent to Felix, 23.

AND Paul, [a]earnestly beholding the council, said, [b]Men and brethren, [c]I have lived in all good conscience before God until this day.

2 And the high priest [d]Ananias commanded them that stood by him to smite him on the mouth.

him, who was surprised to hear him readily use the Greek language; as he supposed him to have been an Egyptian, who some time before had made an insurrection in the city, and, leading forth a numerous banditti, had done great mischief: and when his followers were destroyed or dispersed, he had escaped; so that it was natural for Lysias to suppose Paul to be the same person, attempting to excite new disturbances. The apostle, however, assured him that he was a Jew, and a native of Tarsus, and so a citizen of an eminent city: he therefore begged of him, that he might be permitted to address the multitude, in order to silence their clamours and rectify their misapprehensions; by which the tribune also would learn who he was, and what he had done. Accordingly, having got permission, he placed himself on the top of the stairs, and made a signal with his hand to the multitude, that he wanted to speak to them; and curiosity concurring with other motives, they observed a profound silence, whilst he addressed them in the Hebrew tongue, at least in that dialect of which it was generally used.—"Four thousand," &c. Josephus mentions thirty thousand men, whom this Egyptian, (whose name is not known,) had collected together; but it is probable that he "led forth" only four thousand, and the rest came to him in the wilderness; or only four thousand of the company were murderers, sicarii, from sica, a short sword, which they concealed under their garments till an occasion was afforded them of assassinating the objects of their vindictive cruelty.—Scott.

CHAP. XXII. PAUL'S CONVERSION.—See Matt. ix. 1.

CLAMOUR AGAINST THE APOSTLE.—Ver. 21. "'Away with such a fellow' as this 'from the earth,' who pretends to have a commission to preach to the Gentiles; why, 'it is not fit that he should live.'" Thus the men that have been the greatest blessings of their age, have been represented not only as the burthens of the earth, but the plague of their generation. He that was worthy of the greatest honours of life, is condemned as not worthy of life itself. See what different sentiments God and men have of good men, and yet they both agree in this, that they are not likely to live long in this world. Paul says of the godly Jews, that they were men "of whom the world was not worthy," Heb. xi. 38. And "therefore" they must be removed, that the world may be justly punished with the loss of them. The ungodly Jews here say of Paul, that it was "not fit he should live;" and "therefore" he must be removed, that the world may be eased of the burthen of him, as of the "two witnesses," Rev. xi. 10. They went stark mad against Paul, and against the chief captain for not killing him immediately, at their request, or throwing him as a prey into their teeth, that they might devour him.

TORTURE THREATENED.—Ver. 25. "As they bound him with thongs," or leathern bands, to the whipping post, as they used the vilest of malefactors in bridewell from whom they would extort a confession, he made no outcry against the injustice of their proceedings against an innocent man, but very mildly let them understand the illegality of their proceedings against him as a citizen of Rome; which he had done once before at Philippi, after he had been scourged, chap. xvi. 37, but here he makes use of it for prevention. He "said to the centurion that stood by," "You know the law; pray 'is it lawful for you' who are yourselves Romans, to 'scourge a man that is a Roman, and uncondemned?'" The manner of his speaking, plainly speaks what a holy security and serenity of mind this good man enjoyed, not disturbed either with anger or fear in the midst of all those indignities that were done him, and the danger he was in. The Romans had a law, (it was called lex Sempronia,) that if any magistrate did chastise or condemn a freeman of Rome, indicta causa—without hearing him speak for himself, and deliberating upon the whole of his case, he should be liable to the sentence of the people, who were very jealous of their liberties. It is indeed the privilege of every man not to have wrong done him, except it be proved he has done wrong; as it is of every Englishman by Magna Charta, not to be dis-seized of his life or freehold, but by a verdict of twelve men of his peers. The chief captain was surprised at this, and put into a fright: he had taken Paul to be a vagabond Egyptian, and wondered he could speak Greek, chap. xxi. 37, but is much more suprised now he finds that he is as good a gentleman as himself. How many men of great worth and merit are despised because they are not known, are looked upon and treated as the "offscouring of all things," when those that count them so, if they knew their true character, would own them to be of "the excellent ones of the earth!" The "chief captain" had centurions, under-officers, attending him, chap. xxi. 32. One of these reports this matter to the chief captain, ver. 26. "Take heed what thou doest, for this man is a Roman," and what indignity is done to him, will be construed an offence against the majesty of the Roman people; as they loved to speak. They all knew what a value was put upon this privilege of the Roman citizens.—Scott.

CHAP. XXIII. THE HIGH PRIEST'S RAGE.—Ver. 2. 1. The high priest was highly offended at Paul; some think, because he looked so boldly and earnestly at the council, as if he would face them down; others, because he did not address himself particularly to him as president, with some title of honour and respect, but spake freely and familiarly to them all, as men and brethren. His protestation of his integrity was provocation enough to one who was resolved to "run him down," and make him odious. When he could charge him with no crime, he thought it was crime enough that he asserted his

3 Then said Paul unto him, God shall smite thee,[1] thou whited wall: for sittest thou to judge me after the law, and commandest me to be [h]smitten contrary to the law?

4 And they that stood by said, Revilest thou God's high priest?

5 Then said Paul, I wist not,[2] brethren, that he was the high priest: for it is written, [k]Thou shalt not speak evil of the ruler of thy people.

6 But when Paul perceived that the one part were Sadducees, and the other Pharisees, he cried out in the council, Men and brethren, I am a Pharisee, the son of a Pharisee: [n]of the hope and resurrection of the dead I am called in question.

7 And when he had so said, there arose a dissension between the Pharisees and the Sadducees: and the multitude was divided.

8 For the [p]Sadducees say that there is no resurrection, neither angel, nor spirit; but the Pharisees confess both.

9 And there arose a great cry: and the scribes that were of the Pharisees' part arose, and strove, saying, [q]We find no evil in this man: but, if a spirit or an angel hath spoken to him, [r]let us not fight against God.

10 And when there arose a great dissension, the chief captain, fearing lest Paul should have been pulled in pieces of them, commanded the soldiers to go down, and to take him by force from among them, and to bring him into the castle.

11 And the night following [x]the Lord stood by him, and said, Be of good cheer, Paul; [z]for as thou hast testified of me in Jerusalem, so [a]must thou bear witness also at Rome.

12 ¶ And when it was day, certain of the Jews banded together, and bound themselves [*]under a curse, saying [d]that they would neither eat nor drink till they had killed Paul.

13 And they were more than forty [e]which had made this conspiracy.[3]

14 And they came to the chief priests and elders, and said, We have bound ourselves under a great curse, that we will eat nothing until we have slain Paul.

15 Now therefore ye with the council signify to the chief captain, that he bring him down unto you to-morrow, as though ye would enquire something more perfectly concerning him: and we, or ever he come near, are ready to kill him.

16 And [h]when Paul's sister's son heard of their lying in wait, he went and entered into the castle, and told Paul.

17 Then Paul called [i]one of the centurions[4] unto him, and said, Bring this young man unto the chief captain: for he hath a certain thing to tell him.

18 So he took him, and brought him to the chief captain, and said, [k]Paul the prisoner called me unto him, and prayed me to bring this young man unto thee, who hath [l]something to say unto thee.

19 Then the chief captain [m]took him by the hand, and went with him aside privately, and asked him, [n]What is that thou hast to tell me?

27 This man [b]was taken of the Jews, and should have been killed of them: then came I with an army, and rescued him, [c]having understood that he was a Roman.

own innocency. 2. In his rage he ordered him to be smitten, so to put disgrace upon him, and to be smitten "on the mouth," as having offended with his lips, and in token of his enjoining him silence. This brutish and barbarous method he had recourse to, when he "could not answer the wisdom and spirit wherewith he spake."

Pharisee and Sadducee in Combat.—Ver. 6—10. The apostle personally knew many members of the sanhedrim, and he was sensible that there were two parties among them of opposite principles, and very vehement in their contests with each other, though they were now agreed in persecuting him. As therefore they would pay no impartial attention to reason, or facts however authenticated, he attempted to divert their violence from himself upon each other. Accordingly, he cried aloud, that he was the son of a Pharisee, had been educated in the opinions of that sect, and still maintained the principal doctrines, which were controverted between them and the Sadducees: nay, that indeed he was called in question at that time, for professing the hope, and bearing testimony to the reality, of the resurrection of the dead. The principal fact, which he attested, as the apostle of Christ, was his resurrection from the dead to be the first-fruits of his people; and all the docrines of the gospel were intimately connected with that fundamental principle. The first persecution of the church resulted from the testimony of the apostles to the resurrection of their crucified Lord: the Sadducees took the lead in it, because "they preached through Jesus the resurrection of the dead;" and the enmity of many in the council against Paul, at this time, was increased by their consciousness, that his doctrine was wholly subversive of their favourite scheme: so that in every way, he was called to account for preaching Jesus as risen, and the hope and doctrine of a future resurrection. This was therefore an evident truth: he was not obliged to bring forward all the doctrines which he professed, when not interrogated about them; and it seems to have been entirely justifiable in him, by this seasonable profession, to draw off the Pharisees from the side of his persecutors, and to induce them to afford him some protection amidst all this illegal violence. At the same time he showed a most consummate sagacity, and a deep acquaintance with the human heart, and of that universal disposition, which continually manifests itself, of favouring those who take our part in any contested point.

Conspiracy against Paul.—Ver. 12—22. The Jews perceiving that Lysias was resolved to protect Paul, unless legally convicted of some crime, began to fear that their malice would be disappointed. Therefore forty of the most zealous of them, (probably not members of the council, nor yet persons of the lowest order,) supposing that they should do God service by murdering his minister, conspired together, engaging by a solemn oath, and an anathema or imprecation of divine vengeance on themselves, if they tasted either meat or drink, till they had slain Paul. Nay, so far from being ashamed of this most atrocious design of assassination, they gloried in it as highly meritorious: and knowing that many of the priests, and elders of the council would favour the design; (for, the Sadducees seem to have been the more numerous in that assembly;) they informed them of their whole plan, and assigned them the part which they should perform in order to accomplish it; whilst the guilt or odium of the measure, if there were any, would rest wholly on the conspirators. By what means Paul's nephew discovered this diabolical design, is not known: but as so many persons were privy to it, and as the conspirators only wished to conceal it from Lysias, till it was executed, they might not be all very cautious in speaking of it. Providence, however, took this method of detecting and disappointing it. Paul, though assured of protection, deemed it his duty to use every proper means for his own safety: and the conduct of Lysias towards the young man showed much affability, good sense, generosity, and regard to truth and equity, which in a heathen formed a striking contrast to the insidious, violent, cruel, and iniquitous conduct of the Jewish priests and rulers, who were evidently ripe for vengeance.—Scott.

The Chief Captain's Letter.—Ver. 26. He gives a just and fair account of Paul's case: 1. That he was one "that the Jews" had a pique against, "they had taken him," and would "have killed him:" and perhaps Felix knew the temper of "the Jews" so well, that he did not think much the worse of him for that, ver. 27. 2. That he had protected him because "he was a Roman;" "When they were about to kill him, 'I came with an army,' a considerable body of men, 'and rescued him;'" which action for a citizen of Rome would recommend him to the Roman governor. 3. That he could not understand the merits of his cause, nor what it was that made him so odious to "the Jews," and obnoxious to their ill-will. He took the proper method to know, he "brought him forth into their council," ver. 28, to be examined there; hoping that, either from their complaints, or his own confessions, he should learn something of the ground of all this clamour, but he found "that he was accused of questions of their law," ver. 29, about "the hope of the resurrection of the dead," ver. 6. This "chief captain" was a man of sense and honour, and had good principles in him of justice and humanity; and yet see how slightly he speaks of "another world," and "the great things of that world," as if "that" were a question which is of undoubted certainty, and which both sides agreed in, except the Sadducees; and as if "that" were a question only "of their law," which is of the utmost concern to all mankind! 4. That thus far he understood that there was "nothing laid to his charge worthy of death or of bonds," much less proved or made out against him. "The Jews" had, by their wickedness, made themselves odious to the world, had polluted their own honour, and profaned their own crown, had brought dis-

Paul, accused by Tertullus, 1, answereth for himself, 10. He preacheth Christ to the governor and his wife, 24. Felix leaveth Paul in prison, 27.

AND after five days Ananias the high priest descended with the elders, and with a certain [c]orator named Tertullus, who informed the governor against Paul.

2 And when he was called forth, Tertullus began to accuse him, saying, [d]Seeing that by thee we enjoy great quietness, and that very worthy deeds are done unto this nation by thy providence,

3 We accept it always, and in all places, [f]most noble Felix, with all thankfulness.

4 Notwithstanding, that I be not further tedious unto thee, I pray thee that thou wouldest hear us of thy clemency a few words.

5 For we have found this man a pestilent fellow, [i]and a mover of sedition among all the Jews throughout the world, and a ringleader of the sect of the [l]Nazarenes:[l]

6 Who also hath gone about to profane the temple: whom we took, [o]and would have judged according to our law:

7 But the chief captain Lysias came upon us, and with great violence took him away out of our hands,

8 Commanding his accusers to come unto thee: by examining of whom thyself mayest take knowledge of all these things whereof we accuse him.

9 And the Jews also assented, saying, That these things were so.

10 ¶ Then Paul, after that the governor [u]had beckoned unto him to speak, answered, Forasmuch as I know that thou hast been of many years [x]a judge[z] unto this nation, I do the more cheerfully answer for myself:

11 Because that thou mayest understand, that there are yet but twelve days since I went up to Jerusalem for [a]to worship.

12 And they neither found me in the temple disputing with any man, neither raising up the people, neither in the synagogues, nor in the city:

13 Neither [b]can they prove the things whereof they now accuse me.

14 But this I confess unto thee, that after the way which they call [e]heresy, so worship I [f]the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written [h]in the law and in the prophets:

15 And [l]have hope toward God, which they themselves also allow, [k]that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust.

16 And herein do I exercise myself, to have always a conscience void of offence toward God, and toward men.

17 Now, after many years,[s] I came [m]to bring alms to my nation, [n]and offerings.

18 Whereupon certain Jews from Asia found me purified in the temple, neither with multitude, nor with tumult:

19 Who ought to have been here before thee, and object, if they had ought against me.

20 Or else let these same here say, if they have found any evil-doing in me, while I stood before the council,

21 Except it be for this one voice, that I cried standing among them, [q]Touching the resurrection of the dead I am called in question by you this day.

22 ¶ And when Felix heard these things, [r]having more perfect knowledge of that way,[t] he deferred them, and said, When Lysias the chief captain shall come down, I will know the uttermost of your matter.

23 And he commanded a centurion to keep Paul, [t]and to let him have liberty, and that he should forbid none of [u]his acquaintance to minister or come unto him.

24 And after certain days, when Felix came with his wife Drusilla, which was a Jewess, he sent for Paul, and heard him concerning [y]the faith in Christ.

25 And as he reasoned of [a]righteousness, temperance, [c]and judgment to come, Felix trembled, and answered, [d]Go thy way for this time; [f]when I have a convenient season, I will call for thee.

26 He hoped also that money should have been given him of Paul, that he might loose him: wherefore he sent for him the oftener, and communed with him.

27 But after two years [k]Porcius Festus came into Felix' room: and Felix, willing to shew the Jews a pleasure, left Paul bound.

grace upon their church, their law, and their holy place, and then they cried out against Paul, as having diminished the reputation of them; and was this a crime "worthy of death or of bonds?" 5. His referring Paul's case to Felix, ver. 30. "'When it was told me, that the Jews laid wait for the man,' to kill him, without any legal process against him, 'I sent straightway to thee,' who art the most proper person to hear the cause, and give judgment upon it, and let 'his accusers' go after him, if they please, and 'say before thee what they have against him,' for, being bred a soldier, I will never pretend to be a judge, and so 'farewell.'"—Henry.

CHAP. XXIV. TERTULLUS.—Ver. 1—9. In order to render their cause more specious before the governor, they retained a noted orator as their counsel; but disingenuity and falsehood are more prominent in his speech, than oratorical abilities. He, however, understood the art of flattery; and lavished high encomiums on Felix, who was a very bad character. He panegyrized him as the author of peace and prosperity to the nation; and as if they had been deeply indebted to his wise foresight, and beneficent plans, and prudent administration; "and this in language which at least implied such a profane disregard to divine Providence, as was not customary in the public discourses of the most eminent persons among idolaters." [Doddridge.] Yet we read of no benefit whatever, resulting from Felix's oppressive government, except that he freed the country from some daring gangs of robbers.—"All historians agree, that he was a man of so bad a character, that his government was a plague to all the provinces over which he presided: and as to Judea, its state under Felix was so far from being what Tertullus here represents, that Josephus, (besides what he says of the barbarous and cowardly assassination of Jonathan the high priest by his means,) declares that the Jews accused him before Nero of insufferable oppressions; and would certainly have ruined him, if his brother Pallas had not interposed in his favour." [Doddridge.] Tertullus, however, intimated, that he would have enlarged still more in encomiums on Felix, had he not feared being tedious to him.—Scott.

PAUL'S RELIGION.—Ver. 14. Paul adheres to the covenant, and sets up no other in opposition to it. The "promise made unto the fathers," Paul preached as "fulfilled to the children," chap. xiii. 32, 33, and so directed both his own devotions, and those of others, to God, as the "God of their fathers." He also refers to the practice of all his pious ancestors: "I worship" the same God that all "my fathers worshipped;" his religion was so far from being chargeable with novelty, that it gloried in its antiquity, and in an uninterrupted succession of its professors. Note, It is very comfortable in our worshipping God, to have an eye to him as the "God of our fathers." Our fathers trusted in him, and were owned by him, and he engaged to be "their God," and the "God of their seed." He approved himself theirs, and therefore if we serve him as they did, he will be ours.—Henry.

FELIX AND HIS WIFE.—Ver. 24—27. Felix seems to have been absent for a time from Cæsarea, and on his return he brought Drusilla with him. She was daughter to that Herod who beheaded James the brother of John, and sister to king Agrippa, who is afterwards mentioned: she was married to Azirus, king of the Emesenes, who had been circumcised in order to obtain her; but she had left her husband to cohabit with Felix, being a very profligate woman. Felix had heard many things concerning Jesus and the Christian religion: but he was curious to learn a more authentic and complete account of these matters from Paul: as Drusilla also seems to have been. The apostle was therefore sent for, that he might speak before the governor concerning the faith in Christ. What he said of his person, miracles, life, death, resurrection, salvation, and kingdom, we know not; but in order to show his noble auditors the tendency of the gospel and its importance to them, as well as to others; he reasoned about the nature and obligations of justice, equity, sobriety, temperance, and a proper government of the appetites and passions; and concerning a future judgment, when every man without distinction, must give an account of himself to God; and, if found guilty, be punished for his crimes in a most tremendous manner. This was a most suitable, bold, and faithful address of the prisoner to this powerful, oppressive, iniquitous, and adulterous judge, and his licentious paramour; and a proper method of showing them their need of the repentance, forgiveness, and grace of the gospel. Whilst the licentious Jewess seems to have remained obdurate; Felix was so convicted in his own conscience, that he trembled before his prisoner, from dread of the wrath to come; but instead of inquiring "what he must do to be saved?" he abruptly ended the conference, intimating that he was too much engaged at that time to consider the subject any further; but that when he had leisure, he would again send for Paul and hear his doctrine. Thus his terrors and convictions soon subsided; his avarice and other corrupt passions retained their full dominion; and knowing that the Christians were eminently liberal, by general report, as well by what he had heard of the alms and oblations sent by the apostle to Jerusalem; he hoped that they would buy his liberty with a considerable sum of money. He therefore kept him in prison, and frequently sent for him, and talked with him, but not concerning the faith of Christ: and at length, when succeeded by another governor, he left the apostle bound, in order to please the Jews by an act of injustice, and so prevent them from accusing him before the emperor. But in this he was disappointed: for they accused him of extortion and you are able, go down with me, and accuse this man, [g]if there be any wickedness in him.

6 And when he had tarried among them [*]more than ten days, he went down unto Cesarea; and the next day, [h]sitting on the judgment-seat, commanded Paul to be brought.

7 And when he was come, the Jews which came down from Jerusalem stood round about, [i]and laid many and grievous complaints against Paul, which they could not prove:

8 While he answered for himself, [k]Neither against the law of the Jews, neither against the temple, nor yet against Cesar, have I offended any thing at all.

9 But Festus, [l]willing to do the Jews a pleasure, answered Paul, and said, Wilt thou go up to Jerusalem, and there be judged of these things before me?

10 Then said Paul, [m]I stand at Cesar's judgment-seat,[2] where I ought to be judged: to the Jews have I done no wrong, as thou very well knowest.

11 For if I be an offender, or have committed any thing worthy of death, I refuse not to die: but if there be none of these things whereof these accuse me, no man may deliver me unto them. [q]I appeal unto Cesar.

12 ¶ Then Festus, when he had conferred with the council,[3] answered, Hast thou appealed unto Cesar? [r]unto Cesar shalt thou go.

13 And after certain days king Agrippa and Bernice came unto Cesarea [s]to salute Festus.

14 And when they had been there many days, Festus declared Paul's cause unto the king, saying, [u]There is a certain man left in bonds by Felix;

15 About whom, when I was at Jerusalem, the chief priests and the elders of the Jews informed me, desiring to have judgment against him.

16 To whom I answered, [y]It is not the manner of the Romans to deliver any man to die, before that he which is accused have the accusers face to face, [z]and have license to answer for himself concerning the crime laid against him.

17 Therefore, when they were come hither, without any delay on the morrow I sat on the judgment-seat, and commanded the man to be brought forth.

18 Against whom, when the accusers stood up, they brought none accusation of such things as I supposed:

19 But had [b]certain questions against him of their own [c]superstition,[4] and of one Jesus, [d]which was dead, whom Paul affirmed to be alive.

20 And because I [†]doubted of such manner of questions, I asked him whether he would go to Jerusalem, and there be judged of these matters.

oppression, and he narrowly escaped punishment on that account. Neither the apostle nor his friends would concur in Felix's bribery and extortion, even to purchase his liberty: they would not "do evil that good might come."—Scott.

CHAP. XXV. PAUL BEFORE FESTUS.—Ver. 9—11. Festus, though doubtless more and more convinced of Paul's innocence, was so desirous of obliging the principal persons among the Jews, that he proposed to Paul, that he should go to Jerusalem, and be tried there before him, in the presence of the council. How wonderful then was it, that he did not before send for him to Jerusalem, at the request of the same persons! It may be supposed, that Festus was not aware of a conspiracy formed against his life: but probably the apostle was fully informed of it, or at least was assured that no kind or degree of violence or deceit would be wanting to take away his life. Still, though assured by the Lord himself, that he should bear testimony to him at Rome, he used all proper means for his own preservation: so far was he from thinking, that the Divine decrees and man's free agency are incompatible; or that the purposes of God, even when known, render the use of means needless or useless.—The Roman governors were the emperor's representatives: the apostle, therefore, as a Roman citizen, when standing at the tribunal of Festus, was in the place where "he ought to be judged;" but should he be sent to Jerusalem, to be tried under the influence of the Jewish rulers, he would, independently of plots and conspiracies, be deprived of his privilege. Had any crime been charged upon him, that deserved death, he might have waved this privilege: but as Festus well knew that this was not the case, yet was ready to give him into the hands of his enemies, as a special favour by which he hoped to conciliate them, which no man had a right to do; the apostle felt himself authorized, and thought that Festus must see that he did right in appealing to Cæsar, and demanding that the emperor himself should decide his cause. —Nero, who is still infamous for his excessive cruelty, was at that time the Roman emperor.—Scott.

A HEATHEN'S IDEA OF CHRISTIANITY.—Ver. 19. Festus says the Jews had "certain questions against Paul," instead of proofs and evidences against him; the worst they had to say against him, was disputable whether it was a crime or no; moot points, that would bear an endless debate, but had no tendency to fasten any guilt upon him; questions fitter for the schools than for the "judgment-seat." And they were questions "of their own superstition," so he calls their religion; or rather, so he calls that part of their religion which Paul was charged with doing damage to. The Romans protected their religion according to their law, but not their superstition, nor the tradition of their elders. But the great question, it seems, was "concerning one Jesus that was dead, whom Paul affirmed to be alive." Some think the superstition he speaks of was the Christian religion, which Paul preached, and that he had the same notion of it that the Athenians had, that it was the introducing of a new dæmon, even Jesus. See how slightly this Roman speaks of Christ, and of his death and resurrection: and of the great controversy between the Jews and the Christians, whether he were the Messiah promised or no; and the great proof of his being the Messiah, his resurrection from the dead, as if it were no more than this, There was one Jesus that was dead, and "Paul affirmed he was alive." In many causes issue is joined upon this question, whether such a person that has been long absent be living or dead, and proofs are brought on both sides; and Festus will have it thought that this is a matter of no more moment. Whereas this Jesus, whom he prides himself in being thus ignorant of, as if he were below his notice, is he that "was dead and is alive," and "lives evermore, and has the keys of hell and of death," Rev. i. 18. What Paul affirmed concerning Jesus, that he is alive, is a truth of such vast importance, that if it be not true we are all undone.

AGRIPPA AND HIS QUEEN.—Ver. 23. "The next day" there was a great appearance "in the place of hearing." Paul and his cause being much talked of, and the more for their being much talked against. 1. Agrippa and Bernice took this opportunity to show themselves in state, and to make a figure, and perhaps for that end desired the occasion, that they might see and be seen; for "they came with great pomp," richly dressed with gold and pearls, and costly array; with a great retinue of footmen in rich liveries, which made a splendid show, and dazzled the eyes of the gazing crowd. They came—"with great fancy," so the word is. And the pomp of this appearance would put one for ever out of conceit with pomp, when the pomp which Agrippa and Bernice appeared in, was, (1.) Stained by their lewd characters, and all the beauty of it sullied, and all virtuous people that knew them could not but condemn them in the midst of all this pomp as vile persons, Ps. xv. 4. (2.) Outshone by the real glory of the poor prisoner at the bar. What was the honour of their fine clothes, compared with that of his wisdom, and grace, and holiness; his courage and constancy in suffering for Christ! His bonds in so good a cause were more glorious than their chains of gold; and his guards than their equipage. Who would be fond of worldly pomp, that here sees so bad a woman loaded with it, and so good a man loaded with the reverse of it? 2. The "chief captain and "principal men of the city" took this opportunity to pay their respects to Festus and to his guests; it answered the end of a ball at court, it brought the fine folks together in their fine clothes, and served for an entertainment.—Henry.

credible with you, that God should raise the dead?

9 I verily thought with myself, that I ought to do many things contrary to [t]the name of Jesus of Nazareth.[3]

10 Which thing [u]I also did in Jerusalem: and many of [x]the saints did I shut up in prison, having received authority from the chief priests; and when they were put to death, I gave my voice against them.

11 And I punished them oft in every synagogue, and compelled them to blaspheme; and, being exceedingly [b]mad against them, I persecuted them even unto strange cities.

12 Whereupon, as I went to Damascus with authority and commission from the chief priests,

13 At mid-day, O king, I saw in the way a light from heaven, [f]above the brightness of the sun, shining round about me, and them which journeyed with me.

14 And when we were all fallen to the earth, I heard a voice speaking unto me, and saying in the Hebrew tongue, [h]Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? It is [i]hard for thee to kick against the pricks.

15 And I said, Who art thou, Lord? And he said, [k]I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest.

16 But rise, and stand upon thy feet; for I have appeared unto thee for this purpose, [m]to make thee a minister and a witness both of these things which thou hast seen, and of those things in the which I will appear unto thee;

17 [p]Delivering thee from the people, and from [q]the Gentiles, unto whom now I send thee,

18 To [r]open their eyes, [s]and to turn them from darkness to light, [t]and from the power of Satan unto God, [u]that they may receive forgiveness of sins, [x]and inheritance among them which are [y]sanctified by faith that is in me.[4]

19 Whereupon, O king Agrippa, I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision:

20 But shewed first unto them of Damascus,[5] [d]and at Jerusalem, and throughout all the coasts of Judea, and then to the Gentiles, that they should [f]repent and turn to God, [h]and do works meet for repentance.

21 For these causes the Jews caught me in the temple, and went about to kill me.

22 Having therefore [k]obtained help of God, I continue unto this day, witnessing both to small and great, saying none other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come;

23 That [o]Christ should suffer, and that he should be [p]the first that should rise from the dead, [q]and should shew light unto the people, and to the Gentiles.

24 ¶ And as he thus spake for himself, Festus said with a loud voice, Paul, thou art beside thyself; much learning doth make thee mad.

25 But he said, I am not mad, most noble Festus; but speak forth [y]the words of truth and soberness.

26 For the king knoweth of these things, before whom also I speak freely; for I am persuaded that none of these things are hidden from him; for this thing was not done in a corner.

27 King Agrippa, [b]believest thou the prophets? I know that thou believest.

28 Then Agrippa said unto Paul, [c]Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian.

29 And Paul said, [d]I would to God, [e]that not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, were both almost, and altogether such as I am, [f]except these bonds.[6]

30 ¶ And when he had thus spoken, the king rose up, and the governor, and Bernice, and they that sat with them.

31 And when they were gone aside, they talked between themselves, saying, [h]This man doeth nothing worthy of death, or of bonds.

32 Then said Agrippa unto Festus, This man might have been set at liberty, if he had not [i]appealed unto Cesar.

Pharisee, 1. Then he was a scholar, a man of learning, and not an ignorant, illiterate mechanic; the Pharisees knew the law, and were well versed in it, and in the traditional expositions of it. It was a reproach to the other apostles that they had not had an academical education, but were bred fishermen, chap. iv. 13. Therefore that the unbelieving Jews might be left without excuse, here is an apostle raised up, that had sat at the feet of their most eminent doctors. 2. Then he was a moralist, a man of virtue, and not a rake, or a loose, debauched, young man; if he lived like a Pharisee, he was no drunkard or fornicator; and being a young Pharisee, we may hope he was no extortioner, nor had yet learned the arts which the crafty, covetous, old Pharisees had of devouring the houses of poor widows; but he was "as touching the righteousness which is in the law blameless;" he was not chargeable with any instances of open vice and profaneness; and, therefore, as he could not be thought to have deserted his religion, because he did not know it, for he was a learned man, so he could not be thought to have deserted it because he did not love it, or was disaffected to the obligations of it, for he was a virtuous man, and not inclined to any immorality. 3. Then he was orthodox, sound in the faith, and not a deist or sceptic, or a man of corrupt principles, that led to infidelity; he was a Pharisee, in opposition to a Sadducee; he received those books of the Old Testament which the Sadducees rejected, believed a world of spirits, the immortality of the soul, the resurrection of the body, and the rewards and punishments of the future state, all which the Sadducees denied. They could not say he quitted his religion for want of a principle, or for want of a due regard to divine revelation; no, he always had a veneration for the ancient "promise made of God unto the fathers," and built his hope upon it.

The Twelve Tribes.—Ver. 17. The people of Israel are called "the twelve tribes," because so they were at first; and though we read not of the return of the ten tribes in a body, yet we have reason to think many particular persons, more or less of every tribe, returned to their own land; perhaps, by degrees, the "greater part" of them that were carried away. Christ speaks of the "twelve tribes," Matt. xix. 28. Anna was of the tribe of Asher, Luke ii. 36. James directs his epistles to the "twelve tribes scattered abroad," Jam. i. 1. "Our twelve tribes, which make up the body of our nation, to which I and others belong. Now all the Israelites profess to believe in this promise, both of Christ and heaven, and 'hope to come' to the benefits of them. They all hope for a Messiah 'to come,' and we that are Christians hope 'in a Messiah already come;' so that we all agree to build upon the same promise. They look for the 'resurrection of the dead,' and 'the life of the world to come,' and that is what I look for. Why should I be looked upon as advancing something dangerous and heterodox, or as an apostate from the faith and worship of the Jewish church, when I agree with them in this fundamental article? I hope to come to the same heaven at last that they hope to come to; and if we expect to meet so happily in our end, why should we fall out so unhappily by the way?"—Henry.

Paul's Conversion.—See Acts ix. 1.

Imputation of Madness.—Ver. 24—29. Whilst Paul was confirming his testimony to the resurrection and glory of Jesus, by the predictions of Scripture, and probably was preparing to adduce more particular proof from the prophets to each part of his doctrine, he was suddenly interrupted by Festus. He had never heard any thing before upon these subjects; the resurrection of Jesus and the vision of Paul appeared to him incredible or ridiculous: probably he was astonished to hear him speak of his doctrine as of universal concernment, and aver that one who arose among the despised Jews was appointed to be the light of the Gentiles, even the philosophical Greeks and Romans. He therefore interrupted the apostle, by saying in a loud voice, "Paul, thou art beside thyself," &c. He, perhaps, had observed that the apostle spent much time in reading; and he supposed that, having studied very closely about such abstract and visionary matters, his over-attention had deranged his intellects; so that he could neither deem him fit to be blamed or credited, but to be an object of mere compassion.

Almost a Christian.—Ver. 28. The appeal to the Scriptures, joined to Paul's other arguments, had so great an effect upon Agrippa's mind, that he could not conceal his convictions, but openly declared that Paul had almost persuaded him to become a Christian. His understanding and judgment were for the time convinced, but his heart was not changed; and he was aware that the sacrifices to be made, and the cross to be sustained, would in such a case be very great; and though he was more candid and just in his government than others of his family, yet his conduct and temper were widely distant from the spirituality and humility of the gospel. The apostle, however, desirous to fix the impression upon his mind, replied in the genuine spirit of christian love, that he earnestly wished and prayed, that both he and every one in the assembly, might not only be almost, but altogether established in the faith of the gospel, and partaker of all its substantial blessings and consolations; and, in short, entirely like him in every thing, except in his bonds and imprisonment, which he would wish to bear alone. This most benevolent wish implied his full conviction of the truth of the gospel, the absolute necessity of faith in Christ in order to salvation, his opinion that Agrippa, Festus, and others present, did not then believe, and his fear that they would reject the gospel, to their final condemnation.—Scott.

CHAP. XXVII. Commencement of Paul's Voyage.—Ver. 1. Here we are told when sailing was now dangerous, because the fast[3] was now already past, Paul admonished them;

10 And said unto them, Sirs, I perceive that this voyage will be with hurt and much [†]damage, not only of the lading and ship, but also of our lives.

11 Nevertheless the centurion believed the master and the owner of the ship, more than those things which were spoken by Paul.

12 And because the haven was not commodious to winter in, the more part advised to depart thence also, if by any means they might attain to Phenice, and there to winter; which is an haven of [x]Crete, and lieth toward the south-west and north-west.

13 And when [a]the south wind blew softly, supposing that they had obtained their purpose, loosing thence, they sailed close by Crete.

14 But not long after there [‡]arose against it [c]a tempestuous wind, called Euroclydon.[4]

15 And when the ship was caught, and could not bear up into the wind, [d]we let her drive.

16 And running under a certain island which is called Clauda, we had much work to come by the boat:

17 Which when they had taken up, they used helps, undergirding the ship; and fearing lest they should fall into the quicksands,[5] strake sail, and so were driven.

18 And we being exceedingly tossed with a tempest, the next day they lightened the ship;

19 And the third day we cast out with our own hands the tackling of the ship.

20 And when [h]neither sun nor stars in many days appeared, and no small tempest lay on us, [k]all hope that we should be saved was then taken away.

21 But, after long abstinence, Paul stood forth in the midst of them, and said, Sirs, ye should have hearkened unto me, and not have loosed from Crete, and to have gained this harm and loss.

22 And now I exhort you to be of good cheer: [o]for there shall be no loss of any man's life among you, but of the ship.

23 For [p]there stood by me this night the angel of God, [q]whose I am, [r]and whom I serve,

24 Saying, Fear not, Paul; thou must be brought before Cesar: and, [u]lo, God hath given thee all them that sail with thee.

25 Wherefore, sirs, be of good cheer: for [x]I believe God, that it shall be even as it was told me.

26 Howbeit we must be cast upon a certain island.

27 But when the fourteenth night was come, as we were driven up and down in Adria,[6] about midnight the shipmen deemed that they drew near to some country;

28 And sounded, and found it twenty fathoms: and when they had gone a little further, they sounded again, and found it fifteen fathoms.

29 Then fearing lest they should have [b]fallen upon rocks, they cast four [c]anchors out of the stern,[7] [d]and wished for the day.

30 And as the shipmen were about to flee out of the ship, when they had let down [e]the boat into the sea, under colour as though they would have cast anchors out of the [f]foreship, 31 Paul [g]said to the centurion and to the soldiers, [h]Except these abide in the ship, ye cannot be saved.

32 Then [i]the soldiers cut off the ropes of the boat, and let her fall off.

33 And [k]while the day was coming on, Paul besought them all to take meat, saying, [l]This day is the fourteenth day that ye have tarried, and continued fasting, having taken nothing.[8]

34 Wherefore I pray you to take some meat; [m]for this is for your health: [n]for there shall not an hair fall from the head of any of you.

35 And when he had thus spoken, he took bread, [o]and gave thanks to God [p]in presence of them all; and when he had broken it, he began to eat.

36 Then were [q]they all of good cheer, and they also took some meat.

37 And we were in all in the ship [r]two hundred threescore and sixteen [s]souls.

38 And when they had eaten enough, [t]they lightened the ship, and cast out the wheat[9] into the sea.

39 And when it was day, they knew not the land: but they discovered a certain creek with a shore, into which they were minded, if it were possible, to thrust in the ship.

40 And when they had [§]taken up the anchors, they committed themselves unto the sea, and loosed the rudder-bands,[10] [u]and hoised up the main-sail to the wind, and made toward shore.

41 And falling into a place where two seas met, [x]they ran the ship aground: and the forepart stuck fast, and remained unmoveable, but the hinder part was [y]broken with the violence of the waves.

42 And [z]the soldiers' counsel was to kill the prisoners, lest any of them should swim out, and escape.

43 But the centurion, [a]willing to save Paul, kept them from their purpose, and commanded that they which could swim should cast themselves first into the sea, and get to land:

44 And the rest, some on boards, and some on broken pieces of the ship. And so it came to pass, [b]that they escaped all safe to land.

how Paul was shipped off for Italy; a long voyage, but there is no remedy. He has appealed to Cæsar, and to Cæsar he must go. "It was determined that we should sail into Italy," for to Rome they must go by sea: it would have been a vast way about to go by land. Hence when the Roman conquest of the Jewish nation is foretold, it is said, Numb. xxiv. 24, "Ships shall come from Chittim," that is, Italy, "and shall afflict Eber," that is, the Hebrews. "It was determined" by the counsel of God, before it was determined by the counsel of Festus, that Paul should go to Rome; for whatever man intended, God had work for him to do there. Now here we are told, 1. Whose custody he was committed to; to "one named Julius, a centurion of Augustus' band;" as Cornelius was of the Italian band, or legion, chap. x. 1. He had "soldiers under him," who were a guard upon Paul, that he might not make his escape, and likewise to protect him, that he might have no mischief done him. 2. What bottom he embarked in; they went on board a ship of Adramyttium, ver. 2, a seaport of Africa, whence this ship brought African goods, and as it should seem, made a coasting voyage from Syria, where those goods come to a good market. 3. What company he had in his voyage; there were some prisoners that were committed to the custody of the same centurion, who probably had appealed to Cæsar too, or were upon some other account removed to Rome, to be tried there, or to be examined as witnesses against some prisoners there; perhaps some notorious offenders, like Barabbas, who were therefore ordered to be brought before the emperor himself. Paul was linked with these, as Christ with the thieves that were crucified with him, and was obliged to take his lot with them in this voyage; and we find in this chapter, ver. 42, that for their sakes he had like to have been killed, but for his sake they were preserved. Note, It is no new thing for the "innocent" to be "numbered among the trangressors." But he had also some of his friends with him, Luke particularly, the penman of this book, for he puts himself in all along, We sailed into Italy, and We launched, ver. 2. Aristarchus, a Thessalonian, is particularly named as being now in his company. Dr. Lightfoot thinks Trophimus the Ephesian went off with him, but that he left him sick at Miletum, 2 Tim. iv. 20, when he passed by those coasts of Asia mentioned here, ver. 2, and that there likewise he left Timothy. It was a comfort to Paul to have the society of some of his friends in this tedious voyage, with whom he might converse freely, though he had so much loose profane company about him.

The Hurricane.—Ver. 14. 1. There "arose against them a tempestuous wind," which was not only contrary to them, and directly in their teeth, so that they could not get forward, but a violent wind, which raised the waves, like that which was sent forth in pursuit of Jonah; though Paul was following God, and going on in his duty, and not as Jonah, running away from God and his duty. This wind the sailors called Euroclydon a north-east wind, which upon those seas perhaps was observed to be in a particular manner troublesome and dangerous. It was a sort of a whirlwind, for the ship is said to be caught by it, ver. 15. It was God that "commanded this wind to rise," designing to bring glory to himself, and reputation to Paul, out of it; stormy winds being brought "out of his treasuries," Ps. cxxxv. 7, they "fulfil his word," Ps. cxlviii. 8. 2. The ship was "exceedingly tossed," ver. 18; it was kicked like a football from wave to wave; its passengers, (as it is elegantly described, Ps. cvii. 26, 27,) "mount up to the heavens, go down again to the depths, reel to and fro, stagger like a drunken man, and are at their wits' end." The ship could not possibly "bear up into the wind," could not make her way in opposition to the wind; and therefore they folded up their sails, which in such a storm would endanger them rather than do them any service, and so "let the ship drive, not whither it would, but whither it was impelled by the impetuous waves." 3. They saw neither sun nor stars for many days; this made the tempest the more terrible, that they were "all in the dark;" and the use of the loadstone for the directing of sailors not being then found out, (so that they had no guide at all, when they could see neither sun nor stars,) made the case the more hazardous. 4. They had abundance of winter weather; no small tempest, cold, rain, and snow, and all the rigours of that season of the year; so that they were ready to perish for cold; and all this continued many days.

Paul's Faith and Presence of Mind.—Ver. 35. He was chaplain to the ship, and they had reason to be proud of their chaplain; "he gave thanks to God in presence of them all." We have reason to think he had often prayed with Luke and Aristarchus, and what others there were among them, that were Christians, "that they prayed daily together;" but whether he had before this prayed with the whole company promiscuously, is not certain; now "he gave thanks to God in the presence of them all," that they were alive, and had been preserved hitherto, and that they had a promise that their lives should be preserved in the imminent peril now before them; "he gave thanks" for the provision they had, and begged a blessing upon it. "We must in every thing give thanks;" and must particularly have an eye to God in receiving our food, for "it is sanctified to us by the word of God and prayer," and is "to be received with thanksgiving." Thus the curse is taken off from it, and we obtain a covenant-right to it, and a covenant-blessing upon it, 1 Tim. iv. 3—5. And "it is not by bread alone that man lives, but by the word of God," which must be met with prayer. "He gave thanks in presence of them all," not only to show that he served a Master he was not ashamed of, but to invite them into his service too. If we crave a blessing upon our meat, and "give thanks" for it in a right manner, we shall not only keep up a comfortable communion

CHAP. XXVIII.

Paul is entertained by the barbarians, 1. He healeth many in the island, 8. They depart towards Rome, 11: he preacheth there two years, 30.

AND when they were escaped, then they knew that [a]the island was called Melita.[1]

2 And the barbarous people [c]shewed us no little kindness: for they kindled a fire, and received us every one, because of the present rain, and because of the cold.

3 And when Paul had gathered a bundle of sticks, and laid them on the fire, there came a viper out of the heat, and fastened on his hand.

4 And when [g]the barbarians saw the venomous beast hang on his hand, they said among themselves, [i]No doubt this man is a murderer, whom, though he hath escaped the sea, yet vengeance suffereth not to live.

5 And he shook off the beast into the fire, and [l]felt no harm.

6 Howbeit they looked when he should have swollen, or fallen down dead suddenly: but, after they had looked a great while, and saw no harm come to him, they changed their minds, and [m]said that he was a god.

7 In the same quarters were possessions of the chief man of the island,[2] whose name was Publius; [o]who received us, and lodged us three days courteously.

8 And it came to pass, that the father of Publius lay sick of a fever, and of a bloody flux: to whom Paul entered in, and [q]prayed, and [r]laid his hands on him, [s]and healed him.

9 So, when this was done, [t]others also, which had diseases in the island, came, and were healed:

10 Who also honoured us with many honours; and when we departed, they laded us with such things as were necessary.

11 And after three months we departed in a ship of Alexandria, which had wintered in the isle, whose sign was Castor and Pollux.

12 And landing at Syracuse, we tarried there three days.

13 And from thence we fetched a compass, and came to Rhegium: and after one day the south wind blew, and we came the next day to Puteoli:

14 Where [b]we found brethren, and were desired to tarry with them seven days: and so we went toward Rome.

15 And from thence, [d]when the brethren heard of us, they came to meet us as far as Appii Forum,[3] and the Three Taverns: whom when Paul saw, [e]he thanked God, and took courage.

16 And when we came to [f]Rome, [g]the centurion delivered the prisoners to the [h]captain of the guard: [l]but Paul was suffered to dwell by himself with a soldier that kept him.

17 ¶ And it came to pass, that, after three days, Paul called the chief of the Jews together: and when they were come together, he said unto them, Men and brethren, though I have committed nothing against the people or customs of our fathers, yet was I delivered prisoner from Jerusalem into the hands of the Romans:

18 Who, when they had examined me, would have let me go, because there was no cause of death in me.

19 But when the Jews spake against it, [n]I was constrained to appeal unto Cesar; [o]not that I had ought to accuse my nation of.

20 For [p]this cause therefore have I called for you, to see you, and to speak with you: because that [q]for the hope of Israel[4] I am bound with this chain.

21 And they said unto him, [s]We neither received letters out of Judea concerning thee, neither any of the brethren that came shewed or spake any harm of thee.

22 But we desire to hear of thee what thou thinkest: [t]for as concerning this sect, we know that every where it is spoken against.

23 And when they had appointed him a day, there came many to him into his lodging; to whom [x]he expounded and testified the kingdom of God, persuading them concerning Jesus, [y]both out of the law of Moses and out of the prophets, from morning till evening.

24 And [a]some believed[5] the things which were spoken, and some believed not.

25 And when they agreed not among themselves, they departed, after that Paul had spoken one word, [c]Well spake the Holy Ghost by Esaias the prophet unto our fathers,

26 Saying, Go unto this people, and say, [e]Hearing ye shall hear, and shall not understand; and seeing ye shall see, and not perceive:

27 For the heart of this people is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes have they closed; lest they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them.

28 Be it known therefore unto you, that [g]the salvation of God is [h]sent unto the Gentiles, and that they will hear it.

29 And when he had said these words, the Jews departed, and had great reasoning among themselves.

30 And Paul dwelt two whole years[6] in his own hired house, and received all that came in unto him,

31 [l]Preaching the kingdom of God, [m]and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ with all confidence, no man forbidding him.[7] with God ourselves, but credit our profession, and recommend it to the good opinion of others.

Safety of all the Company.—Ver. 44. "So it came to pass," that through the good providence of God none of them miscarried, none of them were by accident turned off, but they "escaped all safe to land." See here an instance of the special providence of God in the preservation of people's lives, and particularly in the deliverance of many from "perils by waters;" ready to sink, and yet kept from sinking, "the deep from swallowing them up," and "the water-floods from overflowing them;" the storm turned into a calm, they were rescued from the dreaded sea, and "brought to the desired haven. "O that men would praise the Lord for his goodness!" Ps. cvii. 30, 31. Here was an instance of the performance of a particular word of promise which God gave, "that all the persons in the ship should be saved for Paul's sake." Though there be great difficulty in the way of the promised salvation, yet it shall without fail be accomplished; and even the wreck of the ship may furnish out means for the saving of the lives; and when all seems to be gone, all proves to be safe; though it be "on boards and broken pieces of the ship."—Henry.

CHAP. XXVIII. Melita.—Ver. 1, 2. The small island of Melita, so called from the honey (mel,) with which it abounds, lies to the south of Sicily. It is now called Malta; for many ages it belonged to the knights of Malta, and recent events have made its name familiar to most persons. Probably it was planted by a colony of the Phœnicians, and so the inhabitants were called barbarians by the Greeks and Romans, who gave this name to all the rest of the world. But the islanders were noted for their humanity and kindness to strangers: and their conduct to the shipwrecked company, in their urgent distress, corresponded with that character. As they were all wet, cold, destitute, and almost ready to perish, they kindled a large fire, in some place that was sheltered from the weather, which was cold and rainy, and there entertained and refreshed them.

The Viper.—Ver. 3—6. The apostle knew how to accommodate himself to any circumstances: and, as the situation of the company required it, he readily assisted in making the fire. But in doing this, he was exposed to a more imminent danger, than that which he had just escaped. The bite of a viper was supposed to be fatal; and as this viper was irritated by the heat, it might have been expected, that it would immediately bite him. When therefore the islanders, who had some general notions of a superior power engaged to punish atrocious criminals, saw this fierce and destructive animal fasten on his hand, they looked on him as a dead man; and, perceiving that he was a prisoner, they concluded that he had committed murder, and so had exposed himself to divine vengeance; and that he had escaped from the sea, only that he might be punished in a more exemplary manner. But when, after a considerable time, they saw that no harm followed, they ran into the opposite extreme, and concluded that he was one of their deities, thus become visible among them. They did not indeed at this time know any thing of the true God, whose invisible power had thus preserved the life of his servant; but the impression which these events made on their minds, would conduce to render them afterwards more observant of his conversation and behaviour.

Arrival of Paul at Rome.—Ver. 15, 16. The apostle's approach towards Rome being known in that city, some of the Christians, there residing, came to meet and welcome him, though in bonds. They knew him especially as the apostle of the Gentiles; and the epistle, which he had sometime before written to them, had no doubt impressed them with the highest veneration for his character. Appii Forum is computed to have been fifty-one miles from Rome, and The Three Taverns, thirty-three. This testimony of respect appears to have been very seasonable, for, the circumstances in which the apostle was about to make his first visit to this renowned city, compared with the expectations which he had before expressed concerning visiting the church there, were suited to damp his hopes of being countenanced or made useful; but this promising appearance inspired him with gratitude and confidence. When the company arrived at Rome, the other prisoners were committed to the custody of the imperial guards, to be lodged in prison: but through the account sent by Festus, and the report of Julius, Paul was exempted from this hardship, and was allowed to dwell in a lodging apart from other prisoners and only guarded by a soldier, to whom it is supposed he was chained.

Argument with the Jews.—Ver. 23—29. The apostle proceeded in the same manner with the Jews in his lodgings, as he had before done in the synagogue, explaining the nature and privileges of the Redeemer's kingdom and salvation; testifying to the facts by which it was introduced; proving from the Scriptures of the prophets, that Jesus was the promised Messiah, and persuading them to believe in him. Thus, in the earnestness of his zealous and benevolent soul, he spent the whole day; and though some were won over to the faith, yet it appears that most present rejected his testimony, and even disputed against such as believed. Therefore the apostle parted from them, by observing, that the Holy Spirit had well described their disposition, and awfully denounced their doom, by the prophet Isaiah. St. Paul had observed, during the whole of his ministry, that the nation in general thus closed their eyes and ears to the truth; and he foresaw with great concern, that God was about to give them up to judicial blindness and obduracy for their sins. He would, however, assure them, that the Gentiles, to whom the salvation of God was sent by him, would hear and obey his word.—Scott.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE # ROMANS.

WE begin with the epistles of the apostle Paul, who wrote, as well as laboured, more abundantly than all his brethren. Fourteen of his epistles are reserved for our instruction. The epistle to the Romans is placed first, though some others were written before it; but it was addressed to the Christians who resided in the capital city of that great empire, which then lorded it over the whole known world; and the epistle itself is one of the longest and most comprehensive of all that were written by the apostle. It is not known when, or by whom, the gospel was first preached at Rome; but it is conjectured that it was carried thither by some of those Jews who were converted at the day of Pentecost (Acts ii. 10). Paul, however, had not yet visited that city; but, as the apostle of the Gentiles, he deemed it proper to use this method of establishing the believers in the faith. Having brought the world in guilty, and deserving of wrath, he proceeds to state the method of our salvation by the mercy of God, through the redemption of His Son, and the way of justification by faith in His blood. This he proves, illustrates, and exemplifies very fully. He next proceeds to shew that this way of justification is closely connected with sanctification and evangelical obedience: he then states the believer's experience and conflicts; and displays his character, hopes, and privileges; and at length he leads our reflections back to the source of these blessings, in the eternal election and sovereign love and mercy of God. Having thus stated, proved, and answered objections to his doctrine, and discussed several questions respecting the calling of the Gentiles and the rejection of the Jews, he applies the whole discourse by a variety of practical exhortations, precepts, and instructions, enforced by evangelical motives. And having touched upon some particulars suited to the circumstances of those times, he concludes with affectionate salutations, cautions, and prayers, and with ascribing glory to God our Saviour.

PAUL,[1] a servant of Jesus Christ, [c]called to be an apostle, separated unto the gospel of God,

2 (Which he had promised afore by his prophets in the holy scriptures,)

3 Concerning [h]his Son Jesus Christ our Lord, [i]which was made of the seed of David according to the flesh,

4 And [*]declared to be [i]the Son of God with power, according to the Spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead:

5 By whom we have received grace and apostleship,[2] [†]for [p]obedience to the faith among all nations for his name;

6 Among whom [s]are ye also the called of Jesus Christ:

7 To all that be in Rome, beloved of God, [y]called to be saints: [z]Grace to you,[3] and peace, from [b]God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ.

8 First, I thank my God through Jesus Christ for you all, [f]that your faith is spoken of throughout the whole world.

9 For [h]God is my witness, whom I serve [‡]with my spirit in [k]the gospel of his Son, that without ceasing [m]I make mention of you always in my prayers;

10 Making request (if by any means now at length I might have a prosperous journey by the will of God) to come unto you.

11 For I long to see you, [r]that I may impart unto you some spiritual gift, to the end ye may be established;

12 That is, that I may be comforted together [§]with you, by the mutual faith both of you and me.

13 Now I would not have you ignorant, brethren, that oftentimes I purposed to come unto you, (but was let hitherto,) [*]that I might have some fruit [‡]among you also, even as among other Gentiles.

14 I am debtor both to the Greeks and to the Barbarians, both to the wise and to the unwise.

15 So, as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the gospel to you that are at Rome also.

16 For [i]I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: [i]for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek.[4]

17 For therein is the righteousness of God revealed [p]from faith to faith: as it is written, [q]The just shall live by faith.

18 For [r]the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, [u]who hold the truth in unrighteousness;

19 Because [x]that which may be known of God is manifest [*]in them:[5] for God hath shewed it unto them.

20 For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, [a]even his eternal power and Godhead; [†]so that they are without excuse:

21 Because that, when they knew God, [r]they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful; [s]but became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was darkened.

22 Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools,

23 And [k]changed the glory of the uncorruptible God into [l]an image made like to corruptible man, and to birds, and fourfooted beasts, and creeping things.[6]

24 Wherefore God also gave them up to

But when the gospel dispensation was set up, the salutation was usually changed into "grace and peace," to keep up our view of God's free favour as the foundation of all grace in us, and of all our prosperity or peace.—GUYSE.

LIBERTY TO PREACH AT ROME.—Ver. 30. Paul was "not ashamed of the gospel of Christ." Divine Providence gave him a liberty of speech; "no man forbidding him," giving him any check for what he did, or laying any restraint upon him; the Jews that used to forbid him to speak "to the Gentiles," had no authority here; and the Roman government as yet took no cognizance of the profession of Christianity as a crime. Herein we must acknowledge the hand of God, 1. Setting bounds to the rage of persecutors; where he does not turn the heart, yet he can tie the hand, and bridle the tongue. Nero was a bloody man, and there were many, both Jews and Gentiles, in Rome, that hated Christianity; and yet so it was, unaccountably, that Paul, though a prisoner, was connived at in preaching the gospel, and it was not construed a breach of the peace. Thus God makes "the wrath of men to praise him, and restrains the remainder of it," Ps. lxxvi. 10. Though there were so many that had it in their power to forbid Paul's preaching, (even the common soldier that kept him, might have done it,) yet God so ordered it, "that no man did forbid him." 2. See God here providing comfort for the relief of the persecuted. Though it was a very low and narrow sphere of opportunity that Paul was here placed in, compared with what he had been in, yet, such as it was, he was not molested or disturbed in it.—Henry.

CHAP. I. THE GOSPEL.—Ver. 1—4. Having mentioned the gospel of God, the apostle digresses, to give us an encomium of it. 1. The antiquity of it; it was "promised before," it was no novel, upstart doctrine, but of ancient standing in the promises and prophecies of the Old Testament, which did all unanimously point at the gospel, the morning beams that ushered in the Sun of righteousness; this not by word of mouth only, but in the Scriptures. 2. The subject-matter of it; it is concerning Christ. The prophets and apostles all bear witness to him; he is the true Treasure hid in the field of the Scriptures. Observe, When Paul mentions Christ, how he heaps up his names and titles, "his Son Jesus Christ our Lord," as one that took a pleasure in speaking of him; and having mentioned him, he cannot go on in his discourse, without some expressions of love and honour as here, where in one person he shows us his two distinct natures. (1.) His human nature; "made of the seed of David;" that is born of the virgin Mary, who was of the house of David, Luke i. 27; as was Joseph his supposed father, Luke ii. 4. David is here mentioned, because of the special promises made to him concerning the Messiah, especially his kingly office: 2 Sam. vii. 12; Ps. cxxxii. 11; compared with Luke i. 32, 33. (2.) His divine nature; "declared to be the Son of God;" the Son of God by eternal generation, or, as it is here explained, "according to the Spirit of holiness." "According to the flesh," that is, his human nature, "he was of the seed of David;" but "according to the Spirit of holiness," that is, the divine nature, (as he is said to be "quickened by the Spirit," 1 Pet. iii. 18, compared with 2 Cor. xiii. 4,) he is the Son of God. The great proof or demonstration of this, is, "his resurrection from the dead;" that proved it effectually and undeniably. The sign of the prophet Jonas, Christ's resurrection, was intended for the last conviction, Matt. xii. 39, 40. Those that would not be convinced by that, would be convinced by nothing.—Henry.

PAUL NOT ASHAMED OF THE GOSPEL.—Ver. 16. However the noble, the learned, or the proud might despise the doctrines of the gospel, and especially that of salvation by faith in the merits of a Jew, who had been crucified as a deceiver by his own countrymen; yet St. Paul was in no wise ashamed of it, but was ready to glory in his belief of it before all men; as he knew, that the power of God attended and was displayed by that doctrine for the salvation of every believer from the power of his corrupt passions and habits, from the bondage of Satan, from the love of the world, and the fear of men, and from all sin and misery; so that whilst Jewish Rabbins and pagan philosophers had tried in vain to reform men's lives; the despised gospel of Christ, wherever it had been preached, had been rendered extensively successful for that purpose. This had first been evidenced among the Jews, in the conversion and holy lives of multitudes, who had before been of very bad characters; and afterwards it had produced similar effects among the Gentiles, vast numbers of whom had been turned from their immoralities and idolatries, to the holy worship and service of the true God. "It is the power of God unto salvation." "To whom? To all that believe. Now it is plain, that it is not merely the power of God manifested in outward miracles, that is there spoken of; for miracles were wrought upon, and in the presence both of them that believed not, and them that did believe. The power of God there spoken of is a power felt only by them that believe: so that whatever the enemies of the free grace of God may suggest, it cannot be meant of those extraordinary manifestations of power in healing men's bodies, &c., but of that inward teaching and drawing of the Father, of which the prophets foretold, that it would be bestowed in a large manner in gospel-times." [Dr. Maclaurin.]

IDOLATRY.—Ver. 18—20. The pagans had not the light of revelation: but the works of creation preached to them; and that "which might be known of God," was made manifest even among them; for God had showed it to them from age to age, ever since the world was created. Even the wonderful formation of their own bodies and souls, as well as the various objects all around them proclaimed these truths: so that, being endued with rational powers, they could not have failed of knowing him as their Creator, benefactor, and governor, and in respect of many of his attributes, had it not been for the depravity of their hearts. Indeed, God himself dwelleth in light inaccesible uncleanness, through the lusts of their own hearts, [o]to dishonour their own bodies between themselves:

25 Who [q]changed the truth of God into a lie, and worshipped and served [t]the creature [‡]more than the Creator, who is blessed for ever. Amen.

26 For this cause God [x]gave them up unto vile affections: for even their women did change the natural use into that which is against nature:

27 And likewise also the men, leaving the natural use of the woman, burned in their lust one toward another: men with men working that which is unseemly, and receiving in themselves [z]that recompence of their error which was meet.

28 And even as they did not like to [§]retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over [b]to [‖]a reprobate mind, to do those things which are not convenient;

29 Being [d]filled with all unrighteousness,[7] fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness; full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity; [e]whisperers,

30 [f]Backbiters, [g]haters of God, despiteful, proud, boasters, [i]inventors of evil things, [k]disobedient to parents,

31 [l]Without understanding, [m]covenant-breakers, *without natural affection, implacable, unmerciful:

CHAP. II.

They that condemn sin in others, and yet sin, are inexcusable, whether Jews or Gentiles.

THEREFORE thou art inexcusable, O man,[1] whosoever thou art that judgest: for wherein thou judgest another, thou condemnest thyself; [d]for thou that judgest doest the same things.

2 But we are sure that [e]the judgment of God is according to truth against them which commit such things.

3 And thinkest thou this, O man, that judgest them which do such things, and doest the same, [h]that thou shalt escape the judgment of God?

4 Or despisest thou [k]the riches of his goodness, [l]and forbearance, and long-suffering; not knowing that [m]the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance?

5 But, after thy hardness and impenitent heart, [o]treasurest up unto thyself wrath against the day of wrath and [q]revelation of the righteous judgment of God;

12 For as many [k]as have sinned without law[2] shall also perish without law; and as many [l]as have sinned in the law, shall be judged by the law;

13 (For [m]not the hearers of the law are just before God, [n]but the doers of the law shall be justified.

14 For when the Gentiles, which have not the law, do by nature the things contained in the law, these, having not the law, [r]are a law unto themselves:

15 Which shew the work of the law [s]written in their hearts, ‡their conscience also bearing witness, and their thoughts [§]the mean while [u]accusing or else excusing one another;)

16 In the day when [x]God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ, according to my gospel.

17 Behold, thou art called a Jew, and restest in the law, and [c]makest thy boast of God,

18 And knowest his will, and [‖]approvest the things that are more excellent, [c]being instructed out of the law;[3]

19 And art confident that thou thyself art a guide of the blind, [g]a light of them which are in darkness,

20 An instructor of the foolish, a teacher of babes, which hast [i]the form of knowledge and of the truth in the law.

21 Thou therefore which teachest another, teachest thou not thyself? thou that preachest a man should not steal, dost thou steal?

22 Thou that sayest a man should not commit adultery, dost thou commit adultery? thou that abhorrest idols, [n]dost thou commit sacrilege?[4]

23 Thou that makest thy boast of the law, through breaking the law dishonourest thou God?

24 For [p]the name of God is blasphemed among the Gentiles through you, as it is written.

and his essential glory must be invisible to mortal eye: yet "his invisible power and godhead" are so clearly reflected from, and discernible in, the works which he hath made, that his eternal and underived existence, his omnipotence and other perfections, must be known from the beauty, excellency, variety, and immensity of his creatures, by all intelligent beings, except as their minds are debased and alienated from him by sin. Thus even idolaters and Gentiles are left without excuse; and their ungodliness and unrighteousness are evinced to be the effect of their depraved dispositions, rather than of their want of information. They all might have known more of God than they did, had they been properly disposed: and some of them when they had discovered the vanity of the popular idolatries, and acquired some just notions of God and his worship, continued to act in opposition to their knowledge, from worldly motives. Thus "they imprisoned the truth in unrighteousness:" it is in vain to attempt an excuse for them, and the divine verdict brought in against them accords with the plainest dictates of justice and equity.

SENSUALITY.—Ver. 24—27. The race of men, having thus dishonoured God by wilful apostacy and idolatry, he left them, under the influence of Satan, to debase themselves by the most unnatural and abominable uncleanness. This did not so much result from the prevalence of animal inclinations, (for the very brutes are kept from such excessive and unnatural practices;) as from the lusts of their own hearts, which madly sought satisfaction in sensuality, when they had lost the favour of God and happiness in him. Thus they disgraced their bodies, (which had been most curiously formed by the Creator, to be the instruments of the soul in his worship and service;) by using them to perpetrate with each other the most detestable pollutions. This was permitted judicially; because they had exchanged the truth of God which had been made known to them, respecting his nature, perfections, and worship, for the basest falsehoods and delusions of the devil, and the sophistical conclusions of their own vain reasonings; and in consequence they had rendered divine honours to creatures, in preference to the infinite Creator, who is in itself "most blessed for evermore;" whom all rational creatures ought to adore and bless; and whose praises are celebrated by all the inhabitants of heaven, while saints on earth repeat a cordial Amen to them.—Scott.

CHAP. II. IMPARTIAL RETRIBUTION.—Ver. 7—11. The apostle here gradually proceeds to a more explicit mention of the Jews, whom he especially intended to "conclude under sin." According to the whole tenour of Scripture, as well as the dictates of common sense, no sinner can do well, till he repents, submits to God, and seeks mercy from him. The Jew who did this, must have respect to the types and promises of a Saviour, with which the law of Moses was replete, as well as to the preceptive part of it; and he alone, who did this, would perform any spiritual obedience. If then there was a man, anywhere, who embraced by faith the revelation of glory, honour, and immortality through the promised Messiah, made in the word of God, and was earnestly bent upon obtaining this blessing; if he sought the inheritance, by repenting, "ceasing to do evil, learning to do well," attending on the ordinances of God, obeying his commandments, and thus waiting patiently for the completion of the promises; and if he proved his sincerity, by patience under trials, and perseverance in well-doing amidst temptations and difficulties; this man would surely be made partaker of eternal life, according to the constitution of the most gracious covenant of God in Jesus Christ; whatever measure of explicit knowledge he might be favoured with, or under whatever dispensation he might live.

CONSCIENCE.—Ver. 15. Even the Gentiles, who had not the written law, when from natural principles they performed any of those duties which the law required, were, in this respect, a law to themselves: and by obeying thus far their own rule, came nearer to righteousness than the Jews who brake their rule. The fragments of the law, which had originally been written in the heart, exerting their influence by a natural sense of right and wrong, appeared in their works. Their consciences also testified to the propriety of this part of their conduct, and produced an inward satisfaction: whilst, at the same time, their secret thoughts, or their reasonings one with another, served to accuse, or excuse themselves, or each other, according to the conformity of their conduct to their own sentiments of right and wrong, or the contrary. If then the very Gentiles could not but condemn themselves, when they acted against their own consciences; how absurd and presumptuous must it be for a Jew to expect justification before God, by a law which he was continually transgressing!—This seems to be the apostle's argument.

DEPRAVITY OF THE JEWISH WORLD.—Ver. 17—24. In order to understand this chapter, it should be remembered, that the apostle is combating the prejudices and presumption of the Jews; to whom he expected the epistle would be shown, and whose influence he knew would be employed to unsettle the minds of the believers at Rome. The Gentiles are therefore only introduced by way of illustrating the argument, and not in order to show in what way they may be justified.—The apostle here immediately addressed himself to any Jew that was willing to take up the argument. He supposed him to rest his hope of acceptance on the law, and to boast of God, as standing in a covenant relation to him. He thought himself well acquainted with the will of God; and, as an expert casuist, he could "distinguish things which differed," and give the 25 For circumcision verily profiteth, if thou keep the law: [5] but if thou be a breaker of the law, thy circumcision is made uncircumcision.

26 Therefore, if the uncircumcision keep the righteousness of the law, shall not his uncircumcision be counted for circumcision?

27 And shall not uncircumcision which is by nature, if it fulfil the law, [x]judge thee, who by the letter and circumcision dost transgress the law?

16 Destruction and misery are in their ways:

17 And [p]the way of peace have they not known:

18 There is [q]no fear of God before their eyes.

19 Now we know, that what things soever the law [4] saith, it saith to them who are under the law; that every mouth may be stopped, [t]and all the world may become [†]guilty before God.

20 Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall [x]no flesh be justified in his sight: for by the law is the knowledge of sin.

21 But now [a]the righteousness of God without the law is manifested, being witnessed by the law and the prophets;

22 Even the righteousness of God [d]which is by faith of Jesus Christ [e]unto all [5] and upon all them that believe; for there is no difference:

23 For [h]all have sinned, and [i]come short of the glory of God:

25 Whom God hath [‡]set forth to be a propitiation [o]through faith in his blood, [p]to declare his righteousness for [§]the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God;

26 To declare, I say, at this time his righteousness; [q]that he might be just, [r]and the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus.

27 Where is boasting then? It is excluded. By what law? of works? [7] Nay; [u]but by the law of faith.

28 Therefore we conclude, that a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law.

29 Is he [y]the God of the Jews only? is he not also of the Gentiles? Yes, of the Gentiles also:

30 Seeing it is [z]one God which shall justify the circumcision by faith, and uncircumcision through faith.

31 Do we then [a]make void the law through faith? God forbid: yea, we establish the law.

CHAP. III. Jewish Privilege.—Ver. 2. Especially the oracles of God, the sacred writings of Moses and the prophets, were committed to them; and the written word of God hath been continued among them through their several generations, to direct them how to seek acceptance with God, and to walk before him. In them the Messiah was promised, and the various particulars of his character, miracles, redemption, and kingdom, were typified and predicted; among the Jews he made his appearance in the appointed time; in him the Scriptures were fulfilled before their eyes, and numbers of them had believed in, and found salvation by him.—Oracles, &c. Some think the Scriptures are thus called, with reference to the oracular answers which the high priest delivered when he consulted the Lord by the breastplate of Judgment, implying that they were as immediately and entirely the word of God, as the oracles thus delivered had been.—"This is so remarkable and important a testimony to the divine inspiration of the Old Testament in general, that it can leave no doubt concerning the full persuasion of St. Paul on this head." [Doddridge.]—Committed, &c. Or, "they were intrusted with the oracles of God," Gal. ii. 7; 1 Thess. ii. 4, Gr.—"The oracles of God were deposited with the Jews, not to keep to themselves, but to publish them to all the world besides.—But because they did not this work sufficiently, it is Christ's appointment to the apostles, that they should disperse themselves unto all nations, and so bring them to the knowledge of his will." [Hammond.]—It behoves Christians in every age to remember, that the Scriptures are thus intrusted to them also, in order that they may communicate the blessing to all around them, and to all who shall come after them, by every proper means, to the utmost of their ability.

Grace through Christ.—Ver. 21—26. The apostle having "concluded all men under sin," proceeds more explicitly to exhibit "the righteousness of God by faith," which had been manifestly declared by the preaching of the gospel. This was the righteousness which God had appointed, provided, and introduced, in the person of his Son. It was "without the law;" having no dependence on a man's personal obedience to the law, being entirely a distinct thing: no past obedience being supposed as having any influence in the sinner's justification, and his subsequent obedience being intended for other purposes. It had nothing to do with the ceremonial law, (except as it was the substance of some of those shadows:) for the Jew who accepted of this righteousness would place no dependence on these externals; and the Gentile was not required to be circumcised, or to keep that law. Yet it had been witnessed by the law and the prophets: the ceremonies typified it; the very strictness of the moral law and its awful curses, being compared with the promises of mercy to sinners, implied it; the promises and predictions of the Messiah bore witness to it; the faith and hope of ancient believers testified it; and the whole Old Testament, rightly understood, taught men to expect and depend on it. This "righteousness of God by faith in Jesus" is accounted or imputed to all believers without exception; yea, it is put on them as a robe; for the words "unto, and upon all," seem to admit of no other construction. Nor is there in this respect any difference between one man and another, however otherwise distinguished; as all have sinned and come short of rendering to God the glory due unto him, all have lost his glorious image, and all have forfeited that glorious felicity which was annexed to perfect obedience as its reward, and therefore, whatever the nature or degree of their crimes may have been, or whatever their nation, rank, or capacities be, there is no difference in the way in which they must be justified before God. Every believer is not only pardoned, but honourably acquitted as one against whom no charge can be supported; and accounted righteous, or entitled to the reward of righteousness. This is by the free gift of God, which he bestows on him, merely from his own infinite grace and mercy; not only without his deserving it, but directly contrary to his deserts, which the apparent tautology, "freely by his grace," seems to denote. This grace is honourably exercised, through the redemption that is in Jesus Christ, or through the ransom and meritorious obedience unto death of the incarnate Son of God, as our surety: for God the Father had before set him forth, or foreordained him, to be a propitiatory sacrifice for sin; he had appointed him to be Mediator, as "God manifest in the flesh," for that purpose; he had openly laid on him the iniquities of us all, and exacted the punishment from him; and he had exhibited this transaction to the world by the gospel, that through him sinners of every nation might approach God on a propitiatory or mercy-seat, and find acceptance by faith in the Saviour's atoning blood. This method was taken in order to declare and manifest the perfect righteousness of God; even in the very act of pardoning the innumerable sins of believers, remitting the punishment due to them, and accounting them righteous who in themselves were not so.—Scott.

CHAP. IV. Justification by Faith—Abraham.—Ver. 1—3. The apostle had before intimated that the favours shown to pious persons of old had a reference to the righteousness and redemption of Christ; and he here proceeds to show this more especially in respect of Abraham, the most renowned progenitor of Israel.—"From this single example of Abraham, as deservedly selected from among all the fathers, the apostle intended to draw a conclusion, which would necessarily take in all believers. And that he might do Anno Domini clr. 60.

WHAT shall we then say that Abraham our father, as pertaining to the flesh, hath found?

2 For if Abraham [d] were justified by works, he hath whereof to glory, [f] but not before God.[1]

3 For what saith the scripture? [h] Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness.

4 Now [k] to him that worketh is the reward not reckoned of grace, but of debt.

5 But to him that worketh not, but [m] believeth on him that justifieth the ungodly, [o] his faith is counted for righteousness.[2]

6 Even as David also describeth the blessedness of the man, unto whom [q] God imputeth righteousness without works,

7 Saying, [s] Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered.

8 Blessed is the man [t] to whom the Lord will not impute sin.

9 Cometh [u] this blessedness[3] then upon the circumcision only, or upon the uncircumcision also? for we say that faith was reckoned to Abraham for righteousness.

10 How was it then reckoned? when he was in circumcision, or in uncircumcision? Not in circumcision, but in uncircumcision.

11 And he received the sign of circumcision, [a] a seal of the righteousness of the faith which he had yet being uncircumcised: that he might be [c] the father of all them that believe, though they be not circumcised; [d] that righteousness might be imputed unto them also:

12 And the father of circumcision to them who are not of the circumcision only, but who also walk [f] in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham, which he had being yet uncircumcised.

13 For the promise that he should be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith.

14 For if they which are of the law be heirs, faith is [l] made void, and the promise made of none effect.

15 Because [m] the law worketh wrath: for where no law is, there is no transgression.

16 Therefore it is of faith, that it might be by grace;[4] to the end [p] the promise might be sure to all the seed: not to that only which is of the law, [q] but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham, who is the father of us all,

17 (As it is written, I have made thee a father of many nations,) * before him whom he believed, even God, [t] who quickeneth the dead, and calleth those things which be not as though they were:

18 Who [x] against hope believed in hope, that he might become the father of many nations, according to that which was spoken, So shall thy seed be.

19 And [z] being not weak in faith, he considered not his own body now dead, when he was about an hundred years old, neither yet the deadness of Sarah's womb:

20 He staggered[5] not at the promise of God through unbelief; [c] but was strong in faith, giving glory to God;

21 And being fully persuaded, that what he had promised, [e] he was able also to perform.

22 And therefore [f] it was imputed to him for righteousness.

23 Now, [g] it was not written for his sake alone,[6] that it was imputed to him;

24 But for us also, to whom it shall be imputed, [h] if we believe on him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead;

25 Who was delivered for our offences, [k] and was raised again for our justification.

CHAP. V.

Being justified by faith, we have peace with God, 1. Sin and death came by Adam, 12, righteousness and life by Christ, 17.

THEREFORE, [a] being justified by faith,[1] [b] we have peace with God, through our Lord Jesus Christ:

2 By [d] whom also we have access by faith into this grace wherein we stand, [f] and rejoice in hope of the glory of God.

3 And not only so, [h] but we glory in tribulations also: [i] knowing that tribulation worketh patience;

4 And patience, experience; and experience, hope:

5 And hope maketh not ashamed; [n] because the love of God[2] is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost, which is given unto us.

6 For [p] when we were yet without strength, * in due time [r] Christ died for the ungodly.

7 For [t] scarcely for a righteous man will one die; yet peradventure for [u] a good man some would even dare to die.

8 But God commendeth his love toward us, [x] in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us.

9 Much more[3] then, [a] being now justified by his blood, [b] we shall be saved from wrath through him.

10 For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son; much more, being reconciled, [e] we shall be saved by his life.

11 And not only so, but we also joy in God, through our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom we have now received the [t] atonement.

12 Wherefore, [h] as by one man sin entered into the world, [i] and death by sin; and so this fairly, he intimates, at the very entrance of the question, that he did not propose Abraham merely as one of the number of believers, but as the father of the church; that he might properly reason from the father to his children, the foundation of which he lays in the thirteenth verse.—In whatever way Abraham, the father of believers, was justified, in the same must all his children, (that is, all believers,) be justified: but Abraham was not justified and made the father of the faithful by any of his own works, either preceding or following his faith in Christ, as promised to him, but merely by faith in Christ, or the merit of Christ by faith imputed to him for righteousness. Therefore all his children become his children, and are justified, not by their works, either preceding or following their faith; but by faith alone in the same Christ, who was at length to come; and thus they are at present justified, and shall be to the end of the world." [Beza.]

MEANING OF CIRCUMCISION.—Ver. 9—12. The Jews not only supposed that righteousness was by works, but that the privileges of God's people were inseparably connected with circumcision: the apostle therefore next inquired at what time Abraham's "faith was reckoned to him for righteousness?" And the answer was undeniable; for it appeared from the Scripture before cited, that he was justified at least fourteen years before his circumcision: the former having been some time before Ishmael's birth, the other when Ishmael was thirteen years of age. It was therefore manifest that circumcision was not necessary in order to justification: and indeed Abraham had received from God this instituted ordinance, to be an outward sign of the grace given him, and a seal of the righteousness of faith imputed to him when in uncircumcision. This demonstrates that circumcision sealed spiritual blessings to Abraham personally, as the outward seal of the covenant of grace, and the emblem of sanctification, however it might otherwise be applied, or misunderstood. "This seems an incontestable proof that circumcision was the seal of the covenant of grace, and not merely of temporal promises; and consequently obviates the most considerable objection that hath ever been urged against infant baptism." [Doddridge.]—This seal was also a pledge to Abraham of the performance of the promise respecting his seed, especially his spiritual seed of true believers. He was therefore justified before he was circumcised.

ABRAHAM'S FAITH.—Ver. 18—22. The nature and power of Abraham's faith are next stated. He believed the testimony of God, and expected the performance of his promise, when the case seemed hopeless, and when there was nothing to oppose to the most formidable objections and apparent impossibilities, but the bare word of God. He hoped to become the father of many nations, naturally in his posterity, and spiritually through Christ, who was to descend from him; because God had said that his seed should be innumerable as the stars of heaven. Yet many years had elapsed since the same promise for substance was given, and he still continued without any child by Sarah, to whose offspring the promise was restricted. She had been barren all her younger years, and was then incapable of bearing children, according to the common course of nature, and he was now grown old, and unlikely to have any; yet though he had been tried by such long delays, and was discouraged by such immense difficulties, he did not weakly stagger at the promise through unbelief.—Scott.

CHAP. V. GOD'S LOVE.—Ver. 8—10. To illustrate the immensity of this love of God, the apostle shows that if "a righteous man," one of strict integrity, who had committed no crime against the welfare of the community, were about to be unjustly put to death; there would scarcely be found a person, who would consent to die in his stead: though perhaps for a good man, one of extensive philanthropy, whose life had been and was like to be a public blessing, some might even venture to lay down their lives. This has sometimes been done, in the field of battle, and perhaps it would be possible to find a man, who would, in such a cause, suffer for his friend or benefactor upon a scaffold. Yet this most rare instance, the very summit of human affection, is immensely beneath the love of God to us. He, who should give up his life in these circumstances, would do it for one of superior excellency, or who had greatly befriended him, and his death would ensure honour and applause to his memory. But the infinitely glorious God had commended, or set off to the utmost advantage, his love to us; in that his incarnate and coequal Son gave himself to endure the most agonizing and ignominious death for those who were infinitely beneath him, his creatures that had rebelled against him, and persisted in that ungrateful rebellion, yea, impenitent sinners, who had perpetrated the most atrocious and multiplied crimes to provoke his vengeance, and whose state of heart rendered them the meet objects of his abhorrence. Yet he had freely loved them, and purposed their salvation; and when his justice and holiness, and the honour of his law, obstructed that gracious design, he so loved them, that he gave his own Son to die a sacrifice for their sins.

ADAM—CHRIST.—Ver. 12—20. The offence of Adam and its consequences do not in all things coincide with the free gift, or the grace, of redemption. Through that one man's single offence, the many, or the multitude, of mankind are dead, under condemnation, and exposed to death, temporal and eternal. But the infinite grace and mercy of God, and the free gift of righteousness and salvation, through that one man Jesus Christ, the second Adam, who is also "the Lord from heaven," much more abound to many, even to all the multitude of believers; by bringing them into a far safer, happier, and more exalted state, than that from which they fell in Adam. For this gift not merely death passed upon all men, ‡for that ᵏall have sinned:[4]

13 (For until the law sin was in the world: but sin is not imputed when there is no law.

14 Nevertheless death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over them that had not sinned after the similitude of Adam's transgression,[5] ᵖwho is the figure of him that was to come.

15 But not as the offence, so also is the free gift. For if through the offence of one many be dead; much more the grace of God, ᵍand the gift by grace, which is by one man, Jesus Christ, hath abounded unto many.

16 And not as it was by one that sinned, so is the gift: ᵘfor the judgment was by one to condemnation, ˣbut the free gift is of many offences unto justification.

17 For if ʸby ‡one man's offence death reigned by one; much more they which receive ᶻabundance of grace, and of the gift of righteousness, ᵇshall reign in life by one, Jesus Christ.)

18 Therefore, as by *the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by †the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life.

19 For ᶜas by one man's disobedience many were made sinners; ᶠso by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous.

20 Moreover, the law entered, that the offence might abound: ʰbut where sin abounded, grace did much more abound:

21 That ⁱas sin hath reigned unto death,[6] even so might ᵏgrace reign through righteousness unto eternal life by Jesus Christ our Lord.

CHAP. VI.

We must not live in sin, 1, nor let sin reign in us, 12. Death is the wages of sin, 23.

WHAT shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound?

2 God forbid. How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein?

3 Know ye not, that so many of us as *were baptized into Jesus Christ ˡwere baptized into his death?

4 Therefore ᵏwe are buried with him by baptism[1] into death; ˡthat like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life.

5 For °if we have been planted together[2] in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection:

6 Knowing this, ᵍthat our old man is crucified with him, ʳthat the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin.

7 For he that is dead is †freed from sin.

8 Now, ᵘif we be dead with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with him:

9 Knowing that Christ, being raised from the dead, dieth no more; ᶻdeath hath no more dominion over him.

10 For in that he died, ᵃhe died unto sin once; but in that he liveth, ᵇhe liveth unto God.

11 Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to ᵈbe dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord.[3]

12 Let ᵉnot sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof:

13 Neither yield ye your members as ‡instruments[4] of unrighteousness unto sin: but yield yourselves unto God, as those that are ᵐalive from the dead, and ⁿyour members as instruments of righteousness unto God.

14 For °sin shall not have dominion over you: for ye are not under the law, but ᵠunder grace.

15 What then? shall we sin, because we are not under the law, but under grace? God forbid.

16 Know ye not, that ᵘto whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey; ˣwhether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness?

17 But God be thanked, that ye were the servants of sin; ᵃbut ye have obeyed from the heart that form[5] of doctrine ᵝwhich was delivered you.

18 Being then made free[6] from sin, ye became the ᵟservants of righteousness.

19 I speak after the manner of men, because of the infirmity of your flesh: for as ye have yielded your members servants to uncleanness, and to iniquity ʰunto iniquity; even ⁱso now yield your members servants to righteousness unto holiness.

20 For when ye were the servants of sin, ye were free ˡfrom righteousness.

21 What fruit had ye then in those things whereof ye are now ashamed? °for the end of those things is death.

22 But ᵖnow, being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, ᵠand the end everlasting life.

23 For ʳthe wages of sin is death; ᵘbut the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.

CHAP. VII.

answers to the loss sustained by Adam's sin, but far exceeds it in this respect; that the judgment of God came through Adam's single offence, upon mankind to their condemnation; but the free gift not only delivers believers from that condemnation, but from the punishment due to their own numerous, or rather innumerable, transgressions: nor does it place them anew in a state of probation, like that of Adam before he sinned; but it fixes them in a state of complete justification, even as Adam would have been, if he had stood his time of trial. For if, by one offence of one man, death acquired a complete dominion over all the whole human race; so that none were admitted to a personal trial in that respect, whether they would be obedient or not: much more would they, who by faith received the abundance of God's grace and mercy, and were interested in the gift of righteousness, be assuredly preserved in that state of acceptance, and so reign in life, by the perfect obedience of their one surety, Jesus Christ; without the infinite peril, or fatal consequences, of being put upon a personal trial of their obedience, like that in which Adam had failed, and Christ had persevered. Man is indeed in some sense in a probationary state on earth: but no man is put upon the trial, whether he can obtain exemption from the general condemnation of Adam and his seed, by his own personal obedience. A trial is made of him, tending to discover the wickedness of his heart by manifold experiments; the trial is made by the gospel, whether the sinner will repent and believe; professed Christians are tried whether they are sincere or not; and believers are proved in respect of the strength of their faith and grace: yet they are not put upon any probation, with reference to their justification and eternal life; but are accounted righteous, and appointed heirs, by faith alone, through the righteousness of their one divine Surety; which consisted not, like Adam's offence, in one action, but in a continued and perfect conformity to the whole divine law, through life, and unto his death upon the cross.—Scott.

CHAP. VI. Holiness the Result of Grace.—Ver. 1, 2. The apostle's doctrine might seem to lie open to the objection, which is now continually made to that of salvation by grace. Let "the thought be abhorred," says he "of continuing in sin that grace may abound." The unbeliever has no part in that grace; and the believer is "dead to sin," and how then should he live any longer in the practice of it? That view of the glory of God, of the holiness and goodness of the law, and of his own guilt and danger, which, as the effect of regenerating grace, convinced him that he needed the salvation of Christ, and made it precious to his heart, led him also to repent, and to abhor all sin. This change, begun in gracious convictions, was more completely effected, by further discoveries of the grace and experience of the comforts of redemption: so that love and gratitude to the divine Saviour, and other evangelical principles, concur with hatred of sin, to mortify his affections to its pleasures and interests, and to cause him to separate from iniquity, as a dead man ceases from the actions of life. Not only ought this to be the believer's character, but in a measure it actually is so: thus it forms the proper evidence, being the inseparable concomitant, of his justification. This effectually secures him from abusing the doctrines of grace: he may be seduced into sin, but he cannot live any longer in the habitual practice of known transgression; he cannot take occasion from abounding grace, to continue in sin that it may still more abound.—Scott.

Crucifixion of the Old Man.—Ver. 6. Our old man is crucified with him. The death of the cross was a slow death; the body, after it was nailed to the cross, gave many a throe and many a struggle; but it was a sure death, long in expiring, but expired at last; such is the mortification of sin in believers. It was a cursed death, Gal. iii. 13. Sin dies as a malefactor, devoted to destruction, it is an accursed thing. Though it be a slow death, yet it must needs hasten it, that it is an old man that is crucified; not in the prime of its strength, but decaying: that which waxeth old, is ready to vanish away, Heb. viii. 13. "Crucified with him," not in respect of time, but in respect of casuality. The crucifying of Christ for us, has an influence upon the crucifying of sin in us.—Henry.

Sin—Grace.—Ver. 23. As death is here opposed to everlasting life; and as temporal death is the end of the most godly, as well as the most ungodly, life; it is clearly absurd to restrict his meaning to the death of the body: doubtless he meant the future state of final misery, in a total separation from the presence and favour of God, and under his awful wrath and vengeance. From this condemnation the believer is set at liberty, when made free from sin; as the removal of the malefactor's fetters, and the opening of his dungeon, are connected with the pardon of his crimes. Then, the Christian becomes the servant of God; thenceforth he has his fruit unto holiness; or the nature and effects of his conduct are holy, and it tends to increasing sanctification, and also to promote the general cause of truth and holiness against that of delusion, sin, and misery; and it terminates in perfect holiness: so that instead of death, at the end of his course, he is put in possession of everlasting life; of which he had many foretastes, in holy consolations, when serving God in newness of life. But this happy event of his conduct is not to be considered as a merited reward. Indeed death temporal and eternal is the stipend, or stipulated and deserved wages, of sin, even of every violation of God's law: this every man hath earned, and every unbeliever will receive. But eternal life is the gift of God to those, who condemn themselves, and renounce all dependence on their defective and defiled services, to rely entirely on free grace, through the righteousness and atonement of Jesus Christ; and that holiness, which is the meetness for heavenly happiness, is as

KNOW ye not, brethren, (for I speak to them that know the law,) how that the law hath dominion over a man as long as he liveth?

2 For the woman which hath an husband is bound by the law to her husband so long as he liveth: but if the husband be dead, she is loosed from the law of her husband.

3 So then if, while her husband liveth, she be married to another man, she shall be called an adulteress: but if her husband be dead, she is free from that law; so that she is no adulteress, though she be married to another man.

4 Wherefore, my brethren, [h] ye also are become dead to the law by the body of Christ;[1] that ye should be married to another, even to him who is raised from the dead; [1] that we should bring forth fruit unto God.

5 For when we were in the flesh, the [*] motions of sins, which were by the law, [o] did work in our members to bring forth fruit unto death.

6 But [r] now we are delivered from the law, [†] that being dead wherein we were held; that we should [s] serve in newness of spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter.

7 What shall we say then? [u] Is the law sin? God forbid. Nay, [x] I had not known sin, but by the law: for I had not known [‡] lust, except the law had said, [y] Thou shalt not covet.

8 But sin, taking occasion by the commandment, [z] wrought in me all manner of concupiscence. [b] For without the law sin was dead.[2]

9 For [c] I was alive without the law once; [c] but when the commandment came, [f] sin revived, [g] and I died.[3]

10 And the commandment, which was ordained to life, I found to be unto death.

11 For sin, taking occasion by the commandment, [k] deceived me, and by it slew me.

12 Wherefore [l] the law is holy, and [m] the commandment holy, and just, and good.

13 Was [n] then that which is good made death unto me? God forbid. But sin, that it might appear sin, working death in me by that which is good; that sin by the commandment might become exceeding sinful.

14 For we know that the law is spiritual; [q] but I am carnal, [*] sold under sin.[4]

15 For that which I do I [§] allow not:[5] for what I would, that do I not; but what I hate, that do I.

16 If then I do that which I would not, I consent unto the law that it is good.

17 Now then, it is no more I that do it, but [*] sin that dwelleth in me.

18 For I know that in me (that is, in my flesh) dwelleth no good thing: for to will is present with me; but how to perform that which is good, I find not.

19 For the good that I would I do not: but the evil which I would not, that I do.

20 Now, if I do that I would not, it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me.

21 I find then a law,[6] that, when I would do good, evil is present with me.

22 For [h] I delight in the law of God after the inward man:

23 But I see [k] another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, [l] and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members.

24 O wretched man that I am! [n] who shall deliver me from [l] the body of this death?[7]

25 I thank God, through Jesus Christ our Lord. [p] So then with the mind I myself serve the law of God; but with the flesh the law of sin.

CHAP. VIII.

Who are free from condemnation, 1. What harm cometh of the flesh, 5, 13, and what good of the Spirit, 6, 14, and what of being God's children, 17.

THERE is therefore now [*] no condemnation [1] to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit.

2 For [d] the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus [f] hath made me free from the law of sin and death.

3 For what the law could not do, in that it was weak [2] through the flesh, [t] God sending his own Son, [k] in the likeness of sinful flesh, and [*] for sin, [t] condemned sin in the flesh;

4 That the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit.

5 For they that are after the flesh do [p] mind the things of the flesh:[3] but they that are after the Spirit [q] the things of the Spirit.

6 [r] For to [*] be carnally minded is death; but [†] to be spiritually minded is [s] life and peace:

7 Because the carnal mind is enmity against God; [u] for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be.

8 So then they that are in the flesh cannot please God.

9 But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, [b] if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now, if any man have not [c] the Spirit of Christ, [d] he is none of his.

10 And if Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin; [g] but the spirit is life [h] because of righteousness.

much the gift of God through Christ, as that imputed righteousness which is the believer's title to it.—Scott.

CHAP. VII. Dead to the Law.—Ver. 4. "Ye are become dead to the law." He does not say, "The law is dead;" some think, because he would avoid giving offence to those who were yet zealous for the law; but, which comes all to one, "Ye are dead to the law:" as the crucifying of the world to us, and of us to the world, amounts to one and the same thing; so doth the law dying, and our dying to it. We are "delivered from the law;" "we are nulled" as to the law; our obligation to it, as a husband, cassated and made void. And then he speaks of the law being dead, as far as it was an imprisoned law to us, "that being dead wherein we were held;" not the law itself, but its obligation to punishment, and its provocation to sin, that is dead, it has lost its power; and this, "by the body of Christ," that is, by the sufferings of Christ in his body, by his crucified body, which abrogated the law, answered the demands of it, made satisfaction for our violation of it, purchased for us a covenant of grace, in which righteousness and strength are laid up for us, such as we are not, nor could be, by the law.—Henry.

Irritative Power of the Law.—Ver. 7, 8. Sin, (his depraved nature spoken of as an agent,) traitorously watching the opportunity of destroying him, took occasion from the commandment to excite in his heart all manner of concupiscence. The imagination began to rove after forbidden objects, the carnal heart hankered for them, and he was led to conceive of some greater satisfaction in them, than in those which were not forbidden. That man has no deep knowledge of human nature, or the perverse wickedness of his own heart, who does not observe, or is not conscious, of this irrational propensity, to fancy that there is something exquisitely pleasurable in what is out of our reach, or prohibited. Indeed it seems natural to expect that it would be so with the posterity of those, who could be satisfied with no fruit in the garden of God, except that which he had forbidden: amidst the profusion of Eden, perhaps that tree had been disregarded, if it had not been prohibited. We soon see this propensity in others, especially in our children; though perhaps self-love may make us blind to it in ourselves.

Internal Struggle.—Ver. 18—23. Let any man who knows his own heart, and the spirituality of the law of God, compare his actual conduct, comprising his thoughts, affections, words, and works, during any given time, with his purposes, prevailing desires, and earnest persevering prayers: let him take that one duty which he especially aims to perform most perfectly, or that temper or evil propensity which he most longs to rectify or extinguish: let him examine himself very exactly in these respects every night, and he will surely find, that he cannot but be a sinner still, and is subjected to "a law, that when he would do good, evil is present with him." God has wise reasons for permitting this to be so, especially to give us a deeper sense of the malignity of sin and our own vileness, in order to commend the grace of the gospel; but they, who are most acquainted with the excellency of the law, and most diligently aim in every thing to obey it, will be most sensible that the case is really thus with them. Yet this opposition to sin, and mortifying disappointment respecting their most ardent desires, must not be confounded with the willing slavery of sin, and the convenient excuse of indwelling depravity. The apostle "daily exercised himself to have a conscience void of offence towards God and man:" and could call others to witness, "how holily, and justly, and unblameably, he had behaved among them." Yet this was not inconsistent with his being deeply humbled in the sight of God, by the consciousness of wandering thoughts in prayer, want of fervour of love and gratitude to God, zeal for his glory, and enlarged good-will to men, the rising of evil tempers, the intrusion of vain imaginations, and the intermixture of selfish motives. All these are sin, and as such hated and abhorred, in proportion to the degree of sanctification; yet no mere man on earth, after all possible diligence, watchfulness, fasting and prayer, could truly say, that in these respects he was perfectly free from sin, in his worship and obedience. So that even a person, who is not conscious of at any time neglecting one duty, or committing one actual transgression in word or deed, (which is at least a most uncommon case,) yet aspiring to be holy as an angel, or as Jesus Christ was, will very painfully feel, that "he doeth not the things that he would; and find a law, that when he would do good, evil is present with him;" and the more spiritual the services are, in which he engages, the greater clog and hinderance will it be to him.—Scott.

CHAP. VIII. Inability of the Law to Save.—Ver. 3, 4. The good and perfect law of God was weak through the flesh, or by means of man's depravity; so that it was impossible for it to bring man to holiness or liberty, any more than to justify him: even as the wholesome laws of the land cannot make men honest; they can only declare how they should act, and denounce penalties, but cannot change the heart; and therefore their impetuous passions break through the feeble restraint without regard to consequences, as the vehement torrent of some full-swollen river breaks through, or overflows the mound that was placed to impede its course. As the law was, therefore, inadequate to man's necessity, God was pleased in infinite mercy to send his own Son, to assume our nature, and appear "in the likeness of sinful flesh." Though free from sin, he became subject to those infirmities to which through sin we are exposed; he was accused Jesus from the dead dwell in you, [k]he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by [‡]his Spirit that [m]dwelleth in you.

12 Therefore, brethren, we are debtors, not to the flesh, to live after the flesh.

13 For if [o]ye live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live.

14 For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, [p]they are the sons of God.

15 For ye have not received [q]the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received [r]the Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, [s]Abba, Father.

16 The [t]Spirit itself beareth witness[4] with our spirit, that we are the children of God:

17 And [u]if children, then heirs; [b]heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ:[5] if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together.

18 For I reckon, that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us.

19 For the [c]earnest expectation[6] of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God.

20 For the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope;

21 Because the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption [k]into the glorious liberty of the children of God.

22 For we know that *[7]the whole creation groaneth and [l]travaileth in pain together until now:[7]

23 And not only they, but ourselves also, [m]which have the first-fruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, [n]the redemption of our body.

24 For we are saved by hope: [o]but hope that is seen is not hope: for what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for?

25 But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it.

26 Likewise the Spirit also helpeth[8] our infirmities: for we know not what we should pray for as we ought; [x]but the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered.

27 And he that searcheth the hearts [a]knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit, *because [b]he maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God.

28 And we know that all things work together[9] for good to [c]them that love God, to them who are [d]the called according to his purpose.

3 For I could wish that myself [e]were *[1]accursed from Christ† for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh:

4 Who are Israelites; to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the †covenants, and the giving of the law, [m]and the service of God, [a]and the promises; of many crimes, and numbered with transgressors; and he was punished by the Father as our surety, as if he had been the greatest of sinners. Thus he was appointed "for sin," or "for a sin-offering," that God, having "condemned sin in the flesh," and shown his abhorrence of it by the sufferings of his Son in our flesh, might pardon and justify the believer's person, and execute the sentence of condemnation on his corrupt nature, by its crucifixion and destruction.

5 Whose are the fathers, and of whom, as concerning the flesh, Christ came, [q]who is over all, God [r]blessed for ever.[2] Amen.

Flesh—Spirit.—Ver. 5—9. By the flesh we must therefore understand corrupt nature, as derived from Adam to all his posterity; and perhaps this term is used, because the soul is become the caterer to man's fleshly lusts, and the whole man is, as it were, immersed and sunk in the flesh. They, therefore, who are born after the flesh, but not after the Spirit, and who go after the leadings of the flesh, mind the things of the flesh: they are sagacious about them; they choose, desire, pursue, savour, and delight in them; they seek their happiness in the riches, pleasures, honours, and perishing vanities of this world; or in things of an unholy nature, which must be left at death, and which bear no relation to heavenly felicity. About these, their abilities, imaginations, contrivance, and time are employed; and they give them a decided preference to spiritual things, in their habitual judgment and conduct. But they, who are "born of the Spirit," and walk after the leadings of the new and spiritual nature, understand, choose, pursue, relish, and supremely value such things, as pertain to the spiritual and divine life, and such as will endure for ever.

Trouble of the whole Creation.—Ver. 18—23. Indeed the whole visible creation seems to wait with earnest expectation for that important period, when the children of God shall be manifested in the glory which is prepared for them: and in this it resembles a man, who with outstretched neck looks, and waits with impatient longing, for the arrival of some beloved and expected friend. For the creation itself became subject to vanity and disorder through man's apostacy; not willingly, as he did, but by a kind of constraint, through the guilt and righteous condemnation of Adam and his posterity. By this awful dispensation, the Lord subjected the creatures of this lower world, and even the visible creation, to vanity. Every thing seems perverted from its intended use: the inanimate creatures are pressed into the service of man's rebellion; the luminaries of heaven give him light, by which to work wickedness; the fruits of the earth are sacrificed to his luxury, intemperance, and ostentation; its bowels are ransacked for metals, from which arms are forged for public and private murder and revenge; or to gratify his avarice, and excite him to fraud, oppression, and war. The animal tribes are subject to pain and death through man's sin: and their sufferings are exceedingly increased by his cruelty, who instead of a kind master, is become their inhuman butcher and tyrant. So that every thing is in an unnatural state: the good creatures of God appear evil through man's abuse of them; and even the enjoyment originally to be found in them, is turned into vexation, bitterness, and disappointment, by his idolatrous love of them, and expectation from them. Yet this is "in hope:" God intends to rescue the creation from this confused state, and to deliver it from being thus held in bondage to man's depravity, that it may partake of and minister to the glorious liberty of his children.—Scott.

The Believer's Security.—Ver. 34. It is by virtue of our interest in Christ, our relation to him, and our union with him, that we are thus secured. 1. His death: it is "Christ that died." By the merit of his death he paid our debt; and the surety's payment is a good plea to an action of debt. It is Christ, an able, all-sufficient Saviour. 2. His resurrection: "yea, rather, that is risen again." This is a much greater encouragement, for it is a convincing evidence that divine justice was satisfied by the merit of his death. His resurrection was his acquittance; it was a legal discharge. Therefore the apostle mentions it with a "yea, rather." If he had died, and not risen again, we had been where we were. 3. His sitting at the right hand of God: He is "even at the right hand of God." A further evidence that he had done his work, and a mighty encouragement to us in reference to all accusations, that we have a friend, such a friend, in court. At "the right hand of God:" which denotes that he is ready there, always at hand, and that he is ruling there; all power is given to him. Our friend is himself the judge. 4. The intercession which he makes there. He is there, not unconcerned about us, not forgetful of us, but "making intercession." He is agent for us there; an advocate for us, to answer all accusations, to put in our plea, and to prosecute it with effect, to appear for us, and to present our petitions. And is not this abundant matter for comfort? What shall we say to these things? Is this the manner of men, O Lord God? What room is left for doubting and disquietment? Why art thou cast down, O my soul?—Henry.

CHAP. IX. Jewish Privilege.—Ver. 4, 5. The apostle was peculiarly grieved to think, that all the distinguished favours shown to his people, should terminate in the rejection of them for opposing Christ. They were the descendants of Israel, who wrestled with God and prevailed; they had long been the professed worshippers of Jehovah, to whom the typical adoption pertained. The covenants made with Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Aaron, and David; the law given Mount Sinai, and the national covenant grounded on it, belonged to them, and were so many peculiar honours and advantages towards their becoming the spiritual people of God. The worship at the temple,

CHAP. X.

The difference of the righteousness of the law, and that of faith, 1. No believer shall be confounded, whether Jew or Gentile, 11.

BRETHREN, my heart's desire and prayer[1] to God for Israel is, that they might be saved.

2 For I bear them record, [c]that they have a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge.

3 For they, being ignorant of [e]God's righteousness, and going about to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted themselves unto the righteousness of God.[2]

4 For Christ is the end[3] of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth.

5 For Moses describeth the righteousness which is of the law, [f]That the man which doeth those things shall live by them.

6 But the righteousness which is of faith speaketh on this wise, Say not in thine heart, Who shall ascend into heaven? (that is, to bring Christ down from above;) which was both typical of Christ's salvation, and the means of grace and communion with God; and the ark of the covenant, the symbol and pledge of the Lord's gracious presence with them, had for ages been their glory. All the promises concerning Christ and his salvation were immediately given and preserved to them; they were honourable by their descent from the ancient patriarchs, who walked with God and were accepted by him; and finally, the expected Messiah had been born among them, as one of their nation according to the flesh; even he, who is also "God over all" creatures, blessed and praised throughout all worlds, and to all eternity: to this the apostle affixed his cordial Amen.

7 Or, Who shall descend into the deep?

Divine Sovereignty.—Ver. 10—14. This instance of Esau and Jacob was intended as an illustration of the divine conduct towards the fallen race of man. It has often been urged, that Jacob and Esau were not so much personally intended as their posterity; and that temporal, and not eternal things are spoken of: and this is certainly true. Jacob never had dominion over Esau personally, but his posterity ruled over Esau's. The election, the prediction, the birthright, and the blessing, however, secured to Jacob and his seed the same religious advantages, as the promise of God secured to Isaac and his seed; and excluded Esau, as well as Ishmael, from them: and this, without determining any thing of Esau's eternal state: though his character, and the epithet profane annexed to his name by the apostle, seem to indicate that he was not a believer; yet it is evident, that the subject illustrated related to individuals and to their eternal state, whether as believers or unbelievers. As Esau, that "the purpose of God according to election might stand," had no inheritance in Canaan, and was not the progenitor of Christ; so those Israelites, who did not belong to "the election of grace," were excluded from the true church, had no part in Christ, and no inheritance in heaven; but the reverse is true of "the election of grace." They were called, and in consequence believed; they were justified in Christ and glorified; and the same is the case in respect of men in all other ages and nations. If indeed there were any of our race not fallen like other men, or not by nature dead in sin and children of wrath, even as others; if there were any inclined without preventing grace, to repent, and to believe the humbling holy gospel of Christ, to love God and obey his will; then indeed the election might be made with respect to their foreseen faith and obedience. Ver. 15—18. Men are indeed naturally willing to be saved from misery and made happy; and are often very diligent in proud and unbelieving endeavours in order to it; but this is widely different from a cordial willingness to be saved from sin as well as misery, and made holy and happy, in the humbling method of the gospel. This subject was exemplified in the case of Pharaoh. God the Creator advanced him to great authority and prosperity, and spared his life through the several plagues of Egypt: but at the same time he left him to harden himself in enmity and rebellion. This he declared to be intended, that in his destruction he might make known his power and glory throughout the earth. So that it must be allowed, that he hath mercy on such of our apostate race as he sees good; and that he hardeneth whom he will, by leaving them to themselves and under the power of Satan; by ordering his dispensations respecting them in such a manner, as he knows will exasperate their enmity and embolden their presumption; and by judicially sentencing them to final obduracy, that his justice in their punishment may become the more conspicuous. "This hardening also is voluntary, because the Lord, offended by their depravity, makes use of their own will, in executing this judgment on those whom he hardens. Then follow the fruits of this hardening, namely, unbelief and sins, which are the real causes of the condemnation of the reprobate." [Beza.]—Ver. 19—21. The unhumbled objector would be sure here to cavil, and to inquire why the Lord blamed or punished Pharaoh, or indeed any man, for his sins. Who had resisted his sovereign will and appointment? Even they, who most rebel against his precepts, fulfil his decrees: his will is therefore universally done, and no creature makes any opposition to it.—As if the secret purpose of God could be a rule of duty to his creatures! Or as if a man could mean to do the will of God by breaking his express commandments, out of enmity to him, and to gratify his own lusts! To this presumptuous caviller, (and such are very numerous, when both avowed enemies and false friends of these doctrines are included,) the apostle answered, by demanding of him (a man, a sinner,) who he was, that he should deem himself authorized to reply against God, and to charge him with injustice or want of wisdom, for those things which he had expressly spoken and done? Was it proper for the creature to call his Creator to an account for having formed him as he saw good? Would not men allow the infinite God the same sovereign right to manage the affairs of the creation, as the potter exercises in disposing of his clay, when of the same lump he makes one vessel to a more honourable, and another to a meaner, use? —Scott.

CHAP. X. Paul's Love to Israel.—Ver. 1. Paul here professes his good affection to the Jews, with the reason of it; where he gives them a good wish, and a good witness. 1. A good wish; a wish that they might "be saved;" saved from the temporal ruin and destruction that were coming upon them; saved from the wrath to come, eternal wrath, which was hanging over their heads. It is implied in this wish that they might be convinced and converted; he could not pray in faith, that they might be saved in their unbelief. Though Paul preached against them, yet he prayed for them; herein he was

8 But what saith it? The word is nigh thee,[3] even in thy mouth, and in thy heart: that is, the word of faith which we preach;

9 That [o]if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, [p]and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved.

10 For [q]with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation.

11 For the scripture saith, [r]Whosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed.

12 For there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek; for the same [s]Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him.

13 For [t]whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved.

14 How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher?

15 And how shall they preach except they be sent? as it is written, How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!

16 But they have not all obeyed the gospel: for Esaias saith, [m]Lord, who hath believed *our report?

17 So then faith cometh by hearing, [o]and hearing by the word of God.

18 But I say, Have they not heard?[4] Yes verily, their sound went into all the earth, and their words unto the ends of the world.

19 But I say, Did not Israel know? [t]First, Moses saith, I will provoke you to jealousy by them that are no people, and by a foolish nation I will anger you.

20 But Esaias is very bold, and saith, [y]I was found of them that sought me not; [z]I was made manifest unto them that asked not after me.

21 But to Israel he saith, [a]All day long I have stretched forth my hands unto [b]a disobedient and gainsaying people.

3 Lord, [g]they have killed thy prophets, and [h]digged down thine altars; and I am left alone, and they seek my life.

4 But what saith the answer of God unto him? [i]I have reserved to myself seven thousand men, who have not bowed the knee to the image of [k]Baal.

5 Even so then at this present time also there is a remnant according to the election of grace.

6 And [n]if by grace, then is it no more of works; otherwise grace is no more grace. But if it be of works, then is it no more grace; otherwise work is no more work.

7 What then? Israel hath not obtained that which he seeketh for; [q]but the election hath obtained it, [r]and the rest were [†]blinded

8 (According as it is written, [s]God hath given them the spirit of [‡]slumber, [t]eyes that they should not see, and ears that they should not hear;) [u]unto this day.

9 And [x]David saith, Let [y]their table[1] be made a snare, and a trap, and a stumbling-block, and [z]a recompence unto them:

10 Let their eyes be darkened, that they may not see, [b]and bow down their back alway.

11 I say then, Have they stumbled that they should fall? God forbid: but rather through their fall salvation is come unto the Gentiles, for to provoke them to jealousy.

12 Now, if the fall of them be [‖]the riches of the world,[2] and the [‖]diminishing of them the riches of the Gentiles; how much more [g]their fulness?

13 For I speak to you Gentiles, inasmuch as I am [h]the apostle of the Gentiles, I magnify mine office:

14 If [l]by any means I may [k]provoke to emulation them which are [l]my flesh, and [m]might save some of them.

15 For if the casting away of them be [o]the reconciling of the world, what shall the receiving of them be, [p]but life from the dead?

16 For [q]if the first-fruit be holy, the lump is also holy; [r]and if the root be holy, so are the branches.

17 And if some of the branches be broken off, and thou, being a wild olive-tree,[5] wert graffed in [4]among them, and with them partakest of the root and fatness of the olive-tree;

18 [x]Boast not against the branches: but if thou boast, [y]thou bearest not the root, but the root thee.

19 Thou wilt say then, The branches were broken off, [z]that I might be graffed in.

merciful, as God is, who is "not willing that any should perish," 2 Pet. iii. 9, desires not the death of sinners. It is our duty truly and earnestly to desire the salvation of the souls of others, next to the salvation of our own. This, he says, was "his heart's desire and prayer;" which intimates the strength and sincerity of his desire; it was "his heart's desire;" it was not a formal compliment, as good wishes are with many from the teeth outward; but a real desire. This it was before it was his prayer. The soul of prayer is the heart's desire. Cold desires do but beg denials; we must even breathe out our souls in every prayer.—Henry.

Means and Blessing.—Ver. 12—17. By calling on the name of the Lord, we must understand, either invoking the Lord Jesus personally, as the incarnate Word, the co-equal Son of God, "God manifest in the flesh," or calling upon the Father by faith in the Son, and through his intercession; but the former sense best accords with the apostle's argument, and is by far the most obvious construction of the words. All believers thus called on the name of the Lord Jesus, and none else would, that is, humbly and sincerely: therefore all, whether Jews or Gentiles, who thus sought help from him, would be saved. But how should any call on the Lord Jesus, the divine Saviour, who had not believed in him as such? Or how could any believe in him, who had never heard of him or his salvation? Or how could the Gentiles hear the things pertaining to Christ, if none of the Jews, to whom they were immediately revealed, were sent by God and his church to preach to them? Why then should the Jews blame the apostle and others, for engaging in this needful and benevolent work, to which God had called them? The necessity and importance of preaching the gospel had been stated in strong terms by the prophet, who had poetically described even the feet of those who proclaimed the gospel of peace to be beautiful; and though the gentiles had not generally welcomed the salvation of Christ, (any more than the Jews,) so as to receive it with obedient faith; yet that too had been intimated by the same prophet, when he expressed his grief and surprise at men's general inattention to the glad tidings of salvation by a suffering Messiah.—Scott.

CHAP. XI. Election of Grace.—Ver. 1—6. This remnant was reserved according to "the election of grace:" not because they were less undeserving of such favour than others; but because God was pleased to have mercy on them for reasons best known to himself: otherwise they too would have perished in unbelief. If then this election were of grace, it could no more be pretended to be of works, either performed or foreseen; as this would imply that something naturally in the objects chosen determined the Lord's preference, and that it did not originate in his mere grace. For if, in any sense of degree, it were of works, it would in part at least be of debt, and not of entire free favour; otherwise "work," as it stands related to election and justification, would lose its very nature. For, an entire free favour must be absolutely distinct from a reward, conferred in consequence of some work performed: as the price of one farthing paid for what is worth a thousand pounds, must in exact propriety of speech essentially distinguish it from an entirely free gift. This text is so decisive on the subject, that great pains have been taken to explain it away; but really the arguments of the most able and learned men on the other side, prove nothing so much as the weakness of their cause. I shall therefore only observe in general; that, in fact, they are not called, who to our apprehension are best disposed to perform good works, but often the contrary, as the examples recorded in Scripture alone undeniably demonstrate; that every real good disposition in an apostate creature must be the "effect," and cannot therefore be "the cause," of the grace of God bestowed on him; that God did not act without reason in choosing one rather than another, though we are not made acquainted with his reasons; and that the display of the infinite riches of his mercy, the omnipotence of his grace, and the glory of his own sovereignty, in converting the most unlikely persons in the world, are far more probable reasons of his choice, than any foreseen comparative goodness of natural disposition in those who are saved, above those that perish.

Conversion of Israel.—Ver. 16—21. Abraham was, as it were, the root of the visible church in all subsequent ages. After Ishmael and the sons of Keturah had been broken off, the tree grew up in Isaac: then Esau being broken off, it shot forth abundance of branches in Jacob and his twelve sons. When any Gentiles were proselyted, they were grafted into this tree by circumcision, as long as the legal dispensation lasted, (but by baptism after the Christian dispensation entered;) and they with their posterity were from that time considered as branches of the tree, a part of the visible church as springing from Abraham. Notwithstanding all former rebellions, the Jews were the branches of this tree, till as a nation they rejected the Messiah, (though the most of the ten tribes had before been broken off;) but after that, their relation to Abraham and to God, was, as it were, suspended; they were broken off from the olive-tree in vast multitudes: they were cast out of the church, as the children of the bond-woman, or as profane Esau: neither they nor their posterity any longer retained even the outward seal of the covenant, (for circumcision lost its validity, and baptism became the sign of regeneration;) and they were thenceforth deprived of the ordinances of God. At the same time the Gentiles were grafted into this tree in their room: by professing faith in Christ, and being baptized into his name, they were admitted into the visible church of God, and attained a relative holiness; they were favoured with the means of grace, and broken off, and thou standest by faith. Be not high-minded, but fear:

21 For [f] if God spared not the natural branches, take heed lest he also spare not thee.

22 Behold [g] therefore the goodness and severity of God: on them which fell, severity; but toward thee, goodness, if thou continue in his goodness; otherwise thou also shalt be cut off.

23 And they also, [k] if they abide not still in unbelief, shall be graffed in: for God is able to graff them in again.

24 For if [l] thou wert cut out of the olive-tree which is wild by nature, and wert graffed contrary to nature into a good olive-tree; how much more shall these, which be the natural branches, be graffed into their own olive-tree?

25 For I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery,[4] (lest ye should be wise in your own conceits,) [p] that *blindness in part is happened to Israel, [q] until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in.

26 And so all Israel shall be saved: as it is written, [s] There shall come out of Sion the Deliverer, [t] and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob:

27 For this is my covenant unto them, when I shall take away their sins.

28 As concerning the gospel, [5] they are enemies for your sakes: [5] but as touching the election, they are beloved for the fathers' sakes.

29 For [b] the gifts and calling of God are without repentance.

30 For [c] as ye in times past have not believed God, yet have now [d] obtained mercy through their unbelief;

31 Even so have these also now not [†] believed, that through your mercy they also may obtain mercy.

32 For [g] God hath [‡] concluded them all in unbelief, [h] that he might have mercy upon all.[6]

33 O the depth of the [k] riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out!

34 For [m] who hath known the mind of the Lord? or who hath been his counsellor?

35 Or [n] who hath first given to him, and it shall be recompensed unto him again?

36 For [o] of him, and through him, and to him, are all things: [p] to whom be glory for ever. Amen.

I BESEECH you therefore, brethren, [b] by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies[1] a living sacrifice, holy, [c] acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service.

2 And [f] be not conformed to this world; but [g] be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may [i] prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God.

3 For I say, through the grace given unto me, to every man that is among you, not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think; but to think *soberly, [n] according as God hath dealt to every man the measure of faith.

4 For as we have many members in one body, and all members have not the same office;

5 So we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another.

6 Having [q] then gifts, differing according to the grace that is given to us, whether prophecy,[2] let us prophesy according to the proportion of faith;

the ordinances of God "for their good, and that of their children after them," as the Jews formerly had been; and multitudes, that had been the branches of the wild unfruitful olive-tree, were thus made heirs of Abraham's faith, holiness, and blessedness. Yet the Gentile Christians ought by no means to copy the Jews, in being proud of their distinction, or in boasting over those who had been rejected to make room for them. But if any of them were disposed to do this, they should recollect, that they were not the root of this well-cultured fruitful tree; nor had they naturally sprung from it, but of free grace had been grafted in to share its advantages. Abraham's race had derived no spiritual good from them; but they derived all from Abraham's race. They might indeed say that the natural branches had been broken off to make way for them, and it was indeed true that God had preferred them; yet it was not on account of their works, but of mere grace. Through unbelief, the offspring of pride, the Jews had been broken off, and through faith the Gentiles had been grafted in: they ought therefore to beware of self-confidence, self-preference, and every kind of pride or ambition; lest having only a dead faith, and an empty profession, they should apostatize from God and forfeit their privileges. For if he had not spared the natural branches; they ought surely to fear lest they too should be broken off.—Scott.

THE COVENANT.—Ver. 27. "This is my covenant with them;" this, that the "Deliverer shall come" to them; this, that "my Spirit shall" not depart from them, as it follows, Isa. lix. 21. God's gracious intentions concerning Israel were made the matter of a covenant, which the God that cannot lie could not but be true and faithful to. They were the "children of the covenant," Acts iii. 25. The apostle adds, "when I shall take away their sins;" which some think refers to Isa. xxvii. 9, or only to the foregoing words, to "turn away ungodliness." Pardon of sin is laid as the foundation of all the blessings of the new covenant, Heb. viii. 12. "For I will be merciful." Now from all this he infers, that certainly God had great mercy in store for that people, something answerable to the extent of these rich promises: and he proves his inference, ver. 29, by this truth, "For the gifts and callings of God are without repentance." Repentance is sometimes taken for a change of mind, and so God never repents, for he is in one mind and who can turn him? Sometimes for a change of way, and that is here understood; intimating the constancy and unchangeableness of that love of God, which is founded in election.—Henry.

CHAP. XII. THE LIVING SACRIFICE.—Ver. 1. The allusion seems to be made to the living animals, which were presented as sacrifices before the altar, that they might be slain, and thus offered to God upon it. Thus Christians should present their bodies before God, to be employed in his service, and to be spent and worn out by hardships or labours for him, that so they might be wholly devoted to his glory. The body, with its members, senses, and organs, is the instrument of the carnal mind, in executing its purposes and gratifying its evil inclinations: when therefore the mind is made spiritual, the body should, in like manner, execute its holy purposes and express its spiritual affections. Thus the soul becomes the consecrated priest, and the body the living sacrifice unto God through Jesus Christ. In general this sacrifice must be presented alive, to be employed in the worship and work of God; though sometimes at length it must also be offered up to death by martyrdom. As the legal sacrifices, (which that of Christ had now superseded,) were to be without spot or blemish: so the bodies of believers must be separated from the practice of all iniquity, or they cannot be fit to be living sacrifices to God.—Scott.

HUMILITY.—Ver. 3. Pride is a sin that is bred in the bone with all of us, and we have therefore each of us need to be cautioned and armed against it. We must take heed of having too great an opinion of ourselves, or putting too high a valuation upon our own judgments, abilities, persons, performances. We must not be "self-conceited," not esteem too much our own wisdom and other attainments; not "think ourselves to be something," Gal. vi. 3. There is a high thought of ourselves, which we may and must have, to think ourselves too good to be the slaves of sin and drudges to this world. But, on the other hand, we should "think soberly," we must have a low and modest opinion of ourselves and our own abilities, our gifts and graces, according to what we have received from God, and not otherwise: not to be confident and hot in matters of doubtful disputation; not stretch ourselves beyond our line; not judge and censure those that differ from us; not desire to make a fair show in the flesh. These and the like are the fruits of a sober opinion of ourselves.

FORGIVING GOODNESS.—Ver. 21. To this purpose is the exhortation in the last verse, which suggests a paradox not easily understood by the world; that in all matters of strife and contention, those that revenge are the "conquered;" and those that forgive are the "conquerors." 1. "'Be not overcome of evil.' Let not the evil of any provocation that is given you, have such a power over you, or make such an impression upon you, as to dispossess you of yourselves; to disturb your peace, to destroy your love, to ruffle and discompose your spirits, to transport you to any indecencies, or to bring you to study or endeavour any revenge." He that cannot quietly bear an injury, is perfectly conquered by it. 2. "'But overcome evil with good;' with the good of patience and forbearance, nay, and of kindness and beneficence to those that wrong you; learn to defeat their ill designs against you, and either to change them, or however to preserve you own peace." He that hath this rule over his spirit, is better than the mighty.—Henry.

Of duties to magistrates, 1. Love is the fulfilling of the law, 8. Against gluttony, drunkenness, and the works of darkness, 11.

LET every soul be subject unto the higher powers. For [b] there is no power but of God: the powers that be are *ordained of God.

2 Whosoever therefore resisteth the power, [d] resisteth the ordinance of God; and they that resist shall [e] receive to themselves damnation.

3 For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil. [g] Wilt thou then not be afraid of the power? do that which is good, and thou shalt have praise of the same:

4 For [h] he is the minister of God to thee for good. But if thou do that which is evil, be afraid; for he beareth not the sword in vain: for he is the minister of God, [k] a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil.

5 Wherefore ye must needs be subject, not only for wrath, but also for [m] conscience sake.

6 For, for this cause [n] pay ye tribute also: for they are God's ministers, attending continually upon this very thing.

7 Render [p] therefore to all their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom;[1] [q] fear to whom fear; [r] honour to whom honour.

8 [s] Owe no man any thing, but to love one another: for he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law.

9 For this, [t] Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not kill, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness, [u] Thou shalt not covet; and if there be any other commandment, it is briefly comprehended in this saying, namely, [x] Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

10 Love [y] worketh no ill to his neighbour: therefore [z] love is the fulfilling of the law.

11 And that, knowing the time, that now [b] it is high time to awake out of sleep: [c] for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed.

CHAP. XIII. CIVIL GOVERNMENT.—Ver. 1. It is evident the apostle did not determine the divine right of absolute monarchy, or exclusively of any form of government; but to inculcate subjection to the ruling powers of every place and time in which believers lived. But as the benefits of civil government are many and great, and it is the appointment of God for maintaining order among the apostate race of men; so any man who set himself to oppose the established government of that nation in which he lived, would be considered as resisting the providence, and rebelling against the authority of God, who gave the rulers their authority, and will himself call them to account for the use which they make of it.—"All other governments derived their power from God, as well as that of the Jews; though they had not the whole frame of their government immediately from him, as the Jews had."—"Whether we take powers here in the abstract for political authority, or in the concrete, for the persons actually exercising political power and jurisdiction, the sense will be the same."—"How men come by a rightful title to this power, or who has this title, the apostle is wholly silent, and says nothing of it. To have meddled with that would have been to decide of civil rights, contrary to the design and business of the gospel, and the example of our Saviour, who refused meddling in such cases, with this decisive question, 'Who made me a judge or a divider over you?'" [Locke.]—The words rendered "the powers that be," or "the existing authorities," seem intended to exclude all such inquiries. Whatever be the form of the existing government, or the way by which it was established, while it continues to exist it must be regarded and submitted to as the appointment of Providence.

SPIRITUAL VIGILANCE.—Ver. 11—14. Some think that the apostle here refers to the approaching destruction of Jerusalem, and the more complete establishment of Christianity that followed; but he seems rather to speak of the state of believers in this world, and their expectation of approaching complete salvation. It behoved them to consider how long they had heard and professed the gospel, and the shortness of the time that might yet remain to them, in which to glorify God among men. Thus they would perceive that it was full time for them to shake off all remaining sloth and supineness, and to attend to every duty with increasing zeal and vigour: as the day of salvation approached continually, and was then actually much nearer than when they had first believed in Christ; and consequently their term of remaining usefulness on earth was proportionally abridged. The redemption by which salvation comes to lost sinners was finished with the humiliation of the Saviour, and when he expired on the cross, salvation becomes ours, and is begun, when we come to him by faith: it will be finished as to the soul at the hour of death, and as to the body at the day of judgment. The life of faith might be called day, in comparison of the darkness of the idolatrous and unconverted state: yet it was but night, or twilight, in comparison of the light of heaven.—Scott.

CHAP. XIV. CANDOUR AND CHARITY.—Ver. 2—4. One Christian, either a Gentile convert or a Jew, who had got over the prejudices of his nation, believed it lawful to eat any kind of meat, without regarding the distinctions of the law in that respect: another, either a Jewish convert, or one who had imbibed some Jewish prejudices, would eat only vegetables, (especially when in company with Gentile converts,) lest he should unawares eat some unclean thing. This indeed showed that he was weak and unestablished in the faith; yet it evinced him to be conscientious. Here then mutual candour was to be exercised: the Christian, who knew and used his liberty, must not despise his weak brother, as ignorant or superstitious; and so disdain to associate with him, or use contemptuous language respecting him: and, on the other hand, the scrupulous believer must by no means condemn his brother, as self indulgent or lax in his conduct, or shun him, and speak against him on that account. For God had accepted him, and taken him into his family, without regarding these distinctions: and it did not behove any one to judge and condemn another's servant, for such things as his own master did not object to. He was only accountable to his own Lord.—Ver. 19—23. The apostle proceeded to inculcate an assiduous and persevering attention to the interests of peace among Christians, and to all those things by which mutual edification might be promoted. Let then none of those who understood their liberty allow their own indulgence in any kind of food to counteract the work of God, in the conversion of the Jews, the spread of the gospel, or the sanctification of believers; or suffer it to destroy any of his rational creatures. Indeed the apostle would have it known, as his decided judgment, (though he had been educated a Pharisee,) that all kinds of meats were alike pure in themselves: yet it would be evil for a man to eat them, when it had a direct tendency to seduce a weak brother into sin. Nay, so much ought love to preponderate over all such considerations, that it would be good and right for a man to abstain wholly from flesh and wine, and every other indulgence by which his brother would be tempted to sin, made uneasy in his conscience, or weakened in his hope and the vigour of his obedience. So that they who had stronger faith, and assuredly believed that they might lawfully eat any kind of food, should not make ostentation of it, or improperly seize on every occasion of acting according to it; but rather possess it as in the sight of God, who would know their uprightness when others judged them on that account: and let them use their liberty with humility, caution, prudence, and self-denial; and without seeming to prefer themselves, or to despise their weaker brethren. It would be a great happiness to a man to be free from all doubt of itself: but to him that esteemeth any thing to be unclean, to him it is unclean.

15 But if thy brother be grieved with thy meat, now walkest thou not [1]charitably. [n]Destroy not him with thy meat for whom Christ died.

16 Let not then your good be evil spoken of:[3]

17 For [p]the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; [r]but righteousness, [s]and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost.

18 For he that [t]in these things serveth Christ [u]is acceptable to God, and approved of men.

19 Let us therefore [y]follow after the things which make for peace, and things wherewith one may edify another.[4]

20 [a]For meat destroy not the work of God. [c]All things indeed are pure; but it is evil for that man who eateth with offence.

21 It is [e]good neither to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor any thing [f]whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is offended, or is made weak.

22 Hast thou faith? have it to thyself before God. Happy is he that condemneth not himself in that thing which he alloweth.

23 And he that *doubteth is damned if he eat, because he eateth not of faith: for whatsoever is not of faith is sin.

CHAP. XV.

The strong must bear with the weak, as Christ did, 1; who receives Gentiles as well as Jews, 9.

WE then that are strong [b]ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to [c]please ourselves.

2 Let every one of us please his neighbour for his good to edification.

3 For [e]even Christ pleased not himself; but, as it is written, The reproaches of them that reproached thee fell on me.

4 For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning; that we, through patience and comfort of the scriptures, might have hope.

5 Now [l]the God of patience [k]and consolation grant you to be like-minded one toward another, *according to Christ Jesus;

6 That [l]ye may with one mind and one mouth glorify God, even [n]the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ.

7 Wherefore receive ye one another, [p]as Christ also received us,[1] to the glory of God.

8 Now I say, that [s]Jesus Christ was a minister of the circumcision [t]for the truth of God, to confirm the promises made unto the fathers:

9 And [u]that the Gentiles might glorify God for his mercy; as it is written, For this cause I will confess to thee among the Gentiles, and sing unto thy name.

10 And again he saith, Rejoice, ye Gentiles, with his people.

11 And again, [z]Praise the Lord, all ye Gentiles; and laud him, all ye people.

12 And again, Esaias saith, [a]There shall be a root of Jesse, [b]and he that shall rise to reign over the Gentiles; [c]in him shall the Gentiles trust.

13 Now [d]the God of hope [e]fill you with all joy and peace in believing, that ye may abound in hope, through the power of the Holy Ghost.

14 And I myself also am persuaded of you, my brethren, that ye also are [h]full of goodness, filled with all knowledge, able also to admonish one another.

15 Nevertheless, brethren, I have written the more boldly unto you in some sort, as putting you in mind, [m]because of the grace[2] that is given to me of God,

16 That [n]I should be the minister of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles, [o]ministering the gospel of God, that [p]the [†]offering up of the Gentiles might be acceptable, [q]being sanctified by the Holy Ghost.

17 I have therefore [r]whereof I may glory through Jesus Christ in those things which pertain to God.

18 For I will not dare[3] to speak of any of those things [u]which Christ hath not wrought by me, [x]to make the Gentiles obedient, by word and deed,

19 Through mighty signs and wonders, [a]by the power of the Spirit of God; so that from Jerusalem, and round about unto Illyricum, I have [c]fully preached the gospel of Christ.

20 Yea, so have I strived to preach the gospel, not where Christ was named, lest I should build upon another man's foundation:

21 But as it is written, To whom he was not spoken of, they shall see: and they that have not heard shall understand.

22 For which cause also I have been [‡]much hindered from coming to you.

23 But now having no more place in these parts, and having a great desire these many years to come unto you;

24 Whensoever I take my journey into Spain,[4] I will come to you: for I trust to see you in my journey, and to be brought on my way thitherward by you, if first I be somewhat filled [§]with your company.

25 But now I go unto Jerusalem to minister unto the saints.

or self-condemnation, in those things which he allowed himself to do; but if any one questioned whether any indulgence were lawful or not, and yet example, persuasion, or inclination, prevailed with him to venture upon it, he would certainly commit a sin for which his conscience would condemn him, and for which even God would condemn him, if he did not repent of it. For as he did it not in faith, as he was not fully persuaded in his own mind that he was allowed by the Scripture to do it, he would be guilty of preferring his own inclination to the dictates of his conscience, and the supposed will of God.—In general every action must be sinful which is not done in a believing apprehension, that we are acting according to the command, or by the allowance of God, and may therefore consider ourselves to be in the way of his promised blessing.—It is obvious how groundless the scruples of some serious persons from this text, concerning the Lord's supper, must be; for the apostle's argument is wholly about a subject entirely of another nature.—Scott.

CHAP. XV. SYMPATHY.—Ver. 1. We must "bear the infirmities of the weak." We all have our infirmities; but the weak are more subject to them than others; the weak in knowledge or grace; the bruised reed, and the smoking flax. We must consider these; not trample upon them, but encourage them, and "bear with their infirmities." If through weakness they judge and censure us, and speak evil of us, we must bear with them, pity them, and not have our affections alienated from them. Alas! it is their weakness, they cannot help it. Thus Christ bore with his weak disciples, and excused for them. But there is more in it; we must also "bear their infirmities," by sympathizing with them, concerning ourselves for them, ministering strength to them, as there is occasion. That is, bearing one another's burthens.

HARMONY.—Ver. 5. Like-mindedness among Christians, is in order to our glorifying of God. 1. With "one mind and one mouth." It is desirable that Christians should agree in every thing, that so they may agree in this, to praise God together. It tends very much to the glory of God, who is one, and his name one, when it is so. It will not suffice, that there be one mouth, but there must be one mind; for God looks at the heart; nay, there will hardly be one mouth, where there is not one mind; and God will scarcely be glorified, where there is not a sweet conjunction of both. One mouth in confessing the truths of God, in praising the name of God; "one mouth" in common converse, not jarring, biting, and devouring one another: "one mouth" in the solemn assembly; one speaking, but all joining. 2. As "the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ." That is his New Testament style. God must be glorified as he has now revealed himself in the face of Jesus Christ; according to the rules of the gospel, and with an eye to Christ, in whom he is our Father. The unity of Christians glorifies "God as the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ;" because it is a kind of counterpart or representation of the oneness that is between the Father and the Son.—Henry.

PAUL'S LABOURS.—Ver. 18—21. What had been done was indeed entirely the work of Christ; but he had chosen to make use of him as his instrument. His preaching had been attended with extraordinary miracles, wrought by the power of the Holy Spirit, whose divine agency had also disposed the hearts of the hearers to embrace the gospel. So that from Jerusalem, in a very extensive circle of some thousands of miles, even to Illyricum on the borders of Italy, he had fully preached the gospel of Christ, and instructed vast multitudes with great accuracy in that holy doctrine. Indeed, it had been his ambition (so the original word signifies) to carry the glad tidings of salvation to those, who had not before heard of Christ; and thus to face the dangers and hardships of making the first assault on the kingdom of Satan, in every place. Nor was he disposed in general to build on the foundation laid by other ministers, who were competent to carry on the work which they had happily begun; but rather to fulfil the Scripture, which foretold, that many nations and rulers would see and understand such things, as they had before been strangers to.—Unto Illyricum, ver. 19. "I do not think, that these words necessarily import, that St. Paul had penetrated into Illyricum;—but rather that he had come to the confines of Illyricum; and that these confines were the external boundary of his travels.—Illyricum adjoins unto Macedonia: measuring from Jerusalem towards Rome, it lies close behind it. If, therefore, St. Paul traversed the whole country of Macedonia, the route would necessarily bring him to the confines of Illyricum. Now the account of St. Paul's second visit to the peninsula of Greece is contained in these words: 'He departed for to go into Macedonia, and when he had gone over those parts, and had given them much exhortation, he came into Greece.' This account allows, or rather leads us to suppose, that St. Paul, in going over Macedonia, had passed so far to the west, as to come into those parts of the country which were contiguous to Illyricum, if he did not enter into Illyricum itself. The history and the epistle therefore so far agree; and the agreement is much strengthened by a coincidence of time. At the time when this epistle was written, St. Paul might say, in conformity to the history, that he had come unto Illyricum; much before this time he could not have said so; for upon his former journey into Macedonia, his route is laid down, from the time of his landing at Philippi, to his sailing from Corinth; which confines him to the eastern side of the peninsula, and therefore keeps him all the while at a considerable distance from Illyricum." [Paley.]—Ver. 30—33. The apostle regarded his journey to Jerusalem as of so much importance, that he ought not to decline it: yet he was aware, that it would be 27 It hath pleased them verily; and their debtors they are. For if the Gentiles have been made partakers of their spiritual things, their duty is also to minister unto them in carnal things.

28 When therefore I have performed this, and have sealed[s] to them this fruit, I will come by you into Spain.

2 That [e]ye receive her in the Lord, as becometh saints, and that ye assist her in whatsoever business she hath need of you: for she hath been a succourer of many, and of myself also.

3 Greet [h]Priscilla and Aquila, [i]my helpers in Christ Jesus;

4 (Who have for my life laid down their own necks: unto whom not only I give thanks, but [m]also all the churches of the Gentiles:)

5 Likewise greet [n]the church that is in their house.[2] Salute [o]my well-beloved Epenetus, [p]who is the first-fruits of [q]Achaia unto Christ.

6 Greet Mary, who bestowed much labour on us.

7 Salute Andronicus and Junia, my kinsmen, and my fellow-prisoners, who are of note among the apostles, who also were in Christ before me.

8 Greet Amplias,[3] [y]my beloved in the Lord.

9 Salute Urbane, [z]our helper in Christ, and Stachys my beloved.

10 Salute Apelles, [a]approved in Christ. Salute them which are [b]of Aristobulus' household*.

11 Salute Herodion my kinsman. Greet them that be of the household* of Narcissus, which are in the Lord.

12 Salute Tryphena and Tryphosa, who [c]labour in the Lord. Salute the beloved Persis, which laboured much in the Lord.

13 Salute [d]Rufus, [e]chosen in the Lord, and his mother and mine.

14 Salute Asyncritus, Phlegon, Hermas, Patrobas, Hermes, and the brethren which are with them.

15 Salute Philologus, and Julia, Nereus, and his sister, and Olympas, and all the saints which are with them.

16 Salute one another with an holy kiss.[4] [k]The churches of Christ salute you.

17 Now, I beseech you, brethren, mark them which [m]cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; [o]and avoid them.

18 For they that are such [p]serve not our Lord Jesus Christ, [q]but their own belly; and by good words and fair speeches[5] deceive the hearts of the simple.

19 For [t]your obedience is come abroad unto all men. I am glad therefore on your behalf: but yet I would have you wise unto that which is good, and [‡]simple concerning evil.

20 And [y]the God of peace [z]shall [§]bruise Satan under your feet shortly. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. Amen.

21 ¶ Timotheus my work-fellow, and Lucius, and Jason, and Sosipater, my kinsmen, salute you.

22 I Tertius,[6] who wrote this epistle, [h]salute you in the Lord.

23 [i]Gaius mine host, and of the whole church, saluteth you. Erastus, the chamberlain of the city,[7] saluteth you, and Quartus a brother.

24 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

25 Now [m]to him that is of power to stablish you according to my gospel, [o]and the preaching of Jesus Christ, (according to the revelation of the mystery, which was kept secret since the world began,

26 But now is made manifest, and by the scriptures of the prophets, [t]according to the commandment of the everlasting God, made known to all nations [x]for the obedience of faith;)

27 To God [z]only wise, be glory through Jesus Christ for ever. Amen.

attended with great danger and difficulty, through the enmity of the Jews, and the strong prejudices even of the Christians against him; which neither his zeal in their behalf, nor the liberality of the Gentile converts, could counterbalance. He therefore besought the Romans, for the sake of Christ their common Lord, and for that love's sake which the Spirit of Christ had wrought in their hearts to each other, (according to his own most loving nature and conduct towards them,) that they would earnestly unite in prayers for him, that he might be protected from the malice of the unbelieving or disobedient Jews, who would otherwise disappoint all the plans which he had formed: and that the prejudices of the Jewish believers might be so removed, that they might accept, and take in good part, the service which he went to perform. That so, if the Lord pleased, he might not come to them grieved and disappointed, but with joy and comfort; and also have his spirit refreshed and enlivened by joining with them in thanksgivings to God, and by what he witnessed of the grace bestowed upon them.—Scott.

CHAP. XVI. PHEBE.—Ver. 1. Some think she was one of the widows that ministered to the sick, and were taken into the church's number, 1 Tim. v. 9. But those were old and poor, whereas Phebe seems to have been a person of some account; and yet it was no disparagement to her to be a servant to the church. Probably, they used to meet at her house, and she undertook the care of entertaining the ministers, especially strangers. Every one in his place should strive to serve the church, for therein he serves Christ, and it will turn to a good account another day. Cenchrea was a small seaport town adjoining to Corinth, about twelve furlongs distant. Some think there was a church there, distinct from that at Corinth.—Henry.

SALUTATIONS.—Ver. 6—15. It is not known what Mary this was, or in what respect she had bestowed much labour on the apostle and his friends; but she had in some proper manner been very active in providing for their support and comfort. Andronicus and Junia, being Jews, and of the same tribe and family with St. Paul, had on some occasion been imprisoned with him for the sake of the gospel. They had probably been converted on the day of Pentecost, or soon after, and were well known and esteemed by the other apostles, while Paul had been a persecutor: as they were in Christ, that is, believers before the apostle was. Of the persons who are next mentioned, nothing certain is known. Apelles had approved himself to be a true believer by his exemplary and zealous conduct. Probably Aristobulus was not a Christian; but he had several in his household of whom the apostle had some knowledge. Narcissus is supposed to have [illegible] Rufus seems to have been the son of Simon the Cyrenian; and his mother had shown such attention to Paul, that he deemed her deserving of the honour and respect due to a parent.—It is remarkable, that the apostle, amidst all his engagements, should be so well acquainted with the names and characters of many Christians, residing in a city which he had never visited.—Scott.

VICTORY OVER SATAN.—Ver. 20. "He shall bruise Satan under your feet;" plainly alluding to the first promise of the Messiah made in paradise, Gen iii. 15, that the seed of the woman should break the serpent's head; which is in the fulfilling every day, while the saints are enabled to resist and overcome the temptations of Satan; and will be perfectly fulfilled, when, in spite of all the powers of darkness, all that belong to the election of grace shall be brought triumphantly to glory. When Joshua had conquered the kings of Canaan, he called the captains of Israel to set their feet upon the necks of those kings, Josh. x. 24; so will Christ, our Joshua, enable all his faithful servants and soldiers to set their feet upon Satan's neck, to trample upon and triumph over, their spiritual enemies. Christ hath overcome for us, disarmed the strong man armed, broken his power, and we have nothing to do but to pursue the victory and divide the spoil.—Henry.

GLORY TO GOD.—Ver. 25—27. The apostle at length concluded with ascribing glory to God in such a manner, as to direct the faith and dependence of those whom he addressed to be placed on him. He was aware that nothing but the almighty power of God could preserve them from the fatal assaults of their subtle and potent enemies. But God was able to establish them in the faith, hope, and obedience of the gospel, which he had preached to them, in consistency with the doctrine of Christ, respecting the salvation of sinners and the calling of the Gentiles. This great mystery had been concealed from mankind in general since the beginning, and had only been in part revealed to the Jews, but at length it had been openly manifested, according to the writings of the ancient prophets, and by the accomplishment of them; and by the preaching of the gospel according to the commandment of the eternal God to his apostles and evangelists: that it might be made known to the nations, in order to deliver them from their idolatries and iniquities, and lead them to the obedience or faith. To this God of infinite wisdom and knowledge, from whom all wisdom originates, all glory and worship ought to be rendered for ever, through his Son Jesus Christ. By the only wise God, we must understand the Deity, without respect to the distinction of persons; or the Father, without excluding the Son or the Holy Spirit, who, in many Scriptures, are shown to be co-equal with the Father, in all divine perfections. But as the Godhead is revealed to us, in and by the incarnate Word, our divine Mediator; as we [illegible] see the glory of God, and our [illegible] and worship being in the [illegible] —Scott.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE # CORINTHIANS.

THE narrative of the apostle's successful preaching at Corinth has been considered (Notes, Acts xviii. 1-18). But speedily after he left the church which he founded there, other teachers came among them, who made great pretensions to eloquence, wisdom, and knowledge of their Christian liberty, and thus undermined his influence, and the credit of his ministry. By these means the Corinthians were divided into parties, engaged in eager disputes, and seduced into various irregularities, abuses, and errors. "It appears that this letter to the Corinthians was written by St Paul in answer to one which he had received from them (vii. 1); and that the seventh, and some of the following chapters, are taken up in resolving certain doubts, and regulating certain points of order, concerning which the Corinthians had consulted him. Though they had written to St Paul requesting his answer and directions in these points, they had not said one syllable about the enormities and disorders which had crept in among them, and in the blame of which they all shared; but his information concerning these irregularities had come round to him from other quarters by more private intelligence."—PALEY. The epistle was therefore written, not only as an answer to the inquiries of the Corinthians by letter, but in order to oppose and terminate the various corruptions in doctrine and practice which prevailed, to subvert the influence of the false teachers, and to re-establish the apostle's own authority in that church.

CHAP. I.

Paul, after salutation and thanksgiving, 1, exhorteth to unity, 10, and reproveth their dissensions, 11. God, to take away boasting, rejecteth the wisdom of the wise, 26.

PAUL, called to be [b]an apostle of Jesus Christ through the will of God, and [d]Sosthenes[1] our brother,

2 Unto the church of God which is at Corinth, to them that are [g]sanctified[2] in Christ Jesus, [h]called to be saints, [i]with all that in every place call upon the name of Jesus Christ our Lord, both theirs and ours:

3 [l]Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

4 I [m]thank my God always on your behalf, for [n]the grace of God which is given you by Jesus Christ;

5 That [o]in every thing ye are enriched by him, in all utterance, and in all knowledge;

6 Even as [r]the testimony of Christ was confirmed in you:

7 So that ye come behind in no gift; [u]waiting for the *coming of our Lord Jesus Christ:

8 Who shall also confirm you unto the end, that ye may be blameless in [z]the day of our Lord Jesus Christ.

9 [a]God is faithful, by whom ye were called unto [c]the fellowship of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord.

10 Now, I beseech you, brethren,[3] by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no †divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind, and in the same judgment.

11 For it hath been declared unto me of you, my brethren, by them which are of the house of Chloe, that there are contentions among you.

12 Now this I say, that every one of you saith, I am of Paul,[4] and I of Apollos, and I of Cephas, and I of Christ.

13 Is [n]Christ divided? was Paul crucified for you? or were ye baptized in the name of Paul?

14 I [q]thank God that I baptized none of you, but Crispus and Gaius;[5]

15 Lest any should say that I had baptized in mine own name.

16 And I baptized also the household of Stephanas: besides, I know not whether I baptized any other.

17 For Christ sent me not to baptize,[6] but to preach the gospel: [y]not with wisdom of ‡words, [z]lest the cross of Christ should be made of none effect.

18 For [a]the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness; but [d]unto us which are saved it is the power of God.

19 For it is written, I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and will bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent.

20 Where is the wise? where is the scribe? where is the disputer of this world? [g]hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world?

21 For after that, in the wisdom of God, [i]the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe.

22 For the Jews require a sign,[7] and the Greeks seek after wisdom:

23 But we preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumblingblock, and unto the Greeks foolishness;

24 But unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God, and the wisdom of God.

25 Because the foolishness of God is wiser than men; and the weakness of God is stronger than men.

CHAP. I. THE EPISTLE.—It is an epistle from Paul, the apostle of the Gentiles, to the church of Corinth, which himself had planted, though there were some among them, that now questioned his apostleship, chap. ix. 1, 2, and vilified his person and ministry, 2 Cor. x. 10. The most faithful and useful ministers are not secure from this contempt. He begins with challenging this character. "Paul, called to be an apostle of Jesus Christ, through the will of God." He had not taken this honour to himself, but had a divine commission for it. It was proper at any time, but necessary at this time, to assert his character, and "magnify his office;" when false teachers made a merit of running him down, and their giddy and deluded followers were so apt to set them up in competition with him. It was not pride in Paul, but faithfulness to his trust, in this juncture, to maintain his apostolical character and authority. And to make this more fully appear, he joins Sosthenes with him in writing, who was a minister of a lower rank. Paul, and Sosthenes his brother, not a fellow-apostle, but a fellow-minister: once a ruler of a Jewish synagogue, afterward a convert to Christianity: a Corinthian by birth, as is most probable, and dear to this people; for which reason, Paul, to ingratiate himself with them, joins him with himself in his first salutations.

UNSEEMLINESS OF FACTION.—Ver. 10—13. Pride lay at the bottom, and this made them factious. "Only of pride cometh contention." Prov. xiii. 10. They quarrelled about their ministers, Paul and Apollos were both faithful ministers of Jesus Christ, and helpers of their faith and joy: but those who were disposed to be contentious, broke into parties, and set their ministers at the head of their several factions: some cried up Paul, perhaps as the most sublime and spiritual teacher; others cried up Apollos, perhaps as the most eloquent speaker: some Cephas, or Peter, perhaps for the authority of his age, or because he was the apostle of the circumcision; and some were for neither, but Christ only. So liable are the best things in the world to be corrupted, and the gospel and its institutions, which are at perfect harmony with themselves and one another, to be made the engines of variance, discord, and contention. This is no reproach to our religion, but a very melancholy evidence of the corruption and depravity of human nature. Note, How far will pride carry Christians in opposition to one another! Even so far as to set Christ and his own apostles at variance, and make them rivals and competitors. He expostulates with them upon their discord and quarrels; "'Is Christ divided?' No, there is but one Christ, and therefore Christians should be of one heart. 'Was Paul crucified for you?' Was he your sacrifice and atonement? Did I ever pretend to be your saviour, or any more than his minister? Or, 'were ye baptized in the name of Paul?' Were ye devoted to my service, or engaged to be my disciples, by that sacred right? Did I challenge that right in you, or dependence from you, as are the proper claims of your God and Redeemer?" No; ministers, however instrumental they are of good to us, are not to be put in Christ's stead. They are not to usurp Christ's authority, nor encourage any thing in the people, that looks like transferring his authority to them. He is our Saviour and Sacrifice, he is our Lord and Guide. And happy were it for the churches, if there were no name of distinction among them, as "Christ is not divided."—Henry.

THE POWER OF THE PURE AND SIMPLE GOSPEL.—Ver. 20—24. The wise philosophers, the learned scribes, and the disputers of the world, were in general employed in confuting each other's systems; they scarcely agreed in any thing except in rejecting and despising the gospel: and it was evident that their wisdom and learning had been of little use to mankind. What indeed had they achieved? What traces of their success in meliorating the state of the world could be discovered? And could it be denied, that God had exposed the folly of this kind of wisdom, in the most conspicuous manner? In his infinite wisdom, he had left a great part of the world to follow the dictates of their own boasted reason; and the event had demonstrated, that the wisdom of fallen man was incompetent to find out or retain the knowledge of God his Creator; so that idolatry, atheism, or scepticism was the universal effect. When this experiment had been sufficiently tried, it pleased God to send forth his apostles and evangelists, to preach that doctrine which was derided as foolishness, and they delivered their message in the most artless and unadorned manner, when, behold, most wonderful effects followed! Vast multitudes believed the report, were saved from idolatry and iniquities, and became the worshippers and servants of the living God! The Jewish scribes indeed, not satisfied with all the demonstrations from miracles and prophecies that Jesus was the Messiah, as not savouring of his spiritual salvation, demanded a sign from heaven, and waited for a Messiah who should come with outward observation; and the Greeks wanted a doctrine adapted to their philosophy, and supported by similar reasonings and speculations. But the servants of God "preached Christ crucified;" this was the grand peculiarity of their doctrine, the centre of their instructions, and the topic with which they enforced all their exhortations. This doctrine of a crucified Messiah; this testimony, that he who had been put to death by the rulers of the Jews as an impostor, was their long expected Deliverer and King, to whom all subjection was due, and from whom all blessings were to be expected, was a stumbling-stone to the Jews, who took offence at it, and persisted in unbelief: whilst the philosophizing Greeks derided, as the excess of folly, the idea that a Jew, and one whom that nation had crucified with ignominy, should be honoured as the Governor and Judge of all mankind, trusted, as the only Saviour from everlasting misery, and even adored as the infinite and almighty God.

26 For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, [x]not many mighty, not many noble, are called:

27 But God hath chosen the foolish things[8] of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty;

28 And base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are:

29 That [b]no flesh should glory in his presence.

30 But of him are ye [c]in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and [f]righteousness, and [g]sanctification, and [h]redemption;

31 That, according as it is written, [i]He that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord.

CHAP. II.

Paul declareth that his preaching far excelleth all human wisdom.

AND I, brethren, when I came to you, came not with excellency of speech, or of wisdom, declaring unto you [c]the testimony of God:

2 For I determined [d]not to know[1] any thing among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified.

3 And I was with you in weakness, and in fear, and in much trembling.

4 And [f]my speech and my preaching was not with *enticing words of man's wisdom, [h]but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power;

5 That your faith should not [†]stand in the wisdom of men, [i]but in the power of God.

6 Howbeit we speak wisdom among them that are perfect; yet [l]not the wisdom of this world,[2] nor [m]of the princes of this world, that [n]come to nought:

7 But we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom, which God ordained before the world [p]unto our glory;[3]

8 Which [q]none of the princes of this world knew: for had they known it, they would not have crucified [s]the Lord of glory.

9 But, as it is written, [t]Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, [u]the things which God hath prepared for [x]them that love him.

10 But [y]God hath revealed them unto us [z]by his Spirit: for [a]the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, [b]the deep things of God.

11 For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him? [d]even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God.[4]

12 Now we have received, not the spirit of the world, [f]but the Spirit which is of God; [g]that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God.

13 Which things also we speak, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, [i]but which the Holy Ghost teacheth; comparing spiritual things with spiritual.

14 But the natural man receiveth not [n]the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned.

15 But [q]he that is spiritual [‡]judgeth all things, yet he himself is [§]judged of no man.

16 For [*]who hath known the mind of the Lord, that he [l]may instruct him?[5] [t]But we have the mind of Christ.

CHAP. III.

Milk is for children, 1. Against divisions, 3. Believers the temple of God, 16. Against conceit, 18.

AND I, brethren, could not speak unto you as unto spiritual, but as unto carnal, even as unto [c]babes in Christ.

2 I have fed you with milk, and not with meat: for hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able.

3 For ye are yet carnal: for whereas there is among you envying, and strife, and *divisions, are ye not carnal, and walk [†]as men?

4 For while one saith, [h]I am of Paul; and another, I am of Apollos; are ye not carnal?

5 Who then is Paul,[1] and who is Apollos, [i]but ministers by whom ye believed, [k]even as the Lord gave to every man?

6 I have planted, Apollos watered; but [n]God gave the increase.

7 So then neither is he that planteth any thing, neither he that watereth; but God that giveth the increase.

8 Now he that planteth and he that watereth are one; and every man shall receive his own reward, according to his own labour.

9 For [r]we are labourers together with God: [s]ye are God's [‡]husbandry; [t]ye are God's building.

10 According to the grace of God which is given unto me, as a wise master-builder, I have laid the foundation, and another buildeth thereon. But let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon.

11 For [b]other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ.

12 Now if any man build upon this foundation [c]gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble;[2]

But all they, whether Jews or Gentiles, who were called according to God's eternal purpose, not only saw the power of God in the miracles by which the gospel was confirmed, in the resurrection of Christ, and in the accomplishment of ancient prophecies; and his wisdom in the glorious plan of redemption, as harmoniously honouring all the divine perfections and magnifying the divine law; but they experienced Christ to be "the power and wisdom of God" to deliver them from the bondage of sin, and to make them wise unto salvation; and they observed him and his gospel to be the grand medium by which the power and wisdom of God were displayed, in the subversion of Satan's kingdom of idolatry and sin, and in confounding all the subtle devices of him and his servants.—Scott.

CHAP. II. Theme of Evangelical Preaching.—Ver. 1, 2. When the apostle came, as a Jewish stranger, among the polite, speculating, and licentious Corinthians, he did not attempt to catch their attention by affected elegancy or sublimity of language, by the trappings of human oratory, or by the speculations of philosophy. For his object was to declare the testimony of God, concerning the only method of salvation from eternal misery, and of obtaining eternal life; and such a message would not admit of these worthless embellishments. Whatever knowledge, therefore, he possessed, either of Rabbinical or Grecian learning, he determined to keep it out of sight; and to preach, as if he had known no other subject than that of Jesus the Messiah, even him who was crucified, and who was generally despised and execrated, and those things that related to redemption for sinners through his blood. This was the centre and substance of his preaching; but it is evident that he did not confine himself wholly to this one topic, so as to exclude other parts of the revealed truth and will of God; for we are sure, from his own writings, that he preached man's relation to God, as his Creator, Benefactor, and Governor; the glorious perfections and the holy law of God; the future judgment and eternal state of righteous retributions; the lost estate of man, regeneration, repentance, conversion, the necessity of personal holiness, attention to relative duties, and in short "the whole counsel of God," as the great circumference to that circle, of which Christ crucified is the centre, in which all the lines meet. But, upon the most mature deliberation, he had determined to know nothing, even among the refined and philosophical Corinthians, which did not elucidate, recommend, evince, or adorn, this great doctrine of salvation by the cross of Christ.

Necessity of Spiritual Influence.—Ver. 14—16. No man, as naturally born into the world, and not supernaturally born again of the Spirit, "can see the kingdom of God," or receive in faith and love the spiritual mysteries of redemption by the cross of Christ. To all unregenerate men these things will in one way or other appear "foolishness," irrational, uninteresting, unnecessary, inconsistent, or absurd; and doubtless proud reasoners have scoffed at them, more than ever mere sensualists did. No ingenuity, address, or reasoning of the preacher can prevent this effect; no application of the man's own mind, except in humble dependence on the teaching of the Holy Spirit, can enable him to perceive the real nature and glory of them. For they are "spiritually discerned," that is, by the illuminating and sanctifying work of the Spirit of God upon the mind; by which a spiritual capacity is produced, that discerns, admires, loves, and delights in the divine excellency of heavenly things. When this change has taken place, and a man's spiritual senses have been matured by growth and exercise, he may be called "a spiritual man:" and he perceives the spiritual glory and excellency of every truth and precept of the word of God: he distinguishes one object from another by a spiritual taste, or a kind of extempore judgment, and so he becomes a competent judge in such matters. Yet his views, principles, and motives fall not under the judgment of any other men: none of them are competent to decide on the propriety of his conduct, as they are strangers to those views and discoveries which direct his determinations.—Scott.

CHAP. III. Necessity of the Divine Blessing.—Ver. 6—8. Observe, All the gifts and powers that even apostles discovered and exerted in the work of the ministry, were from God. They were intended to manifest their mission and doctrine to be divine. It was perfectly wrong, upon their account, to transfer that regard to the apostles, which was solely to be paid to the divine authority by which they acted, and to God from whom they had their authority. "Paul had planted, and Apollos had watered." Both were useful, one for one purpose, the other for a different. Note, God makes use of variety of instruments, and fits them to their several uses and intentions. Paul was fitted for planting work, and Apollos for watering work; but "God gave the increase." Note, The success of the ministry must be derived from the divine blessing. The best qualified and most faithful ministers have a just sense of their own insufficiency, and are very desirous that God should have all the glory of their success. Paul and Apollos are nothing at all in their account, but God is all in all.—Henry.

The One Foundation.—Ver. 10—15. Paul knew that no man could lay any foundation of a spiritual temple for the glory of God, or for the sinner's hope of salvation, than what he had laid in his preaching, and which God had laid in his purpose, and by the gospel; namely, the person, mediatory office, righteousness, atonement intercession, and grace of the Lord Jesus Christ. If any man pretended to lay any 13 Every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it, because it [f]shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is.

14 If any man's work abide which he hath built thereupon, he shall receive a reward.

15 If any man's work shall be burnt, he shall suffer loss: but he himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire.[3]

16 Know ye not that [o]ye are the temple of God, and that [p]the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?

17 If [q]any man [g]defile the temple of God,[4] him shall God destroy: [r]for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are.

18 Let no man deceive himself. [t]If any man among you seemeth to be wise in this world, let him become a fool, that he may be wise.

19 For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God: for it is written, [z]He taketh the wise in their own craftiness.

20 And again, [a]The Lord knoweth the thoughts of the wise, that they are vain.

21 Therefore let no man glory in men: for all things are yours;

CHAP. IV.

How to account of ministers, 1. We have nothing which we have not received, 7. The apostles' sufferings, 9, and conduct, 12.

LET a man so account of us as of [b]the ministers of Christ, and stewards[1] of the [d]mysteries of God.

2 Moreover, it is required in stewards, that a man be found faithful.

3 But with me it is a very small thing that I should be judged of you, or of man's *judgment: yea, I judge not mine own self.

4 For I know nothing by myself; yet am I not hereby justified: [i]but he that judgeth me is the Lord.

5 Therefore judge nothing before the time, [l]until the Lord come, [m]who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the hearts; and then shall every man have praise of God.

6 And these things, brethren, I have in a figure transferred to myself and to Apollos for your sakes;[2] that ye might learn in us not to think of men above that which is written, that no one of you be puffed up for one against another.

7 For who maketh thee to differ from another? and what hast thou that thou didst not receive? now, if thou didst receive it, [u]why dost thou glory, as if thou hadst not received it?

8 Now ye are full, now ye are rich, ye have reigned as kings without us: [z]and I would to God [a]ye did reign, that we also might reign with you.

9 For [b]I think that God hath set forth us the apostles last, [c]as it were appointed to death: [3] for [d]we are made a ‡spectacle unto the world, and to angels, and to men.

10 We are fools [g]for Christ's sake, but ye [h]are wise in Christ: we are weak, but ye are strong: ye are honourable, but we are despised.

11 Even unto this present hour we both hunger, and thirst, and are naked, and are buffeted, and have no certain dwelling-place;

12 And labour, working with our own hands: [r]being reviled, we bless; [s]being persecuted, we suffer it;

13 Being defamed, we entreat: we are made as the filth of the world, and are the offscouring of all things unto this day.

14 I write not these things to shame you, but, as my beloved sons, I warn you.

15 For though [z]ye have ten thousand instructers in Christ, yet have ye not many fathers; [a]for in Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the gospel.

16 Wherefore, I beseech you, be ye followers of me.[4]

17 For this cause have I sent unto you Timotheus, who is my beloved son, and [e]faithful in the Lord, who shall bring you into remembrance of [f]my ways which be in Christ, as I teach every where in every church.

18 Now some are puffed up, as though I would not come to you.[5]

19 But I will come to you shortly, [l]if the Lord will, and will know, not the speech of them[6] which are puffed up, but the power.

20 For [l]the kingdom of God is not in word, but in power.

21 What will ye? shall I come unto you with a rod, or in love, and in the spirit of meekness?

other foundation than this, he could not be considered as the minister of God, "a worker together with him." It was not therefore to be supposed that this was the case with any of their teachers. Yet even on this foundation very different materials might be builded; some might carry on the work with gold, silver, and valuable stones; others with wood, hay, or stubble: some, who preached the doctrine of salvation by faith in Christ, would instruct believers from the word of God in all the precious truths of the gospel; show them their obligations and duties; and teach them to evidence their faith by spiritual worship and holy obedience. Others might substitute false doctrines, human inventions, abrogated ceremonies, and philosophical speculations; or deduce licentious inferences from the doctrines of grace. Thus the building would be deformed and weakened by such additions and base materials as would never stand the trial which was appointed.—Scott.

CHAP. IV. STEWARDS.—Ver. 1. Lest the Corinthians should suppose, from what the apostle had said, that little respect or affection was due to their ministers, he here showed them in what estimation they ought to hold them, and by what measure they ought to regulate their regard to them. Whether they were apostles, evangelists, or ordinary teachers, they were to consider them, not indeed as lords, but as the ministering servants of Christ for their benefit, in the highest and most important offices: even as the stewards of the mysteries of God; that, as his immediate representatives, they should by his authority preside in his family, take care of his interest and honour, instruct and direct the services of their brethren, and give every one his portion in due season. Thus they were intrusted with the mysterious and sublime truths of the gospel; that they might preach them to the people, and apply them with suitable admonitions, exhortations, encouragements, and warnings, as every one's case required; in order to the conversion of sinners, and the establishment and edification of believers.—Scott.

HUMILITY.—Ver. 7. "And what hast thou that thou didst not receive?" Here the apostle turns his discourse to the ministers, who set themselves at the head of these factions, and did but too much encourage and abet the people in those feuds. What had they to glory in, when all their peculiar gifts were from God? They had received them, and could not glory in them as their own, without wronging God. At the time when they reflected on them to feed their vanity, they should have considered them as so many debts and obligations to divine bounty and grace. But it may be taken as a general maxim: we have no reason to be proud of our attainments, enjoyments, or performances; all that we have, or are, or do, that is good, is owing to the free and rich grace of God. Boasting is for ever excluded. There is nothing we have that we can properly call our own—all is received from God. It is foolish in us, therefore, and injurious to him, to boast of it; they who receive all, should be proud of nothing.—Henry.

PAUL'S MEEKNESS.—Ver. 18—21. Some of the teachers and their adherents at Corinth were so puffed up with their imaginary importance and superiority, that they were confident the apostle would not dare to come among them, or attempt to intermeddle in their affairs. But he assured them that he fully intended to come, if the Lord would enable him; and then he would make trial, not of their oratory and tinselled eloquence, but of their power to support themselves in opposition to his apostolical authority, and the miracles which he should perform in confirmation of it. For the kingdom of God was not set up in the world, or in men's hearts, by well-chosen words or eloquent harangues; but by the power of God, exerted in working miracles to prove the divine original of the gospel, and in the efficacious operation of the Holy Spirit to convert the souls of men. The Corinthians could not but know, that the apostle's testimony had been thus confirmed among them. Would they then choose that he should come to them with the rod of correction, denouncing spiritual censures, and inflicting miraculous judgments on the refractory, as he had done on Elymas, and Peter on Ananias and Sapphira? Or would they that he should come to them in the spirit of tender love and meekness, to encourage, commend, and comfort them? This would depend on their conduct, in respect of those abuses which he was about to specify; for if they were not remedied, he must be compelled to exercise some salutary severity on the offenders.—Scott.

CHAP. V. THE INCESTUOUS PERSON.—Ver. 1—5. After the preceding introductory observations, the apostle next proceeded to animadvert on the most flagrant abuse, which was connived at by the Corinthians. A Christian was guilty of incest with his mother-in-law, probably while his father was yet living! 2 Cor. vii. 12. This was a crime, which even the licentious Gentiles never named without the most indignant detestation: yet it was well known and commonly reported, that this member of the Christian church was guilty of it; and he seems to have habitually lived with his mother-in-law as his wife. But though so scandalous a wickedness was committed, and escaped censure among them, yet they were puffed up with a vain conceit of their gifts and superior attainments, and were not ashamed of it, or concerned about it. Probably, the guilty person was of considerable rank among them, and a zealous adherent of some of their popular teachers: so that a party-spirit, and a false notion of christian liberty, secured him from censure. But, if they had been properly disposed, they would have mourned

2 And ye are puffed up, and have not rather mourned, that he that hath done this deed might be taken away from among you.

3 For I verily, as absent in body, but present in spirit, have judged already, as though I were present, concerning him that hath so done this deed,

4 In the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, [k]when ye are gathered together, and my spirit,[l] with the power of our Lord Jesus Christ,

5 To [l]deliver such an one unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, [m]that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus.

6 Your glorying is not good. Know ye not that a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump?

7 Purge out therefore the old leaven,[2] that ye may be a new lump, as ye are unleavened. For even [s]Christ our passover is [t]sacrificed for us:

8 Therefore let us keep the [‡]feast,[3] [u]not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness; [v]but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth.

9 I wrote unto you in an epistle not to company with fornicators:

10 Yet not altogether with the fornicators of this world, or with the covetous, or extortioners, or with idolaters; for then must ye needs go out of the world.

11 But now I have written unto you not to keep company, if any man that is [d]called a brother[4] be a fornicator, or covetous, or an idolater, or a railer, or a drunkard, or an extortioner; with such an one no not to eat.

12 For what have I to do to judge them also that are without? [o]do not ye judge them that are within?

13 But them that are without [p]God judgeth. Therefore put away from among yourselves that wicked person.

CHAP. VI.

Against going to law with brethren, 1. Against fornication, 15.

DARE any of you, having a matter against another, [b]go to law before the unjust, and not before [c]the saints?

2 Do ye not know that [d]the saints shall judge the world? and if the world shall be judged by you, are ye unworthy to judge the smallest matters?

3 Know ye not that we shall judge angels?[1] how much more things that pertain to this life?

4 If then [h]ye have judgments of things pertaining to this life, set them to judge [i]who are least esteemed in the church.

5 I speak to your shame. Is it so, that there is not a wise man among you? no, not one that shall be able to judge between his brethren?

6 But brother goeth to law with brother, and that before the unbelievers.

7 Now therefore there is utterly a fault among you, because ye go to law one with another: why do ye not rather take wrong? why do ye not rather suffer yourselves to be defrauded?

8 Nay, ye do wrong, and defraud, and that your brethren.

9 Know ye not that the [r]unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived: neither fornicators,[2] nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind,

10 Nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God.

11 And [z]such were some of you: but ye [a]are washed, [b]but ye are sanctified, [c]but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God.

12 All things are lawful unto me, but all things are not *expedient:[3] all things are lawful for me, but I will not be brought under the power of any.

13 Meats for the belly, and the belly for meats: [h]but God shall destroy both it and them. Now the body is not for fornication, [i]but for the Lord, and the Lord for the body.

14 And [k]God hath both raised up the Lord, and will also raise up us [l]by his own power.

15 Know ye not that your bodies are the members of Christ?[4] shall I then take the members of Christ, and make them the members of an harlot? God forbid.

16 What! know ye not that he which is joined to an harlot is one body? for two (saith he) shall be one flesh.

17 But [q]he that is joined unto the Lord is one spirit.

18 Flee fornication. Every sin that a man doeth is without the body: but he that committeth fornication sinneth against his own body.[5]

19 What! know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, [x]and ye are not your own?

20 For [y]ye are bought with a price: therefore [z]glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's.

over such an enormity, and humbled themselves before God, with earnest prayers, entreating him to remove all obstacles, that he who had done this nefarious deed might be separated from their company. For, though the apostle was absent, and could not therefore exert himself as he would otherwise have done: and though he was aware that his peremptory interference would give great offence: yet, "being present in spirit," having the whole affair clearly before his mind, (perhaps by a supernatural operation of the Holy Spirit,) and being full of concern for the honour of Christ, and the welfare of the church; he had already determined in the case, and had passed sentence on the criminal, as if he had been upon the spot. He therefore charged them in the name, by the authority, and for the honour of Christ, that, when they met together as a church, they would consider him as present in spirit among them, to ratify their sentence with his apostolical authority, and to enforce it by the power of Christ; and thus to expel the incestuous person from their communion; that he might not be considered as a Christian, but as a heathen, a subject of Satan's kingdom. Yet this was not to be done in hatred, or for his ruin, but in hopes, that it would be the means of bringing him to repentance, and the mortification of his fleshly lusts, that so, his soul might be saved in the day of Christ.—Scott.

CHAP. VI. FOLLY OF LITIGATION.—Ver. 1—6. The apostle here reproved another lamentable evil in the Corinthian church. He abruptly inquired, as one astonished, whether any of them could venture to go to law with their brethren before the heathen magistrates, who were unrighteous persons, and might be expected to be unjust judges in such matters. Whereas they ought to have decided all their differences (if such there were) by the arbitration of the saints, the holy disciples of Christ. What, with all their superior knowledge, did they not understand that believers, being first declared righteous, and heirs of God, at the day of judgment, will be assessors with Christ in judging the world, and will concur in the sentence denounced by him against the wicked? And if this honour was intended them, were they not worthy to be intrusted with the decision of such causes, as related only to the comparatively trifling concerns of this life? Whereas, even fallen angels, whose slaves they once were, and by whom they were long harassed, will be judged by them; and the punishment of those proud and malignant spirits will be imbittered by this mortifying circumstance. If, then, they had causes relative to secular matters to determine, they need not take off the ministers of the gospel from their work, nor select such as were qualified for other services: even those of inferior abilities and estimation in the church were competent for this business. At present, they acted in such a manner as was very shameful; for after having greatly gloried in their wisdom and gifts, there seemed to be not so much as one wise man among them, not one, that could be trusted as an arbitrator between his brethren! So that such disputes were carried before the unbelievers, who would thence naturally conclude the Christians to be a selfish and litigious set of men.—Scott.

CHRISTIAN OBLIGATION.—Ver. 20. "Glorify God both with your body and spirit, which are his." He made both, he bought both, and therefore both belong to him, and should be used and employed for him; and therefore should not be defiled, alienated from him, and prostituted by us. No, they must be kept as "vessels fitted for our Master's use." We must look upon our whole selves as holy to the Lord, and must use our bodies as property which belongs to him, and is sacred to his use and service. We are to honour "him with our bodies and spirits, which are his;" and therefore, surely, must abstain from fornication; and not only from the outward act, but from the "adultery of the heart," as our Lord calls it, Matt. v. 28. Body and spirit are to be kept clean, that God may be honoured by both. But God is dishonoured, when either is defiled by so beastly a sin. Therefore, "flee fornication," nay, and every sin. Use your bodies for the glory and service of their Lord and Master. Note, We are not proprietors of ourselves, nor have power over ourselves, and therefore should not use ourselves according to our own pleasure, but according to his will, and for his glory, "whose we are, and whom we should serve," Acts xxvii. 23.—Henry.

CHAP. VII. MARRIAGE.—Ver. 1—8. Paul did not lay it as an injunction upon every man to marry, without exception. Any man might marry. No law of God prohibited the thing. But, on the other hand, no law bound a man to marry, so that he sinned if he did not: I mean, unless his circumstances required it for preventing the "lust of uncleanness." It was a thing in which men, by the laws of God, were in a great measure left at liberty. And therefore Paul did not bind every man to marry, though every man had an allowance. No, he "could wish all men were as himself;" that is, single, and capable of living continently in that state. There were several conveniences in it, which, at that season, if not at others, made it more eligible in itself. Note, It is a mark of true goodness, to wish all men as happy as ourselves. But it did not answer the intentions of Divine providence as well for all men to have as much command of his appetite as Paul had. It was a gift vouchsafed to such persons as Infinite Wisdom thought proper; Natural constitutions vary; and where there may not be much difference in the constitution, different degrees of grace are vouchsafed, which may give some a greater victory over natural inclination than others. Note, The gifts of God, both in nature and grace,

2 Nevertheless, [c]to avoid fornication, [d]let every man have his own wife, and let every woman have her own husband.

3 Let the husband [e]render unto the wife due benevolence: and likewise also the wife unto the husband.

4 The wife hath not power of her own body, but the husband: and likewise also the husband hath not power of his own body, but the wife.

5 Defraud ye not one the other, except it be with consent for a time, that ye may give yourselves to fasting and prayer; and come together again, [h]that Satan tempt you not for your incontinency.

6 But I speak this [i]by permission,[1] and not of commandment.

7 For I would that all men were even as I myself: [l]but every man hath his proper gift of God, one after this manner, and another after that.

8 I say therefore to the unmarried and widows, It is good for them if they abide even as I.

9 But if they cannot contain, let them marry: for it is better to marry than to burn.

10 And unto the married I command, yet not I, but the Lord, [p]Let not the wife depart from her husband:

11 But and if she depart, let her remain unmarried, [q]or be reconciled to her husband: [r]and let not the husband put away his wife.

12 But to the rest [s]speak I,[2] not the Lord; [t]If any brother hath a wife that believeth not, and she be pleased to dwell with him, let him not put her away.

13 And the woman which hath an husband that believeth not, and if he be pleased to dwell with her, let her not leave him.

14 For [u]the unbelieving husband is sanctified by the wife,[3] and the unbelieving wife is sanctified by the husband: else were your children unclean; but now are they holy.

15 But if the unbelieving depart, let him depart. A brother or a sister is not under bondage in such cases: [x]but God hath called us [*]to peace.

16 For what knowest thou, [a]O wife, whether thou shalt save thy husband? or [†]how knowest thou, O man, whether thou shalt save thy wife?

17 But [b]as God hath distributed to every man, as the Lord hath [c]called every one, so let him walk: and so ordain I in all churches.

18 Is any man called being circumcised? let him not become uncircumcised: is any called in uncircumcision? let him not be circumcised.[4]

19 Circumcision is nothing, and uncircumcision is nothing, [g]but the keeping of the commandments of God.

20 Let every man abide[5] in the same calling wherein he was called.

21 Art thou called being a servant? care not for it; but if thou mayest be made free, use it rather.

22 For he that is called in the Lord, being a servant, is the Lord's [‡]free man:[6] likewise also he that is called, being free, [m]is Christ's servant.

23 Ye [n]are bought with a price: be not ye the servants of men.

24 Brethren, let every man, wherein he is called, therein [p]abide with God.

25 Now concerning virgins, I [r]have no commandment of the Lord: yet I give my judgment, as one that hath [s]obtained mercy of the Lord to be faithful.

26 I suppose therefore that this is good for the present [$]distress;[7] I say, that it is good for a man so to be.

27 Art thou bound unto a wife? seek not to be loosed. Art thou loosed from a wife? seek not a wife.

28 But and if thou marry, [x]thou hast not sinned; and if a virgin marry, she hath not sinned: nevertheless such shall have trouble in the flesh: but I spare you.

29 But this I say, brethren, the time is short: it remaineth, that both they that have wives be as though they had none;

30 And they [c]that weep, as though they wept not; and they that rejoice, as though they rejoiced not; and they that buy, as though they possessed not;

31 And they that use this world, as not abusing it: [e]for the fashion[8] of this world passeth away.

32 But [f]I would have you without carefulness. He that is unmarried careth for the things that belong to the Lord, how he may please the Lord:

33 But he that is married [h]careth for the things that are of the world, how he may please his wife.

34 There is difference also between a wife and a virgin. The unmarried woman [k]careth for the things of the Lord, that she may be holy both in body and in spirit: but she that is married careth for the things of the world, how she may please her husband.

35 And this I speak for your own profit; not that I may cast a snare upon you, but for that which is [n]comely, [o]and that ye may attend upon the Lord without distraction.

36 But if any man think that he behaveth himself uncomely toward his virgin,[9] if she pass [p]the flower of her age, [q]and need so require, let him do what he will, [r]he sinneth not; let them marry.

37 Nevertheless he that standeth stedfast in his heart, having no necessity, but hath are variously distributed. Some have them after this manner, and some after that.—Henry.

Separation.—Ver. 10—14. As to married persons, the apostle did not counsel, but command them; and not by his own authority, but by that of Christ, and according to his precepts, that they should not separate from each other; which was common among the Gentiles as well as the Jews, and that on very frivolous pretences. The wife must not leave her husband: or, if she had been parted from him, she must not think of marrying again; rather, she ought to make every advance and concession, to bring about a reconciliation with him; and the same rules were to be observed by the husband. Doubtless, the exception is implied, which our Lord made in the directions given by him in this particular. And though Jesus had not given express rules in the following cases; yet the apostle deemed himself authorized to enjoin, that the Christian who was married to an unbeliever, whether a heathen or a Jew, who chose to live with him notwithstanding this difference of religion, should not put her away; as the Jews, for reasons peculiar to their situation, were required to do by their idolatrous wives. Christians, indeed, ought not to marry unbelievers: yet if that relation had been entered into, either before conversion, or through inattention to this rule, it would cause great confusion and scandal to dissolve it on that account. The same held good in respect of a Christian woman, who had an unbelieving husband, that chose to live with her. Nor ought any person to suppose, that this union, as one flesh with unbelievers or idolaters in lawful marriage, was inconsistent with being one Spirit with the Lord, as fornication had been declared to be, chap. vi. 15—17: for the unbelieving husband or wife was sanctified to the believer, by the appointment and command of God; so that their marriage was holy and honourable.

Servitude.—Ver. 17—24. In like manner, it was commonly advisable for every man to abide in that profession, trade, or station, in which the grace of God had called him to the knowledge of Christ; provided it were an honest employment. For the gospel would teach a man how to behave in any condition, and patiently to bear its inconveniences. If then any one had been converted in a state of servitude, even to a heathen master, (which was the common case of the servants in those days,) let him be less solicitous about his liberty, than about glorifying God in that trying situation. But as it would frequently deprive him of religious advantages, especially that of meeting with his brethren on the Lord's day, or at other times; and as it would expose him to many temptations; if he had a fair opportunity of obtaining his freedom, he would do well to embrace it. The converted slave, however, was called to the noblest liberty, as the freedman of Christ, and emancipated from Satan's yoke: and the Christian, who enjoyed his outward liberty, should consider himself as the servant of Christ, his property, and bound to devote himself to him, and obey his will. As, therefore, all Christians had been bought with an invaluable price to be the Lord's servants, they ought not by choice, or from secular motives, to become the servants of men; because that would interfere with their devoted obedience to their common Lord: so that every man ought contentedly to abide with God, by constantly performing the duties of that situation, in which he was converted to the faith of Christ.

Celibacy.—Ver. 36—38. Hitherto the apostle's meaning has been evident; but these verses are not without difficulty. Some explain them of a man's resolutely continuing in a single state; supposing "the necessity" mentioned, to be matter of personal consciousness, and not any thing arising from the conduct of another; but such a construction of the original, is, by their own allowance, without example. Others would refer them to the case of a man who had betrothed a virgin, and was in doubt whether he should complete the marriage: but to marry is not the same as to give in marriage. It seems therefore most obvious to explain the passage, of a parent, or guardian, who had the charge of a virgin. If such a one thought that he acted unsuitably, in letting the virgin live single, till she had passed the prime of her life; and if any attachment, or other circumstance, rendered it needful; let him determine as he saw good, or as it may be rendered, "as she willeth," without supposing it sinful to allow her to marry. But on the other hand, if a man was established in his judgment, that it was best for his daughter, or ward, to remain unmarried in such evil times; and if he saw no necessity, from any thing in her behaviour, disposition, or attachments, to deviate from his own inclinations respecting her, and he so determined in his mind to keep her unmarried, he did well. So that the parent or guardian, who gave a virgin in marriage to a proper person, did well, and was by no means to be blamed; though she might thereby be exposed to additional difficulties in those unsettled times; on which account, he who did not give his daughter or ward in marriage, did better; that is, he acted more for her real advantage, provided she were satisfied in the single state. The law was still in force, which bound the wife to her husband as long as he lived, (that is, except when legally divorced for a sufficient reason;) but afterwards she might without sin marry any other man, provided he were a Christian, and, in the judgment of charity, a true believer. The apostle, however, judged that widows would be happier, if they continued in that condition, in the present state of the church.

Practical Observations.—Ver. 1—9. That which is good in itself, may not always be best for a man, when all circumstances are weighed; and all the variety of inward evils and outward temptations, connected with it, are duly considered. So that those things, which are good for one, may not so much as be recommended to another; be-power over his own will, and hath so decreed in his heart that he will keep his virgin, doeth well.

38 So then he that giveth her in marriage doeth well; but he that giveth her not in marriage doeth better.

39 The wife is bound by the law as long as her husband liveth; but if her husband be dead, she is at liberty to be married to whom she will; [x]only in the Lord.

40 But she is happier if she so abide, after my judgment; and I think also that I have the Spirit of God.[8]

CHAP. VIII.

To abstain from meats offered to idols, 1. We must not abuse our Christian liberty, 8.

NOW, as touching things offered unto idols, we know that we all have knowledge. Knowledge puffeth up, but charity edifieth.

2 And if any man think that he knoweth any thing, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know.

3 But if any man [f]love God, the same is known of him.

4 As concerning therefore the eating of those things that are offered in sacrifice unto idols, we know that an idol is nothing in the world, and that [l]there is none other God but one.

5 For though there be that are called Gods, whether in heaven or in earth, (as there be gods many, and lords many,)

6 But to us there is but [l]one God, the Father, [l] [m]of whom are all things, [n]and we [*]in him; [o]and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, [p]and we by him.

7 Howbeit there is not in every man that knowledge: for some, with conscience of the idol, unto this hour eat it as a thing offered unto an idol; and their conscience being weak is defiled.

8 But [s]meat commendeth us not to God: for neither, if we eat, [†]are we the better; neither, if we eat not, [‡]are we the worse.

9 But take heed, lest by any means this liberty of yours become a stumbling-block to them that are weak.

10 For if any man see thee which hast knowledge sit at meat in the idol's temple, shall not the conscience of him which is weak be [§]emboldened to eat those things which are offered to idols;

11 And through thy knowledge [b]shall the weak brother perish,[2] for whom Christ died?

12 But [c]when ye sin so against the brethren, and wound their weak conscience, [d]ye sin against Christ.

CHAP. IX.

He sheweth his liberty, 1. Ministers ought to live by the gospel, 7, but to deny themselves for the good of others, 19.

AM I not an apostle? am I not free? [e]have I not seen Jesus Christ our Lord? [d]are not ye my work in the Lord?

2 If I be not an apostle unto others, yet doubtless I am to you: [e]for the seal of mine apostleship are ye in the Lord.

3 Mine answer to them that do examine me is this;

4 Have we not power to eat and to drink?

5 Have we not power to lead about a sister, [*]a wife, as well as other apostles, and as the brethren of the Lord, and Cephas?[l]

6 Or I only and Barnabas, have not we power to forbear working?

7 Who [p]goeth a warfare any time at his own charges? who [q]planteth a vineyard, and eateth not of the fruit thereof? [r]or who feedeth a flock, and [s]eateth not of the milk of the flock?

8 Say I these things [t]as a man? [u]or saith not the law the same also?

9 For it is written in the law of Moses, [x]Thou shalt not muzzle the mouth of the ox that treadeth out the corn. [y]Doth God take care for oxen?

10 Or saith he it altogether for our sakes? For our sakes, no doubt, this is written: that he that ploweth should plow in hope; and that he that thrasheth in hope should be partaker of his hope.

11 If we have [b]sown unto you spiritual things, is it a great thing if we shall reap your carnal things?

12 If others[2] be partakers of this power over you, are not we rather? nevertheless we have not used this power; [g]but suffer all things, lest we should [h]hinder the gospel of Christ.

13 Do ye not know, that [i]they which minister about holy things [†]live of the things of the temple? and they which wait at the altar are partakers with the altar?

14 Even so hath the Lord [k]ordained, that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel.

15 But [l]I have used none of these things; [m]neither have I written these things, that it should be so done unto me: [n]for it were better for me to die,[3] than that any man should make my glorying void.

16 For though I preach the gospel, I cause he is incapable of overcoming the difficulties to which they expose him. For, though none may be dispensed with in breaking the Divine law, even that perfect rule leaves men at liberty to serve God in that way which is most suited to their capacity and various circumstances; of which others are often incompetent judges. Thus, if they, who find advantages for serving God in the single state, imagine that others might do the same; they show themselves to be ignorant of the situation of fallen man in this ensnaring world: for there is no doubt, but many, who from various motives live unmarried, experience that circumstance to be a great hinderance to them in respect of their souls; and are unable, or unwilling, to persevere in that kind of celibacy, which the apostle describes as good.—Scott.

CHAP. VIII. Meat Offered to Idols.—Ver. 1—6. It is probable that the Corinthians had proposed another question concerning the lawfulness of Christians eating the flesh of those animals which had been sacrificed to idols. It was customary with the idolaters to feast on these oblations, both in the temples and in their own houses; and many of them were publicly sold in the shambles. On this flesh several of the Christians at Corinth would feast without scruple; declaring that they knew the idol to be a mere senseless log, and the supposed deity represented by it, a mere nonentity. This was, in some respects, taken from a misunderstanding of those scriptures which speak of idols as vanity. They therefore imagined that it was an evidence of superior knowledge, to eat of such sacrifices, even in the very temples of the idol! Now, says the apostle, we know that all of us, who are acquainted with the gospel, have this kind or measure of knowledge: but we are also aware, that these speculations puff men up in a vain conceit of their superior abilities and attainments, and foster a haughty, self-sufficient, unteachable temper.

Charity and Self-Denial.—Ver. 7—13. Christians, who were matured in knowledge and judgment, knew indeed that an idol was the senseless representative of a nominal deity, which had no existence: and many of the Corinthians, being puffed up with a groundless conceit of their own superior attainments, boasted of their knowledge in this respect, and assigned it as the reason of their conduct, in partaking of the sacrifices even in the temples of the idols. But, had there been no other reasons, why they should refrain from doing this; (which the apostle afterwards purposed to consider;) regard to their weaker brethren should have sufficed. For not every professed Christian, no, nor every true believer, had this knowledge: so that some of them, even to that time, ventured to eat of the idol-sacrifices, who retained a superstitious regard to the supposed invisible object of worship. They had an impression upon their minds, that they were joining in an idolatrous sacrifice; and thus through weakness their consciences were defiled. Now, for what purpose did the Corinthians thus lead their brethren into temptation and sin? Meat, of whatever kind, did not recommend them to God, or give them any religious advantages above those who abstained from it, whether out of scruples of conscience, or regard to their brethren. They ought therefore to be far more cautious and circumspect, in using, what they considered as their liberty and privilege; and not to act in such a self-confident and imprudent manner, as tended to seduce those into sin, who were weak and unconfirmed in the faith.—Scott.

CHAP. IX. Support of the Christian Ministry.—Ver. 7—12. Had the Corinthians objected that St. Paul, by not receiving a maintenance from them, seemed to allow that he was not an apostle, as some suppose, it would have been needless for him formally to prove his right to it; but this was absolutely necessary, if he meant tacitly to instruct them by his example, to give up their right and self-indulgence, from love to their brethren. He first shows that he, as well as other ministers of the gospel, had a right to a maintenance on the principles of natural equity: for who expected others to employ their time, strength, and skill in their service, without affording them a support? The soldier, when fighting for his country, being thereby deprived of the opportunity of attending to his private concerns, had his charges borne by the state. The person employed in planting a vineyard was allowed a maintenance from its produce; and he who tended a flock was used to eat the milk of the flock. And who could think it equitable to refuse them this recompense for their labour? Ought not, therefore, the ministers of the gospel, who gave up other prospects of supporting themselves and their families, that they might with great peril and hardship promote the spiritual good of others, to be maintained in a decent and comfortable manner by them?—"Chrysostom and Theophylact observe, that he saith not, Who goeth to warfare, and is not rich? who plants a vineyard, and heaps not up gold of the fruits of it? who feeds a flock, and make not a merchandise of the sheep? teaching us that the spiritual pastor should be content with little, and seek only what is necessary, not what is superfluous." [Whitby.]—Was this merely the dictate of human reason? Verily the law gave an emblematical intimation of it, when it forbad the Israelites to muzzle the ox which was employed in treading out the grain, Deut. xxv. 4. If the ox must not be refused a share of that abundance, which men enjoyed through its labour, surely the laborious and patient minister should be supported by those who received far richer blessings by his instrumentality. For could it be supposed that God made such particular laws from a regard to oxen? And indeed if the ministers of Christ had sown the spiritual seed of the word of God, have nothing to glory of: for necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel!

17 For if I do this thing willingly, I have a reward: but if against my will, [u]a dispensation of the gospel is committed unto me.

18 What is my reward then? Verily, that, when I preach the gospel, I may make the gospel of Christ without charge, [v]that I abuse not my power in the gospel.

19 For though I be free from all men, yet have I made myself servant unto all, that I might gain the more.

20 And unto the Jews I became as a Jew, that I might gain the Jews; to them that are under the law, as under the law, that I might gain them that are under the law;

21 To them that are without law, as without law, (being [w]not without law to God,[4] but under the law to Christ,) that I might gain them that are without law.

22 To the weak became I as weak, that I might gain the weak: [h]I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means [i]save some.

23 And this I do [k]for the gospel's sake, that I might be partaker thereof with you.

24 Know ye not that they which [n]run in a race[5] run all, but one receiveth the prize? [o]So run, that ye may obtain.

25 And every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. Now they do it to obtain a corruptible crown, [r]but we an incorruptible.

26 I therefore so run, not as uncertainly;[6] so fight I, not as one that beateth the air:

27 But I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection; lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a cast-away.

CHAP. X.

The Jews were examples to us both in their mercies and their judgments, 1, 11. In using our Christian liberty, 25 we should be careful not to wound others, 28.

MOREOVER, brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant, how that all our fathers were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea;

2 And were all [e]baptized[1] unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea;

3 And [f]did all eat the same spiritual meat;

4 And [g]did all drink the same spiritual drink; (for they drank of that spiritual Rock that [*]followed them; and [h]that Rock was Christ:)

5 But [i]with many of them God was not well pleased; for they were overthrown in the wilderness.

6 Now these things were our [†]examples, to the intent we should not lust after evil things, as they also lusted.

7 Neither [m]be ye idolaters, as were some of them; as it is written, The people sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play.

8 Neither [o]let us commit fornication, as some of them committed, and fell in one day three and twenty thousand.

9 Neither let us [p]tempt Christ, as some of them also tempted, and were destroyed of serpents.

10 Neither murmur ye, as some of them also murmured, and were destroyed of the destroyer.

11 Now all these things happened unto them for [‡]ensamples: [x]and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come.[2]

12 Wherefore, [z]let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall.

13 There hath no temptation taken you but such as is [§]common to man: [b]but God is faithful, [c]who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also [d]make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it.

14 Wherefore, my dearly beloved, [f]flee from idolatry.

15 I speak as to wise men; judge ye what I say.

16 The [h]cup of blessing which we bless, is it not [i]the communion[3] of the blood of Christ? [k]the bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ?

17 For [l]we, being many, are one bread, and one body: for we are all partakers of [m]that one bread.

18 Behold Israel after the flesh. Are not they which eat of the sacrifices partakers of the altar?

19 What say I then? that the idol is any thing? or that which is offered in sacrifice to idols is any thing?

20 But I say,[4] that the things which the Gentiles sacrifice, they sacrifice to devils, and not to God: and I would not that ye should have fellowship with devils.

21 Ye [r]cannot drink the cup of the Lord, and the cup of devils: ye cannot be partakers of the Lord's table, and of the table of devils.

22 Do [s]we provoke the Lord to jealousy? [t]are we stronger than he?

23 All things are lawful for me, but all things are not expedient: all things are lawful for me, but all things edify not.

24 Let no man seek his own, but every man another's wealth.

25 Whatsoever is sold in the shambles, which was about to produce, for the benefit of the people, the excellent and permanent fruits of salvation, ought they to deem it a great matter, a large expense to themselves, or a great favour to their ministers, if they allowed them to reap a portion of their carnal things, which were of an earthly nature, and could not long be preserved, and which would prove them carnal, if they either tenaciously hoarded them, or luxuriously spent them on themselves.—Scott.

PERSEVERANCE AND SELF-DENIAL.—Ver. 24—27. The apostle presses this advice on the Corinthians by proper arguments, drawn from the Grecian games. 1. They take pains, and undergo all those hardships, "to obtain a corruptible crown; but we an incorruptible." They who conquered in these games were only crowned with the withering leaves or boughs of trees, of olive, bays, or laurel. But Christians have an incorruptible crown in view, a crown of glory that never fadeth away, an inheritance incorruptible, reserved in heaven for them. And would they yet suffer themselves to be outdone by these racers or wrestlers? Can they use abstinence in diet, exert themselves in racing, expose their bodies to so much hardship in a combat, who have no more in view than the trifling huzzas of a giddy multitude, or a crown of leaves? And shall not Christians, who hope for the approbation of a sovereign Judge, and a crown of glory from his hands, stretch forward in the heavenly race, and exert themselves in beating down their fleshly inclinations, and the strongholds of sin? 2. The racers in these games run at uncertainty. All run, but one receives the prize. Every racer, therefore, is at a great uncertainty, whether he shall win it or no. But the Christian racer is at no such uncertainty. Every one may run here so as to obtain; but then he must run within the lines, he must keep to the path of duty prescribed, which, some think, is the meaning of "running not as uncertainly."—Henry.

CHAP. X. JEWISH PRIVILEGE.—Ver. 1—5. In prosecuting his subject concerning things offered to idols, the apostle next referred the Corinthians to the case of Israel, and the judgment of God which came upon them for their carnal self indulgence. He would not have them ignorant, how that all the fathers of the Jewish nation came out of Egypt under the guidance and protection of the cloud, which gave them light by night, and was an overshadowing canopy to them by day; being an emblem of the Lord's providential care and gracious guidance of his people; and that the whole nation was safely conducted through the Red sea, in which the Egyptians were drowned. Thus they were initiated, as by baptism, into the true religion, under the instruction of Moses, the type of Christ; by the overshadowing cloud, and by the waters of the sea. Thus the whole nation, men, women, and children, were acknowledged as the visible church of God; even as all professed Christians were admitted into the church by baptism. They all likewise, without exception, were sustained by the manna, which miraculous provision might be called spiritual meat, as it typified Christ, the bread of life to the souls of the true Israel; and they all drank of those waters which flowed from the rock, and which followed them as a river through most of their wanderings in the wilderness. This too might be called spiritual drink, for it typified the sacred influences of the Holy Spirit, as given to believers through Jesus Christ; and the rock itself might be called spiritual, because that rock was Christ, a type of him who was wounded and smitten for our sins, that salvation might be communicated to our perishing souls.

USES OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.—Ver. 6—12. These transactions have before been fully considered; and the application of them to the conduct of the Corinthians must be obvious to every attentive reader. The apostle therefore further assured them, that those things, which seemed so severe in respect of Israel, were merciful in the object; being intended as examples to others, warning them to restrain their appetites and passions, and to exercise holy caution and humble fear. Especially, they were written for the admonition of Christians, "on whom the completion of the ages was come;" who had the substance of all their shadows and the accomplishment of all their prophecies; who enjoyed those advantages, which were the end and perfection of the old dispensation; and who lived under the light of the last and most complete revelation, which was to be vouchsafed to the world. For, in proportion to their light, privileges, and encouragements, so ought their holy obedience to be: their guilt would otherwise be more aggravated, than under the darker dispensation of the law; and would be punished with more terrible judgments.

CHRISTIAN CONSISTENCY.—Ver. 15—17. The Corinthians valued themselves on their superior knowledge and wisdom; and the apostle would speak to them as wise men, and call on them, impartially and discreetly, to judge of what he had further to adduce against their feasting in the idol-temples. Would they not allow, that the cup of wine, which was used in the Lord's Supper to represent spiritual blessings, and as an act of praise and thanksgiving to God, after it had been blessed and set apart by prayer for that purpose, was a token and pledge of their communion in the blood of Christ as the atonement for sin, and their being made joint-partakers of it? And was not the bread which they broke, a token of their participating of his body? Did not a man's joining in that ordinance imply a profession of faith in Christ crucified, and of adoring gratitude to him for this salvation? Certainly every one would put this construction on it: and if a man really intended in his heart, what he thus professed, he would actually have the communion of the Saviour's blood shed and body broken for the sins of the world. BE ye followers of me, [b]even as I also am of Christ.

2 Now I praise you, brethren, [d]that ye remember me in all things, [e]and keep the *ordinances, as I delivered them to you.

3 But I would have you know, that [f]the head of every man is Christ; and the head of the woman is the man; [h]and the head of Christ is God.

4 Every man praying or prophesying, having his head covered, dishonoureth his head.

5 But every woman that prayeth or prophesieth with her head uncovered,[1] dishonoureth her head: for that is even all one as if she were shaven.

6 For if the woman be not covered, let her also be shorn: but if it be a shame for a woman to be shorn or shaven,[2] let her be covered.

7 For a man indeed ought not to cover his head, forasmuch as [o]he is the image and glory of God: but the woman is the glory of the man.

8 For the man is not of the woman; but the woman of the man.

9 Neither was the man created for the woman; but the woman for the man.

10 For this cause ought the woman to have [†]power[3] on her head because of the angels.[4]

11 Nevertheless, neither is the man without the woman, neither the woman without the man, in the Lord.

12 For as the woman is of the man, even so is the man also by the woman; [u]but all things of God.

13 Judge in yourselves: is it comely that a woman pray unto God uncovered?

14 Doth not even nature itself teach you, that, if a man have long hair, it is a shame unto him?

15 But if a woman have long hair, it is a glory to her: for her hair is given her for a [‡]covering.

16 But if any man [a]seem to be contentious, we have no such custom, neither [c]the churches of God.

17 Now in this that I declare unto you I praise you not, that ye come together not for the better, but for the worse.

18 For first of all, when ye come together in the church, [f]I hear that there be [§]divisions among you; and I partly believe it.

19 For there must be also [‖]heresies among you, that they which are approved may be made manifest among you.

20 When ye come together therefore into one place,[5] [*] this is not to eat the Lord's supper.

21 For in eating every one taketh before other his own supper: and one is hungry, and another is drunken.

22 What! have ye not houses to eat and to drink in? [m]or despise ye the church of God, and shame them [†]that have not? What shall I say to you? shall I praise you in this? I praise you not.

23 For [n]I have received of the Lord that which also I delivered unto you, That the Lord Jesus, [o]the same night in which he was betrayed, [p]took bread:

24 And, when he had given thanks, he brake it, and said, Take, [q]eat; [r]this is my body, which is broken for you: this do [‡]in remembrance of me.

25 After the same manner also he took the cup, when he had supped, saying, [s]This cup is the new testament in my blood: this do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me.

26 For as often as ye eat this bread,[6] and drink this cup, [§]ye do shew the Lord's death [u]till he come.

27 Wherefore, [x]whosoever shall eat this bread, and drink this cup of the Lord, unworthily, [y]shall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord.

28 But [z]let a man examine himself, and all Christians, by this ordinance and the faith in it professed, and the grace implied, were united, as the grains of wheat in one loaf of bread, or as the members in the human body; seeing they were all united to Christ, and had fellowship with him and one another, by partaking of the same bread, as a token of their feeding by faith on the same spiritual nourishment for their souls. In like manner, to join with idolaters in their feasts, at the temples of their idols, must be understood, as a professed act of communion with the idol and its worshippers: and if this was not intended, it was a sort of hypocritical profession.

God's Glory, our great Aim.—Ver. 29—33. The apostle observed, perhaps with reference to the self-confidence of some at Corinth, that he did not so much mean they were to abstain for the sake of their own consciences; for he supposed them able to discard such ignorant scruples: but for the sake of other men's consciences, especially those of their weaker brethren. He therefore concluded this subject by admonishing them, whether they ate or drank, in any place or company, or whatever they did, to do it all with an habitual aim at the glory of God: by considering his precepts, and the propriety, expediency, appearance, or tendency of their actions, and the construction which others would put upon them: and by acting with prudence, temperance, thankfulness, consistency, and charity in every thing. Thus the whole tenor of their conduct would show the excellency of the gospel, and conduce to win over others to it; by which the name and perfections of God would be the more known, adored and glorified.—Scott.

Chap. XI. Seemly and Unseemly Conduct.—Ver. 2—16. In the abundance of spiritual gifts bestowed on the Corinthians, several women had been endued with the spirit of prophecy, which enabled them, by immediate inspiration, to offer prayers for the congregation, or to give instructions, or even to predict future events; for it is not reasonable to suppose, that a woman could be said to prophesy, merely by being present when another prophesied. This seems to have been the only case, in which women were allowed to speak in public, and in this respect some abuses had crept in, chap. xiv. 34, 35; 1 Tim. ii. 11—13. In order to understand what was becoming in this exempt case, the apostle would have them to understand, that Christ was the immediate head, or ruler, of every man among them, whose honour was concerned in their conduct: and that the man was the immediate head and ruler of the woman, to whose authority God had subjected her, and who would therefore be disgraced by any impropriety in her behaviour; and that Christ, as Mediator, was subject to God as his head and principal, to whose glory, his whole conduct in his mediatorial government was referred. As therefore Christ did the will, and sought the honour of God, so the Christian should avow his subjection to Christ, doing his will and seeking his glory: and the woman should acknowledge her subjection to the man, and (in all things lawful) do what was pleasing and honourable to him. According to the custom of those days, a veil on the head was the token of subjection and respect to superiors: if a man therefore should pray or prophesy with such a covering, he would dishonour Christ his head, by acting out of character, and appearing as if he was placed in subjection to the woman, instead of in authority over her. On the other hand, it would be inconsistent with modesty, and her state of subjection, for a woman to lay aside her veil on such occasions: for thus she would seem to forget her place, and to affect authority; which would dishonour the man, whom God had appointed to be as a head over her. Nay, this would be so great an impropriety, that it would be of a similar meaning with the shaving of her head, which was a disgraceful punishment that was used to be inflicted on women of bad character. If then the women would exercise their gifts uncovered, let them be shorn or shaven: but if they deemed this shameful, let them wear their veils. Some think that these prophetesses had their hair dishevelled, after the manner of the Pythian priestesses of Apollo; and if this was so, it would be an additional reason for the apostle thus strenuously to oppose them.—The man, indeed, being the image and glory of God, and appointed as his representative in ruling over this lower world, ought not to be veiled on these occasions. But the woman reflecting, as it were, the man's glory, being formed his counterpart, and the most honourable subject of his delegated authority, ought to avow her willing subjection by wearing the veil. For woman was not originally created separately, but taken out of the man; as a part of him, yet inferior to him: neither was the man created for the woman's advantage, but the woman for that of the man. On this account therefore the woman ought to be covered with her veil, even when praying or prophesying, as an emblem of her being under the authority of the man.—Many conjectures have been formed concerning the meaning of the following expression, "because of the angels;" but probably the apostle referred to the presence of holy angels (who had witnessed the creation of man) as spectators, or even in some respects as joint worshippers with believers in their public assemblies; which therefore ought to be regulated with the most exact propriety, that these heavenly worshippers might not witness any thing unbecoming so holy an occasion.—But, though the woman had been created for and subjected to the man, yet no difference was made between them in respect of their acceptance in Christ, but they were called together to have fellowship with him.

The Lord's Supper.—Ver. 23—28. To remedy the disorders which prevailed among the Corinthians, the apostle referred them to the original appointment of the Lord's so let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup.

29 For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh [l]damnation to himself, [b]not discerning the Lord's body.

30 For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep.

31 For if we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged.[7]

32 But when we are judged, [f]we are chastened of the Lord, that we should not be condemned with the world.

Spiritual gifts are various, 1, and bestowed for our profit, 7. Christians, as the members of the body natural, are one, 12.

NOW concerning spiritual gifts, brethren, I would not have you ignorant.

2 Ye know that ye were Gentiles, carried away unto these dumb idols, even as ye were led.

3 Wherefore I give you to understand, that [f]no man speaking by the Spirit of God calleth Jesus *accursed; and that no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost.

4 Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit.

5 And there are differences of [t]administrations, [i]but the same Lord.

6 And there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which [k]worketh all in all.

7 But [m]the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal.

8 For to one [n]is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom;[1] to another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit;

9 To another [o]faith by the same Spirit; to another the gifts of healing by the same Spirit;

10 To another the working of miracles; to another prophecy; to another discerning of spirits; to another [t]divers kinds of tongues; to another the interpretation of tongues.

11 But [x]all these worketh that one and the self-same Spirit, dividing to every man severally, as he will.

12 For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body; so also is Christ.

Supper, with which he had been made acquainted by immediate revelation from Christ, and which he had faithfully delivered to them. This account of that ordinance entirely coincides with that which has been considered, and fully confirms the interpretation given of it. It was of great importance, that it should be here repeated and enforced, that the obligation of the institution to the end of the world might be fully ascertained. It is here added, that as often as they drank of the cup, they were to do it in remembrance of Christ, in order that the frequent recollection of his love, his sufferings, and their obligations to him, might have a proper effect upon their hearts and lives: for as oft as they attended on this ordinance, they would "show forth the Lord's death," that is, profess their faith in it, and declare the end and efficacy of it, till he should come to judgment. The manner in which the Quakers evade this decisive declaration, (by saying, till the time when Christ should come, by his spiritual illumination on their minds, to take them off from carnal ordinances,) is a striking instance of perverse ingenuity used in defence of rooted prejudices. The apostle here repeatedly speaks of "the bread," after its consecration or appropriation to that particular use; which is decisive against those absurd and monstrous interpretations, that have been put upon our Lord's words.—Scott.

CHAP. XII. Spiritual Gifts.—Ver. 5—8. Several persons had their several gifts, some one, some another, all from and by the same Spirit. To one was given the "word of wisdom;" that is, say some, a knowledge of the mysteries of the gospel, and ability to explain them; an exact understanding of the design, nature, and doctrines, of the Christian religion. Others say, an uttering grave sentences, like Solomon's proverbs. Some confine this word of wisdom to the revelations made to and by the apostles. "To another, the word of knowledge by the same Spirit;" that is, say some, the knowledge of mysteries, chap. ii. 13, wrapped up in the prophecies, types, and histories of the Old Testament: say others, a skill and readiness to give advice and counsel in perplexed cases. "To another, faith, by the same Spirit;" that is, the faith of miracles; or a faith in the divine power and promise, whereby they were enabled to work miracles; or, an extraordinary impulse from above, whereby they were enabled to trust God in any emergency, and go on in the way of their duty, and own and profess the truths of Christ, [illegible] difficulty or danger. "To another, the gift of healing, by the same [illegible] by laying on of hands, or anointing with oil, or [illegible] of miracles;" the efficacies of powers, [illegible] speech to the dumb, hear- [illegible] that is ability to foretell future events; which is the more usual sense of prophecy; or to explain Scripture by a peculiar gift of the Spirit. See chap. xiv. 24. "To another, the discerning of spirits;" power to distinguish between true and false prophets, or to discern the real and internal qualifications of any person for an office, or to discover the inward workings of the mind by the Holy Ghost, as Peter did those of Ananias, Acts v. 3. "To another, divers kinds of tongues," or ability to speak languages by inspiration. "To another, the interpretation of tongues," or ability to render foreign languages readily and properly into their own.—Henry.

Spiritual Symmetry.—Ver. 15—26. From the preceding general illustration the Corinthians might see the absurdity of their emulations, covetings, and murmurs; for, supposing there could be a distinct consciousness in each of the members of the human body; and the foot, dissatisfied with its lowly, laborious, and useful station, should covet the function and the powers of the hand; and complain that, as this was not granted, it could not be deemed a part of the body, or at all regarded in it; would not every one see that this would be false and frivolous? The same would be the case, if the ear should repine, because not placed in the office, and possessed of the powers, of the eye. For if every part of the body were formed into an eye; where would be the important sense of hearing? Instead of such monstrous productions, God hath wisely and kindly placed the members, senses, and organs in the human body, as it pleased him; and unspeakably better than any self-conceited counsellor could have directed. Insomuch, that the idea, of every member coveting to be the most honoured part, is associated with that of the destruction of the body; which necessarily consists of many different members, so formed and placed as to become one regular whole. Thus, the eye could not contemptuously deny that it wanted the assistance of the hand; for without the power of executing, of which the hand is the instrument, even sight would be of small value. Nay, the head itself, the seat or source of sensation and reflection, wants the help of the feet to convey it about from place to place. This appears still more clearly in respect of those parts, which seem feeble, and yet are absolutely necessary to life, or to the well-being of the whole: such as the various vessels, by which digestion, nutrition, and circulation are carried on; and by which nature throws off whatever is redundant or detrimental. So far, in fact, are the more honourable parts of the body from appropriating the whole of a man's regard, that the contrary often takes place; and those parts, which we are accustomed to conceal as less honourable, are clothed and decorated with the greatest care and expense. For, those that are more honourable, do not want such decoration, being comely in themselves. [illegible] of the body is wounded, disgraced, or pained, all other parts [illegible]

THOUGH I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, [b]and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal.

2 And though [d]I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; [f]and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, [h]I am nothing.

3 And [i]though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor,[1] [k]and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing.

4 Charity [m]suffereth long,[2] and is kind; charity envieth not; charity *vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up,

5 Doth not behave itself unseemly, [r]seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, [t]thinketh no evil;

6 Rejoiceth [u]not in iniquity, but [x]rejoiceth [†]in the truth;

7 [y]Beareth all things, believeth all things, [z]hopeth all things, [a]endureth all things.

8 Charity [b]never faileth:[3] but whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away.

9 For we know in part, and we prophesy in part.

10 [f]But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away.

11 When I was a child, [g]I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I [‡]thought as a child; but when I became a man, I put away childish things.

12 For now we see through a glass, [§]darkly;[4] but then [i]face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known.

13 And now [l]abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity.

CHAP. XIV.

Prophecy preferred before speaking with strange tongues, 1, but must be exercised in an orderly manner, 30.

[a]FOLLOW after [b]charity, and [c]desire spiritual gifts, but rather that ye may prophesy.

2 For he that speaketh in an unknown tongue speaketh not unto men, but unto God: for no man *understandeth him; howbeit in the spirit he speaketh mysteries.[1]

3 But he that prophesieth speaketh unto men to edification, and exhortation, and comfort.

4 He that speaketh in an unknown tongue [k]edifieth himself; but he that prophesieth [l]edifieth the church.

5 I would that ye all spake with tongues, but rather that ye prophesied: [n]for greater is he that prophesieth than he that speaketh with tongues, except he interpret, that the church may receive edifying.

6 Now, brethren, if I come unto you speaking with tongues, [p]what shall I profit you, except I shall speak to you either by [q]revelation, or by knowledge, or by prophesying, or by doctrine?

7 And even things without life giving sound, whether pipe or harp, [x]except they give a distinction in the [†]sounds, how shall it be known what is piped or harped?[2]

8 For if the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself to the battle?

9 So likewise ye, except ye utter by the tongue words [‡]easy to be understood, how shall it be known what is spoken? for ye shall speak into the air.

10 There are, it may be, so many kinds of voices in the world, and none of them is without signification.

11 Therefore if I know not the meaning of the voice, I shall be unto him that speaketh a barbarian, and he that speaketh shall be a barbarian unto me.

12 Even so ye, [b]forasmuch as ye are zealous of [§]spiritual gifts, seek that ye may excel, to the edifying of the church.

13 Wherefore let him that speaketh in an unknown tongue pray that he may interpret.

14 For if I pray in an unknown tongue, [e]my spirit prayeth, but my understanding is unfruitful.

15 [f]What is it then? [g]I will pray with the spirit, and I will pray with the understanding also;[3] I will sing with the spirit, [h]and I will sing with the understanding also.

16 Else, when thou shalt bless with the spirit, how shall he that occupieth the room of the unlearned say Amen at thy giving of thanks, seeing he understandeth not what thou sayest?

17 For thou verily givest thanks well, but the other is not edified.

18 I [n]thank my God, I speak with tongues more than ye all:

19 Yet [o]in the church I had rather speak five words with my understanding, that by my voice I might teach others also, than ten thousand words in an unknown tongue.

20 Brethren, be not children in understanding: howbeit [q]in malice be ye children, but in understanding be [‡]men.

21 In the law it is written, With men of other tongues and other lips will I speak unto this people; and yet for all that will they not hear me, saith the Lord.

22 Wherefore tongues are for a sign, not to them that believe,[4] but to them that believe share the suffering; and on the other hand, they all seem to rejoice and share the pleasure of that member which is in health and at ease, or which is employed in any honourable or beneficial service.—Scott.

CHAP. XIII. CHRISTIAN LOVE.—Ver. 1—3. Though Paul could speak all the variety of human languages most perfectly, and though he could discourse in them with the eloquence of angels, or even use their heavenly language, yet, without charity, he should only resemble the unmeaning noise of the most common and less harmonious musical instruments. Nay, could he also deliver prophecies, which should be verified by the most signal accomplishment; if he could understand and even comprehend all divine mysteries; if he were possessed of all the natural and religious knowledge imaginable; and if he could exercise that special faith on the power of Christ, by which miracles were wrought, to such a degree, that even mountains should literally be removed at his word, to the universal astonishment of mankind: yet, without charity, he should be nothing, not a Christian at all, and so, far beneath the meanest believer upon earth. Nay, if, from pride, ostentation, or similar motives, he should give all his goods to feed the poor, even to the starving of himself; or if, from party zeal and obstinate attachment to a system, he should give his body to be burned as a martyr, yet, without charity, he could be nothing better than a deluded hypocrite, and should derive no benefit from it. The apostle meant to show, in the strongest instances imaginable, that nothing could prove a man a true believer, who had not charity.

ITS SUPERIORITY TO THE OTHER GRACES.—Ver. 13. After the ceasing of supernatural gifts in the church, faith, hope, and love abode, and will abide, to the end of the world, as the three principal graces that distinguish Christians from other men; and in fact include all the others. Faith receives the testimony of God concerning invisible things, appropriates his instruction, and receives his salvation, by looking to, and relying on the divine Redeemer, and the promises of God in him. Hope expects the promised blessings, as perfected in eternal life; and thus "it is the anchor of the soul," keeping it steadfast in obedience and patient waiting, amidst every kind of opposition and discouragement.—Scott.

CHAP. XIV. EDIFICATION THE CHIEF AIM.—Ver. 6—12. To convince the Corinthians, without needless offence, of what he had asserted, the apostle put the case, that when he came next to Corinth he should merely display his gift of speaking in a variety of languages; of what use in that case would his visit be to them? Surely of none, except he spake intelligibly, either by immediate revelation from God, or by some prophetical message suited to their case, or concerning some doctrine in which they wavered or were mistaken. Unless in some of these ways, (which indeed it is difficult for us to distinguish with exactness,) he gave them clear instructions; all that he could say in unknown languages would be an unmeaning noise. For even lifeless things that are used to give sound, such as musical instruments, can give no direction to those who are to sing and dance to them, unless a proper distinction be observed in the sounds; and if the trumpet should be blown at random, without any distinction between that sound which calls the combatants to the field, and other sounds of different meaning, what soldier could understand when to prepare himself for the battle? If, then, an intelligible distinction of sounds was necessary in the ordinary concerns of life, much more must they be so in those of religion. For unless they uttered significant and intelligible words, how could the hearers understand what was spoken? They might as well speak in an empty room, or an unfrequented desert, where their words would be lost in the air, and never reach any human ear. There were indeed as many languages or idioms in the world as there were different regions: and each of these was significant to the persons accustomed to it. That circumstance, therefore, ought to be considered; otherwise, even in ordinary conversation, the speaker and hearer, who understand not each other, would appear reciprocally barbarians to each other, however expressive, polite, and copious the languages were in which they spake; and they were more likely to despise each other than to profit by the interview, or be satisfied with it. In the common concerns of life, therefore, it was thus requisite for men to understand each other; and surely the Corinthians, amidst their zeal, and emulous desire of spiritual gifts, ought to act consistently with common sense, and desire to excel in those things by which they might edify the church, and not in such as could only procure them irrational admiration!—Scott.

AMEN.—Ver. 16. He who fills up or occupies the place of the unlearned, that is, as the ancients interpret it, the body of the people, who in most Christian assemblies are illiterate; how should they say "Amen" to prayers in an unknown tongue? How should they declare their consent and concurrence? This is saying "Amen," So be it. God grant the thing we have requested; or, we join in the confession that has been made of sin, and in the acknowledgment that has been made of divine mercies and favours. This is the import of saying "Amen." All should say "Amen" inwardly; and it is not improper to testify this inward concurrence in public prayers and devotions, by an audible "Amen." The ancient Christians said "Amen" aloud. Now how should the people say "Amen" to what they did not understand? Note, There can be no concurrence in those prayers that are not understood. The intention of public devotions is therefore entirely destroyed, if they be performed in an unknown tongue.—Henry.

not: but prophesying serveth not for them that believe not, [u]but for them which believe.

23 If therefore [x]the whole church be come together into one place, and all speak with tongues, and there come in those that are unlearned, or unbelievers, [y]will they not say that ye are mad?

24 But if all prophesy, and there come in one that believeth not, or one unlearned, [z]he is convinced of all, he is judged of all.[5]

25 And thus are the secrets of his heart made manifest; and so, [a]falling down[6] on his face, he will worship God, and report that [b]God is in you of a truth.

26 How is it then, brethren? when ye come together, [c]every one of you hath a psalm, hath a doctrine, hath a tongue, hath a revelation, hath an interpretation. [d]Let all things be done unto edifying.

27 If any man speak in an unknown tongue, let it be by two, or at the most by three, and that by course; and let one interpret.

28 But if there be no interpreter, let him keep silence in the church; and let him speak to himself, and to God.

29 Let the prophets speak two or three, and [e]let the other judge.

30 If any thing be [f]revealed to another that sitteth by, let the first hold his peace.

31 For ye may all prophesy one by one, that [h]all may learn, and [i]all may be comforted.

32 And the spirits of the prophets are subject to the prophets.

33 For God is not the author of *confusion, but of peace, as in all churches of the saints.

34 Let your [n]women keep silence in the churches: for it is not permitted unto them to speak;[7] but they are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law.

35 And if they will learn any thing, [q]let them ask their husbands at home: for it is [r]a shame for women to speak in the church.

36 What! [s]came the word of God out from you? or came it unto you only?

37 If any man think himself to be a prophet, or spiritual, [u]let him acknowledge that the things that I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord.

38 But if any man be ignorant, let him be ignorant.

39 Wherefore, brethren, [y]covet to prophesy, and forbid not to speak with tongues.

40 Let all things be done decently, and in order.

MOREOVER, brethren, [a]I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, [b]which also ye have received, and wherein ye stand;

2 By which also [d]ye are saved, if ye *keep in memory †what I preached unto you, [e]unless ye have believed in vain:

3 For [f]I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that [g]Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures;

4 And [i]that he was buried, and that [k]he rose again the third day [l]according to the scriptures;

5 And [m]that he was seen of Cephas, [o]then of the twelve:[1]

6 After that, [p]he was seen of above five hundred brethren at once; of whom the greater part remain unto this present, but some are fallen asleep.

7 After that, he was seen of James; then of all the apostles.

8 And last of all [s]he was seen of me also, as of ‡one born out of due time.

9 For I am the least of the apostles, that am not meet to be called an apostle; because I persecuted the church of God.

10 But [x]by the grace of God I am what I am: and his grace which was bestowed upon me was not in vain; [z]but I laboured more abundantly than they all: [a]yet not I, but the grace of God which was with me.

11 Therefore, [b]whether it were I or they, so we preach, and so ye believed.

12 Now, if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead?

13 But if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen:[2]

14 And if Christ be not risen, [f]then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain.

15 Yea, and we are found [g]false witnesses of God: because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ; whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not.

16 For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised:

17 And if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins.

18 Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ[3] are perished.

19 If in [n]this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable.

20 But [q]now Christ is risen from the dead, and become [r]the first-fruits of them that slept.[4]

21 For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead.

22 For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.

ORDER.—Ver. 26—33. As a general rule, by which such abuses might be remedied, they should always take care that all things were done with a view to their common edification. If then any of them chose to speak in an unknown tongue, let no more than two, or at most three, one after another, exercise this gift at one meeting: and let some one interpret his discourse. But if none present were enabled to do this, let him who was about to speak in an unknown tongue be silent; and be content, on proper occasions to speak to himself and to God in meditation and prayer, without obtruding his unintelligible words upon the congregation, who ought to be more profitably employed. Let the prophets also speak by two or three at the same meeting, in due order; and let those prophets especially who were silent exercise their judgment upon what was spoken, to determine whether it accorded with the Scripture, as false prophets might creep in among them. In case any thing should be immediately revealed to one who sat by, which required present attention, let the first, on a proper intimation given, keep silence till that had been considered; or, as some render it, let the other wait till the first had done speaking. For they needed not be eager to speak first; seeing by properly waiting they might all prophesy, (who had that gift,) and all be edified. Nor could it be urged that the divine impulse upon their minds constrained them to speak immediately, as the frantic heathen priests and priestesses did; for the spirits of the prophets (their minds when most powerfully influenced by the Holy Spirit,) were subject to government, and might be restrained, directed, and regulated by reason and judgment, as at other times. That gracious God, whose Spirit spake by them, was by no means the author of confusion and disorder, such as must ensue from the vehement utterance of many speakers at once, vying with each other who should attract most attention; but of peace, harmony, mutual love, and good order; as it was evident in the conduct of all the churches of the saints, in this and other particulars.

DUTY OF WOMEN.—Ver. 34, 35. To reconcile these verses with the Scripture referred to, it seems most natural to suppose that some of the Corinthian women were used to speak publicly, when not under any immediate or extraordinary impulse of the Holy Spirit; and perhaps they interrupted the other speakers by inquiries or objections, according to the disputatious spirit that prevailed. The apostle therefore laid it down as a general rule, (to which the foregoing case was the only exception,) that women must not be allowed to speak in the public congregation, or to assume the office of teachers or disputants: for this by no means consisted with the obedience to their husbands which the law of God inculcated. But if they met with any thing in the public instructions which they could not understand or assent to, let them wait till they went home, and then ask their husbands about it, who were supposed able and willing to inform them, and who were the most proper persons for them to confer with. For it was inconsistent with modesty and propriety, and would be scandalous among their neighbours for women to make a practice of discoursing in the public assemblies.—Scott.

CHAP. XV. CHRIST'S RESURRECTION.—Ver. 1—11. To demonstrate his resurrection, on which the whole of his religion rested, Jesus first appeared to Peter; then in the evening of that day to those of the twelve apostles who were assembled; and on the evening of the succeeding first day of the week, when Thomas was present, and confessed him as "his Lord and God;" that afterwards he appeared to above five hundred disciples at once, doubtless in Galilee, where he was most known, where many of his disciples lived, and where he appointed to meet the apostles. Most of these had been still preserved, to be living witnesses of that great event; though some had fallen asleep, having died in faith and hope, and so departed, to be present with their Lord. Afterwards James was favoured with a visit from his risen Saviour: probably, this was James the son of Alpheus who wrote the epistle, but we have no other account of this appearance of Christ. Then he was seen of all the apostles, before and at his ascension; and last of all he had graciously manifested himself to Paul also, in such a manner, that he could not but assuredly know him to be Jesus who had been crucified.

CHRIST'S RESURRECTION—THE PLEDGE OF THAT OF HIS PEOPLE.—Ver. 20—26. The apostle having established the fact of Christ's resurrection, from that fact shows the certainty of our resurrection, and then from the important questions in the thirty-fifth verse, he takes occasion to descant on the glorious change that shall take place in the bodies of the saints; and finally he tramples on death by the consideration of a resurrection and glorious immortality.—Christ was risen from the dead; and was become the first-fruits of the whole harvest of those that "slept" in death, even of all believers who had died from the beginning, and all who should die to the end of the world. He was the first, who arose to die no more; and the most illustrious of all, who ever should arise: he arose as a public person, as the surety, the representative, and the forerunner of his saints: his resurrection was a pledge and assurance of their's; and as the first-fruits, presented to God, to sanctify and secure his blessing upon the whole crop. For, as by man sin and death entered into the world; so, by man, by one in human nature, came the resurrection of the dead: and, as in consequence of their relation to Adam, all men are born mortal, and at length die; even so, in and by Christ shall all be made alive. All men, through his undertaking, being placed under a dispensation of mercy, shall be raised from the dead, that their future state may be accordingly determined: yet none will be finally benefited, but they who are one with him by faith, and the participation 23 But every man in his own order: Christ the first-fruits; afterward [y]they that are Christ's at his coming.

24 Then cometh the end,[5] when he shall have delivered up [a]the kingdom to God, even the Father; when he shall have put down all rule, and all authority and power.

25 For [b]he must reign, till he hath put all enemies under his feet.

26 The [c]last enemy that shall be destroyed is death.

27 For [d]he hath put all things under his feet. But when he saith, All things are put under him, it is manifest that he is excepted which did put all things under him.

28 And when [e]all things shall be subdued unto him, [f]then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him that put all things under him, that God may be [g]all in all.

29 Else what shall they do[6] which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? why are they then baptized for the dead?

30 And why stand we in jeopardy every hour?

31 I protest by [g]your rejoicing which I have in Christ Jesus our Lord, [1]I die daily.[7]

32 If [i]after the manner of men I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what advantageth it me if the dead rise not? let us eat and drink; for to-morrow we die.

33 Be not deceived: [r]evil communications corrupt good manners.

34 [s]Awake to righteousness, and [t]sin not; for [u]some have not the knowledge of God: I speak this to your shame.

35 But some man will say, [v]How are the dead raised up? and [x]with what body do they come?

36 Thou fool, [b]that which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die.

37 And that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be, but bare grain, it may chance of wheat, or of some other grain:

38 But [c]God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him, and to every seed his own body.

39 All flesh is not the same flesh: [8] but there is one kind of flesh of men, another flesh of beasts, another of fishes, and another of birds.

40 There are also celestial bodies, and bodies terrestrial: but the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another.

41 There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars: for one star differeth from another star in glory.

42 So also [f]is the resurrection of the dead; it is sown in corruption, it is raised in incorruption:

43 It is sown in dishonour, it is raised in glory: it is sown in weakness, it is raised in power:

44 It is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body.

45 And so it is written, [m]The first man Adam was made a living soul, the last Adam was made [n]a quickening Spirit.

46 Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; [9] and afterward that which is spiritual.

47 The [p]first man is of the earth, earthy; the second man is [q]the Lord from heaven.

48 As is the earthy, such are they also that are earthy; and as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly.

49 And as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly.

50 Now this I say, brethren, [x]that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption.

51 Behold, I shew you a mystery; [10] [z]We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be [*]changed, 52 In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump, (for the trumpet shall sound;) [e]and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed.

53 For this corruptible must [f]put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality.

54 So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and [g]this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, [h]Death is swallowed up in victory.

55 O death, where is thy [k]sting? O [*]grave, where is thy victory?

56 The [m]sting of death is sin; and [n]the strength of sin is the law.

57 But thanks be to God, which [p]giveth us the victory, through our Lord Jesus Christ.

58 Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye stedfast, unmoveable, always abounding in [t]the work of the Lord, forasmuch as [u]ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord.

of his life-giving Spirit; and of these the apostle particularly treats in this chapter. This resurrection must be effected in an orderly manner, according to the appointment of God: Christ himself hath been the first-fruits; hereafter, at his coming his redeemed people will be raised before others; and at last the wicked will arise also. Then the end of this present state of things will arrive: and the solemnities of the final judgment being concluded, Christ will deliver up the mediatorial kingdom to God, even to the Father from whom he received it.

The Mediatorial Kingdom.—Ver. 24. The distinction between the absolute, universal, and everlasting kingdom of God, the governor of all; and the mediatorial kingdom of Christ, as instituted for the benefit of fallen man, is everywhere implied in Scripture. The Father, as the head of the absolute kingdom, ceased not to reign when the Son was advanced to the mediatorial throne: as that authority was only intended to endure for a time, in order to accomplish certain important ends to the glory of God in man's salvation. After the day of judgment this kingdom will be terminated: Christ, having executed his commission, will cease to reign over all worlds as mediator, having publicly delivered up the kingdom to God in the person of the Father: yet he will in human nature retain a peculiar authority over his redeemed people; and, as one with the Father, he will, with him and the Holy Spirit, reign One "God over all, blessed for evermore:" nor will he any more cease to reign in this sense, when he hath given up the mediatorial kingdom, than the Father ceased to reign, when he appointed the Son to that kingdom. For in this passage, as in some others, the person of the Father is mentioned, as filling the throne, and appointing the mediator; in order to distinguish that absolute authority of God, from the delegated authority of the Son in human nature.—"He saith not that 'the Father,' mentioned in the twenty-fourth verse, but that 'God may be all in all:' and so he seems to lead us to that interpretation of the Godhead, which comprehends Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. That the Godhead may govern all things immediately by himself, without the intervention of a mediator, between him and us, to exact our obedience in his name, and to convey to us his favours and rewards. So as now Christ, God-man, is 'all in all,' Col. iii. 11, because the Father hath put all things into his hand, does all things, and governs all things, by him; when this economy ceases, the Godhead will be 'all in all,' as governing and influencing all things by himself immediately. 'That God may be all in all,' by a full communication of himself to, and an intimate union with, all his saints."

The Resurrection Body.—Ver. 39—44. The body, as born of dying Adam's race, and during its mortal state, and as laid in the grave, "is sown in corruption;" it tends to corruption, and after death it is speedily wasted and decayed: but at the resurrection it will be raised in incorruption, without any seeds of mortality, disease, or decay, in its constitution; but fitted for a state of perfect health and activity, to all eternity. Here, during life, at death, and in the grave, the body is sown in dishonour: it lives as a condemned criminal; various sufferings and diseases are the forerunners of the execution which takes place at death, with much ignominy and disgrace: and the wasting state of a dead corpse is very dishonourable in itself: though the death and burial of Christ has sanctified the grave to all believers, and his resurrection hath assured us, that the body shall be raised in glory. But the triumph over death and the grave will be honourable; the body will be rendered most beautiful and glorious; it will be made fit for that heavenly felicity, and those employments in which angels are associated; and it will resemble the glorious body of the Lord Jesus himself, the first-born from the dead. "It is also sown in weakness:" our manifold diseases, and death in which they terminate, are peculiar evidences of human imbecility; and the state of the body in the ground, devoured by worms, a loathsome object, and turning to the dust, shows, most affectingly, how little all men's power and abilities can do for them. But the body of a believer will not only be raised by almighty power; it will also be endued with a power, of which we have no conception, and be rendered capable of such motions, and of producing such effects, as utterly surpass whatever we have heard, seen, or perhaps imagined. In short, the body is here sown a natural, or an animal, body; it resembles the bodies of animals, in its wants, appetites, pains, and diseases; and after death it turns to dust as they do; but hereafter it will be raised a spiritual body, capable of the spiritual work, worship, and happiness of heaven, entirely refined from all its sensual dross and low desires; needing no more food, rest, sleep, or recreation; no longer capable of relishing animal pleasures, and no more a clog to the soul, but a helper to it, in all holy exercises. For there is a natural body suited to our state on earth, and a spiritual body suited to the heavenly state; nor can these be in every respect the same.

The Resurrection Itself.—Ver. 50—54. This change will be effected in a moment, instantaneously, as the eye twinkles; by the almighty power of Christ, when the last trumpet shall sound, as the summons to all men to meet their Judge. Then the voice of Christ will be heard by all the dead, and they will be raised again to life in their own order; and then the bodies of living believers will be changed from natural to spiritual, from corruptible to incorruptible, from mortal to immortal; even as a man's form is changed by putting on a new raiment. When this change hath taken place, in respect of all believers; then the saying of the prophet will finally be accomplished.—Scott.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS.

THIS epistle seems to have been written about a year after the foregoing, while the apostle was on his progress through Macedonia.

The most remarkable circumstance in it is the confidence of the apostle in the goodness of his cause, and in the power of God to bear him out in it. Opposed, as he then was, by a powerful and sagacious party, whose authority, reputation, and interest were deeply concerned, and who were ready to seize on everything which could discredit St Paul, it is wonderful to hear him so firmly insist on his apostolical authority, and so unreservedly appeal to the miraculous powers which he had exercised and conferred at Corinth. It is inconceivable that a stronger internal testimony, not only of integrity but of Divine inspiration, can exist. Had there been anything of imposture among the Christians, it was next to impossible but such a conduct must have occasioned the disclosure of it.

lay by as he could spare from time to time, and by that means make up a sum for this charitable purpose. Note, It is a good thing to lay up in store for good uses. They who are rich in this world, should be rich in good works, 2 Tim. vi. 17, 18. The best way to be so is, to appropriate of their income, and have a treasury for this purpose; a stock for the poor, as well as for themselves. By this means they will be ready to every good work as the opportunity offers; and many who labour with their own hands for a livelihood, should so work that they may have to give to him that needeth, Eph. iv. 28. Indeed their treasury for good works can never be very large; (though, according to circumstances, it may considerably vary;) but the best way in the world for them to get a treasury for this purpose, is to lay by from time to time, as they can afford. Some of the Greek fathers rightly observe here, that this advice was given for the sake of the poorer among them. They were to lay by from week to week, and not bring in to the common treasury, that by this means their contributions might be easy to themselves, and yet grow into a fund for the relief of their brethren. "Every little," as the proverb says, "would make a mickle." Indeed all our charity and benevolence should be free and cheerful, and for that reason should be made as easy to ourselves as may be. And what more likely way to make us easy in this matter than thus to lay by? We may cheerfully give when we know that we can spare, and that we have been laying by in store that we may. Here is the measure in which they are to lay by—"as God hath prospered them;" as he has been prospered by divine providence; as God has been pleased to bless and succeed his labours and business. Note, All our business and labour are that to us, which God is pleased to make them.—Henry.

ANATHEMA MARAN-ATHA.—Ver. 21—24. Whatever gifts, knowledge, eloquence, or eminence any man possessed, if he did not love the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be "anathema maran-atha." If he had not a cordial affection and love to the person, salvation, precepts, cause, glory, and people of Christ, he was and would be accursed, until, and when, the Lord should come, though not an open enemy to him and his cause. If his conduct proved this, let him be separated from the church, as an accursed thing, devoted to destruction, and in case he did not afterwards repent, and believe with that "faith which worketh by love," Christ himself would execute this awful sentence when he came to judge the world. But in case it could not be proved, or was not suspected, by men, yet it was known to the Lord: and he who had not genuine love to the Saviour, certainly abode under the wrath of God, and would at last sink into utter destruction as a sacrifice to his justice. For he must be an enemy to the holy perfections and righteous government of God; an unhumbled impenitent sinner, and an unbeliever under the covenant of works and the curse of the law: he must be destitute of all true holiness, incapable of spiritually performing any good work, and unfit for the employment and pleasures of heaven; who, under the profession of Christianity, did not love the Lord Jesus Christ, or who apostatized from that profession.—The word anathema is Hebrew, and signifies, in Scripture, an accursed thing devoted to destruction; maran-atha is Syriac, and signifies, the Lord cometh.—Scott.

CHAP. I. THE EPISTLE.—Ver. 1, 2. This is the introduction to this epistle, in which we have, 1. The inscription; and therein, (1.) The person from whom it was sent, that is, Paul, who calls himself "an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God." The apostleship itself was ordained by Jesus Christ, according to the will of God; and Paul was called to it by Jesus Christ, according to the will of God. He joins Timotheus with himself in writing this epistle; not because he needed his assistance, but that out of the mouth of two witnesses the word might be established; and his dignifying Timothy with the title of "brother," (either in the common faith, or in the work of the ministry,) shows the humility of this great apostle, and his desire to recommend Timothy (though he was then a young man,) to the esteem of the Corinthians, and give him a reputation among the churches. (2.) The persons to whom this epistle was sent, that is, "the church of God at Corinth;" and not only to them, but also "to all the saints in all Achaia," that is, to all the Christians who lived in the region round about. Note, In Christ Jesus no distinction is made between the inhabitants of city or country; all Achaia stands upon a level in his account. 2. The salutation, or apostolical benediction, which is the same as in his former epistle; and therein the apostle desires the two great and comprehensive blessings, grace and peace, for those Corinthians. These two benefits are fitly joined together, because there is no good and lasting peace without true grace; and both of them come "from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ," who is the Procurer and Dispenser of these benefits to fallen man, and is prayed to as God.—Henry.

SENTENCE OF DEATH IN HIMSELF.—Ver. 8—11. "Nothing could be more expressive of the circumstances in which the history describes the apostle to have been, at the time when the epistle purports to have been written, than the verses under consideration. It is the calm recollection of a mind emerged from the confusion of instant danger. It is that devotion and solemnity of thought which follows a recent deliverance. There is just enough of particularity in the passage to show that it is to be referred to the tumult at Ephesus." [Paley.] The apostle, however, had been weighed down with distress, which was beyond measure grievous, from the concurrence of outward dangers and hardships, with inward disquietude about the state of the churches; so that they were insupportable by any strength which he had previously possessed; and he was by them

5 For [n]as the sufferings of Christ[3] abound in us, [o]so our consolation also aboundeth by Christ.

6 And whether we be afflicted, it is for your consolation and salvation, which is * effectual in the enduring of the same sufferings which we also suffer: or whether we be comforted, it is for your consolation and salvation.

7 And our hope of you is stedfast, knowing, that as ye are partakers of the sufferings, so shall ye be also of the consolation.

8 For we would not, brethren, have you ignorant of our trouble which came to us in Asia, that we were pressed out of measure, above strength, insomuch that we despaired even of life.

9 But we had the sentence of death[4] in ourselves, [u]that we should not trust in ourselves, but [x]in God which raiseth the dead;

10 Who [y]delivered us from so great a depth, and doth deliver; in whom we trust that he will yet deliver us:

11 Ye also helping together by prayer for us, that, for the gift bestowed upon us by the means of many persons, thanks may be given by many on our behalf.

12 For our rejoicing is this, the testimony of our conscience, that in [c]simplicity and godly sincerity, not with fleshly wisdom, but by the grace of God, we have had our conversation in the world, and more abundantly to you-ward.

13 For we write none other things unto you than what ye read or acknowledge, and I trust ye shall acknowledge even to the end;

14 As also ye have acknowledged us in part, [h]that we are your rejoicing, [i]even as ye also are ours [k]in the day of the Lord Jesus.

15 And in this confidence I was minded to come unto you before, that ye might have a [s]second [‡]benefit;

16 And to pass by you into Macedonia, [m]and to come again out of Macedonia unto you, and of you to be brought on my way toward Judea.

17 When I therefore was thus minded, did I use lightness? or the things that I purpose, do I purpose [p]according to the flesh, that with me there should be yea, yea, and nay, nay?

18 But [r]as God is true, our [$]word toward you was not yea and nay.

19 For [s]the Son of God, Jesus Christ, who was preached among you by us, even by me, and Silvanus, and Timotheus, was not yea and nay,[5] but in him was yea.

20 For [x]all the promises of God in him are yea, and in him amen, [z]unto the glory of God by us.

21 Now he which [a]stablisheth us with you in Christ, and hath anointed us, is God;

The reasons of his not coming unto them, 1. Of the excommunicated person, 6. The success of his preaching in every place, 14.

BUT I determined this with myself, that I would not come again to you in heaviness.

2 For if I make you sorry, who is he then that maketh me glad,[1] but the same which is made sorry by me?

3 And I wrote this same unto you, lest, when I came, I should have sorrow from them of whom [f]I ought to rejoice; [g]having confidence in you all, that my joy is the joy of you all.

4 For out of much affliction and anguish of heart I wrote unto you with many tears; [i]not that ye should be grieved, but that ye might know the love which I have more abundantly unto you.

5 But if any have caused grief, he hath not grieved me, but in part; that I may not overcharge you all.

6 Sufficient to such a man is this * punishment, which was inflicted of many.

7 So that contrariwise [n]ye ought rather to forgive him, and comfort him, lest perhaps such an one should be [o]swallowed up with overmuch sorrow.

8 Wherefore I beseech you, that ye would confirm your love toward him.

9 For to this end also did I write, that I might know the proof of you, [s]whether ye be obedient in all things.

10 To [t]whom ye forgive any thing, I forgive also: for if I forgave any thing, to whom I forgave it, for your sakes forgave I it in the [†]person of Christ;

11 Lest [u]Satan should get an advantage of us:[2] for we are not ignorant of his devices.

12 Furthermore, when I came to Troas to preach Christ's gospel, [y]and a door was opened unto me of the Lord, led to despair of being any longer preserved in life to execute his plans of future usefulness. He even considered himself as a condemned person having the sentence of death in himself, in that he judged his doom inevitable. Nor indeed had he any method of escape by his own contrivance or efforts, or any confidence in himself; but he was brought to trust only in God, who by his almighty power raiseth the dead, and was therefore able to rescue him.

Testimony of Conscience.—Ver. 12—14. Though as a sinner he could only rejoice and glory in Christ Jesus, yet as a believer he might rejoice and glory in his inward consciousness of being truly what he professed and appeared to be; and especially in that he had been enabled to exercise his sacred ministry with simplicity and singleness of heart, aiming only to glorify God by doing good to men; and in that godly sincerity, that unadulterated integrity, which sprang from the fear and love of God, and approved itself to him. For he had not been warped by carnal wisdom, from any concealed aim at his own interest, reputation, or authority, to use duplicity or dissimulation; but had acted under the influence of divine grace, in forming and executing such designs as were best suited to promote the conversion of sinners and the prosperity of the church; without regarding the reproaches and sufferings to which he was exposed on that account. This had been his habitual conduct in every part of the world, ever since he had been called to profess and preach the gospel; but he had more abundantly manifested this disinterested self-denying spirit, this "simplicity and godly sincerity," in his whole behaviour towards the Corinthians; though they had been the first to suspect and accuse him of the contrary.

Unction of the Spirit.—Ver. 21, 22. The apostle's established belief of these truths, his reliance on these promises, and constancy in his ministry, were not the result of human wisdom or outward teaching; but were effected by the power of God, who had brought the Corinthians also to a firm faith in Christ, and to fellowship with him. God had anointed them by his teaching and sanctifying grace, and so removed their natural blindness and prejudice against the truth. He had also sealed them, both to mark them for his own, and to secure them to himself, by enstamping the divine image upon their souls through the new-creating power of the Spirit; whose graces and holy consolations were the earnest, and pledge, and foretaste in their hearts of the heavenly inheritance to which they were called. From these causes the apostle derived his constancy and confidence in preaching the gospel; and believers were influenced by them to hold fast their faith without wavering. Some indeed interpret "the anointing," of miraculous powers, and "the seal," of the sacraments; but as the apostle includes the Corinthians with him in these things; so it is more consistent with the tenor of Scripture to explain the anointing, of such divine communications as belong to Christians in general, and of which none else partake.—Scott.

The Apostle's Indulgent Spirit.—Ver. 23. The apostle gives a good reason why he did not come to Corinth as was expected. It was that he might "spare" them. They ought therefore to own his kindness and tenderness. He knew there were things amiss among them, and such as deserved censure, but was desirous to show tenderness. He assures them that this was the true reason, after this very solemn manner,—"I call God for a record upon my soul;" a way of speaking not justifiable where used in trivial matters; but this was very justifiable in the apostle, for his necessary vindication, and for the credit and usefulness of his ministry, which was struck at by his opposers. He adds, to prevent mistakes, that he did not pretend to "any dominion over their faith," ver. 24. Christ only is the Lord of our faith, he is the "Author and Finisher of our faith," Heb. xii. 2. He reveals to us what we must believe. Paul, and Apollos, and the rest of the apostles, were "but ministers by whom they believed," 1 Cor. iii. 5, and so the "helpers of their joy."—Henry.

CHAP. II. Discipline of the Church.—Ver. 5—11. The desired effect was obtained, for the man was humbled, and they had shown the proof of their obedience to his directions. He therefore directs them, with all speed, to restore the excommunicated person, or to receive him again to their communion. This is expressed several ways; he beseeches them to "forgive" him, to release him from church-censures, for they could not remit the guilt or offence against God; and also to "comfort" him; for in many cases the comfort of penitents depends upon their reconciliation not only with God, but with men also, whom they have scandalized or injured. He used several weighty arguments to persuade them to do thus. 1. The case of the penitent called for this; for he was in danger of being "swallowed up with over much sorrow." He was so sensible of his fault, and so much afflicted under his punishment, that he was in danger of falling into despair; and when sorrow is excessive, it does hurt; even sorrow for sin is too great, when it unfits for other duties, and drives men to despair. 2. They had showed obedience to his directions in passing a censure upon him, and now he would have them comply with his desire to restore him. 3. He mentions his readiness to forgive this penitent, and concur with them in this matter, "'To whom ye forgive, I forgive also.' I will readily concur with you in forgiving him." And this he would do for their sakes, for love to them, and for their advantage; and for Christ's sake, or in his name, as his apostle; and in conformity to his doctrine and example, which are so full of kindness and tender mercy toward all them who truly repent. 4. He gives of Christ, [s]in them that are saved, and in them that perish.

16 To the one we are the savour of death unto death; and to the other the savour of life unto life: and who is sufficient for these things?

17 For we are not as many, [k]which [‡]corrupt the word of God: but as of sincerity, but as of God, in the sight of God speak we in Christ.

CHAP. III.

To obviate the charge of vain-glory, the apostle shews, that the conversion of the Corinthians was a sufficient attestation of Christ to his ministry, 1. He ascribes all his sufficiency and success to God, and proves the glory of the gospel to be superior to that of the law, 6; declaring that his plain speaking accorded to his ministry, which was less obscure than that of Moses, 12; shewing the blindness of the Jews, which would be removed when they turned to the Lord, 15; and describing the liberty and progressive holiness, which arose from faith in Christ and the illumination of the Holy Spirit, 17.

DO we begin again to commend ourselves? or need we, as some others, epistles of commendation to you,[1] or letters of commendation from you?

2 Ye [c]are our epistle written in our hearts, [e]known and read of all men:

3 Forasmuch as ye are manifestly declared to be [f]the epistle of Christ ministered by us, written not with ink, but with the Spirit of [h]the living God; not in tables of stone, but in fleshly tables of the heart.

4 And [l]such trust have we through Christ to [m]God-ward:

5 Not that we are sufficient of ourselves to think any thing as of ourselves; [o]but our sufficiency is of God;

6 Who also hath made us able ministers of the new testament;[2] not of the letter, but of the spirit; [s]for the letter killeth, [t]but the spirit [*]giveth life.

7 But if the ministration of death, written and engraven in stones, was glorious, so that the children of Israel could not stedfastly behold the face of Moses for the glory of his countenance; which glory was to be done away;

8 How shall not [b]the ministration of the Spirit be rather glorious?

9 For if [c]the ministration of condemnation be glory, much more doth [d]the ministration of righteousness exceed in glory.

10 For even that which was made glorious had no glory in this respect, by reason of the glory that excelleth.

11 For if that which was done away was glorious, much more that which remaineth is glorious.

12 Seeing then that we have such hope,[3] we use great [†]plainness of speech;

13 And not as Moses, [k]which put a vail over his face, that the children of Israel [l]could not stedfastly look to the end of that which is abolished:

14 But their minds were blinded: for until this day remaineth the same vail untaken away in the reading of the old testament; which vail is done away in Christ.

15 But even unto this day, when Moses is read, [p]the vail is upon their heart.

16 Nevertheless, [q]when it shall turn to the Lord, the vail shall be taken away.

17 Now [s]the Lord is that Spirit: and [t]where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty.

18 But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass [v]the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image, from glory to glory,[4] even as [‡]by the Spirit of the Lord.

Paul's sincerity and diligence in preaching, 1, and his troubles for the same, 8.

THEREFORE, seeing we have this ministry, as we have received mercy, we faint not;

2 But have renounced the hidden things of [*]dishonesty, not walking in craftiness, nor handling the word of God deceitfully; but, [f]by manifestation of the truth, commending ourselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God.

3 But if [g]our gospel[1] be hid, [h]it is hid to them that are lost:

4 In whom the god of this world hath [k]blinded the minds of them which believe not, [l]lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is [m]the image of God, should shine unto them.

5 For we preach not ourselves, but [p]Christ Jesus the Lord; and [q]ourselves your servants for Jesus' sake.

6 For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, [†]hath [s]shined in our hearts, to give [t]the light of the knowledge of the glory of God [u]in the face of Jesus Christ.

7 But we have this treasure in earthen vessels, [x]that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us.

8 We are troubled on every side,[2] yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but [‡]not in despair;

9 Persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed;

10 Always [f]bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus, [z]that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our body.

11 For we which live are alway delivered unto death for Jesus' sake, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our mortal flesh.

another weighty reason, "Lest Satan get an advantage against us." Not only was there danger lest Satan should get an advantage against the penitent, by driving him to despair; but against the churches also, and the apostles or ministers of Christ, by representing them as too rigid and severe, and so frighten people from coming among them. —Henry.

CHAP. III. LETTER AND SPIRIT.—Ver. 6. As able ministers of the New Testament, they were ministers not merely of the letter, to read the written word, or to preach the letter of the gospel only, but they were ministers of the spirit also; the spirit of God did accompany their ministrations. The "letter killeth," this the letter of the law does, for that is the ministration of death; and if we rest only in the letter of the gospel, we shall be never the better for so doing, for even that will be a "savour of death unto death;" but the spirit of the gospel, going along with the ministry of the gospel, giveth life spiritual and life eternal.—Henry.

THE VEIL.—Ver. 13. The apostle's doctrine was not hid in obscurity or ambiguity, or under types and shadows, as the legal dispensation had been; of which the veil on the face of Moses was a figure, or emblem. As this covering concealed the lustre of his countenance; so the obscurity of that dispensation concealed its real glory; and the Israelites were unable to look steadfastly to Christ, the great end, scope, and substance of those ceremonies which were shortly to be abolished. Even believers had only indistinct and transient glimpses of that glorious object; and unbelievers looked no further than the outward institution, except as they expected a temporal deliverer and king. Thus their minds were generally blinded by pride, prejudice, and carnal lusts, which formed a veil over their hearts, in addition to that which was thrown over the Mosaic law: and this veil remained, to close their minds against the truth, even after the light of the gospel had shown the real import of the legal ceremonies: so that, when the Jews read the Old Testament, the veil upon their hearts prevented them from understanding its true meaning, or deriving any spiritual benefit from it. For the veil is only done away in Christ.

SPIRITUAL TRANSFORMATION.—Ver. 17, 18. The Holy Spirit gives freedom from sin and Satan, from condemnation and servile principles, from the love of the world and the fear of men: he enables the believer to find liberty in willing obedience, and in spiritually worshipping God. And he gives him confidence and boldness in his conduct among men, without regarding their censures and frowns, or courting their friendship or applause; from conscious integrity and satisfaction of the Lord's acceptance. Thus all Christians, in proportion to their degree of faith and grace; being enlightened by the Spirit of the Lord, behold with open face, as in a mirror, by faith exercised on divine revelation, the glory of God in the person and work of his Son: and this glory beaming upon their souls with transforming efficacy, (as opaque objects reflect the rays of the sun, and so become in a measure luminous;) they are gradually changed into his image of righteousness, purity, truth, and love; growing more and more like their beloved Saviour, in judgment, disposition, affections, and conduct, from one degree of this glorious holiness to another; even as by the work "of the Spirit of the Lord;" or the Lord the Spirit, by which he new-creates the soul; and according to the measure, in which he discovers the glory of God in Christ, and enables a man to behold it with open face and fixed admiration: till at length the work will be perfected, when the view of faith, as in a mirror, shall be changed for immediate and perfect vision.—Scott.

CHAP. IV. SOURCE OF UNBELIEF.—Ver. 3, 4. If then, after all, the gospel, which the apostle preached so plainly, was covered with a veil, (as the Mosaic law had been;) if its truth, nature, and glory were hidden from any who heard it, such persons were evidently as yet in a lost estate, and in the most imminent danger of final perdition; and the veil must be upon their hearts, through the prevalence of pride, prejudice, and ungodly lusts. For Satan, the god of this world, whom all unconverted men worshipped and served in one way or other, prevailed to blind the understandings of numbers, who heard the gospel, and disbelieved it through love of sin and pride of heart: that so the "light of the gospel of the glory of Christ," (as the words most literally signify,) even the light which exhibits so clearly the glory of Christ, as the image of God, representing and displaying all divine perfections harmoniously exercised in his character and salvation, might not shine upon them, or within them.—Vast multitudes of Satan's subjects are kept from hearing the gospel; others hear, and for a time are blinded by the tempter to oppose or reject it; and his grand design is, at any rate, or by any means, to keep out this transforming light: yet many, who for a season were blinded, have been at length converted. But among the number of unbelievers the enemy is permitted, in awful judgment, to blind many to their perdition: and this was peculiarly to be expected by those, who closed their eyes to this light, when apostles were the preachers, and their doctrine was confirmed by evident and multiplied miracles.

SANCTIFIED AFFLICTION.—Ver. 17, 18. The apostles therefore considered their various trials to be "light affliction," which ought scarcely to be mentioned, being as nothing when compared with the end which they had in view: and the continuance of their sufferings, (though for many years,) was but for a moment when contrasted with eter-

In hope of immortal glory, 1, and in expectance of it, and of the general judgment, he laboureth to keep a good conscience, 9.

FOR we know, that, if [b]our earthly house[1] of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have [d]a building of God, [e]an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

2 For in this we groan, earnestly desiring to be [b]clothed upon with our house which is from heaven:

3 If so be that [i]being clothed, we shall not be found naked.

4 For we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened: not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, [n]that mortality might be swallowed up of life.

5 Now he that hath [o]wrought us for the self-same thing is God, who also hath given unto us [p]the earnest of the Spirit.

6 Therefore we are always confident,[2] knowing that, [r]whilst we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord:

7 (For [s]we walk by faith, not by sight:)

8 We are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be [u]present with the Lord.

9 Wherefore we *labour, that, whether present or absent, we may be [z]accepted of him.

10 For [a]we must all appear before the judgment-seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad.

12 For we commend not ourselves[3] again unto you, but give you occasion to glory on our behalf, that ye may have somewhat to answer them which glory in †appearance, and not in heart.

13 For whether we be beside ourselves, [k]it is to God: or whether we be sober, it is for your cause.

14 For [n]the love of Christ constraineth us;[4] because we thus judge, that if [q]one died for all, [r]then were all dead:

15 And that he died for all, that they which live should not [t]henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him which died for them, and rose again.

16 Wherefore, henceforth know we no man after the flesh; yea, though we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now henceforth know we him no more.

17 Therefore if any man [z]be in Christ, ‡he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new.

18 And [c]all things are of God, [d]who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ, and [e]hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation;

19 To wit, that [f]God was in Christ, [g]reconciling the world unto himself, [h]not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath [§]committed unto us the word of reconciliation.

nity. Moreover, they knew, by faith and experience, that these afflictions were working out for them an increase of future and eternal felicity: both as means, by which their souls were made partakers of the holiness of God, and rendered more capable of spiritual enjoyment; and as he would graciously and abundantly recompense those sufferings which they endured for his sake. The words here used are far more emphatical than any translation of them can be. There is a repetition of the word hyperbole; by which is generally meant a person's exceeding the limits of exact truth, in any animated description or narration: but in the subject, on which the apostle spoke, the boldest figures of speech must come short of the mark. If a man proceeded from one apparent hyperbole to another, and accumulated the most energetic terms as much as possible; he could not fully express the real excellency of that glory, honour, and immortality, in which the believer's sufferings would assuredly terminate. Compared with it, all temporal afflictions were levity itself, a momentary lightness of affliction; and earthly prosperity mere vanity and emptiness. This glory was substantial, weighty, durable, exceeding description and imagination; and human language must labour in vain to convey any suitable ideas of it. It would even have been an insupportable weight to them, until their bodies and souls were prepared by Omnipotence to sustain it. It was "a weight of glory," a fulness of God; a measure of knowledge, holiness, dignity, and felicity, in his favour, presence, and according to his glorious excellency and beauty; adequate to whatever they should be made capable of possessing and enjoying; and all this would be unchangeable and eternal. In this prospect the apostle and his brethren disregarded visible and sensible objects; they did not aim at worldly honours and advantages, they looked not at them with estimation or desire; but by faith they beheld, and in hope they sought, invisible glories as their great object.—Scott.

CHAP. V. OUR HAPPY IMMORTALITY.—Ver. 1—3. Let us take notice, 1. What heaven is in the eye and hope of a believer; he looks upon it as a house, or habitation; a dwelling-place, a resting-place, a hiding-place; our Father's house, where there are many mansions, and our everlasting home: it is a house in the heavens, in that high and holy place, which as far excels all the palaces of this earth, as the heavens are high above the earth: it is a "building of God," whose Builder and Maker is God, and therefore is worthy of its Author; the happiness of the future state is what God hath prepared for them that love him: it is eternal in the heavens, "everlasting habitations," not like the earthly tabernacles, the poor cottages of clay, in which our souls now dwell, that are mouldering and decaying, "whose foundations are in the dust." 2. When it is expected this happiness shall be enjoyed—immediately after death; so soon as "our house of this earthly tabernacle is dissolved." Note, (1.) That the body, this "earthly house," is but a tabernacle, that must be dissolved shortly; the nails or pins will be drawn, and the cords be loosed, and then the body returns to dust as it was. (2.) When this comes to pass, then comes the house "not made with hands."

THE JUDGMENT.—Ver. 10. There are many things relating to this great matter, that should awe the best of men into the utmost care and diligence in religion; the certainty of this judgment, for we must appear; the universality of it, for we must all appear; the great Judge, before whose judgment-seat we must appear, the Lord Jesus Christ, who himself will appear in flaming fire; the recompense to be then received, for things done in the body; which will be very particular unto every one; and very just, according to what we have done, whether "good or bad." The apostle calls this awful judgment "the terror of the Lord," ver. 11; and, by the consideration thereof, was excited to persuade men to repent, and live a holy life, that, when Christ shall appear terribly, they may appear before him comfortably.—Henry.

THE NEW CREATURE.—Ver. 17. The judgment, experience, and principles, which the apostle had stated, should not be regarded as peculiar to himself, but as the standard of genuine Christianity: therefore, if any man, whether Jew or Gentile, was "in Christ," as a justified believer, he was also "a new creature," or a new creation of God: for the marginal reading "let him be a new creature," does not accord to the rest of the verse, "old things are passed away," or "have passed away," &c. By spiritual illumination, and its invariable effects, a new judgment had been produced, with new inclinations, affections, and purposes, from which new words and actions must proceed. Thus old desires, intentions, expectations, connections, and satisfactions, passed away and were superseded; for, behold, by the marvellous operation of divine grace, all things were become new!—Scott.

CHAP. VI. THE PRESENT TIME.—Ver. 2. The present time is the only proper season to accept of grace that is offered, and improve that grace which is afforded; "NOW is the accepted time, NOW is the day of salvation." The gospel-day is the day of salvation, the means of grace the means of salvation, the offers of the gospel the offers of salvation, and the present time the proper time to accept of these offers; To-day, while it is called to-day. The morrow is none of ours; we know not what will be on the morrow, nor where we shall be; and we should remember that present seasons of grace are but short and uncertain, and cannot be recalled when they are past. It is therefore our duty and interest to improve them while we enjoy them, and no less than our salvation depends upon our so doing.—Henry.

5 For, when we were come into Macedonia, our flesh had no rest, but we were troubled on every side: [s]without were fightings, within were [t]fears.

6 Nevertheless God, [u]that comforteth those that are cast down, comforted us by the coming of Titus;

7 And not by his coming only, but by the consolation wherewith he was comforted in you, when he told us your [a]earnest desire, your mourning, your fervent mind toward me; so that I rejoiced the more.

8 For though I made you sorry with a letter, I do not repent, [c]though I did repent:[2] for I perceive that the same epistle hath made you sorry, though it were but for a season.

9 Now [f]I rejoice, not that ye were made sorry, but that ye sorrowed to repentance: for ye were made sorry [*]after a godly manner, that ye might receive damage by us in nothing.

10 For godly sorrow worketh [h]repentance to salvation not to be repented of: but [i]the sorrow of the world worketh death.

11 For, behold, this self-same thing, [k]that ye sorrowed after a godly sort, what carefulness it wrought in you, yea, what clearing of yourselves, yea, what indignation, yea, what fear, yea, what vehement desire, yea, what [q]zeal, yea, what revenge! In all things ye have [s]approved yourselves to be clear in this matter.

12 Wherefore, though I wrote unto you, [f]I did it not for his cause that had done the wrong, nor for his cause that suffered wrong, but [u]that our care for you in the sight of God might appear unto you.

13 Therefore [x]we were comforted in your comfort: yea, and exceedingly the more joyed we for the joy of Titus,[3] [y]because his spirit was refreshed by you all.

14 For if I have boasted any thing to him of you, I am not ashamed; but as [a]we spake all things to you in truth, even so our boasting, which I made before Titus, is found a truth.

15 And his [†]inward affection is more abundant toward you, whilst he remembereth [b]the obedience of you all, how [c]with fear and trembling ye received him.

16 I rejoice therefore [d]that I have confidence in you in all things.

MOREOVER, brethren, [a]we do you to wit of [b]the grace of God bestowed on [c]the churches of Macedonia:

2 How that [d]in a great trial of affliction,

CHRISTIAN MARRIAGE.—Ver. 14—18. The apostle especially entreated his beloved children not to contract marriages, or form any intimate connections, with their unbelieving neighbours, to which carnal motives might induce them. For this would resemble that unequal yoking of different animals, which the law of Moses forbade, and would tend to make them uneasy to each other. Thus, if believers connected themselves with unbelievers, their views, principles, pursuits, and satisfactions must be discordant. The believer would be retarded and interrupted in his religious exercises, or his various duties in the family, in the church, and to mankind; or drawn aside from them. And what cordial and comfortable intercourse could be maintained between the righteousness of the one, and the unrighteousness of the other party? What fellowship could there be, in the most important matters, between the children of the light and those of darkness? What agreement could be expected between the servant of Christ, and one in whom Belial, (or Satan,) who had cast off the yoke of obedience to God, abode and wrought? And what part and share could a believer take in the unhallowed pursuits and pleasures of an unbeliever, who despised the blessed gospel of Christ? For righteousness and unrighteousness, light and darkness, Christ and Belial, might as easily associate in cordiality, as the believer and the infidel: all intercourse between them must be attended with restraint, disguise, or jarring sentiments. Such persons would live in different elements; they would draw different ways, and counteract each other's purposes: so that the unbeliever must be a cross, a snare, a clog, and a hinderance to the believer. In particular, what agreement could subsist between the temple of God and idols? Would JEHOVAH endure to have these hated rivals placed even in his own temple? Now Christians were the temple of God; his special residence, consecrated by the Holy Spirit. For thus he had promised of old to believing Israelites, and with a view to the days of Christ; that "he would dwell in them," or "take up his indwelling in them;" "and walk in them," as a man in his habitation, and so "be their God," &c. Let them therefore value this special relation to God; and as far as their relative and social duties would permit, let them separate from their heathen neighbours, and be careful to touch no unclean thing, or any thing that related to idolatry or iniquity. Eating things offered to idols, or with idolaters in their festivals, seems to be specially intended.—Scott.

CHAP. VII. HOLINESS.—Ver. 1. This verse is evidently connected with the subject of the former chapter. The promises, which God has given in the gospel, should excite those who hear them to aspire after holiness. All sin is "filthiness" in the judgment of God, because contrary to his holy nature and law. Sensual lusts may be called "filthiness of the flesh:" while pride, envy, revenge, avarice, and idolatry, may be intended by the "filthiness of the spirit:" or the former may signify the outward expression of sin by the body, in word or deed; the latter its inward workings in the imagination and affections. Aspiring after acceptance, adoption, and communion with God, and depending on his promises, Christians ought to cleanse themselves from all this filthiness: constantly watching against all evil thoughts, desires, words, and works; mortifying every corrupt propensity, renouncing every sinful interest or pleasure, seeking for an increase of all spiritual dispositions, and abounding in every good word and action. In this manner they ought to proceed in perfecting holiness, and in seeking entire conformity to the holy image and law of God, from reverence of his authority, fear of his displeasure, and an habitual sense of his holy heart-searching presence. Thus they should persevere in unremitted endeavours after perfect holiness as long as they live, because their highest attainments leave them short of perfection.—Scott.

TRUE REPENTANCE.—Ver. 10. Observe here, 1. The antecedent of true repentance is "godly sorrow," that "worketh" repentance. It is not repentance itself, but it is a good preparation to repentance, and in some sense the cause that produces repentance. The offender had great sorrow, he was in danger of being "swallowed up with overmuch sorrow;" and the society was greatly sorrowful, which before was "puffed up:" and this sorrow of theirs was after a "godly manner," or according to God; (as it is in the original;) it was according to the will of God, tending to the glory of God, and wrought by the Spirit of God. It was a godly sorrow, because a sorrow for sin, as an offence against God, an instance of ingratitude, and a forfeiture of God's favour. There is a great difference between this sorrow of a godly sort, and the "sorrow of this world." Godly sorrow produces repentance and reformation, and will end in salvation; but worldly sorrow "worketh death." The sorrows of worldly men for worldly things will bring down grey hairs the sooner to the grave; and such a sorrow even for sin as Judas had, will have fatal consequences, as his had, which wrought death. Note, (1.) Repentance will be attended with salvation. Therefore, (2.) True penitents will never repent that they have repented, or of any thing that was conducive thereto. (3.) Humiliation and godly sorrow are previously necessary in order to repentance, and both of them are from God, the Giver of all grace. 2. The happy fruits and consequences of true repentance are mentioned, ver. 11, and those "fruits that are meet for repentance," are the best evidence of it; where the heart is changed, the life and actions will be changed too.—Henry.

CHAP. VIII. GENUINE LIBERALITY.—Ver. 1—5. Paul commends the charity of the Macedonians, and sets it forth with good advantage. He tells them, 1. They were but in [e]the abundance of their joy, and [f]their deep poverty, abounded unto [g]the riches of their *liberality.

3 For [h]to their power, (I bear record,) yea, and beyond their power, they were willing of themselves;

4 Praying us with much entreaty that we would receive the gift, and take upon us the fellowship of [m]the ministering to the saints.

5 And this they did, not as we hoped; but [n]first gave their own selves to the Lord, and unto us by the will of God:

6 Insomuch that we desired Titus, that as he had begun, so he would also finish in you the same [t]grace also.

7 Therefore, as ye abound in every thing, in [r]faith, and utterance,[1] and [s]knowledge, and in all diligence, and [t]in your love to us; [u]see that ye abound in [x]this grace also.

8 I speak not by commandment, but by occasion of the forwardness of others, and to prove the sincerity of your love.

9 For ye know [b]the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that, [c]though he was rich, yet [d]for your sakes he became poor, [f]that ye through his poverty might be rich.

10 And herein I give my advice: for this is expedient for you, who have begun before, not only to do, but also to be ‡forward a year ago.

11 Now therefore perform the doing of it; that as there was a readiness to will, so there may be a performance also out of that which ye have.

12 For if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not.

13 For I mean not that other men be eased, and you burdened;

14 But by an equality, that now at this time your abundance may be a supply for their want, that their abundance also may be a supply for your want; that there may be equality:

15 As it is written, He that had gathered much had nothing over; and he that had gathered little had no lack.

16 But [n]thanks be to God, which put the same earnest care into the heart of Titus for you.

17 For indeed he [p]accepted the exhortation; [q]but, being more forward, of his own accord he went unto you.

18 And we have sent with him the brother,[2] whose praise is in the gospel [s]throughout all the churches;

19 And not that only, but who was also chosen of the churches to travel with us with this [§]grace, which is administered by us, [u]to the glory of the same Lord, and declaration of your ready mind:

20 Avoiding this, that no man should blame us in this abundance which is administered by us:

21 Providing for honest things, [z]not only in the sight of the Lord, but also in the sight of men.

22 And we have sent with them our brother,[3] whom we have oftentimes proved diligent in many things, but now much more diligent, upon the great confidence which [1]I have in you.

23 Whether any do enquire of Titus, he [c]is my partner and fellow-helper concerning you; or our brethren be enquired of, they are [e]the messengers of the churches, and the glory of Christ.

24 Wherefore [f]shew ye to them, and before the churches, the proof of your love, and of our boasting on your behalf.

CHAP IX.

He sheweth why he sent Titus, 1, and stirreth them up to be bountiful in alms, 6, which yield them a bountiful increase, 10.

FOR as touching the ministering to the saints, it is superfluous for me to write to you:

2 For I know [d]the forwardness of your mind, for which I boast of you[1] to them of Macedonia, that Achaia was ready a year ago; and your zeal hath [g]provoked very many.

3 Yet have I sent the brethren, lest our boasting of you should be in vain in this behalf; that, as I said, ye may be ready:

4 Lest haply if [k]they of Macedonia come with me, and find you unprepared, we (that we say not, you) should [l]be ashamed in this same confident boasting.

5 Therefore I thought it necessary to exhort the brethren, that they would go before unto you, and make up beforehand your *bounty, †whereof ye had notice before, that the same might be ready, as a matter of bounty, and not as of covetousness.

6 But this I say, [o]He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully.

7 Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity: for [q]God loveth a cheerful giver.

8 And [r]God is able to make [s]all grace abound toward you; that ye, [t]always having all sufficiency in all things, [u]may abound to every good work:

9 (As it is written, He hath dispersed abroad; he hath given to the poor: [y]his righteousness[2] remaineth for ever.

10 Now [z]he that ministereth seed to the sower, both minister bread for your food, and [a]multiply your seed sown, [b]and increase the fruits of your righteousness:)

a low condition, and themselves in distress, yet they contributed to the relief of others. "They were in great tribulation and deep poverty." It was a time of great affliction with them, as may be seen, Acts xvi. 17. The Christians in these parts met with ill-treatment, which had reduced them to "deep poverty;" yet, as they had "abundance of joy" in the midst of tribulation, they abounded in their liberality. 2. They gave very largely, with "the riches of liberality," that is, as liberally as if they had been rich. It was a large contribution they made, all things considered; it was "according to," yea, "beyond, their power," as much, if not more than could well be expected from them. Note, Though men may condemn the indiscretion, yet God will accept the pious zeal, of those, who in real works of piety and charity go rather beyond their power. 3. They were very ready and forward to this good work. "They were willing of themselves," and were so far from needing that Paul should urge and press them with many arguments, that they "prayed him with much entreaty to receive the gift." 4. Their charity was founded in true piety, and this was the great commendation of it; they performed this good work in a right method; "first they gave themselves to the Lord, and then" they gave "unto us" their contributions, "by the will of God," that is, according as it was the will of God they should do, or to be disposed of as the will of God should be, and for his glory.—Henry.

Christ's Condescension.—Ver. 9. Paul was persuaded, that they were spiritually and experimentally acquainted with the astonishing "grace" and love of Christ to sinners, "that though he was rich" in all the glory, authority, sufficiency, and felicity of the Godhead; yet "for their sakes," who were in themselves poor, guilty, polluted, and perishing sinners, "he had become poor," by assuming human nature, being born of a poor virgin, in a stable; living in poverty and affliction for many years on earth; and at length entirely impoverishing himself, as it were, to ransom their souls by his sacrifice on the cross. All this he submitted to most freely, in unspeakable compassion and condescension, that they by his poverty might be made rich with all the blessings of salvation; the mighty debt of sin having been thus discharged, and the forfeited inheritance of eternal life redeemed, with all things pertaining to their everlasting glory and felicity: and surely they could want no other argument to prevail with them to part, largely and freely, with their riches, for the relief and support of his poor brethren! In the judgment of the apostle, "Jesus was rich before he was poor;" and that it was voluntarily and graciously that he became poor for our sakes, &c.: but he was born in a stable, and educated in poverty; he was poor all his life, and had not where to lay his head, and only became rich after his death; and therefore, if he was no more than a man, he certainly "was poor before he was rich, and not rich before he was poor."

Equality of Gift.—Ver. 10—15. Let every one of them proportion his contribution to his circumstances; for a small sum would be equally acceptable from a poorer person, as a larger from his more wealthy brother: and indeed, in every case, where a willing mind, to honour and obey Christ from humble love to him, was the principle of a man's actions; his services would meet with a gracious acceptance; nor would more be expected from him than he was enabled to do. To express and evidence this willing mind, the proportion, before recommended, would be necessary: yet it would not be proper to urge any man to exceed what he was thus disposed to give; lest in vying with his brethren he should entrench upon other duties. Nor did the apostle mean to relieve the poor Christians in Judea by burdening the Corinthians: or even to exact from them, and exempt other churches; so as to give rest to the one, and affliction to the other. He only desired that some measure of equality might be preserved among brethren in Christ.—Scott.

Chap. IX. Character of Christian Liberality.—Ver. 1—7. Now as to the manner in which the apostle would have the Corinthians give, observe, 1. It should be bountifully: this was intimated, that a liberal contribution was expected, a matter of bounty, not what savoured of covetousness; and he offers to their consideration that men who expect a good return at harvest are not wont to pinch and spare in sowing their seed, for the return usually is proportionable to what they sow. 2. It should be deliberately: "Every man according as he purposes in his heart." Works of charity, like other good works, should be done with thought and design; whereas some do good only by accident. 3. It should be freely, whatever we give, be it more or less: "not grudgingly, or of necessity," but cheerfully. Persons sometimes will give merely to satisfy the importunity of those who ask their charity, and what they give is in a manner squeezed or forced from them, and this unwillingness spoils all they do.

Its Reward.—Ver. 8—11. Here the apostle tells the Corinthians, They themselves would be no losers by what they gave in charity. This may serve to obviate a secret objection in the minds of many against this good work, who are ready to think they may want what they give away: but such should consider that what is given to the poor in a right manner is far from being lost; as the precious seed, which is cast into the ground, is not lost, though it is buried there for a time; for it will spring up and bear fruit; the sower shall receive it again with increase, ver. 6. Such good returns may they expect who give freely and liberally in charity. For, (1.) God loveth a cheerful giver; and what may not they hope to receive who are the objects of the divine love? Can a man be a loser by doing that with which God is pleased? May not such a one be sure that he shall some way or other be a gainer? Nay, are not the love and favour of God better than all 15 [n]Thanks be unto God for [o]his unspeakable gift.

CHAP. X.

Paul's spiritual might and authority, 1. Not to stretch beyond our measure, 12.

NOW I Paul myself beseech you [c]by the meekness and gentleness of Christ, who in *presence am base among you, but being absent [e]am bold toward you:

2 But I beseech you, that I may not be bold when I am present with that confidence wherewith I think to be bold against some, which [f]think of us as if [g]we walked according to the flesh.

3 For though we walk in the flesh,[1] [i]we do not war after the flesh:

4 (For [k]the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but [l]mighty [‡]through God [m]to the pulling down of strong holds;)

5 Casting [n]down [§]imaginations, [o]and every high thing[2] that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to [r]the obedience of Christ;

6 And having in a readiness to revenge all disobedience, when your obedience is fulfilled.

7 Do ye look on things after the outward appearance? [x]If any man trust to himself that he is Christ's, let him of himself think this again, that, as he is Christ's, even so are we Christ's.

8 For though I should boast somewhat more of our authority, (which the Lord hath given us for edification, and not for your destruction,) I should not be ashamed;

9 That I may not seem as if I would [b]terrify you by letters.

10 For his letters [t](say they) are weighty and powerful; but his bodily presence is weak,[3] and his speech contemptible.

11 Let such an one think this, that such as we are in word by letters when we are absent, such will we be also in deed when we are present.

12 For we dare not make ourselves of the number, or compare ourselves with some that commend themselves: but they, measuring themselves by themselves, and comparing themselves among themselves, *are not wise.

13 But we will not boast of things without our measure, but [h]according to the measure of the [†]rule which God hath distributed to us, a measure to reach even unto you.

14 For we stretch[4] not ourselves beyond our measure, as though we reached not unto you; for we are come as far as to you also in preaching [k]the gospel of Christ:

15 Not [l]boasting of things without our measure, that is, of other men's labours; but having hope, when your faith is increased, that we shall be [‡]enlarged by you according to our rule abundantly,

16 To preach the gospel in the regions beyond you, and not to boast in another man's [§]line of things made ready to our hand.

17 But [n]he that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord.

18 For not he that commendeth himself is approved, [q]but whom the Lord commendeth.

CHAP. XI.

Paul, being forced, entereth into a commendation of himself, and comparison with the other apostles.

WOULD to God[1] ye could bear with me a little in my folly: and indeed *bear with me.

2 For I am [d]jealous over you with godly jealousy: for I have espoused you to one husband, that I may present you as [g]a chaste virgin to Christ.

3 But I fear, lest by any means, [i]as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtilty, so your minds should be corrupted from [i]the simplicity that is in Christ.

4 For if he that cometh [m]preacheth another Jesus, whom we have not preached, or if ye [n]receive another Spirit, which ye have not received, or another gospel, which ye have not accepted, ye might well bear [†]with him.

5 For I suppose I was not a whit behind the very chiefest apostles.

6 But though I be rude in speech,[2] yet not in knowledge: but we have been thoroughly made manifest among you in all things.

7 Have I committed an offence in abasing myself, that ye might be exalted, because I have preached to you the gospel of God freely?

2 "Yea, though my style be plain, like that of an ordinary person," without the flourishes of human rhetoric. From his speeches and epistles, it is evident the apostle was no stranger to rhetoric; but he purposely avoided the pomp of Greek eloquence, and the studied arts of human oratory, in preaching (see 1 Cor. ii. 4, 5). His Hebraisms also might not be acceptable. Some have thought that he had perhaps a stammering or defect in his voice.—Fell.

other things, "better than life" itself? (2.) God is able to make our charity redound to our advantage. We have no reason to distrust the goodness of God, and surely we have no reason to question his power; he is "able to make all grace abound" towards us, and to abound in us; to give a large increase of spiritual and temporal good things. He can make us to have a sufficiency in all things, to be content with what we have; to make up what we give; to make us able to give yet more; as it is written (Ps. cxii. 9,) concerning the charitable man, "He hath dispersed abroad. He hath given to the poor. His righteousness," that is, his almsgiving, "endureth for ever." The honour of it is lasting, the reward of it eternal, and he is still able to live comfortably himself, and to give liberally to others.—Henry.

Chap. X. Power of the Gospel.—Ver. 1—6. The weapons which the apostles employed in this spiritual warfare were not carnal; nor did they produce their effect by their own natural energy; but they were mighty through God, whose power wrought by them to demolish the strongholds of Satan, by which he had maintained his empire of darkness, idolatry, and wickedness in the world. For the preaching of the gospel, confirmed by miracles, and accompanied by the power of the Holy Spirit, pulled down these strongholds, dispersed Satan's garrisons, delivered his captives, and subverted his authority, by diffusing the knowledge of God, of his commandments, and of his salvation, among men. Thus the ministers of Christ went on, casting down men's vain imaginations, presumptuous speculations, and carnal reasonings; exposing the falsehood and folly of that proud philosophy which led to scepticism and atheism; as well as of those fables which supported the stupid idolatry of the populace; and showing also the worthlessness of pharisaical forms and duties, and of every scheme of religion which flattered men into a good opinion of themselves. So that their doctrine was rendered effectual to "cast down every high thing," every self-confident notion, every proud objection, or ambitious purpose; and all that self-sufficiency, impenitence, obstinacy in rebellion, unbelief, and independence of spirit, which exalted themselves in men's hearts against the humbling, holy knowledge, worship, and service of God, and enslaved men to idolatry, impiety, infidelity, and vice. When these were cast down, and a man was brought to "the light of the knowledge of the glory of God, in the face of Jesus Christ;" and to the exercise of repentance and faith; he found every imagination, reasoning, affection, and purpose of his heart, captivated by love to his divine Saviour: and being thus conquered by grace, and held captive by love, he became, by a sweet constraint, obedient to his teaching and command; and from his inmost soul he was thenceforth the willing subject of Christ in all his ordinances and commandments.

The Apostle's Humility.—Ver. 12—16. The favourers of the false teachers at Corinth might deem it presumption in Paul to rank himself with such wise, eminent, and eloquent men as they were; and he seems, in an ironical manner, to refer to this opinion. But he assured them that he could not conscientiously copy their example of ostentatious boastings and self-condemnation; for they, by measuring themselves, and their endowments and performances, with their own erroneous judgment of excellency, and with those of each other, and thus comparing themselves with such men as they were; without bringing their characters, gifts, and ministry, to the proper standard, plainly proved that they were defective in wisdom and self-knowledge, and far from the way of attaining them. But the apostle and his friends would not boast of their qualifications or services in this vague and unmeasurable manner; but would speak of them, with reference to the true standard, even that rule, or line which marked out the services to which the providence and commandment of the Lord had called them.—Scott.

Chap. XI. The Gospel in its Simplicity.—Ver. 1—6. The apostle feared lest, by any means, the false teachers should draw them aside from their simple dependence on Christ, and love and obedience to him, into a false confidence, carnal affections, or disobedience; lest they should be deluded from that purity of doctrine, that spiritual frame of mind, and that honourable conduct, which became this high relation: even as Eve in Eden was beguiled by Satan, in the form of a serpent, to seek happiness in departing from God, and disobedience to him; being deceived by specious and subtle pretences and insinuations. The Corinthians were peculiarly exposed to this danger from those, who puffed them up with an idea of their extraordinary knowledge; and seduced them, by artful reasonings, to seek liberty and pleasure in other things, besides obeying, and walking with, God. Indeed, if any man could possibly have preached another Jesus, a more gracious and precious Saviour, than Paul had declared to them; or could have conferred on them another Spirit, whose gifts and influences were more excellent than those, which the Holy Spirit, through Paul's ministry, had bestowed on them: or in short, if another and more suitable gospel had been preached, than that which they had embraced; there might have been some reason for their bearing with the new teachers, or even preferring them. Or, even in that case, it would have become them to have borne with the infirmities of their first instructor in Christianity.—Scott.

Satan in the Guise of an Angel.—Ver. 13. The false apostles are charged as "deceitful workers;" and that upon this account, because they would "transform themselves" into the likeness of the apostles of Christ, and though they were the "ministers of Satan," would seem to be the "ministers of righteousness." They would be as indus-

9 And when I was present with you, and wanted, [y]I was chargeable to no man: for that which was lacking to me the brethren which came from Macedonia supplied; [s] and in all things I have kept myself from being burdensome unto you, and so will I keep myself.

He commendeth his apostleship, not by his revelations, 1, but by his infirmities, 9; blaming them for forcing this boasting, 11.

IT is not expedient for me doubtless to glory: [*]I will come to [c]visions and revelations of the Lord.

2 I [d]knew a man in Christ about fourteen years ago, (whether in the body, I cannot tell; or whether out of the body, I cannot tell: God knoweth,) such an one caught up to the third heaven.[1]

4 How that he was caught up into [k]paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which it is not [†]lawful for a man to utter.

5 Of such an one will I glory: yet of myself I will not glory, but in mine infirmities.

6 For though I would desire to glory, I shall not be a fool; for I will say the truth: but now I forbear, lest any man should think of me above that which he seeth me to be, or that he heareth of me.

7 And lest I should be exalted above measure through the abundance of the revelations, there was given to me [s]a thorn in the flesh,[2] the [t]messenger of Satan [u]to buffet me, lest I should be exalted above measure.

trious and as generous in promoting error as the apostles were in preaching truth; they would endeavour as much to undermine the kingdom of Christ as the apostle did to establish it. There were counterfeit "prophets" under the Old Testament, who wore the garb, and learned the language, of the prophets of the Lord. So there were counterfeit apostles under the New Testament, who seemed in many respects like the true apostles of Christ. And "no marvel;" (says the apostle;) hypocrisy is a thing not to be much wondered at in this world, especially when we consider the great influence Satan has upon the minds of many, who "rules in the hearts of the children of disobedience." As he can turn himself into any shape, and put on almost any form, and look sometimes "like an angel of light," in order to promote his "kingdom of darkness," so he will teach his ministers and instruments to do the same. But it follows, "Their end is according to their works;" ver. 15, the end will discover them to be "deceitful workers," and their work will end in ruin and destruction.—Henry.

THE APOSTLE'S TRIALS.—Ver. 23—27. The other apostles had indeed been scourged and imprisoned for Christ's sake: yet Paul had endured this pain and disgrace more frequently than they, and had been in danger of death on far more occasions. The Jews had scourged him five times, with the utmost severity of which their law and custom allowed; for they were forbidden to exceed forty stripes, and, for fear of a mistake, they always confined themselves to thirty-nine. He had also been thrice scourged by the command of the Roman magistrates, though contrary to their law. He had once been stoned and left for dead, but had been miraculously restored to life. He had thrice been wrecked in his different voyages, and at one time he continued a night and day in the sea, probably on a part of the wreck, in extreme cold, suffering, and peril. This was previous to his voyage to Rome, when he was again wrecked; and many of his other sufferings, recorded in the Acts of the Apostles, were subsequent to the writing of this epistle. He often journeyed from one region to another, amidst hardships and perils: sometimes his life had been endangered in passing rivers or deep waters, that lay in his way; sometimes by robbers, who attempted to plunder and murder him: frequently the Jews assaulted him, being enraged by his preaching to the Gentiles; then the Gentiles attempted to slay him, because his doctrine undermined their idolatry: when he was in any city, his life was in danger from the violence of the mob, or the iniquity of the rulers; in passing deserts, the wild beasts or wicked men, who infested them, exposed him to equal peril; when crossing the sea, he was in danger of pirates and tempests; and even when among professed Christians, he was in peril from false brethren. Thus his life was spent in weariness, pain, and suffering; his incessant toil in preaching the gospel, conversing with the people from house to house, writing his epistles, earning his bread, and attending to his devotions, frequently forced him to pass whole nights without rest. Often he was exposed to hunger and thirst, through extreme indigence; and when he had food, his labours and religious duties led him to abstain from it. He was sometimes exposed to cold from the inclemency of the weather, and want of proper accommodations; and often had not suitable and decent raiment to cover him, when he was called to appear in public. Yet he still persevered, without fainting in his "work of faith and labour of love." Beside those things which were without, and mainly related to the apostle's bodily sufferings, his mind was worn down by a multiplicity of affairs, which came upon him daily, with the violence of an armed multitude, by the care of all the churches of the Gentiles planted by him and others: this lay upon him, filled him with constant solicitude, and employed him perpetually in forming and executing plans to promote their peace and prosperity, to counteract the designs of false teachers, and to order all their concerns for the best.—Scott.

CHAP. XII. PAUL IN THE THIRD HEAVEN.—Ver. 1—6. In mentioning his extraordinary vision, or revelation, he modestly spoke in the third person; but there can be no doubt that he meant himself. He knew a man in Christ, who fourteen years before had a most extraordinary vision. Whether he was in the body or not, at that time, God alone knew; but his outward senses were entirely closed, and his whole perception was by the powers of his mind: but whether heavenly things were brought down to him, so to speak, as his body lay entranced, (as the case often seems to have been with the ancient prophets,) or whether his soul was dislodged from the body, for the time, and actually taken up into heaven; or whether he was taken up in body and soul together, he knew not. This language evidently proves, that the apostle most firmly believed the soul to be distinct from the body, and capable of perception, activity, and enjoyment in a state of separation. However these things might be, this man was suddenly caught up into the third, or the highest heaven; above the lower region of the air and the starry heavens, to the place where the Lord immediately reveals his presence and glory, and receives the adoration of his heavenly hosts. Yea, this man, with whom he was so intimately acquainted, was taken up into Paradise, the place of felicity, of which Eden was the type; and there heard such words as man could not speak if he might, and as it would have been unlawful to speak if he could; it being the purpose of God, that the discoveries made of himself in that glorious world, should not be more fully declared on earth, than they had been.

tions, in distresses, [f]for Christ's sake: [g]for when I am weak, then am I strong.

11 I am become a fool in glorying; ye have compelled me: for I ought to have been commended of you; [h]for in nothing am I behind the very chiefest apostles, though I be nothing.

12 Truly [i]the signs of an apostle were wrought among you in all patience, in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds.

13 For what is it wherein ye were inferior to other churches, except it be that [m]I myself was not burdensome to you? forgive me this wrong.

14 Behold, the third time[4] I am ready to come to you; and I will not be burdensome to you; [p]for I seek not yours, but you: for the children[5] ought not to lay up for the parents, but the parents for the children.

15 And I [r]will very gladly spend and be spent for ‡you; [s]though the more abundantly I love you, the less I be loved.

16 But be it so, I did not burden you: nevertheless, being crafty, I caught you with guile.[6]

17 Did [x]I make a gain of you by any of them whom I sent unto you?

18 I desired Titus, and with him I sent a brother: did Titus make a gain of you? [z]walked we not in the same spirit? walked we not [a]in the same steps?

19 Again, think ye that we excuse ourselves unto you? we speak before God in Christ: [d]but we do all things, dearly beloved, for your edifying.

20 For I fear,[7] lest, when I come, [f]I shall not find you such as I would, [g]and that I shall be found unto you such as ye would not; lest there be debates, envyings, wraths, strifes, backbitings, whisperings, swellings, tumults:

21 And lest, when I come again, [l]my God will humble me among you, and that I shall bewail many which have sinned already, [o]and have not repented of the uncleanness, and fornication, and lasciviousness which they have committed.

THIS is the third time I am coming to you. [b]In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established.

2 I told you before, and foretell you, as if I were present, the second time; and being absent, now I write to them which heretofore have sinned, and to all other, that, if I come again, I will not spare:

3 Since [f]ye seek a proof of Christ speaking in me,[1] which to you-ward is not weak, but is mighty in you.

4 For though [i]he was crucified through weakness, yet he liveth by the power of God: for [1]we also are weak *in him, [m]but we shall live with him by the power of God toward you.

5 Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith;[2] prove your own selves: know ye not your own selves, how that [q]Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates?

6 But I trust that ye shall know that we are not reprobates.

7 Now I pray to God that ye do no evil; not that we should appear approved, but that ye should do that which is [x]honest, though we be as reprobates.

8 For we can do nothing against the truth, but for the truth.

9 For we are glad when we are weak, and ye are strong: and this also we wish, even your perfection.[3]

10 Therefore I write these things being absent, lest being present I should use sharpness, according to the power which the Lord hath given me to edification, and not to destruction.

11 Finally, brethren, [e]farewell. Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, [l]live in peace; and [k]the God of love and peace shall be with you.

12 Greet one another with an holy kiss.

13 [n]All the saints salute you.

14 The [p]grace of the Lord Jesus Christ,[4] [q]and the love of God, [r]and the communion of the Holy Ghost, be with you all. Amen.

¶ The second epistle to the Corinthians was written from Philippi, a city of Macedonia, by Titus and Lucas.

to the Holy Spirit, that our curiosity should be fully gratified in this respect, he would have led the apostle to be more explicit; and the general statement is more suited for edification, than if the particular trial had been specified. A thorn, fixed and rankling in the flesh, would give great and constant pain: and some particular trials of the apostle, which began, or were augmented, after this remarkable vision, caused a continual uneasiness to his mind, of a similar nature. Probably, these arose from the personal defects, of which he was conscious, which gave his enemies, especially the false apostles, (who were "ministers," or "messengers" of Satan,) a colour for reviling and deriding him. These seemed to obstruct his usefulness, and continually reminded him of his weakness and inability to do any thing as of himself. They were exceedingly uneasy and mortifying to him; and doubtless they afforded Satan an opportunity of tempting him to impatience, and discouraging him in his labours; as well as of exciting carnal men to insult and injure him.—Being thus constantly harassed and buffeted, he thrice besought the Lord Jesus, that this thorn in the flesh might be removed from him, (as Jesus had thrice besought his Father, that "the cup might pass from him;") and that the messenger of Satan might be compelled to depart: supposing that otherwise he should not be able to go on with his ministry, with any encouraging prospect of success. This seems to prove, that he did not mean his persecutions, but those infirmities which emboldened his enemies.—Scott.

The Apostle's Disinterestedness.—Ver. 14. He was not willing to be burthensome to them, nor did he seek "theirs," but "them." He says, ver. 13, he "had not been" burthensome to them for the time past, and tells them, he "would not be" burthensome to them for the time to come, when he should come to them: he spared their purses, and did not covet their money; I "seek not yours, but you." He sought not to enrich himself, but to save their souls: he did not desire to make a property of them to himself, but to gain them over to Christ, whose servant he was. Note, Those who aim at clothing themselves with the fleece of the flock, and take no care of the sheep, are hirelings, and not good shepherds.—Henry.

Practical Observations. When we cannot avoid speaking such things concerning ourselves, as seem to imply boasting; we should use every method of rendering it consistent with modesty and humility. Those things which are seen and heard in the heaven of heavens, are so far above our present conceptions, that the most eminent believers could not sustain the view of them; except they were cast into such an ecstacy, as not to know whether they were in the body, or out of the body: nor can human language make the result of such visions intelligible to mortal ears. While this should teach us to enlarge our expectations of the "glory that shall be revealed;" it should also render us contented with our more ordinary method of learning the truth and will of God.—Scott.

CHAP. XIII. Self-Examination. Ver. 5—6. Instead of presumptuously judging the apostle, and demanding his credentials, it behoved the persons concerned, and indeed all of them, to examine themselves, whether they really "were in the faith," or not; whether they had indeed more than a formal profession and a dead faith. Let them then prove their tempers, conduct, and experience, by the standard of God's word, as gold is assayed or tried by the touchstone; for he feared that many of them were self-deceived in this important concern. After all their boasting of knowledge, would they continue ignorant of themselves, of their own state, character, and hearts? or that Jesus Christ was indeed in them, by the indwelling of his Spirit; by his image renewed on their souls; by his kingdom set up in their hearts; and by possessing their supreme love and affection; unless they were to that day mere professors, who would at last be disapproved and rejected, as the dross is by the refiner?—Some expositors render the clause "Christ is among you, except," &c., but this conveys no precise idea. The apostle could not mean to intimate, that Christ was not at all present among the Christians at Corinth; for this would have contradicted all the declarations which he made concerning them, as a church; and the presence of Christ among them in this sense, could not prove that those individuals, whom he warned, were true believers, and approved by God: but this was the precise point, which he wished them personally to examine. In determining this question, they would also decide another, as far as they were individually concerned; for as many of them as could clearly ascertain that "Christ dwelt in their hearts by faith," must consider themselves as living demonstrations that Paul was a true apostle: for "the seal of his apostleship were they in the Lord:" and they could not disprove his claim, without owning themselves to be without proof of conversion. He trusted, therefore, that in this way many knew that Christ had approved and owned his ministry; and all the rest would soon know this in another manner.—Scott.

Conclusion of the Epistle.—Ver. 11—14. Thus the apostle concludes this epistle, with, I. A valedic*tion.* He gives them a parting "farewell," and takes his leave of them for the present with hearty good wishes for their spiritual welfare. In order to which, 1. He gives them several good exhortations. (1.) To be "perfect," or to be knit together in love, which would tend greatly to their benefit and advantage, as a church, or Christian society. (2.) To be "of good comfort" under all the sufferings and persecutions they might endure for the cause of Christ, or any calamities and disappointments they might meet with in the world. (3.) To be "of one mind," which would greatly tend to their comfort; for the more easy we are with our brethren, the more ease we shall have in our own souls. The apostle would have them, as far as was possible, to be of the same opinion and judgment; however, if this could not be attained to, yet, (4.) He exhorts them to "live in peace;" that difference in opinion should not cause an alienation of affections; that they should be at peace among themselves. He would have all the schisms healed that were among them; that there should be no more contention and wrath found among them; to prevent which, they should avoid "debates, envyings, backbitings, whisperings," and such like enemies to peace. 2. He encourages them with the promise of God's presence among them; "The God of love and peace shall be with you. Note, (1.) God is the God of love and peace. He is the Author of peace, and Lover of concord: he hath loved us, and is willing to be at peace with us: he commands us to love him, and to be reconciled to him, and also that we love one another, and be at peace among ourselves. (2.) God will be with them who live in love and peace. He will love them who love peace; he will dwell with them here, and they shall dwell with him for ever. Such shall have God's "gracious" presence here, and be admitted to his "glorious" presence hereafter. 3. He gives directions to them to salute each other, and sends kind salutations to them from those who were with him. He would have them testify their affection to one another by the sacred right of a "kiss of charity," which was then used, but has long been disused, to prevent all occasions of wantonness and impurity, in the more declining and degenerate state of the church. II. The apostolical benediction; "The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghost, be with you all." Thus the apostle concludes his epistle, and thus it is usual and proper to dismiss worshipping assemblies. This plainly proves the doctrine of the gospel, and is an acknowledgment, that "Father, Son," and "Spirit," are "three" distinct Persons, yet but "one" God; and herein "the same" that they are the Fountain of all blessings to men. It likewise speaks our duty, which is to have an eye by faith to Father, Son, and Holy Ghost; to live in a continual regard to the "three" Persons in the "Trinity," into whose name we were "baptized," and in whose name we are "blessed." This is a very solemn benediction, and we should give all diligence to inherit this blessing. The "grace" of Christ, the "love" of God and the "communion"

GALATIANS.

THE Galatians, or Gallo-Grecians, were the descendants of the Gauls, who migrated from their own country to seek for new settlements, and who, after a variety of disasters, got possession of a considerable district in Asia Minor, near to Lycaonia, Lystra, and Iconium. It is plain that the Galatians were, generally, idolatrous Gentiles before their conversion. The apostle was not able to spend much time among them, because of his multiplied engagements; yet he asserts, in a way which challenges refutation, that he conferred miraculous gifts on them. But soon after he left them, some professed converts to Christianity, who were zealous for the Mosaic law, intruded among them, drawing them off from the true gospel, to depend on ceremonial observances, and to the vain endeavour of establishing their own righteousness. The way in which the apostle, with the greatest decision and apparent severity, opposes this false gospel, will appear as we proceed; but certainly it shews that he considered the very life and soul of Christianity to be at stake. Yet his opposition to this self-righteous perversion of Christianity does not, in the smallest degree, lead him to overlook its holy and practical tendency; and, in this respect, the epistle before us forms a striking contrast to the over-zealous and vehement earnestness of numbers, for a part of Christianity; while another part of equal importance is overlooked, if not disparaged.

CHAP. I.

He wondereth that they have so soon left him and the gospel, 1, which he learned, not of men, but of God, 11.

PAUL, an apostle, (not of men,[1] neither by man, [d]but by Jesus Christ, [e]and God the Father, who [f]raised him from the dead,)

2 And all the brethren which are with me, unto [h]the churches of Galatia:

3 Grace be to you, and peace, from God the Father, and from our Lord Jesus Christ,

4 Who [k]gave himself for our sins, that he might deliver us from this present evil world, [m]according to the will of God and our Father:

5 To [o]whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

6 I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him [s]that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel:

7 Which is not another; but there be some that trouble you, and would [y]pervert the gospel of Christ.

8 But though we, or an angel from heaven,[2] preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, [a]let him be accursed.

9 As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you [d]than that ye have received, let him be accursed.[3]

10 For [e]do I now persuade men, or God? or do I seek to please men? for if I yet pleased men, I should not be [h]the servant of Christ.

11 But I certify you, brethren, [l]that the gospel which was preached of me is not after man.

12 For I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ.

13 For ye have heard of my conversation in time past in the Jews' religion, how that beyond measure I persecuted the church of God, and wasted it;

CHAP. I. OCCASION OF THE EPISTLE.—Ver. 6—10. The persons who propagated "another gospel" in Galatia, were as determined enemies to true Christianity, as the false apostles at Corinth, and more evidently so, but they were not equal to them in ingenuity: the detection of their error lay within a small compass, their example was of a most dangerous tendency, their progress was likely to be very rapid unless effectually checked, and therefore the apostle opened his subject in the language of astonishment at the conduct of the Galatians. He had been employed to call them, by his ministry, "into the grace of Christ;" or a professed dependence, for acceptance, on the free mercy of God, through the merits and sacrifice of Christ, and by faith in him. He had fully instructed them in this important subject, and confirmed it by miracles, and the gifts of the Spirit conferred on them; and they had appeared cordially to embrace this salvation: he could not therefore but be surprised, that they should so soon be induced to disclaim his ministry and renounce his doctrine, by turning to another gospel. As it was more evident, at first sight, that the Galatians had been removed from the ministry and doctrine of Paul, than it was that they had renounced Christianity; and as he stood in doubt whether they had been efficaciously called into the grace of Christ: so I apprehend, we are rather to understand him as speaking of the instrument of their outward calling, than of the agent in effectual vocation.—Indeed, their new scheme was not another gospel, nor any gospel at all, but a most fatal delusion, shutting up under condemnation all those who adhered to it. This the apostle hoped would not be their case; as the immediate blame was to be cast on certain persons, whose aim was to trouble, perplex, and mislead the minds of the Gentile converts; and to pervert the gospel of Christ, out of a blind and proud zeal for the Mosaic dispensation. They, no doubt, appeared to the unstable and unwary Galatians, to speak very plausibly concerning obedience to the law, as joined with faith in Christ, in order to justification; but he must in the strongest and plainest terms declare, that whoever preached any gospel contrary to that which he had preached to them and they had received, or even added any thing to it, on the grand question of justification; would be, and ought to be, accursed; as one that remained under the curse of the law, and kept others under it; and as acting in direct opposition to Christ, and the glory of God in his salvation. Nay, this would be, yea, let it be, the case, even if Paul himself, or any of the apostles should depart from their former doctrine, and endeavour to establish any other foundation for a sinner's hope, than they had done. Indeed, were it possible for an angel to come from heaven, and to preach a doctrine contrary to the free justification of a sinner by faith in the merits of Christ alone; he must at that moment become an apostate spirit, a rebel against God, an enemy to Christ, and accursed in himself. So that abilities, morality, plausibility, or even miracles, were not to be regarded in this case. Nor let this be considered as the language of intemperate zeal: for he would repeat it with solemnity, and again denounce accursed, by his apostolical authority, every one who thus attempted to lay so false a foundation; that they might learn to dread and abhor those delusions, which they had unwarily encouraged. For could they suppose that, after so many years of labour and suffering in the cause of Christ, he only meant to persuade men to adopt his own private sentiments, that he might ingratiate himself with them, instead of pleading the cause of God, and approving himself to him.

RESULTS OF PAUL'S CONVERSION.—Ver. 15—24. When it pleased God, (who had chosen him to be an apostle, even from his mother's womb, and had, by his purpose, set him apart for that service;) to call him by his efficacious grace unto the knowledge and faith of the gospel, and thus of his abundant mercy, to reconcile him unto himself by Jesus Christ; and when, along with the outward extraordinary circumstances of his conversion, it had also pleased God to reveal his Son, in the glory of his person and salvation, to his understanding and heart, to display his power, love, and grace in the conversion of so prejudiced and violent an enemy; that he might make his name more widely known on earth, by sending him as an apostle to preach Christ to the Gentiles. (Acts xxvi. 17, 18.) When this gracious change had taken place, he immediately prepared for obedience, without consulting any sort of men; or conferring with the dictates of his own natural reason, about the consequences of his conduct to his interest, credit, ease, or life itself. He did not go up to Jerusalem to receive instructions, or to obtain a commission from those who had been apostles, before his extraordinary conversion and appointment to that service: but he proceeded to exercise his ministry without delay, and very soon went into Arabia for that purpose. Afterwards he preached at Damascus, till he was driven thence by persecution. At length, after three years he went to Jerusalem to visit Peter, as a brother in Christ; to confer with him, and to relate the gracious dealings of God, and what he had wrought by him.—SCOTT.

CHAP. II. PAUL—THE APOSTLE OF THE GENTILES, Ver. 1—10. The false [illegible]

3 But neither Titus, who was with me, being a Greek, was compelled to be circumcised:

4 And that because of false brethren unawares brought in, who came in privily to spy out our [m]liberty which we have in Christ Jesus, that they might bring us into bondage:

5 To whom we gave place by subjection, no, not for an hour; [p]that the truth of the gospel might continue with you.

6 But of those who seemed to be somewhat, whatsoever they were, it maketh no matter to me: [q]God accepteth no man's person; for they who seemed to be somewhat in conference added nothing to me:

7 But contrariwise, when they saw that the gospel of the uncircumcision was committed unto me, as the gospel of the circumcision was unto Peter;

8 (For [y]he that wrought effectually in Peter to the apostleship of the circumcision, the same [z]was mighty in me toward the Gentiles:)

9 And when James, Cephas, and John,[2] who seemed to be pillars, perceived [c]the grace that was given unto me, they gave to me and Barnabas the right hands of fellowship; that [e]we should go unto the heathen, and they unto the circumcision.

10 Only they would [f]that we should remember the poor; the same which I also was forward to do.

11 But when Peter was come to Antioch, I withstood him to the face,[3] because he was to be blamed.

12 For before that certain came from James, he did eat with the Gentiles: but when they were come, he withdrew, and separated himself, [n]fearing them which were of the circumcision.

13 And [o]the other Jews dissembled likewise with him; insomuch that Barnabas also was carried away with their dissimulation.

14 But when I saw that they walked not uprightly, according to [r]the truth of the gospel,[4] I said unto Peter before them all, If thou, being a Jew, livest after the manner of Gentiles, and not as do the Jews, [u]why compellest thou the Gentiles to live as do the Jews?

15 We who are Jews by nature, and not [y]sinners of the Gentiles,

16 Knowing [z]that a man is not justified by the works of the law, [a]but by the faith of Jesus Christ, even [b]we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: [c]for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified.

17 But if, [d]while we seek to be justified by Christ, we ourselves also are found sinners, [f]is therefore Christ the minister of sin? God forbid.

18 For if I build again the things which I destroyed, I make myself a transgressor.[5]

19 For I [1]through the law am dead to the law, [1]that I might live unto God.

20 I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, [o]but Christ liveth in me: and [p]the life which I now live in the flesh [q]I live by the faith of the Son of God, [s]who loved me, and gave himself for me.

21 I do not frustrate the grace of God: for if righteousness come by the law, then [x]Christ is dead in vain.

CHAP. III.

The apostle sharply reproves the Galatians for departing from that doctrine, which had been fully preached to them, and confirmed by the gift of the Holy Spirit, 1. He proves his doctrine concerning justification, from the example of Abraham, 6, from the tenor and curse of the law, 10, and from the Abrahamic covenant, 15. He shews the subserviency of the law to the covenant of grace, 19; and that all believers are delivered from the law, and made the spiritual seed of Abraham, 25.

O FOOLISH Galatians, who hath bewitched you,[1] that [c]ye should not obey the truth, before whose eyes Jesus Christ hath been evidently set forth, crucified among you?

2 This only would I learn of you, [e]Received ye the Spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith?

3 Are ye so foolish? [g]having begun in the Spirit,[2] are ye now made perfect by the flesh?

4 Have ye suffered *so many things in vain? if it be yet in vain.

5 He therefore [1]that ministereth to you the Spirit, and worketh miracles among you, doeth he it by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith?

6 Even [m]as Abraham believed God, and it was [†]accounted to him for righteousness.

7 Know ye therefore, that [o]they which are of faith,[3] the same are the children of Abraham.

8 And the scripture, foreseeing that [r]God would justify the heathen through faith, [s]preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, [t]In thee shall all nations be blessed.

9 So then they which be of faith are blessed with faithful Abraham.

10 For as many as are of the works of the law are [y]under the curse: for it is written, [z]Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them.

11 But [a]that no man is justified by the law in the sight of God, it is evident: for, [b]The just shall live by faith.

12 And the law is not of faith: but, The man that doeth them shall live in them.

[2] From these four verses, the supremacy of St Peter over the rest of the apostles and the whole church, may by many arguments be refuted. For—1. St James is here mentioned first among the apostles of the circumcision, according to the common doctrine of the ancients, who styled him "the first bishop," &c.; 2. St Paul puts no difference betwixt these "pillars," or chief of the apostles; 3. He says that the gospel of the uncircumcision was committed to him, as was that of the circumcision to St Peter, by which words, as the ancient commentators say, he shews himself equal to St Peter; Lastly, "It maketh no matter to me," saith he, "what they were," which surely could not with propriety be said of St Peter, if Christ had constituted him to be St Paul's head and judge.—Whitby.

disparaged Paul, as if no account was to be made of him; but Peter, James, and John, seemed to be somewhat in their estimation, in order that, by using their names, they might the more successfully oppose the truth; for the opinion of others concerning them, not their own estimate of themselves, is exclusively meant. But the apostle declared that it was no matter to him what they or others were as to their endowments, authority, or reputation; for God did not thus partially accept of men's persons, or determine right and wrong, truth and falsehood, by such rules. However therefore he loved and honoured them as brethren, he would not put them in Christ's stead, or acknowledge that they had any authority over him; nor, indeed, when he conferred with them, had they added any thing to his knowledge of the gospel, or authority to preach it, or even to his spiritual gifts and miraculous powers. On the contrary, they were convinced that Christ had immediately appointed him to be his principal minister in preaching the gospel among the Gentiles; even as Peter was the leading person in the work carrying on among the Jews; and had qualified him as fully, and wrought by him as mightily, in the one case, as he had by Peter in the other. So that these three apostles, who seemed to many persons to be the only pillars, on whom every thing depended, saw and acknowledged the grace of God bestowed on him; and allowed of him and Barnabas, as fellow-labourers of equal authority and ability with themselves; being satisfied that they should labour principally among the Gentiles, while themselves would at present continue among the Jews.—Scott.

Paul's Rebuke of Peter.—Ver. 11. Notwithstanding Peter's character, yet, when he observes him thus behaving himself to the great prejudice both of the truth of the gospel and the peace of the church, he is not afraid to reprove him for it. Paul adhered resolutely to his principles, when others faltered in theirs; he was as good a Jew as any of them, (for he was an Hebrew of the Hebrews,) but he would magnify his office as the apostle of the Gentiles, and therefore would not see them discouraged and trampled upon. "When he saw that they walked not uprightly, according to the truth of the gospel;" that they did not live up to that principle which the gospel taught, and which they had professed to own and embrace, namely, that by the death of Christ the partition-wall between Jew and Gentile was taken down, and the observation of the law of Moses was no longer in force; when he observed this, as Peter's offence was public, so he publicly reproved him for it. "He said unto him before them all, If thou, being a Jew, livest after the manner of the Gentiles, and not as do the Jews, why compellest thou the Gentiles to live as do the Jews?" Herein one part of his conduct was a contradiction to the other; for if he, who was a Jew, could himself sometimes dispense with the use of the ceremonial law, and live after the manner of the Gentiles, this showed that he did not look upon the observation of it as still necessary, even for the Jews themselves; and therefore that he could not consistently with his own practice impose it upon the Gentile Christians. And yet Paul charges him with this, yea, represents him as compelling the Gentiles to live as did the Jews; not by open force and violence, but this was the tendency of what he did; for it was in effect to signify this, that the Gentiles must comply with the Jews, or else not be admitted into Christian communion.—Henry.

Chap. III. Folly of Apostacy.—Ver. 3. The Galatians had begun well; but now they were turning to the law, and expected to be advanced to higher degrees of perfection, by adding the observation of it to faith in Christ, in order to their justification, which could end in nothing but their shame and disappointment; for this, instead of being an improvement upon the gospel, was really a perversion of it; and while they sought to be justified in this way, they were so far from being more perfect Christians, that they were more in danger of becoming no Christians at all; hereby they were pulling down with one hand what they had built with the other, and undoing what they had hitherto done in Christianity. Yea, he further puts them in mind, that they had not only embraced the Christian doctrine, but suffered for it too: and therefore their folly would be the more aggravated, if now they should desert it: for in this case all that they had suffered would be in vain, it would appear that they had been foolish in suffering for what they now deserted, and their sufferings would be altogether in vain, and of no advantage to them. Note, 1. It is the folly of apostates, that they lose the benefit of all they have done in religion, or suffered for it. And, 2. It is very sad for any to live in an age of services and sufferings, of sabbaths, sermons, and sacraments, in vain; in this case former righteousness shall not be mentioned.—Henry

The Abrahamic Covenant.—Ver. 15—18. The apostle proceeds to ground another argument upon the case of Abraham. Speaking of the high concerns of God's dealing with his creatures, after the manner of men's dealing with each other; he reminds the Galatians, that even a covenant between men, when fully ratified, could not be disannulled, or have any new conditions added to it, without the explicit consent of all parties. Now the formal ratification of the covenant with Abraham, and its express promises to him and his seed, took place long before the Mosaic law; and could not therefore be altered or disannulled by it. Neither did the Lord include all the descendants of Abraham in these promises, as so many distinct kinds of seed: but they were limited to him, and his seed in the singular number, which implied that Christ was principally meant, and others only as related to him. So that the unbelieving descendants of Jacob were curse of the law, being made a curse for us: for it is written, [h]Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree:

14 That the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ; that we [i]might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith.

15 Brethren, I speak after the manner of men; Though it be but a man's [‡]covenant, yet if it be confirmed, no man disannulleth, or addeth thereto.

16 Now [o]to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many: but as of one, And to thy seed, [p]which is Christ.

17 And this I say, That the covenant, that was confirmed before of God [r]in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul,[5] [u]that it should make the promise of none effect.

18 For [y]if the inheritance be of the law, it is no more of promise: [z]but God gave it to Abraham by promise.

19 Wherefore then serveth the law? It was added because of transgressions, till the seed should come to whom the promise was made; and it was ordained by angels [c]in the hand of a mediator.

20 Now a mediator is not a mediator of one; [g]but God is one.

21 Is [h]the law then against the promises of God? God forbid: for if there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law.

22 But the scripture hath [m]concluded[6] all under sin, [n]that the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given [o]to them that believe.

23 But before faith came, we were kept under the law, shut up unto [r]the faith which should afterwards be revealed.

24 Wherefore the law was our schoolmaster[7] to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith.

25 But after that [u]faith is come, [x]we are no longer under a schoolmaster.

26 For [y]ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus.

27 For [z]as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have [a]put on Christ.

28 There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: [d]for ye are all one in Christ Jesus.

29 And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, [g]and heirs according to the promise.

CHAP. IV.

We were under the law till Christ came, 1; but Christ freed us, 4. We are the sons of Abraham by the free woman, 22.

NOW I say, That [a]the heir, as long as he is a child,[1] differeth nothing from a servant, though he be lord of all;

2 But is under tutors and governors, until the time appointed of the father.

3 Even so we, when we were children, were in bondage under the [*]elements of the world:

4 But when [d]the fulness of the time was come, [e]God sent forth his Son, [f]made of a woman, [h]made under the law,

5 To [i]redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons.

6 And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth [m]the Spirit of his Son[2] into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father.

7 Wherefore [o]thou art no more a servant, but a son; and if a son, then an [r]heir of God through Christ.

8 Howbeit then, [b]when ye knew not God, ye did service unto them which by nature are no gods.

9 But now, after that [u]ye have known God, or rather [x]are known of God, how turn ye [†]again to the weak and beggarly [‡]elements, whereunto ye desire again to be in bondage?

10 Ye observe days, and months, and times, and years.

11 I am afraid of you, lest I have bestowed upon you labour in vain.

12 Brethren, I beseech you, be as I am; for I am as ye are: ye have not injured me at all.

13 Ye know how, through infirmity of the flesh, I preached the gospel unto you at the first.

14 And my temptation which was in my flesh [§]ye despised not, nor rejected; but received me as an angel of God, even as Christ Jesus.

15 [§]Where is then the blessedness ye spake of? for I bear you record, that if it had been possible, ye would have plucked out your own eyes, and have given them to me.

16 Am I therefore become your enemy, [o]because I tell you the truth?

17 They [p]zealously affect you, but not well;[3] yea, they would exclude [l]you, that ye might affect them.

18 But it is good to be zealously affected always in a good thing, and not only when I am present with you.

19 My little children, of whom I travail in birth again until [u]Christ be formed in you,

20 I desire to be present with you now, and to change my voice; for I [*]stand in doubt of you.

no more interested in the most valuable promises, than the posterity of Ishmael and Esau: while all believers, though of the Gentile extraction, being one with Christ, were included in the Abrahamic covenant, without any concern in the Mosaic law or the Sinai covenant. Now this covenant confirmed with Abraham, in respect of Christ and his salvation, the law, which was not given till four hundred and thirty years after the calling of Abraham, could not disannul, that the promise should be rendered of none effect. For if the inheritance of heaven, (which was typified by that of Canaan,) had depended on the law, and men's personal obedience to it; it could not have been secured to believers by the promise given to Abraham; and the new conditions added to his covenant would virtually have disannulled it.

THE LAW, A SCHOOLMASTER.—Ver. 23—25. Before the great object and author of faith was come, and the doctrine of faith fully declared, the nation of Israel, the visible church, was kept under the legal dispensation: and, not only were unbelievers shut up under the curse of the law, as at other times; but even believers were held in a state of comparative darkness and bondage. Through the promises and ceremonies, they received a measure of light and encouragement; and thus they looked forward to that brighter day which was predicted: while the nation at large was shut up by the institutions and sanctions of the law, and so, restrained from total apostacy, till the coming of Christ, and the full revelation of the doctrine of faith. So that the church, considered as a complex body, was in a state of pupilage and minority under the old dispensation; and the law served as a pedagogue or tutor, to instruct it in the introductory lessons of religious knowledge, by many hard tasks and burdensome restraints, imposed with much salutary severity. This was so ordered, that Christ and his salvation might be the more welcome; and that the very rigour of the law might bring men to him, that they might be justified by faith. But when the great object and doctrine of faith were publicly introduced, the church was no longer to continue under a schoolmaster; but was to be admitted to a nobler liberty, and instructed in a more open and enlarged manner. As therefore children are glad to be released from the confinement and discipline of a school, so believers should welcome the liberty and privileges of the gospel: and it was peculiarly absurd for Christians to be attached to the state of confinement, under which the ancient church had been held, and the yoke of the legal dispensation.—This admits of an obvious accommodation to the believer's experience, and the first use of the moral law in bringing men to Christ; but the above is the evident scope of the apostle's argument.—SCOTT.

[illegible] the time appointed of the Father, when he would put an end to the legal dispensation, and set up another and a better in the room of it, "he sent forth his Son," &c. The Person who was employed to introduce this new dispensation was no other than the Son of God himself, the only begotten of the Father, who, as he had been prophesied of, and promised, from the foundation of the world, so in due time he was manifested for this purpose. He, in pursuance of the great design he had undertaken, submitted to be "made of a woman;" there is his incarnation—and to be "made under the law," there is his subjection. He who was truly God, for our sakes became man; and he who was Lord of all, consented to come into a state of subjection, and to take upon him the form of a servant; and one great end of all this was, "To redeem them that were under the law;" to save us from that intolerable yoke, and to appoint gospel ordinances more rational and easy. He had indeed something more and greater in his view in coming into the world, than merely to deliver us from the bondage of the ceremonial law; for he came in our nature, and consented to suffer and die for us, that hereby he might redeem us from the wrath of God, and from the curse of the moral law, which, as sinners, we all lay under. But that was one end of it, and a mercy reserved to be bestowed at the time of his manifestation; then the more servile state of the church was to come to a period, and a better to succeed in the place of it; for he was sent to redeem us, "that we might receive the adoption of sons;" that we might no longer be accounted and treated as servants, but as sons grown up to maturity, who are allowed greater freedoms, and admitted to larger privileges, than while they were under tutors and governors.

BEGGARLY ELEMENTS.—Ver. 9. "How turn ye again," &c., says he. "How is it that ye, who have been taught to worship God in the gospel-way, should now be persuaded to comply with the ceremonial way of worship; that ye, who have been acquainted with a dispensation of light, liberty, and love, as that of the gospel is, should now submit to a dispensation of darkness, and bondage, and terror, as that of the law is?" This they had the less reason for, since they had never been under the law of Moses, as the Jews had been; and therefore, on this account, they were more inexcusable than the Jews themselves, who might be supposed to have some fondness for that which had been of so long standing among them. Besides, what they suffered themselves to be brought into bondage to, were but "weak and beggarly elements," such things as had no power in them to cleanse the soul, or to afford any solid [illegible] were only designed for that [illegible] which was soon [illegible]

Anno Domini cir. 58.

21 Tell me, ye that desire to be under the law, do ye not hear the law?

22 For it is written, that Abraham had two sons; the one by a bond maid, the other by a free woman.

23 But he who was of the bond woman was [c]born after the flesh; [d]but he of the free woman was by promise.

24 Which things are an allegory: for these are the two [†]covenants; the one from the mount [‡]Sinai, [h]which gendereth to bondage, which is Agar.

25 For this Agar [4] is mount Sinai in Arabia, and [§]answereth to Jerusalem which now is, and is in bondage with her children.

26 But [o]Jerusalem which is above is free, which is the mother of us all.

27 For it is written, Rejoice, thou barren that bearest not; break forth and cry, thou that travailest not: for the desolate hath many more children than she which hath an husband.

28 Now we, brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of promise.

29 But as then he that was born after the flesh persecuted him that was born [r]after the Spirit, even so it is now.

30 Nevertheless, what saith the scripture? [b]Cast out the bond woman and her son: for the son of the bond woman shall not be heir with the son of the free woman.

31 So then, brethren, we are not children of the bond woman,[5] but of the free.

CHAP. V.

He moveth them to stand in their liberty, 1, and not to observe circumcision, 3, but rather love, 13. The works of the flesh, 19, and fruit of the Spirit, 22.

STAND fast therefore in [b]the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage.

2 Behold, I Paul say unto you, that if ye be circumcised, Christ shall profit you nothing.

3 For I testify again to every man that is circumcised, that he is [s]a debtor to do the whole law.

4 Christ [h]is become of no effect unto you, whosoever of you are justified by the law; [k]ye are fallen from grace.[1]

5 For we through the Spirit [m]wait for the hope of righteousness by faith.

6 For in Jesus Christ neither circumcision availeth any thing, nor uncircumcision; but [p]faith which worketh by love.

7 Ye did run well; who did *hinder you,[2] that ye should not obey the truth?

8 This persuasion cometh not of him that calleth you.

9 A little leaven[3] leaveneth the whole lump.

10 I have [u]confidence in you through the Lord, that ye will be none otherwise minded: but he that troubleth you shall bear his judgment, whosoever he be.

11 And I, brethren, [a]if I yet preach circumcision, why do I yet suffer persecution? then is [e]the offence of the cross ceased.

12 I would they were even cut off[4] which trouble you.

13 For, brethren, ye have been called unto liberty; [f]only use not liberty for an occasion to the flesh, [g]but by love serve one another.

14 For all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this, [i]Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

15 But if ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another.

16 This I say then, [m]Walk in the Spirit, [n]and [†]ye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh.

17 For [o]the flesh lusteth against the spirit, and the spirit against the flesh: and these are contrary the one to the other; so that ye cannot do the things that ye would.

18 But [r]if ye be led by the Spirit, [s]ye are not under the law.

19 Now the works of the flesh[5] are manifest, which are these; Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness,

20 Idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, [y]heresies,

21 Envyings, murders, [z]drunkenness, [a]revellings, and such like: of the which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, [b]that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God.

22 But [c]the fruit of the Spirit is [d]love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, [e]faith, 23 Meekness, temperance: against such there is no law.

24 And [h]they that are Christ's have [i]crucified the flesh, with the [‡]affections and lusts.

25 If [k]we live in the Spirit, [l]let us also walk in the Spirit.

26 Let us not be desirous of vain-glory, provoking one another, envying one another.

CHAP. VI.

He willeth them to deal mildly with a brother that hath slipped, 1; to be liberal to their teachers, 6; and not be weary in well-doing, 9.

BRETHREN, *if a man be overtaken in a fault,[1] ye which are spiritual, [c]restore such an one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted.

2 Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil [g]the law of Christ.

The Allegory.—Ver. 21—31. That part of the nation of Israel which were not interested in the covenant made with Abraham, by faith, were indeed outwardly a part of Abraham's family, and of the visible church; but, like Ishmael, they were born in servitude, all their obedience was of a slavish nature, and their privileges external and carnal: nor could the legal covenant deliver them from this state. For Hagar, (whose name signifies a rock in the Arabic,) the bond-woman, was the emblem of mount Sinai, in the deserts of Arabia, which country was afterwards peopled by her descendants, being without the boundaries of the promised land. From that mountain the law was given, and there the legal covenant was ratified. It therefore corresponded to Jerusalem and its inhabitants, as the outward worshippers of God, in the ordinances performed at the temple: for as far as they continued under the legal covenant, especially when they had rejected Christ and the gospel, they were mere slaves, and not the children of God. But the heavenly Jerusalem, the true church, as coming from above, espoused to Christ, and represented by Sarah, is in a state of freedom; and this church is the mother of all true believers, who are born of the Spirit. And that this church should mainly consist of Gentile converts, had long before been figuratively predicted.—Scott.

Chap. V. Christian Liberty.—Ver. 1. Here observe, 1. Under the gospel we are enfranchised; we are brought into a state of "liberty," wherein we are freed from the yoke of the ceremonial law, and from the curse of the moral law; so that we are no longer tied to the observation of the one, nor tied up to the rigour of the other, which curses every one that continues not in all things written there to do them, chap. iii. 10. 2. We owe this liberty to Jesus Christ, it is he who "has made us free;" by his merits he has satisfied the demands of the broken law, and by his authority as a King he has discharged us from the obligation of those carnal ordinances which were imposed on the Jews. And, 3. It is therefore our duty to "stand fast in this liberty," constantly and faithfully to adhere to the gospel and to the liberty of it, and not to suffer ourselves, upon any considerations, "to be again entangled with the yoke of bondage," or persuaded to return back to the law of Moses.—Henry.

Works of the Flesh.—Ver. 19—21. Idolatry is "a work of the flesh;" as it springs from man's carnal enmity to the holy character, worship, and service of God; in the stead of whom he deifies imaginary beings more congenial to himself, and worships them in a manner more suited to his pride and lusts.—Witchcraft, (implying all kinds of sorcery, charms, divinations, incantations, fortune-telling, and attempted, real, or pretended, intercourse with evil spirits,) is a work of the flesh, as it results from man's carnal dislike of submission to God, and dependence on him, and a desire of seeking help and information from other quarters: by both these, men virtually worship the devil.—Emulations or "zeals," seem in this connection to signify that ambition of pre-eminence and thirst for glory, which excite men to vie with one another, and eagerly to aspire after distinction, according to the nature of their objects and pursuits. Poets, orators, historians, philosophers, moralists, and all men, who do not attend to the Bible, deem this the noblest principle of human activity; yet it springs from unmingled pride and selfishness, and is nearly allied to envy. When the object of emulation is evil, its effects are dreadful: when the object is good, the glory of man is sacreligiously substituted in the place of the glory of God; and this thirst for human applause has caused more horrible violations of the law of love, and done more to desolate the earth, than even the grossest sensuality ever did.—Heresies are called works of the flesh: pride, ambition, avarice, or other carnal affections, induce men to pervert the truth of God's words; and espousing some pernicious error, to seek distinction by propagating it. Hence arise contentions, separations, and the most fatal effects to individuals and to the church.

Fruit of the Spirit.—Ver. 22—26. The holy dispositions and affections, and the conduct resulting from them, are not so much the works of the believer, as "the fruit of the Spirit," dwelling in the new nature and working by it, which he hath produced by regeneration. Love of God and man, of the Saviour, his people, and all men for his sake, and according to his command and example; a joyful frame of mind in the salvation and service of the Lord; a peaceful conscience, and a submissive will, leading to a peaceable conduct towards man; a disposition to bear injuries and affronts without seeking revenge, or expressing resentment; a mild, unassuming, inoffensive deportment, united with beneficence and philanthropy; truth, sincerity, fidelity, and integrity to man, springing from faith in God and faithfulness to him; a humble, teachable, unambitious temper and demeanour; and an evident moderation about earthly objects, and in respect of every animal indulgence. These, and such like, are "the fruits of the Spirit," and against them there is no law; for they are exactly what the moral law requires.—Scott.

Chap. VI. Lesson to Bear and Forbear.—Ver. 1—5. The apostle, having concluded the argumentative part of the epistle, added some particular admonitions before he closed it. If any brother had been, or should be, surprised into the commission of sin, through unwatchfulness and temptation, and contrary to the habitual tenor of his conduct; the more spiritual of them, who were most matured in judgment and experience, ought to bestow pains to bring him to repentance, and to give him proper counsel and encouragement, in a meek and compassionate spirit, that he might be restored, like a dislocated limb to its place; and not to treat him with harsh rebukes or disdainful neglect. For each of them severally ought to consider himself, and his own weakness and frailty, as he too might be tempted and overcome; and then he would need that meekness and sympathy, which he had refused to his offending brother. Thus they ought not only to bear with one another's infirmities, but, as fellow-travellers, to carry each other's burdens: while the stronger brother denied himself, in order to support, comfort, and assist the weak, the tempted, and afflicted; that so they might fulfil the commandment, which Christ repeatedly gave his disciples, "to love one another;" and which indeed was the substance of "his law," for their conduct towards their brethren. But if, on the contrary, any of them thought himself more wise, strong, or eminent than the rest, on account of his gifts or reputation, and so, trusted in himself and despised others, when in fact he was nothing in the school of Christ, having not learned the first lesson of his religion, he was under a sad delusion, his heart imposed on him, and in fact he was his own deceiver.

EPHESIANS.

THE successful ministry of the apostle in the renowned but licentious city of Ephesus, and his solemn charge to the elders of the church which was there collected, have before been considered (Acts xix., xx.) Some years after, he wrote this epistle during his imprisonment at Rome, and probably near the close of it; to establish them in the great doctrines of the gospel, to guard them against errors, to excite them to a holy conversation, and to animate them in their Christian warfare.

PAUL'S AFFECTION FOR THE CHURCHES IN GALATIA.—Ver. 11—16. The words here rendered "how large a letter," are supposed by many persons to signify "with what kind of letters," referring to the apostle's want of skill in writing the Greek language. He had, however, bestowed great pains to pen this epistle with his own hand, either because he had not an amanuensis with him, or rather, because he did not choose to employ one; but wrote the whole himself, that he might convince the Galatians of his love to them, and anxiety about them. There were professed teachers of Christianity indeed, who wanted to make a fair show in the flesh, or in respect of external matters, by forming a coalition between the Jewish religion and that of Jesus. These were so very earnest in urging the Gentiles to be circumcised, that they might be said even to compel them; as they would take no denial, and exhausted all their eloquence and ingenuity to overcome their reluctance. But, notwithstanding their attachment to the ritual law, they would not have been so earnest in this matter, if they could otherwise have possessed their influence in the Christian church, without exposing themselves to persecution for professing faith in Christ and his cross. For, not only did the Jews hate and persecute those, who preached the gospel to the Gentiles, without regarding the Mosaic law; but the heathen rulers also, who tolerated the Jews and such Christians as observed the law, were inveterate against the Gentile Christians, and deemed them an upstart sect, dangerous to the civil government. This crafty and selfish aim of the judaizing teachers, of advancing themselves to consideration in the Christian church, without exposing themselves to persecution, induced them to be very zealous in proselyting the Gentiles to the Mosaic law; but they were not equally strict in their own observance of it: not only were they negligent of the moral precepts; but probably, on one pretence or other, they dispensed with themselves and one another, in respect of the more burdensome and expensive of the ceremonial institutions, many of which could not be observed in countries distant from Jerusalem. So that it was evident, they only desired the Gentiles to be circumcised, that they might glory in having induced such numbers to bear in their flesh this mark of their being proselyted. This both placed them at the head of a Christian sect, and also tended to procure them favour and reputation with the Jewish rulers and others. But the apostle added, with a noble disdain of such base motives, "God forbid that I should glory," &c., he would not value himself on any thing, which he had received, attained to, or performed, either before or since his conversion; except in his dependence on the sufferings and death of Christ upon the cross, as a sacrifice for sin; and in the hopes, comforts, and blessings, which he thence had derived. In this indeed he greatly gloried; and his view of the cross of Christ, and of the obligations, motives, and instructions connected with it, had crucified the world to him and him to the world. "So that he viewed the world, as little impressed by all its charms, as a spectator would be, by any thing that had been graceful in the countenance of a crucified person, when he beholds it blackened in the agonies of death; and was no more affected by the objects around him, than one that is expiring would be struck with any of those prospects, which his dying eyes might view from the cross on which he was suspended." CHAP. I. THE DOXOLOGY.—Ver. 3. The apostle blesses God for spiritual blessings, where he styles him "the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ:" for, as Mediator, the Father was his God; as God, and the second Person in the blessed Trinity, God was his Father. It speaks the mystical union betwixt Christ and believers, that the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ is their God and Father; and that, in and through him. All blessings come from God, as the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. No good can be expected from a righteous and holy God to sinful creatures, but by his mediation. "He hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings." Note, Spiritual blessings are the best blessings with which God blesses us, and for which we are to bless him. HE blesses US by bestowing such things upon us as make us really blessed. WE cannot thus bless God again; but must do it by praising, and magnifying, and speaking well of him on that account: and whom God blesses with some, he blesses with all spiritual blessings; to whom he gives Christ, he freely gives all these things.

ELECTION.—Ver. 4, 5, 11. Election, or choice, respects that lump or mass of mankind, out of which some are chosen, from which they are separated and distinguished. Pre- tery of his will, [e]according to his good pleasure, which he hath purposed in himself:

10 That in the dispensation of the fulness of times, [h]he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in [†]heaven, and which are on earth, even in him:

11 In whom also [i]we have obtained an inheritance, [k]being predestinated according to the purpose of him who worketh all things after [m]the counsel of his own will;

12 That we should be to the praise of his glory, [o]who first [‡]trusted in Christ.

13 In whom [p]ye also trusted, [q]after that ye heard the word of truth, [s]the gospel of your salvation: in whom also after that ye believed, ye were sealed[3] with that [u]Holy Spirit of promise, 14 Which is the earnest of our inheritance, until [y]the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of his glory.

15 Wherefore I also, after I heard of your faith in the Lord Jesus, and love unto all the saints,

16 Cease not to give thanks for you, [c]making mention of you in my prayers;

17 That the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, [g]the Father of glory, may give unto you [h]the Spirit of wisdom and revelation[4] in the knowledge of him:

18 The eyes of your understanding being enlightened; that ye may know what [m]is the hope of his calling, and what the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints,

19 And what is the exceeding greatness[5] of his power to us-ward who believe, according to the [l]working of his mighty power,

20 Which [q]he wrought in Christ, when he raised him from the dead, and set him at his own right hand in the heavenly places,

21 Far [u]above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and [y]every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come;

22 And hath [a]put all things under his feet, and [b]gave him to be the head over all things to the church,

23 Which is [d]his body, [c]the fulness[6] of him that filleth all in all.

CHAP. II.

What we were by nature, 1, and what we are by grace, 5. We are created for good works, 10.

AND you hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins;

2 Wherein in time past ye walked, according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience:

3 Among whom also we all had our conversation in times past [l]in the lusts of our flesh, [m]fulfilling the *desires of the flesh and of the mind; and were [n]by nature the children of wrath, even as others.

4 But God, [q]who is rich in mercy, for [r]his great love wherewith he loved us,

5 Even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened[1] us together with Christ; ([u]by [†]grace ye are saved;)

6 And hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus;

7 That in the ages to come he might [b]shew the exceeding riches of his grace, in his kindness toward us through Christ Jesus.

8 For [c]by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God:[2]

9 Not [f]of works, lest any man should boast.

10 For we are his workmanship, [h]created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before [‡]ordained that we should [l]walk in them.

11 Wherefore remember, that ye being in time past [n]Gentiles in the flesh, who are called uncircumcision by that which is called the circumcision in the flesh made by hands;

12 That at that time ye were [q]without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, [t]having no hope, and [u]without God in the world.

13 But now in Christ Jesus, ye who sometimes were far off [z]are made nigh by the blood of Christ.

14 For he is [a]our peace, who hath made both one,[3] and hath broken down [c]the middle wall of partition between us;

15 Having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances; for to make in himself of twain [f]one new man, so making peace;

16 And that he might [g]reconcile both[4] unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity [§]thereby;

17 And came [l]and preached peace to you which were afar off, and to them that were nigh.

18 For [l]through him we both have access[5] [m]by one Spirit unto the Father.

19 Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, [p]fellow-citizens with the saints, and of [q]the household of God;

destination has respect to the blessings they are designed for; particularly "the adoption of children:" it being the purpose of God, that in due time we should become his adopted children, and so have a right to all the privileges, and to the inheritance, of children. We have here the date of this act of love; it was "before the foundation of the world:" not only before God's people had a being, but before the world had a beginning; for they were chosen in the counsel of God from all eternity. It magnifies these blessings to a high degree, that they are the products of eternal counsel. The alms which you give to beggars at your doors, proceed from a sudden resolve; but the provision which a parent makes for his children, is the result of many thoughts, and is put into his last will and testament with a great deal of solemnity. And as this magnifies the divine love, so it secures the blessings to God's elect; for "the purpose of God according to election shall stand." He acts in pursuance of his eternal purpose in bestowing spiritual blessings upon his people. "He hath blessed us—according as he hath chosen us in him," in Christ the great head of the election, who is emphatically called God's elect, his chosen; and in the chosen Redeemer an eye of favour was cast upon them. Observe here one great end and design of this choice; "chosen—that we should be holy;" not because he foresaw they would be holy, but because he determined to make them so. All who are chosen to happiness as the end, are chosen to holiness as the means. Their sanctification, as well as their salvation, is the result of the counsels of divine love. "And without blame before him;" that their holiness might not be only external and in outward appearance, so as to prevent blame from men; but internal and real, and what God himself will account such, who "looketh at the heart."

THE EARNEST OF THE SPIRIT.—Ver. 13. The blessed Spirit is holy himself, and he makes us holy. He is called "the Spirit of promise," as he is the promised Spirit. By him believers are sealed; that is, separated and set apart for God, and distinguished and marked as belonging to him. The Spirit "is the earnest of our inheritance," ver. 14. The earnest is part of payment, and it secures the full sum: so is the gift of the Holy Ghost: all his influences and operations, both as a Sanctifier and a Comforter, are heaven begun, glory in the seed and bud. The Spirit's illumination is an earnest of everlasting light; sanctification is an earnest of perfect holiness; and his comforts are earnests of everlasting joys. He is said to be the Earnest, "until the redemption of the purchased possession." It may be called here the possession, because this earnest makes it as sure to the heirs as though they were already possessed of it; and it is purchased for them by the blood of Christ.—Henry.

POWER OF GOD IN OUR CONVERSION.—Ver 19—21. The apostle prays that they might perceive what exceeding greatness of divine power had been exerted in their conversion to the faith; and was still engaged to uphold, strengthen, and defend them, to perfect their new creation, and to complete their redemption from Satan, sin, and death; according to the operation of that mighty power, which was put forth in the resurrection and exaltation of Christ.—It is remarkable that the apostle seems here, studiously, to have exhausted the utmost vigour of the Greek language to express, by a beautiful accumulation of energetic words, the omnipotence of God, as effecting the believer's conversion and salvation, in continuing, as it were, that exertion of it, by which the Redeemer was raised from the dead.—For, in consequence of the resurrection of Christ, he had been exalted in the human nature to the right hand of the Father, on the mediatorial throne, in heavenly places, far above all creatures, however dignified; not only above the princes of the earth; not only as the conqueror and destroyer of the powers of darkness; but even far above the hierarchies of heaven, however distinguished as principalities, powers, &c.; yea, above every name, that ever was, or will be, celebrated on earth or in heaven; either during the continuance of this world, or that which is to come.—Scott.

CHAP. II. SPIRITUAL DEATH.—Ver. 1. Unregenerate souls are "dead in trespasses and sins." All those who are in their sins, "are dead in sins;" yea, "in trespasses and sins;" which may signify all sorts of sins, habitual and actual; sins of heart and of life. Sin is the death of the soul. Wherever that prevails, there is a privation of all spiritual life. Sinners are dead in state, being destitute of the principles and powers of spiritual life; and cut off from God, the Fountain of life: and they are dead in law, as a condemned malefactor is said to be a dead man.

SALVATION OF GRACE.—Ver. 4, 5. God himself is the Author of this great and happy change, and his great love is the spring and fontal cause of it; thence he resolved to show mercy. Love is his inclination to do us good, considered simply as creatures; Mercy respects us as apostate and as miserable creatures. Observe, God's eternal love or good-will toward his creatures, is the fountain whence all his mercies vouchsafed to us proceed; and that love of God is great love, and that mercy of his is rich mercy; inexpressibly great, and inexhaustibly rich. And then "by grace ye are saved," and "by grace are ye saved through faith—It is the gift of God," ver. 8. Note, Every converted sinner is a saved sinner; such are delivered from sin and wrath; they are brought into a state of salvation, and have a right given them by grace to eternal happiness. The grace that saves them, is, the free undeserved goodness and favour of God; and he saves them, "not by the works of the law," but "through faith" in Christ Jesus, by means of which they come to partake of the great blessings of the gospel; and both that faith, and that salvation on which it has so great an influence, are "the gift of" God.

CHRIST OUR PEACE.—Ver. 14—16. Jesus Christ "is our Peace." He made peace by the sacrifice of himself; and came to reconcile Jews and Gentiles to each other. He "made both one," by reconciling these two divisions of men, who were wont to malign, to hate, and to reproach each other before. He "broke down the middle wall of partition," the ceremonial law, that made the great feud, and was the badge of the Jews' peculiarity; called the partition-wall, by way of allusion to the partition in the temple, which separated the court of the Gentiles from that into which the Jews only had liberty to enter. Thus "he abolished in his flesh the enmity." By his sufferings in the flesh, taking away the binding power of the ceremonial law, so removing that cause of enmity and distance between them. "The legal ceremonies were abrogated by Christ, having their accomplishment in him." By taking those out of the way, he formed one church of believers, whether they had been Jews or Gentiles.—Henry.

THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.—Ver. 19—22. Jesus Christ himself is the chief corner-stone, the centre of union, the cement and support. Upon him the whole building, being fitly framed, according to the counsel and plan of the divine architect, grew up to a holy temple in the Lord; being dedicated to his glory, the place of his special presence and power, in which he delighted to be worshipped. Thus, by the continual conversion of sinners, and the progressive sanctification of believers; while each individual in his proper place, conduces to the stability and proportion of the whole, and is himself consecrated and preserved by being a part of it; the spiritual temple is erecting from age to age, and will be till its full completion in heaven. So that the Gentiles, being in Christ by faith, were builded on this foundation laid by prophets and apostles, whose predictions and doctrine related to the chief corner-stone.—Scott.

CHAP. III. THE UNSEARCHABLE RICHES OF CHRIST.—Ver. 8. Observe, A faithful minister of Christ may be very humble, and think very meanly of himself, even when he thinks and speaks very highly and honourably of his sacred function. How highly he speaks of Jesus Christ; "The unsearchable riches of Christ." There is a mighty treasury of mercy, grace, and love laid up in Christ Jesus, and that for Jews and Gentiles both. Or, the riches of the gospel are here spoken of as the riches of Christ: the riches which Christ purchased for, and bestows upon, all believers. And they are unsearchable riches, which we cannot find the bottom of: which human sagacity could never have discovered; and men could no otherwise attain to the knowledge of them but by revelation. Now it was the apostle's business and employment to preach these "unsearchable riches of Christ among the Gentiles:" and it was a favour he greatly valued, and looked upon it as an unspeakable honour to him, "Unto me is this grace given."

THE LOVE OF CHRIST.—Ver. 18. It is observable how magnificently the apostle speaks of the love of Christ. The dimensions of redeeming love are admirable. "The breadth, and length, and depth, and height." By enumerating these dimensions, the apostle designs to signify the exceeding greatness of the love of Christ; the unsearchable riches of his love, which is "higher than heaven, deeper than hell, longer than the earth, and broader than the sea," Job xi. 8, 9. Some describe the particulars thus: by the breadth of it we may understand the extent of it to all ages, nations, and ranks of men; by the length of it, its continuance from everlasting to everlasting; by the depth of it, its stooping to the lowest condition, with a design to relieve and save those who are sunk into the depths of sin and misery; by its height, its entitling, and raising us up, to the heavenly happiness and glory. We should desire to comprehend this love; it is the character of all the saints that they do so.—Henry.

ADORATION.—Ver. 20, 21. The apostle added to his most enlarged petitions, an act of adoration suited still more to exalt the expectations of the reader. He ascribed glory to God, as able, not only to do all that he had asked, but above all, abundantly above all, exceedingly abundantly above all, not only that he or the Ephesians had asked; but even all that they had thought, desired, or imagined! So that they might stretch their thoughts, enlarge their desires, and multiply their most comprehensive petitions to the utmost; yet they never could reach the whole of what God was able to bestow upon them, or what he honourably could do for them in Christ Jesus. Nay, all that yet remained to be done, in order to complete their felicity and glory in soul and body, only accorded to that power, which had effected their redemption from the dominion of Satan, and their new creation to holiness; and which still upheld, preserved, and renewed them, amidst all their temptations and trials. To this God, of power and grace unspeakable, the apostle most earnestly desired, that glory, adoration, and praise, should continually be rendered, in every part of the church, by Christ Jesus, throughout all the ages of time, and to all eternity; and he closed this most rapturous act of devotion, by affixing his AMEN to these his prayers and praises.—Scott.

CHAP. IV. UNITY—Ver. 3. The seat of christian unity is in the heart or spirit: it does not lie in one set of thoughts, or in one form or mode of worship, but in one heart and one soul. This unity of heart and affection may be said to be "of the Spirit of God;" it is wrought by him, and is one of the fruits of the Spirit. This we should "endeavour to keep." "Endeavouring" is a gospel-work. We must do our utmost. If others will quarrel with us, we must take all possible care not to quarrel with them. If others will despise and hate us, we must not despise and hate them. "In the bond men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive;

15 [x]But [*]speaking the truth in love, [y]may grow up into him in all things, [z]which is the head, even Christ:

16 From [a]whom the whole body [b]fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body, unto the [d]edifying of itself in love.[4]

17 This I say therefore, and [f]testify in the Lord, that ye henceforth walk not as other Gentiles walk, [i]in the vanity of their mind;

18 Having the understanding darkened, being [l]alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, [m]because of the [†]blindness of their heart:

19 Who being [n]past feeling, have [o]given themselves over unto lasciviousness, to work all uncleanness with greediness.

20 But [q]ye have not so learned Christ;

21 If so be that ye have [r]heard him, and have been taught by him, [s]as the truth is in Jesus:

22 That ye put off, concerning the former conversation, [x]the old man, which is corrupt according to the [y]deceitful lusts;

23 And be renewed in the [a]spirit of your mind;

24 And that ye put on the [c]new man,[5] which after God is [e]created in righteousness and [‡]true holiness.

25 Wherefore, [g]putting away lying, [h]speak every man truth with his neighbour: for we are members one of another.

26 Be [k]ye angry, and sin not: [l]let not the sun go down upon your wrath:

27 Neither [m]give place[6] to the devil.

28 Let him that stole [o]steal no more: but rather let him labour, working with his hands the thing which is good, that he may have to [§]give to him that needeth.

29 Let [r]no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that which is good to the [‖]use of edifying, that it may minister grace unto the hearers.

30 And [u]grieve not[7] the Holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto [y]the day of redemption.

31 Let all [z]bitterness, [a]and wrath, and anger, and clamour, and [c]evil-speaking, be put away from you, [d]with all malice:

32 And be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you.

The apostle exhorteth to charity, 2; to avoid all uncleanness, covetousness, &c., 3; to have no fellowship with the works of darkness, 11, but to walk circumspectly, avoiding all excess, 15. Duties of wives and husbands, 22.

BE ye therefore [a]followers of God, as dear children;

2 And walk in love, [d]as Christ also hath loved us, and hath given himself for us an offering and [e]a sacrifice to God [f]for a sweet smelling savour.

3 But [g]fornication, and all uncleanness, or [h]covetousness, let it not be once named among you, as becometh saints;

4 Neither [l]filthiness, nor foolish talking, nor jesting,[1] which are not convenient, but [n]rather giving of thanks.

5 For this ye know, [p]that no whoremonger, nor unclean person, nor covetous man, who is an idolater, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God.

6 Let [r]no man deceive you with vain words: for because of these things [t]cometh the wrath of God upon [u]the children of [*]disobedience.

7 Be not ye therefore partakers with them.

8 For ye were sometimes darkness, [z]but now are ye light in the Lord: [a]walk as children of light;

9 (For [b]the fruit of the Spirit is in all goodness, and [d]righteousness, and [e]truth;)

10 Proving what is [g]acceptable unto the Lord.

11 And have no fellowship[2] with the unfruitful [k]works of darkness, but rather reprove them.

12 For [m]it is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret.

13 But all things that are [†]reproved are made manifest by the light: [o]for whatsoever doth make manifest is light.

14 Wherefore [‡]he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and [q]arise from the dead, [r]and Christ shall give thee light.

15 See then that ye [t]walk circumspectly, [u]not as fools, but as wise, 16 [x]Redeeming[3] the time, because [y]the days are evil.

17 Wherefore [z]be ye not unwise, but [a]understanding what the will of the Lord is.

18 And [b]be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess; [d]but be filled with the Spirit;

19 Speaking to yourselves in psalms,[4] and hymns, and spiritual songs, singing and making melody [g]in your heart to the Lord;

20 Giving [h]thanks always for all things unto God and the Father [i]in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ; of peace." Peace is a bond as it unites persons, and makes them live friendly one with another. A peaceable disposition and conduct bind Christians together; whereas discord and quarrel disband and disunite their hearts and affections. Many slender twigs, bound together, become strong. "The bond of peace" is the strength of society. Not that it can be imagined that all good people, and all the members of societies, should be in every thing just of the same length, and the same sentiments, and the same judgment: but "the bond of peace" unites them all together, with a non obstante to these. As in a bundle of rods, they may be of different lengths, and different strength; but when they are tied together by a bond, they are much stronger than any, even than the thickest and strongest, were of themselves.—Henry.

21 Submitting yourselves one to another in the fear of God.

Christ's Ascension. Ver. 7—10. The common Head and Lord, of his one body, had conferred on every individual member gifts and grace, according to that measure, by which, in his sovereign wisdom, he proportioned his communications to the wants and circumstances of his saints. This, therefore, every one ought thankfully to receive, and quietly employ for the benefit of the whole, without envying, coveting, or disputing. With reference to this matter, the Lord had spoken by the Psalmist concerning the victories and exaltation of the Messiah; that when he ascended up on high, and led captive those enemies who had enslaved the human race, he received gifts for rebellious men, that he might confer them on them. Now, if Jehovah, (who was there evidently spoken of,) "ascended," what doth this imply, but that he previously descended into these lower parts of the earth? So that his incarnation, abasement, death, and burial, in human nature, previous to his resurrection and ascension, were evidently pointed out by the prophet. He, who thus descended and abased himself, was the very same person who also ascended up far above all heavens, as placed over all the inhabitants of them; that he might fulfil all things relative to his mediatorial undertaking; that from his fulness he might fill his church, his ministers, and all believers, with his abundant gifts and graces.—Scott.

Office-Bearers in the Church.—Ver. 11. The apostles were chief: these Christ immediately called, furnished them with extraordinary gifts, and the power of working miracles, and with infallibility in delivering his truths. The prophets seem to have been such as expounded the writings of the Old Testament, and foretold things to come. The evangelists were ordained persons, 2 Tim. i. 6, whom the apostles took for their companions in travel, Gal. ii. 1. And then there are ordinary ministers, employed in a lower and narrower sphere, as pastors and teachers. Pastors are such as are fixed at the head of particular churches, with design to guide, instruct, and feed them in the manner appointed by Christ; and they are frequently called bishops and elders: and the teachers were such, whose work it was also to preach the gospel, and to instruct the people by way of exhortation. We see here, that it is Christ's prerogative to appoint what officers and offices he pleases in his church.

Spiritual Change.—Ver. 22—24. The corrupt nature is called "a man," because, like the human body, it consists of divers parts, naturally supporting and strengthening one another. It is "the old man," as old Adam, from whom we derived it: it is bred in the bone, and we brought it into the world with us: it is subtle as an "old man;" but in all God's saints decaying and withering as an "old man," and ready to pass away. It is said to be "corrupt;" for sin in the soul is the corruption of its faculties: and where it is not mortified, it grows daily worse and worse, and so tends to destruction. "According to the deceitful lusts." Sinful inclinations and desires are deceitful lusts: they promise men happiness, but render men more miserable; and betray men into destruction, if they are not subdued and mortified.—Henry.

CHAP. V. Heathen Sins.—Ver. 3, 4. The apostle had, in the foregoing chapter, warned the Ephesians against several of those immoralities to which they had been addicted before their conversion: and he here resumes that subject. The degree in which fornication, in particular, and other kinds of licentiousness were practised, and even allowed, nay, vindicated, by the gravest philosophers of the Gentiles, can hardly be conceived by those, who are not very conversant with their writings. The exhortation, therefore, as it respects these vices, needs little comment: but many learned men maintain, that the word rendered covetousness, means an insatiable craving after more and more of these sensual indulgences. Now, it cannot be denied, that the word sometimes has that sense: yet it can hardly be supposed, that the apostle would, in so general a way, have added to his warning against fornication, the mention of that "uncleanness with greediness," which he before had stated as the excess of pagan blindness and hardness of heart, chap. iv. 19. On the other hand, can it be thought that covetousness should here, and in all other exhortations of a similar nature, which the apostle addressed to the churches, be almost, if not entirely, overlooked? For they, who explain the word in this text, of greediness in lewdness, put the same construction on it, in other places where it occurs. No doubt, covetousness, or eager desires of gain, whether to hoard, or to support extravagance, is as contrary to vital Christianity, as the grossest sensualities, though more plausible, and not so easily defined; and also as supplying the means of silencing or softening the reproofs of those, who would firmly protest against fornication, and even, in many cases, prosecute them with the censures of the church.—Scott.

22 Wives, [m]submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord.

23 For the husband is the head of the wife, [p]even as Christ is the head of the church; and he [q]is the saviour of the body.

24 Therefore, as the church is subject unto Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands in every thing.

25 Husbands, [s]love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it;

26 That [u]he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word;[5]

27 That he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; [c]but that it should be holy, and without blemish.

28 So ought men to love their wives as their own bodies:[6] he that loveth his wife loveth himself.

29 For no man ever yet hated his own flesh; but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as the Lord the church:

30 For we [g]are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones.

31 For [h]this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall be joined unto his wife, and they two shall be one flesh.

32 This is a great mystery: but [k]I speak concerning Christ and the church.

33 Nevertheless, let every one of you in particular so love his wife even as himself; and the wife see that she reverence her husband.

18 [z]Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with [a]all perseverance [c]and supplication for all saints;

19 And for me, that utterance may be given unto me, that I may open my mouth boldly, to make known the mystery of the gospel,

20 For which [k]I am an ambassador in †bonds; that ‡therein I may speak boldly, as I ought to speak.

21 But that ye also may know my affairs, and how I do, Tychicus, a beloved brother and [q]faithful minister in the Lord, shall make known to you all things:

22 Whom I have sent unto you for the same purpose, that ye might know our affairs, and that he might comfort your hearts.

23 Peace be to the brethren, and love with faith, from God the Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ.

24 Grace be with all them that [x] love our Lord Jesus Christ §in sincerity. Amen.

Intemperance.—Ver. 18. This was a sin very frequent among the heathens, and particularly on occasion of the festivals of their gods; and more especially in their Bacchanalia; then they were wont to inflame themselves with wine; and all manner of inordinate lust were consequent upon it; and therefore the apostle adds, "wherein," or in which drunkenness, "is excess." Instead of being filled with wine, he exhorts them to "be filled with the Spirit." Those who are full of drink are not likely to be full of the Spirit, and therefore this duty is opposed to the former sin. The meaning of the exhortation is, that men should labour for a plentiful measure of the graces of the Spirit, that would fill their souls with holy joy, strength, and courage; which things sensual men expect their wine should inspire them with. We cannot be guilty of an "excess" in our endeavours after these. Drunkards are wont to sing obscene and profane songs. The heathens in their bacchanals used to sing hymns to Bacchus, whom they called the god of wine. Thus they express their joy; but the Christian's joy should express itself in songs of praise to his God. In these they should "speak to themselves" in their assemblies and meetings together for mutual edification. By "psalms" may be meant David's psalms, or such composures as were fitly sung with musical instruments. By "hymns" may be meant such others as were confined to matter of praise, as those of Zacharias, Simeon, &c. "Spiritual songs" may contain a great variety of matter, doctrinal, prophetical, historical, &c.—Henry.

Chap. VI. Duty of Children.—Ver. 1—4. The apostle next exhorted believers, who had parents living, to be obedient to them "in the Lord," for his sake, from gratitude to him, in obedience to his commands, and for the honour of his gospel. This general exhortation was to be limited according to the ages and particular circumstances of children. Some, it is probable, had Gentile parents; and they ought not to obey them when their commands contradicted those of Christ; yet, it would be peculiarly incumbent on them to give up their own will in all things lawful, for the credit of Christianity. Obedience of children to parents thus limited, is in itself equitable and reasonable, a debt due to the instruments of their existence, and the tender guardians of their infancy; and generally conducive to their good. Indeed, the sentiments of all nations coincide in this; and the law of God expressly commanded children to honour the persons and authority of both father and mother, and to requite their kindness as they had opportunity and ability. This was placed in the decalogue as the first commandment of the second table, being the first of the relative duties, and the source of all the others: and a promise of long life in the land of Canaan was annexed to it, as given to the Israelites; which might be generally applied to Christians, and encourage them to expect temporal comfort and length of days, as a gracious recompense for their obedience; unless the Lord should see good to reward it more liberally in another life. Indeed, it has been observed in every age, that they who were distinguished for filial obedience were remarkably prospered.

The Christian Armour.—Ver. 14—17. The minds of Christian soldiers ought to be fortified and prepared for the assault, by conscious sincerity in their profession, and by truth in their whole conversation; as the loins of soldiers were girded by their military belt, when they marched out to the battle. "Righteousness," or an habitual and conscientious obedience to the various commandments of God, should be their breastplate, which would defend them from fatal wounds in the day of conflict: whereas conscious negligence and disobedience would render them afraid to face persecution or death in the cause of Christ. To stand their ground in such difficult situations, or to march forward in such rugged paths, "their feet must be shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace;" that is, their motives and encouragements to obedience, amidst temptations and persecutions, must be derived from a clear and comprehensive knowledge of the gospel; through which God is revealed as "in Christ reconciling the world unto himself," and actually at peace with every believer, notwithstanding past transgressions, and present defects and infirmities. Over all these faith must be placed as a shield; by crediting the testimony of God, realizing unseen objects, resting the soul on the promises, and relying on the power, truth, mercy, wisdom, grace, and providence of God, according to his word; they would be able to ward off the temptations of Satan, as soldiers received the darts of the enemy on their shields. The suggestions of the tempter would indeed resemble darts, by the suddenness and violence with which they were injected, and fiery, or poisoned, darts, by the fatal effects produced by them. To all this, hope, or a Scriptural expectation of victory and eternal glory, must supply the place of a helmet to cover the head in the day of battle; by counteracting that discouragement, which doubtfulness of the event would induce, in times of sharp temptation: so that it might be called the helmet of salvation, as nothing could be courageously done without it. To complete the whole, the word of God must serve the Christian soldier for a sword; an exact and comprehensive acquaintance with its various doctrines, promises, precepts, warnings, and a readiness at recollecting, and adducing, pertinent texts upon every emergency, would drive the tempter to a distance, and procure a final victory over him. Thus the whole suit of armour would be complete: for no covering was provided for the back, as victory must be sought by valour, not by cowardice.—Scott.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE PHILIPPIANS.

As this epistle was manifestly written from Rome, and during the latter part of the apostle's first imprisonment in that city, nearly twelve years had passed since he first preached at Philippi; but the conduct of the Christians there had uniformly been so exemplary, and their grateful affection to him so fully evinced, that he had only to rejoice over them with heartfelt gratitude, while he poured out his prayers for them, and affectionately animated them to persevere and press forward in their heavenly course.

CHAP. I.

Paul's thankfulness and prayer to God for them, 1. His readiness to suffer, 21.

PAUL and Timotheus, the servants of Jesus Christ, to all [d]the saints in Christ Jesus which are at Philippi, with [f]the bishops [g]and deacons:[1]

2 Grace be unto you, and peace from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 I [h]thank my God upon every *remembrance of you,

4 Always [i]in every prayer of mine for you all, making request with joy,

5 For your fellowship in the gospel from the first day until now;

6 Being confident of this very thing, that he which hath [p]begun a good work in you, will [†]perform it until [r]the day of Jesus Christ:

7 Even as it is meet for me to think this of you all, because [‡]I have you in my heart; inasmuch as both in my bonds, [x]and in the defence and confirmation of the gospel, ye all are [§]partakers of my grace.

8 For [y]God is my record, how greatly I long after you all [a]in the bowels of Jesus Christ.

9 And this I pray, that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge and in [‖]all judgment;

10 That ye may *approve[2] things that are excellent; that ye may be sincere,[3] and without offence, [b]till the day of Christ;

11 Being filled with the fruits of righteousness, which [k]are by Jesus Christ, unto the glory and praise of God.

12 But I would ye should understand, brethren, that the things which happened unto me have fallen out rather unto the furtherance of the gospel;

13 So that my bonds [†]in Christ are manifest in all [‡]the palace,[4] and [§]in all other places;

14 And many of the brethren in the Lord, waxing confident by my bonds, are much more bold to speak the word without fear.

15 Some indeed [r]preach Christ even of envy and strife; and [t]some also of good-will.

16 The one preach Christ of contention, not sincerely, supposing to add affliction to my bonds;

17 But the other of love, knowing that I am sent for the defence of the gospel.

18 What then? notwithstanding, every way, whether in pretence, or in truth,[5] Christ is preached; and I therein do rejoice, yea, and will rejoice.

19 For [d]I know that this shall turn to my salvation through your prayer, and the supply of [f]the Spirit of Jesus Christ, 20 According to my earnest expectation and my hope, that in nothing I shall be ashamed, but that with all boldness, as always, so now also Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life, or by death.

21 For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain.

22 But if I [o]live in the flesh, this is the fruit of my labour: yet what I shall choose I wot not.

23 For I am in a strait betwixt two,[6] having [s]a desire to depart, and to be with Christ; which is far better:

24 Nevertheless to abide in the flesh is more needful for you.

25 And, having this confidence, I know that I shall abide and continue with you all, [z]for your furtherance and joy of faith;

26 That your rejoicing may be more abundant in Jesus Christ for me, by my coming to you again.

27 Only [c]let your conversation[7] be as it becometh the gospel of Christ: that whether I come and see you, or else be absent, I may hear of your affairs, [g]that ye stand fast in one spirit, with one mind striving together[8] for [i]the faith of the gospel;

28 And in nothing terrified by your adversaries: which is to them an evident token of perdition, [m]but to you of salvation, and that of God.

CHAP. I. THE GOOD WORK.—Ver. 6. Observe here, 1. The work of grace is a good work, a blessed work: for it makes us good, and is an earnest of good to us. It makes us like God, and fits us for the enjoyment of God. That may well be called a good work which does us the greatest good. 2. Wherever this good work is begun, it is of God's beginning; "He has begun a good work in you." We could not begin it ourselves, for we are by nature "dead in trespasses and sins;" and what can dead men do toward raising themselves to life; or how can they begin to act till they are enlivened in the same respect in which they are said to be dead? It is God who "quickens" them "who are" thus dead, Eph. ii. 1; Col. ii. 13. 3. The work of grace is but begun in this life; it is not finished here; as long as we are in this imperfect state, there is still something more to be done. 4. If the same God who begins the good work did not undertake the carrying on and finishing it, it would lie for ever unfinished. He must perform it who began it. 5. We may be confident, or well persuaded, that God not only will not forsake, but that he will finish and crown "the work" of his own hands. For, "as for God, his work is perfect." 6. The work of grace will never be perfected "till the day of Jesus Christ," the day of his "appearance," when he shall come to judge the world, and finish his mediation, then his work will be complete, and the top-stone will be brought forth with shouting.

LIFE—DEATH.—Ver. 21. We have here an account of the life and death of blessed Paul: his life was Christ, and his death was gain. Observe, 1. It is the undoubted character of every good Christian that to him to live is Christ. The glory of Christ ought to be the end of our life, the grace of Christ the principle of our life, and the word of Christ the rule of it. The Christian life is derived from Christ, and directed to him. He is the Principle, Rule, and End of it. 2. All those to whom to live is Christ, to them to die "will be gain:" it is great gain, a present gain, everlasting gain. Death is a great loss to a carnal, worldly man; for he loses all his comforts and all his hopes; but to a good Christian it is gain, for it is the end of all his weakness and misery, and the perfection of his comforts, and accomplishment of his hopes: it delivers him from all the evils of life, and brings him to the possession of the chiefest good. Or, "To me to die is gain," that is, "to the gospel as well as to myself, which will receive a further confirmation by the seal of my blood, as it had before by the labours of my life." So Christ would be "magnified by his death," ver. 20. Some read the whole expression thus: "To me, living and dying, Christ is gain;" "I desire no more, neither while I live, nor when I die, but to win Christ, and be found in him." It may be thought, if death was gain to him, he would be weary of life, and impatient for death. No, says he ver. 22, "If I live in the flesh, this is the fruit of my labour," that is, Christ is. He reckoned his labour well bestowed, if he could be instrumental to advance the honour and interest of the kingdom of Christ in the world.

CONSISTENT PRACTICE.—Ver. 27. "Only let your conversation be as becometh the gospel of Christ." Observe, They who profess the gospel of Christ should have their conversation as becomes the gospel, or in a suitableness and agreeableness to it. Let it be as become those who believe gospel-truths, submit to gospel-laws, and depend upon gospel-promises; and with an answerable faith, holiness, and comfort. Let it be in all respects as those who belong to the "kingdom of God" among men, and are members and subjects of it. It is an ornament to our profession, when our conversation is of a piece with it. "That whether I come and see you, or else be absent, I may hear of your affairs." He had spoken in ver. 26 of his coming to them again, and had spoken of it with some assurance, though he was now a prisoner; but he would not have them build upon that. Our religion must not be bound up in the hands of our ministers; "Whether I come or no, let me hear well of you, and do you 'stand fast.'" Whether ministers come or no, Christ is always at hand. He is nigh to us, never far from us; and hastens his second coming, the "coming of the Lord draws nigh," Jam. v. 8. Let me hear of you, "that you stand fast in one spirit, with one mind striving together for the faith of the gospel."

SUFFERING FOR CHRIST A PRIVILEGE.—Ver. 29. "For to you it is given on the behalf of Christ, not only to believe, but also to suffer for his name." Here are two precious gifts given, and both on the behalf of Christ. 1. To "believe" in him. Faith is God's gift on the behalf of Christ, who purchased for us not only the blessedness which is the object of faith, but the grace of faith itself; the ability and disposition to believe is from God. 2. To suffer for the sake of Christ is a valuable gift too; it is a great honour and a great advantage; for we may be very serviceable to the glory of God, which is the end of our creation, and encourage and confirm the faith of others. And there is a great reward attending it too; "Blessed are ye when men shall persecute you, for great is your reward in heaven," Matt. v. 11, 12. And if "we suffer with him, we shall also reign with him," 2 Tim. ii. 12. If we suffer reproach and loss for Christ, we are to reckon it a great gift, and prize it accordingly; always provided we behave under our sufferings with the genuine temper of the martyrs and confessors, ver. 30. "'Having the same conflict which ye saw in me, and now hear to be in me:' you suffering in the same manner as you 'saw,' and now 'hear of me' that I suffer." It is not simply the suffering, but the cause; and not only the cause, but the spirit, which makes the martyr. A man may suffer in an ill cause, and then he suffers justly; or in a good cause, but with a wrong mind, and then his sufferings lose their value.—Henry.

29 For unto you it is given in the behalf of Christ, not only to believe on him, but also to suffer for his sake;

30 Having the same conflict which ye saw in me, and now hear to be in me.

CHAP. II.

He exhorteth to unity and humility, 1; and to a careful proceeding in the way of salvation, 12.

IF there be therefore [a]any consolation in Christ, if any comfort of love, [c]if any fellowship of the Spirit, if any bowels and mercies,

2 Fulfil ye my joy, that ye be like-minded, having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind.

3 Let nothing be done through strife or vain-glory; but in lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves.

4 Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others.

5 Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus:

6 Who, being in the form of God,[1] [e]thought it not robbery to be equal with God;

7 But made himself of no reputation, and took upon him [q]the form of a servant, and was made [r]in the *likeness of men:

8 And being found in fashion as a man, [t]he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even [x]the death of the cross.

9 Wherefore [y]God also hath highly exalted him, [z]and given him a name which is above every name:[2]

10 That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven,[3] and things in earth, and things under the earth;

11 And that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ [d]is Lord, [e]to the glory of God the Father.

12 Wherefore, my beloved, as ye have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but now much more in my absence, [h]work out your own salvation with fear and trembling:

13 For it is [l]God which worketh in you, both to will and to do of his good pleasure.

14 Do all things without murmurings and disputings;

15 That ye may be blameless and [†]harmless, the sons of God, without [t]rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom [‡]ye shine as lights in the world:

16 Holding forth the word of life; [z]that I may rejoice in the day of Christ, that I have not run in vain, neither laboured in vain.

But no other form beside the essential could infer an equality with God.—PEARSON.

CHAP. II. CHRIST'S HUMILIATION.—Ver. 5—8. To illustrate and enforce in the most effectual manner that conduct which he had recommended, the apostle here called on them to cultivate and manifest the same judgment and disposition which had been so conspicuous in Christ Jesus. He had been "in the form of God;" he appeared in divine majesty and glory, as the Creator and Lord of all, in the heaven of heavens, and all the angels worshipped him as God, one with and co-equal to the Father. He had manifested himself as JEHOVAH to patriarchs, prophets, and the church of Israel, through successive ages; and had not thought it a robbery to be equal with God, and to receive divine adoration from man. To this he was conscious of having a full right, without in the least interfering with the honour due to the eternal Father. Nevertheless, he emptied, or impoverished, himself; he divested himself of his divine glory, that he might appear on earth like one of no dignity or reputation; as princes travel without the insignia of royalty, and are not known from private persons. He did not come down from heaven "in the form of God," as when he gave the law from Mount Sinai; he appeared not like himself, "the Lord of glory," but "in the form of a servant," even of the lowest servant. As he was really a servant to the Father when in the form of a servant, so was he really God when in the form of God. By this voluntary susception of a new character, in order to man's salvation, "he was made in the likeness of men;" he assumed our nature, and became like us in all things but sin. Thus the only begotten of the Father tabernacled here on earth "in fashion as a man," being truly man, but more than man at the same time; and he was pleased still more to abase himself, by submitting to the most indigent circumstances, and the most accumulated hardships, for our good; especially he became obedient to the whole divine law, as our surety, and fulfilled all righteousness, amidst inconceivable difficulties and temptations. In this he persevered to the end, and his voluntary obligations requiring it of him, he submitted to suffer death; even that of crucifixion, the most ignominious, and tormenting, and accursed kind of execution, to which the vilest of malefactors were condemned; and he was most perfectly resigned and obedient to the Father, through all the inward agony, and multiplied indignities and cruelties which he endured. Thus low he voluntarily stooped from "that glory which he had with the Father before the world was." He not only abased himself to become man, but he denied and humbled himself as man, to the very depth of suffering and shame, from love to worthless hell-deserving rebels and enemies! The example can never be done justice to by human language; and all our imitation must miserably fall infinitely short of it. In this view of the subject, how important and [illegible] is the apostle's argument!

[illegible].—Ver. 9—11. When the eternal Word and Son of God had fulfilled his engagements as our incarnate surety, God the Father most highly exalted him, in our nature, by advancing him to the mediatorial throne. For the two circumstances, that it is Christ as man who is thus exalted, and that he is exalted as Mediator, renders this perfectly consistent with his eternal glory and dominion as "God over all, blessed for evermore." The absolute kingdom of the Creator, and the mediatorial kingdom of the Redeemer, established for the benefit and salvation of rebels against the Creator, who are condemned by his law, must be distinguished. It was in consequence of the engagements of the eternal Son that the dispensation of mercy was introduced. It was "for this joy set before him that he endured the cross," &c. Nothing could be deducted from his authority as God, nor any thing added to it; but it did not consist with the honour of the divine law and justice to deal with men except through a Mediator, who was one with the Father and one with them, their Surety, Sacrifice, and Intercessor. The mediatorial kingdom alone was given to Christ, and given to him as man; but had he not been God also, and possessed of all divine perfections, how could he possibly have administered it? Thus God the Father "gave him a name," and a degree of honour and authority, above that of every other name; so that no created being ever was, or could be, so honoured as he was, who had been the man sorrows, and crucified between two thieves!—Scott.

CHAP. III. THE CONCISION.—Ver. 2. The Philippians, however, were especially cautioned to "beware of the concision," or the cutting off; the judaizers laid much stress on cutting off the foreskin, though they did not mortify the deeds of the body; they wanted to cut off the Gentiles from the church, but they cut off themselves and others from salvation, by their dependence on the works of the law. The honourable title of the circumcision did not therefore belong to them. That ancient rite was no longer of any value; Christians were the true circumcision, the covenant-people of God, the spiritual seed of Abraham; "the righteousness of faith" was sealed to them by the circumcision of the heart, of which baptism was the outward sign. They worshipped God not so much according to external forms, as spiritually, and under the teaching of the Holy Spirit.

GAIN—LOSS.—Ver. 8—11. For His sake, whom he rejoiced to call his Lord, the apostle suffered the loss of his worldly friends, prospects, interests; and his strength of mind, his superior talents, his learning, and his connexion with the great, which promise great prosperity. But he had renounced all [illegible] he continually expected that he should be called to [illegible] he accounted all these [illegible] to be most worthless [illegible] stock of Israel,[3] of the tribe of Benjamin, an Hebrew of the Hebrews; as touching the law, a Pharisee;

6 Concerning zeal, [a]persecuting the church; [b]touching the righteousness which is in the law, blameless.

7 But what things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ.

8 Yea doubtless, and [y]I count all things but loss for [z]the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: [b]for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may [d]win Christ,

9 And [e]be found in him, [g]not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, [f]the righteousness which is of God by faith:

10 That [k]I may know him, [l]and the power of his resurrection, [m]and the fellowship of his sufferings,[4] being made conformable unto his death;

11 If [n]by any means I might [o]attain unto the resurrection of the dead.

12 Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect;[5] but I follow after, if [s]that I may apprehend that for which also I am [t]apprehended of Christ Jesus.

13 Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, [x]forgetting those things which are behind, [z]and reaching forth unto those things which are before,

14 I press toward the mark, for the prize of [b]the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.[6]

15 Let us therefore, as many as be perfect, be thus minded: and if in any thing ye be otherwise minded, [e]God shall reveal even this unto you.

16 Nevertheless, whereto we have already attained, let us walk by the same rule, let us mind the same thing.

17 Brethren, [i]be followers together of me, [k]and mark them which walk so, as ye have us for an ensample.

18 (For many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are the [o]enemies of the cross of Christ:[7]

19 Whose end is destruction, whose god is their belly, and [r]whose glory is in their shame, [s]who mind earthly things.)

20 For our [u]conversation[8] is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ:

21 Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself.

CHAP. IV.

The apostle exhorts and encourages the Philippians to stedfastness in the faith, concord among themselves, and joy in the Lord, 1; and to moderation, confidence in God, constant prayer and thanksgiving, and universal good behaviour, 5. He declares his joy in the Lord, on account of their renewed care of him, in sending by Epaphroditus a supply for his wants, 10; and rejoices that they were thus fruitful, as it would redound to their own profit, being a spiritual sacrifice peculiarly acceptable to God through Christ, who would abundantly supply all their wants, 15. To him he ascribes eternal glory, 20, and concludes with salutations and benedictions, 21.

THEREFORE, my brethren, dearly beloved and longed for, my joy and crown, [d]so stand fast in the Lord, my dearly beloved.

2 I beseech Euodias, and beseech Syntyche, [p]that they be of the same mind in the Lord.

3 And I entreat thee also, true yokefellow, help those women[1] which laboured with me in the gospel, with Clement also, and with other my fellow-labourers, [l]whose names are in the book of life.

4 [k]Rejoice in the Lord alway: and again I say, Rejoice.

5 Let your moderation be known unto all men. [o]The Lord is at hand.

6 Be careful for nothing: but [q]in every thing by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, let your requests be made [s]known unto God.

7 And [t]the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep[2] your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus.

8 Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true,[3] whatsoever things are *honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things.

9 Those things, which ye have both learned, and received, and heard, and seen in me, do: and [n]the God of peace shall be with you.

10 But [p]I rejoiced in the Lord greatly, that now at the last your care of me [†]hath flourished again; wherein ye were also careful, but ye lacked opportunity.

11 Not that I speak in respect of want: for I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content.

12 I know[4] both how to be abased, and I know how to abound: every where, and in all things, I am instructed both to be full and to be hungry, both to abound and to suffer need.

13 I [y]can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me.

14 Notwithstanding ye have well done that ye did communicate with my affliction.

15 Now, ye Philippians, know also, that in the beginning of the gospel, when I departed from Macedonia, no church communiground of his hope of acceptance with God, and of eternal salvation. He therefore gladly parted with them in order to win "the pearl of great price," which alone could make him rich, honourable, and happy for ever. For his great desire was "to be found in Christ," in the hour of death, and at the day of judgment; as Noah was in the ark when the deluge swept away an unbelieving world; and to stand before God, not having as his plea or title to life "his own righteousness," which, having reference to the law as its measure, could only condemn him; but "that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith;" even that righteousness which God bestows on and imputes to the believing sinner; namely, the perfect obedience unto death of his incarnate Son, which alone can answer the demands of the law, and render a transgressor's salvation consistent with the perfect justice of God.—Scott.

OUR GREAT HOPE.—Ver. 20, 21. "Who shall change our vile bodies, that they may be fashioned like unto his glorious body." There is a glory reserved for the bodies of the saints, which they will be instated in at the resurrection. The body is now at the best a "vile body, the body of our humiliation:" it has its rise and original from the earth, it is supported out of the earth, and is subject to many diseases, and to death at last. Besides, it is often the occasion and instrument of much sin, which is called the body of this death," Rom. vii. 24. Or it may be understood of its vileness when it lies in the grave; at the resurrection, it will be found a "vile body," resolved into rottenness and dust; the "dust will return to the earth as it was," Eccl. xii. 7. But it will be made a "glorious body;" and not only raised again to life, but raised to great advantage.—Henry.

CHAP. IV. PRAYER.—Ver. 6. "In every thing by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known to God." Observe, 1. We must not only keep up stated times for prayer, but we must pray upon every particular emergence. "In every thing by prayer." When any thing burthens our spirits, we must ease our minds by prayer; when our affairs are perplexed or distressed, we must seek direction and support. 2. We must join thanksgiving with our prayers and supplications: we must not only seek supplies of good, but own receipts of mercy. Grateful acknowledgments of what we have, argue a right disposition of mind, and are prevailing motives for further blessings. 3. Prayer is "offering up" our desires to God, or making them known to him; "Let your requests be made known to God." Not that God needs to be told either our wants or desires; for he knows them better than we can tell him: but he will know them from us, and have us show our regards and concern, express our value of the mercy, and sense of our dependence on him. 4. The effect of this will be the "peace of God keeping our hearts," ver. 7.

TRUE MORALITY.—Ver. 8. "Whatsoever things are true and honest;" a regard to truth in our words and engagements, and to decency and becomingness in our behaviour, suitable to our circumstance and condition of life. Whatsoever things are "just and pure;" agreeable to the rules of justice and righteousness in all our dealings with men; and without the impurity or mixture of sin. Whatsoever things are "lovely and of good report," that is, amiable; that will render us beloved, and make us well spoken of, as well as well thought of, by others. "If there be any virtue, if there be any praise;" any thing really virtuous in any kind, and worthy of commendation. Observe, 1. The apostle would have the Christians learn any thing which was good of their heathen neighbours; "'If there be any virtue, think of these things;' imitate them in what is truly excellent among them; and let not them outdo you in any instance of goodness." We should not be ashamed to learn any good thing of bad men, or those who have not our advantages. 2. Virtue has its praise, and will have. We should walk in all the ways of virtue, and abide therein; and then, whether our "praise" be of "men," or no, it will be "of God," Rom. ii. 29.—Henry.

THE APOSTLE'S EQUANIMITY.—Ver. 10—13. He knew how to be abased by the deepest poverty, labouring hard for a mean subsistence, neglected and despised; without repining, or using any dishonourable means of obtaining relief: and he was able to abound, without deviating from the strictest rules of temperance and humility, and without growing reluctant to the most self-denying and afflictive labours. In every respect, and in all things, he was initiated into the mysterious life of faith, and communion with God, as the source of consolation: so that he knew how to be full, and able to impart to others, without being betrayed into inexpedient indulgence, pride, or love of worldly things; or to be hungry, and destitute of bare necessaries for himself, without being discomposed or unfitted for his place and work. Thus he found by experience, that he could do all things, in this respect, and in whatever was connected with his duty: not by his natural ability, nor yet by the grace which he had already received; but through the strength communicated to him from Christ, whose power rested upon him, and enabled him for every service and situation to which he called him.—He seems to have learned these things, by a deep sense of his own unworthiness, and his obligations to the Lord; by continually contemplating the poverty, abasement, and sufferings of Christ; by a believing confidence in the wisdom, faithfulness, and love of God, who ordered all such matters in the best manner possible; by a lively hope of immortal felicity; and an ardent desire, by any labours or sufferings, to promote the cause of Christ in the world.—Scott.

COLOSSIANS.

COLOSSE was a populous city of Phrygia, in Asia Minor, near to Laodicea and Hierapolis. It is not recorded that St Paul had been there; and the general testimony of antiquity favours the opinion that Epaphras, or some other evangelist sent by the apostle from Ephesus, founded the church at Colosse. There is a great similarity between this epistle and that to the Ephesians; and it is generally supposed that they were written about the same time, and sent by the same messenger, even Tychicus; though Onesimus, being a Colossian, who accompanied Tychicus, is not mentioned in the epistle to the Ephesians.

CHAP. I.

He thanketh God for their faith, 1; prayeth for their increase in grace, 9, and describeth the true Christ, 15.

PAUL, an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, and Timotheus our brother,

2 To the saints and faithful brethren in Christ which are at Colosse: Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 We [c]give thanks to God and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, [f]praying always for you,

4 Since we heard of your [h]faith in Christ Jesus, and of the love which ye have to all the saints;

5 For the [i]hope which is laid up for you in heaven, whereof ye heard before in [l]the word of the truth of the gospel;

6 Which is come unto you, as it is in all the world;[1] [n]and bringeth forth fruit, as it doth also in you, since the day ye heard of it, and [o]knew the grace of God in truth:

7 As ye also learned of Epaphras, our dear fellow-servant, who is for you a faithful minister of Christ;

8 Who also declared unto us your love in the Spirit.[2]

9 For this cause we also, since the day we heard it, do not cease to pray for you, and to desire that ye might be filled with the knowledge of his will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding;

10 That [e]ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work, and [d]increasing in the knowledge of God;

11 Strengthened with all might, according to his glorious power, unto all patience and long-suffering with joyfulness;

12 [h]Giving thanks unto the Father, which hath made us meet to be [l]partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light:

13 Who hath delivered us from the power of darkness,[3] and hath translated us into [r]the kingdom of [*]his dear Son;

14 In whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins:

15 Who is the image of the invisible God,[4] the first-born[5] of every creature:

16 For by him were all things created that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers; all things were created by him, and for him.

17 And he is before all things, and by him all things consist:

[4] In the Son, as in a clear and perfect glass, we see the Father; that eternal Son had His being of and with the Father, before ever any creature was made.—HALL.
[5] "First-born," or "first-begotten," in this passage, may signify the "heir or Lord of the whole creation:" for, anciently, the first-born was entitled to possess his father's estate (2 Chr. xxi. 3); the first-born was, likewise, lord of his brethren, who were all his servants (see Gen. xxvii. 37). Hence, among the Hebrews and other nations, "first-born," "heir," and "lord" were synonymous terms (see Gal. iv. 1).—See WHITBY, MACKNIGHT, PYE SMITH.

these verses: 1. With praises to God; "Now unto God and our Father be glory for ever and ever. Amen." Observe, (1.) God is to be considered by us as "our Father; Now unto God and our Father." It is a great condescension and favour in God, to own the relation of Father to sinners, and allow us to say to him, "Our Father;" and it is a title peculiar to the gospel dispensation. It is also a great privilege and encouragement to us, to consider him as "our Father;" as one so nearly related, and who bears so tender an affection towards us. We should look upon God, under all our weakness and fears, not as a tyrant or an enemy, but as a "Father," who is disposed to pity us and help us. (2.) We must ascribe glory to God as a Father: the glory of his own excellence, and of all his mercy unto us. We must thankfully own the receipt of all from him, and give the praise of all to him. And our praise must be constant and perpetual; it must be "glory for ever and ever." 2. With salutations to his friends at Philippi; "'Salute every saint in Christ Jesus,' give my hearty love to all the Christians in your parts." He desires remembrances not only to the bishops and deacons, and the church in general, but to every particular saint. Paul had a kind affection to all good Christians. 3. He sends salutations from those who were at Rome; "'The brethren who are with me salute you;' the ministers, and all the saints here, send their affectionate remembrances to you. 'Chiefly they who are of Cæsar's household;' the Christian converts who belonged to the emperor's court." Observe, (1.) There were saints in Cæsar's household. Though Paul was imprisoned at Rome, for preaching the gospel, by the emperor's command, yet there were some Christians in his own family. The gospel early obtained among some of the rich and great. Perhaps the apostle fared the better, and received some favour, by means of his friends at court. (2.) "Chiefly they, &c." Observe, They, being bred at court, were more complaisant than the rest. See what an ornament to religion sanctified civility is.—Henry.

CHAP. I. THE GOSPEL.—Ver. 5. Observe, 1. The gospel is the "word of truth," and what we may safely venture our immortal souls upon; it proceeds from the "God of truth," and "the spirit of truth," and is a "faithful saying." He calls it, "the grace of God in truth," ver. 6. 2. It is a great mercy to hear this word of truth; for the great thing we learn from it, is, the happiness of heaven. "Eternal life is brought to light by the gospel," 2 Tim. i. 10. They heard of the hope laid up in heaven in the word of the truth of the gospel; "'Which is come unto you, as it is in all the world, and bringeth forth fruit, as it doth also in you,' ver. 6. This gospel is preached, and bringeth forth fruit in other nations; it is come to [illegible] in all the world,' according to the commission, 'Go preach the gospel in [illegible] and to 'every creature.'" Observe, (1.) All who hear the word of the gospel, ought to bring forth the fruit of the gospel, be obedient to it, and have their principles and lives formed according to it. This was the doctrine first preached; "Bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance," Matt. iii. 8. And our Lord says, "if ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them," John xiii. 17. Observe, (2.) Wherever the gospel comes, it will bring forth fruit to the honour and glory of God. "It bringeth forth fruit, as it doth also in you." We mistake, if we think to monopolize the comforts and benefits of the gospel to ourselves. Does the gospel bring forth fruit in us? so it does in others.

MEETNESS FOR HEAVEN.—Ver. 12. He hath prepared us for the eternal happiness of heaven, as the Israelites divided the promised land by lot; and hath given us the earnest and assurance of it. This he mentions first, because it is the first indication of the future blessedness, that by the grace of God we find ourselves in some measure prepared for it. God gives grace and glory, and we are here told what they both are. 1. What that glory is. It is the "inheritance of the saints in light." It is an "inheritance," and belongs to them as children, which is the best security, and the sweetest tenure; "If children, then heirs," Rom. viii. 17. And it is an inheritance of "the saints"—proper to sanctified souls. They who are not saints on earth, will never be saints in heaven. And it is an inheritance "in light;" the perfection of knowledge, holiness, and joy, by communion with God, who "is light," and the "Father of lights," Jam. i. 17; 1 John i. 5. 2. What this grace is. It is a "meetness" for the inheritance. "'He hath made us meet to be partakers,' suited and fitted us for the heavenly state by a proper temper and habit of soul; and he makes us meet by the powerful influence of his Spirit." It is the effect of the divine power to change the heart, and make it heavenly. Observe, All who are designed for heaven hereafter, are prepared for heaven now. As they who live and die unsanctified, go out of the world with their hell about them; so they who are sanctified and renewed, go out of the world with their heaven about them.—Henry.

GLORY OF CHRIST.—Ver. 15—20. Having mentioned Christ, as the well-beloved Son of God, the apostle here explained more fully the import of that expression. He declared him to be "the image of the invisible God." Being possessed of all divine perfections, as one with the Father; he appeared on earth, displaying those perfections, and performing all divine operations, through the medium of the human nature. Thus, he made the invisible God known to mankind, as his express image; he represented the Father, and manifested his glory.—The first-born of the whole [illegible] literally rendered.) Christ is [illegible] Father; and is [illegible] mysterious union in the sacred Trinity, but the [illegible]

in the Divine subsistence; for the grand display of the love of God to the world consisted, in "giving his own Son to" become man, in order to die for our sins, rather than in giving him when incarnate to death for us. The expression here used seems to be of the same import; he was qualified to be the image of the invisible God to men, by reason of his original and essential glory. Existing, as the co-eternal Son of the Father, before the creation of the world; he appeared as the first-begotten Son of God, to be the heir of all things when they were called into existence, as the first-born is the heir of the estate or kingdom. The reason or proof, adduced by the apostle, demonstrates, that he meant the words in some such sense; "for" says he, "by him all things were created." He then proceeds to mention all creatures in heaven and earth, and by the figurative terms of "thrones, dominions, principalities, and powers," clearly including the highest created dignity and exaltation, he evidently intended to declare that every creature of God, however distinguished, was created by Christ, as one in deity and operation with the Father and the Holy Spirit. Nay, he added, that they were all "created for him," for the display of his glory, and to do him service, Prov. xvi. 4: that "he was before all things;" yea, that "all things by him consist," or are preserved in being and order; so that without his sustaining power, they must fall into confusion or non-existence. It is perhaps impossible to use stronger language, to express creating and upholding power, universal sovereignty, and real deity, than is here employed. The same glorious person, of whose original majesty such sublime language had been employed, was next declared to be the "head of the body, the church." This manifestly related to his mediatorial character, which he voluntarily assumed and sustained in human nature. He is also the beginning, the author and source, of spiritual and eternal life to man, the resurrection and the life, both of his body and soul: and "the first-born from the dead;" the first who rose to die no more; the first-fruits of his people, who rose to inherit the mediatorial throne, as their surety, and for their benefit. So that it was evidently intended that in "all things he should have the pre-eminence" over all worlds, and in all respects; as to creation, providence, redemption, essential dignity, universal sovereignty, assumed and delegated authority, personal excellency, and the display of omnipotence; as the conqueror of "death, and of him that had the power of death;" both in the world and in the church: above all creatures visible and invisible, during time and to eternity.—Scott.

Chap. II. Full Assurance of Understanding.—Ver. 2. The apostle prays that they might attain and possess all those spiritual riches which were to be found in the distinct and complete understanding of the gospel of Christ, as connected with the full assurance of faith and hope; that so they might confidently acknowledge and profess their belief of the mystery of God, even of the Father and of Christ his beloved Son, as one with him, according to "the great mystery of godliness, God manifest in the flesh:" in whom, or in which mystery were treasured up all the riches of wisdom and knowledge. These were indeed hidden from the eyes of proud unbelievers: but the infinite wisdom and knowledge of God were more displayed in the person and redemption of Christ, than in all his other works: all true wisdom and knowledge consisted in a believing and practical experimental understanding of these mysteries, and such instructions as were deducible from them: yea, from this treasury all true wisdom and knowledge must be by faith and prayer; and all science or philosophy contrary to this are worthless.—Scott.

False Philosophy.—Ver. 8. There is a philosophy which is a noble exercise of our reasonable faculties, and highly serviceable to religion: such a study of the works of God as leads us to the knowledge of God, and confirms our faith in him. But there is a philosophy which is "vain and deceitful;" which is prejudicial to religion, and sets up the wisdom of man in competition with the wisdom of God; and while it pleases men's fancies, ruins their faith; as nice and curious speculations about things above us, or of no use or concern to us; or a care of words and terms of art, which have only an empty, and often a cheating appearance of knowledge. "After the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world:" this plainly reflects upon the Jewish pedagogy or economy, as well as the Pagan learning.

Christ's Triumph over Satan.—Ver. 15. As the curse of the law was against us, so the power of Satan was against us. He treated with God as the Judge, and redeemed us out of the hands of his justice by a price; but out of the hands of Satan the executioner he redeemed us by a power and with a high hand. "He led captivity captive." The devil and all the powers of hell were conquered and disarmed by the dying Redeemer. The first promise pointed at this; the "bruising the heel" of Christ in his sufferings was the "breaking the serpent's head," Gen. iii. 15. The expressions are lofty and magnificent: let us turn aside, and see this great sight. The Redeemer conquered by dying. See his crown of thorns turned into a crown of laurels. He "spoiled them," broke the devil's power, and conquered and disabled him, and "made a show of them openly;" exposed them to public shame, and made a show of them to angels and men. Never had the devil's kingdom such a mortal blow given to it, as was given by the Lord Jesus. He tied them to his chariot-wheels, and rode forth conquering and to conquer; alluding to the custom of a general's triumph, who returned victorious, "triumphing over them in it," both in his cross and by his death.—Henry.

Gnosticism.—Ver. 18, 19. Certain persons were induced, by an uncommanded and 2 [d]Set your [*]affection on things above, [e]not on things on the earth.

3 For ye are dead, and [g]your life is hid[2] with Christ in God.

4 When Christ, who is our life, shall [h]appear, then shall [i]ye also appear with him in glory.

5 Mortify therefore your members which are upon the earth; fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence,[3] and covetousness, which is idolatry:

6 For 'which things' sake the wrath of God cometh on the [t]children of disobedience.

7 In the which ye also walked sometime, when ye lived in them.

8 But now ye also put off all these; anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth.

9 Lie not one to another, seeing that [c]ye have put off the old man with his deeds;

10 And have [d]put on the new man, which is [r]renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him:

11 Where there is neither Greek nor Jew, circumcision nor uncircumcision, Barbarian, Scythian,[4] bond nor free: [n]but Christ is all, and in all.

12 Put on therefore, [q]as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, longsuffering;

13 Forbearing one another, and forgiving one another, if any man have a [†]quarrel against any: even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye.

14 And above all[5] these things put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness.

15 And let [c]the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body; and be ye thankful.

16 Let [r]the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another[6] in psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord.

17 And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all [r]in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him.

18 Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, [x]as it is fit in the Lord.

19 Husbands, love your wives, and be not bitter against them.

20 Children, obey your parents in all things:[7] for this is [c]well-pleasing unto the Lord.

21 Fathers, provoke not your children to anger, lest they be discouraged.

22 Servants, obey in all things your masters according to the flesh; not with eye-service, as men-pleasers; but in singleness of heart, fearing God:

23 And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, [k]as to the Lord, and not unto men;

24 Knowing that of the Lord [l]ye shall receive the reward of the inheritance: for ye serve the Lord Christ.

25 But he that doeth wrong shall receive for the wrong which he hath done: and there is no respect of persons.

Exhortations to masters to behave properly to their servants, 1; to perseverance in prayer, 2; to prudence and edifying speech, 5. The apostle commends Tychicus and Onesimus, by whom he sent the epistle, 7; and concludes with salutations, admonitions, and directions, 10.

MASTERS, give unto your servants that which is just and equal; knowing that [b]ye also have a master in heaven.

2 [c]Continue in prayer,[1] and watch in the same with thanksgiving;

3 Withal praying also for us, [g]that God would open unto us a door of utterance, to speak [h]the mystery of Christ, for which I am also in bonds;

4 That I may make it manifest, as I ought to speak.

5 Walk in wisdom toward them that are without,[2] redeeming the time.

6 Let your speech be alway with grace, seasoned with salt, that ye may know how ye ought to answer every man.

7 All my state shall Tychicus declare unto you, who is a beloved brother, and a faithful minister and fellow-servant in the Lord:

8 Whom I have sent unto you for the same purpose, that he might know your estate, [z]and comfort your hearts;

self-imposed humility, to worship angels, pretending that it was improper for mean, sinful creatures to come to God immediately with their prayers, and that it was therefore expedient to solicit the mediatory good offices of holy angels: and they aimed to persuade others to the practice. Thus they ascribed divine honours to created beings, as if ever present with men in all places, and acquainted with the sincerity and the desires of their hearts: nay, they seemed to intimate, that they were more compassionate and kind than the Lord himself. This might be called humility, and indeed it was a voluntary degradation to which a rational creature ought not to submit: yet in fact it originated from pride, and a most presumptuous intrusion into the supposed state of the invisible world; it substituted man's arrogant conjectures and speculations in the place of divine revelation; and it was the genuine offspring of that self-wisdom with which the carnal mind is so prone to be puffed up. By thus exalting angels to the office of mediators, and worshipping them in that capacity, they especially dishonoured Christ, the one Mediator between God and man, to whom, as God manifested in the flesh, such worship ought to be appropriated.—Scott.

CHAP. III. CHRIST OUR LIFE.—Ver. 4. Observe, 1. Christ is a believer's life. "I live, yet not I, but Christ lives in me," Gal. ii. 20. He is the Principle and End of the Christian's life. He lives in us by his Spirit, and we live to him in all we do. "To me to live is Christ," Phil. i. 21. Observe, 2. Christ will appear again. He is now "hid:" and the "heavens must contain" him; but he will appear in all the pomp of the upper world, with his "holy angels, and his own glory, and his Father's glory," Mark viii. 38; Luke ix. 26. Observe, 3. We shall then appear with him in glory. It will be his glory to have his redeemed with him: he will come to be glorified in his saints, 2 Thess. i. 10; and it will be their glory to come with him, and be with him for ever. Do we look for such a happiness as that, and should we not "set our affection" upon that world, and live above this? What is there here to make us fond of it? What is there not there to draw our hearts to it? Our Head is there, our home is there, our treasure is there, and we hope to be there for ever.—Henry.

LUST.—Ver. 5. In the detail of particulars here adduced, we may observe, that inordinate affection may relate to inexpedient, and excessive desires after even lawful indulgences of any kind: though some understand it of unnatural crimes. Evil concupiscence signifies the sensuality of the heart, and imagination, which must be mortified, or gross crimes will follow. But several expositors explain the word rendered covetousness, as denoting rather the excessive desire of sensual gratification, than the love of riches. This appears a very dangerous misconstruction: for, by this means, sensuality is supposed to be forbidden with a needless redundancy of words, and covetousness escapes without the least rebuke: whereas the love of money is the root of all kinds of evil, and both the Scripture and matter of fact, show it to be one of the greatest possible hinderances to man's salvation, and the greatest of all snares to the professors of the gospel; nor can any vice so properly be called idolatry, as avarice. The original word literally signifies having more, or have more, implying the hankering after still more and more, which is evidently the disease of the avaricious. It is but seldom used in the Greek writers for any thing but covetousness; though a few instances may be found of its being applied to an insatiable greediness in other respects. The general meaning of the word in the New Testament may be understood from most of the passages in which it is used, where its import cannot be doubted.

THE WORD OF CHRIST.—Ver. 16, 17. By the word of Christ the whole of the sacred Scripture seems to be meant; which was all from him, as "the light of the world," and the personal Word of God; and which, in one way or other, all related to him. It was very important that the Colossians should, by diligent study and meditation, store their memories and understandings with the instructions of Scripture; that it might thus abundantly dwell within them; and that so their judgments might be formed upon it, their hearts cast into the mould of it, and their consciences directed by it. Thus they would be enriched in all spiritual wisdom and knowledge, chap. ii. 2, 3; and would learn to act wisely in their whole conduct; or they would be influenced to use their knowledge in all wisdom, by reducing it to practice. This would enable them, with readiness and pertinency, to teach, caution, exhort, reprove, or encourage one another: while those psalms and sacred poems, which they sang together with holy affections, under the influence of divine grace in their hearts, to the glory of the Lord, would furnish them words suited to such mutual admonitions. Their idolatrous neighbours had laid up in their memories songs in praise of their base deities and corrupt practices, which they used on every festive occasion, and when they met together for social intercourse, nay, for amusement and recreation when alone. This, in fact, has always been the case, in every country; and the popular songs have an immense, but generally, a most pernicious effect on the people.—Scott.

CHAP. IV. MASTERS AND SERVANTS.—Ver. 1. The apostle proceeds with the duty of masters to their servants, which might have been joined to the foregoing chapter, and is a part of that discourse. He observes, 1. Justice is required of them; "Give unto your servants that which is just and equal;" not only strict justice, but equity and

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE

TO THE # THESSALONIANS.

THE apostle, in writing this first epistle, found very much to commend, which he does unreservedly, and scarcely anything to blame, though he saw it needful to intermix cautions and warnings with his exhortations. The exact, though manifestly undesigned, coincidence of this epistle with the history contained in the Acts of the Apostles, which it tends to elucidate and confirm, is worthy of notice, and may be clearly seen by consulting the marginal references. Thessalonica is now called Salonica or Salonici, and is under the dominion of the Turks, and the inhabitants are Mohammedans.

kindness. Be faithful to your promises to them, and perform your agreements; not defrauding them of their dues, or "keeping back by fraud the hire of the labourers," James v. 4. Require no more of them than they are able to perform; and do not lay unreasonable burthens upon them, and beyond their strength. Provide for them what is fit, supply proper food and physic, and allow them such liberties as may enable them the better for cheerful service, and make it the easier to them: and this, though they are employed in the meanest and lowest offices, and are of another country and different religion from yourselves. 2. A good reason for this regard; "Knowing that ye also have a master in heaven." Ye who are masters of others, have a Master yourself, and are servants of another Lord. Ye are not Lords of yourselves, and are accountable to one above you. Do ye deal with your servants as you expect God should deal with you, and as those who believe you must give an account. Ye are both servants of the same Lord in the different relations in which you stand, and are equally accountable to him at last. —Henry.

WISDOM TOWARDS THEM THAT ARE WITHOUT.—Ver. 5, 6. "Wisdom towards them that were without," might include a prudent caution not to expose themselves needlessly to their persecutors, to which some expositors in a great measure restrict it. But the words contain a general rule of vast extent and importance; implying such habitual propriety, circumspection, and discretion in the whole conduct, as may preserve Christians from being ensnared or drawn into sin by their unconverted neighbours, and from giving them any unfavourable impressions of the gospel; and such an evident excellency of character, as may silence calumny, soften prejudice, and win upon the beholders to examine into those religious principles, which produce such happy effects. Thus the Colossians ought to "redeem their time," in acquiring and exercising this heavenly wisdom, to the honour of God and the good of mankind: in order that their conversation might not only be inoffensive, "but always with grace," the genuine language of piety, purity, wisdom and love; savouring of heavenly things, as meat is preserved and made relishing by being seasoned with salt, Matt. v. 13. By attention to these rules, they would know how they ought to answer every man, whether he asked a reason of their hope, and seriously inquired into the nature of Christianity; or whether he desired a solution of some doubt or difficulty; or whether he were disposed to object, cavil, dispute, or revile; for the meekness of heavenly wisdom would dictate a pertinent answer on every occasion, and preserve them from disgraceful contentions. [Salt.]—The wit, smartness, and ingenuity, often accompanied with polluting or profane allusions, which were customary and admired among the Greeks, was called Attic salt. Probably the apostle refers to this, but shows his readers a far more excellent way.—Scott.

LUKE.—Ver. 14. Luke is another here mentioned, whom he calls "the beloved physician." This is he who wrote the Gospel and Acts, and was Paul's companion. Observe, He was both a physician and an evangelist. Christ himself both taught and healed, and was the great Physician as well as Prophet of the church. He was the beloved physician; one who recommended himself more than ordinary to the affections of his friends. Skill in physic is a useful accomplishment in a minister, and may be improved to more extensive usefulness and greater esteem among Christians.—Henry.

CHAP. I. THE GOSPEL IN ITS POWER.—Ver. 5—8. The gospel, which the apostle and his associates preached, had come to the Thessalonians "not in word only:" it had not been left to its natural efficacy, or the power of arguments and persuasion on their minds. Numbers had thus heard it in many places, who nevertheless continued to live in idolatry and iniquity; but it had come "with power and with the Holy Ghost," that is, with the power of the Holy Spirit. This cannot relate to miracles exclusively; for many saw miracles, and yet remained unbelievers; but the new-creating power of the Holy Spirit, accompanying the word of God, had produced such a full conviction of its nature and importance, and such an assurance of faith and hope, as had induced the Thessalonians at all events to embrace and profess the gospel; even as a ship is carried, by a full tide and a fair wind, over every obstacle, into the haven. For they knew and observed, what manner of men the preachers of Christianity were among them for their sakes; while they witnessed their patience, self-denial, diligence, holiness, and love; and that they laboured with their own hands for a maintenance, that they might not be burdensome to the converts; and this induced them to attend to their doctrine. So that they joined themselves to these despised servants of a crucified Saviour; they associated themselves with them in divine worship; they copied their examples; and in doing so, became imitators of the Lord himself. Thus they received the word into their hearts, amidst great afflictions in their circumstances, and from their persecutors: yet, had they such joy from the Holy Spirit, as made them ample amends. In this manner they became examples, not only to their idolatrous neighbours, but even to believers in other parts of Macedonia, and in Achaia: for the gospel was soon spread from Thessalonica into those regions, by persons who went out for that purpose. In all places, whither the apostle travelled, the report of the conversion and good conduct of the Thessalonians had arrived before him: and they, who came to him from other parts, declared the same.—Scott.

ITS RESULTS.—Ver. 9, 10. Their faith was "spread abroad." 1. The "readiness" of their faith was famed abroad. These Thessalonians embraced the gospel as soon as it the Lord not only in Macedonia and Achaia, but also [e]in every place your faith to God-ward is spread abroad; so that we need not to speak any thing.

9 For they themselves shew of us what manner of entering in we had unto you, and how [h]ye turned to God from idols, to serve [i]the living and true God,

10 And to [k]wait for his Son from heaven,[6] whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come.

CHAP. II.

How the gospel was preached unto them, and how they received it, 1. Why he was desirous to see them, 17.

FOR yourselves, brethren, know our entrance in unto you, that it was not in vain:

2 But even after that we had suffered before, and were shamefully entreated, as ye know, at Philippi, we were [d]bold in our God to speak unto you the gospel of God with much contention.

3 For our exhortation was not of deceit, nor of uncleanness, nor in guile:

4 But as [s]we were allowed of God to be put in trust with the gospel, even so we speak; not as pleasing men, [k]but God, which trieth our hearts.

5 For neither at any time used we flattering words, as ye know, nor a cloak of covetousness: [n]God is witness:[1]

6 Nor of men sought we glory, neither of you, nor yet of others, when we might have *been burdensome, [r]as the apostles of Christ.

7 But we were gentle among you, even [t]as a nurse cherisheth her children:

8 So, being [u]affectionately desirous of you, we were willing to have imparted unto you, not the gospel of God only, but also our own souls, because ye were dear unto us.

9 For ye remember, brethren, [z]our labour and travail: for labouring night and day, because we would not be [b]chargeable unto any of you, we preached unto you [c]the gospel of God.

10 Ye are [d]witnesses, and God also, how holily and justly, and unblameably, we behaved ourselves among you that believe:

11 As ye know [f]how we exhorted and comforted, and charged every one of you, ([h]as a father doth his children,[2])

12 That ye would [l]walk worthy of God, [k]who hath called you unto his kingdom and glory.

13 For this cause also [l]thank we God without ceasing, because, when ye received the word of God which ye heard of us, ye received it not as the word of men, but (as it is in truth) [n]the word of God, which [o]effectually worketh also in you that believe.

14 For ye, brethren, [p]became followers of the churches of God which in Judea [r]are in Christ Jesus: for ye also have suffered like things of your own countrymen, even as they have of the Jews;

15 Who both [u]killed the Lord Jesus and their own prophets, and have [†]persecuted us; and they [x]please not God, and are contrary to all men;

16 Forbidding us to speak to the Gentiles, that they might be saved, [b]to fill up their sins alway: [c]for the wrath is come upon them to the uttermost.

17 But we, brethren, being taken from you for a short time in presence, not in heart, endeavoured the more abundantly to see your face with great desire.

18 Wherefore we would have come unto you (even I Paul,) once and again; but [h]Satan hindered us.[3]

19 For what is our hope, or joy, or [k]crown[4] of [‡]rejoicing? Are not even ye [l]in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming?

20 For ye are our glory and joy.

CHAP. III.

Paul's love in sending Timothy to them, 1. His joy for them, and desire to see them, 6.

WHEREFORE, when we could no longer forbear, we thought it good to be left at Athens alone,

2 And sent Timotheus, our brother, and minister of God, and our fellow-labourer in the gospel of Christ, [c]to establish you, and to comfort you concerning your faith;

3 That no man should be [f]moved by these afflictions: for yourselves know that we are appointed thereunto.[1]

4 For verily, when we were with you, [h]we told you before that we should suffer tribulation; even as it came to pass, and ye know.

5 For this cause, when I could no longer forbear, I sent to know your faith, [m]lest by some means the tempter have tempted you, [n]and our labour be in vain.

6 But now, when Timotheus came from you unto us, and brought us good tidings of your [q]faith and charity, and that ye have good remembrance of us always, desiring greatly to see us, as we also to see you:

7 Therefore, brethren, we were comforted over you in all our affliction and distress by your faith:

8 For now we live,[2] [y]if ye stand fast in the Lord.

was preached to them; so that every body took notice what manner of entering in among them the apostles had; that there were no such delays as at Philippi, where it was a great while before much good was done. 2. The "effects" of their faith were famous. (1.) They quitted their idolatry, they turned from their idols, and abandoned all the false worship they had been educated in. (2.) They gave themselves up to God, to the living and true God, and devoted themselves to his service. (3.) They set themselves to wait for the Son of God from heaven. And this is one of the peculiarities of our holy religion, to wait for Christ's second coming, as those who "believe" he will come, and "hope" he will come to our joy. The believers under the Old Testament waited for the coming of the Messiah, and believers now wait for his second coming; he is yet to come. And there is good reason to "believe" he will come, because God has "raised him from the dead," which is a full assurance unto all men that he will come to judgment, Acts xvii. 31.—Henry.

CHAP. II. APOSTOLICAL PREACHING.—Ver. 3—5. "Our exhortation was not of deceit, nor of uncleanness, nor in guile." This, no doubt, was matter of the greatest comfort to the apostle—the consciousness of his own sincerity; and was one reason of his success. It was the sincere and uncorrupted gospel that he preached, and exhorted them to believe and obey. His design was not to set up a faction to draw men over to a party, but to promote "pure religion and undefiled, before God and the Father." The gospel he preached, was without "deceit," it was true and faithful; it was not fallacious, nor a cunningly-devised fable. Nor was it of "uncleanness." His gospel was pure and holy, worthy of its holy Author, tending to discountenance all manner of impurity. "The word of God is pure." There should be no corrupt mixtures therewith; and as the "matter" of the apostle's exhortation was thus true and pure, the "manner" of his speaking was "without guile." He did not pretend one thing, and intend another. "He believed, and therefore he spake." He had no sinister and secular aims and views, but was in reality what he seemed to be. The apostle not only asserts his sincerity, but subjoins the reasons and evidences thereof.—Henry.

SELF-DENIAL AND LABOUR.—Ver. 9—12. The Thessalonians could well remember the disinterested labour and fatiguing toil of the apostle and his associates: for they not only employed the day, in the various parts of their ministerial duty, or in working hard for a subsistence; but they bereaved themselves of rest, spending the whole, or a considerable part of the night, in the same manner: lest, by being chargeable to any of their hearers, they should prevent their own success. Thus they faithfully preached to them the gospel of God; and the Thessalonians could witness, (as the Lord himself also would,) in what a holy, upright, and blameless manner they behaved themselves; not only in those things, which unbelievers might have noticed, but also in their most retired and intimate behaviour, among such as believed the gospel; so that none of them had seen any thing, but what evinced the greatest purity, probity, sincerity, and holy love. They had also exhorted and animated them with every consolatory topic, and charged them with authority, as testifying the will of God concerning them, to copy their example. And as a wise and affectionate father uses arguments, persuasions, encouragements, and commands, in directing the conduct of his children: so they had used the same means, of inducing them to walk worthy of the holy perfections of that God whom they worshipped, and who had so graciously called them from the power of darkness into the kingdom of his Son, that they might be trained up on earth, for the eternal glory and holy felicity of heaven.—Scott.

PAUL'S AFFECTION.—Ver. 18—20. The apostle assures them of his "affection" and high "esteem" for them, though he was not able, as yet, to be present with them, according to his desire. They were his "hope, and joy, and crown of rejoicing; his glory and joy." These are expressions of great and endeared affection and high estimation. And it is happy, when ministers and people have such mutual affection and esteem of each other; and especially if they shall thus rejoice, if they that sow and they that reap shall then rejoice together, "in the presence of our Lord Jesus at his coming." The apostle here puts the Thessalonians in mind, that though he could not come to them as yet, and though he should never be able to come to them, yet our Lord Jesus Christ will come, nothing shall hinder that. And further, when he shall come, all must appear in his presence, or before him. Ministers and people must all appear before him, and faithful people will be the glory and joy of faithful ministers in that great and glorious day.—Henry.

CHAP. III. THE APOSTLE'S JOY.—Ver. 8. It was easy to him to bear affliction, or persecution, or fightings from without, when he found the good success of his ministry, in the constancy of the converts he had made to Christianity; his distress of mind on account of his fears within, lest he had laboured in vain, was now in a good measure over, when he understood their faith, and the perseverance of it. This put new life and spirit into the apostle, and made him vigorous and active in the work of the Lord. Thus he was not only comforted, but greatly rejoiced also; "Now we live, if ye stand fast in the Lord." It would have been a killing thing to the apostles, if the professors of religion had been unsteady, or proved apostates, whereas nothing was more encouraging than their constancy.—Henry.

9 For what thanks can we render to God again for you, for all the joy wherewith we joy for your sakes [b]before our God;

10 Night and day praying exceedingly that we might see your face, and might perfect that which is lacking in your faith?

11 Now [f]God himself and our Father, [g]and our Lord Jesus Christ,[3] *direct our way unto you.

12 And [i]the Lord make you to increase and abound in love one toward another, and toward all men, even as we do toward you:

13 To the end he may stablish your hearts unblameable in holiness before God, even our Father, [q]at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints.

FURTHERMORE then, we *beseech you, brethren, and †exhort you by the Lord Jesus, that as ye have received of us how ye ought to walk and [c]to please God, so ye would abound more and more.

2 For ye know [g]what commandments we gave you by the Lord Jesus.

3 For [h]this is the will of God, even your [i]sanctification, that ye should abstain from fornication:

4 That every one of you [l]should know how to possess [m]his vessel[1] in sanctification and honour;

5 Not in the lust of concupiscence, even [p]as the Gentiles which know not God:

6 That no man go beyond and ‡defraud his brother [s]in any matter: because that [s]the Lord is the avenger of all such, as we also have forewarned you, and testified.

7 For [u]God hath not called us unto uncleanness, but unto holiness.

8 He therefore that ||despiseth, [y]despiseth not man, but God, [z]who hath also given unto us his Holy Spirit.

9 But as touching brotherly love, ye need not that I write unto you; [c]for ye yourselves are taught of God to love one another.

10 And indeed ye do it toward all the brethren which are in all Macedonia: but we beseech you, brethren, that ye increase more and more;

11 And that ye study to be quiet, and to do your own business,[2] and to work with your own hands, as we commanded you;

12 That ye may walk honestly toward them that are without, and that ye may have lack of *nothing.[3]

13 But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope.

14 For [q]if we believe that Jesus died, and rose again, even so them also which [r]sleep in Jesus will God bring with him.

15 For this we say unto you [t]by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord, shall not prevent them which are asleep.

16 For [z]the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout,[4] with the voice of the [b]archangel, and [c]with the trump of God: [d]and the dead in Christ shall rise first:[5]

17 Then [e]we which are alive and remain shall be [f]caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: [h]and so shall we ever be with the Lord.

18 Wherefore †comfort one another with these words.

The apostle describeth the second coming of Christ, and exhorts to vigilant preparation, 1. Various exhortations, admonitions, and encouragements, 11. Concluding prayers and salutations, 26.

BUT of the times and the seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you.

2 For yourselves know perfectly, that [d]the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night.

3 For when they shall say, Peace and safety, [f]then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape.

4 But ye, brethren, are not in darkness,[1] that that day should overtake you as a thief.

5 Ye are all the children of light,[2] and the children of the day: [l]we are not of the night, nor of darkness.

6 Therefore [m]let us not sleep, as do others; but let us [n]watch and be sober.

7 For they that sleep, sleep in the night; and that be drunken, are drunken in the night.[3]

8 But let us, who are of the day, be sober, putting on [s]the breastplate of faith and love; and for an helmet [t]the hope of salvation:[4]

9 For God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to [x]obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ,

10 Who [y]died for us, that, whether we wake or sleep, we should live together with him.

11 Wherefore *comfort yourselves together, [b]and edify one another, even as also ye do.

12 And we beseech you, brethren, to know them which labour among you, [f]and are over you in the Lord, and admonish you;

His Prayer for the Thessalonians.—Ver. 11—13. The apostle closed the expressions of his affectionate and pious fervour of holy exultation, by writing down the requests of his heart for the Christians at Thessalonica. He earnestly besought "God, 'even' our Father, and our Lord Jesus," as the incarnate Son, the head over all things to his church, to direct, and make plain his way unto them, by removing all those providential hinderances which had hitherto prevented him: and he entreated the Lord Jesus, (for as the former clause is an undeniable act of divine worship rendered to Christ as one with the Father, so this also seems to have been addressed to him;) that by further communications from his fulness, he would cause them to increase in love of one another and of all men, not excepting their persecutors; according to the various exercises of that holy affection, required by the commandments of God: and to abound in every one of them, according to the nature and measure of the apostle's fervent, spiritual, and enlarged love of them. This he desired, in order to the establishment of their hearts in holiness; and that their affections, tempers and conduct might be unblameable, in every part of their various duties to God, towards each other, and towards all men, in the several relations of life; and that it might be manifested that they were so, as in the presence of their holy and heart-searching God and Father, in that decisive day, when the Lord Jesus should come with all his holy ones, whether angels or redeemed sinners, to judge the quick and dead, Col. i. 22. For the souls of the redeemed, who died in the Lord, will descend with him from heaven, to be re-united to their glorified bodies: and the saints on earth will be changed, and meet the Lord in the air.—"This invocation of Christ, must suppose him omniscient, omnipresent, and the searcher of all hearts; and these are the properties of God alone." [Whitby.]—Scott.

Chap. IV. Comfort under Bereavement.—Ver. 13—18. Perhaps the apostle heard, that some of the Thessalonian believers had lately died; and that their relatives and brethren were greatly dejected about them, as not duly attending to the consolations suggested by the gospel. He therefore would not have them to be ignorant concerning those who were fallen asleep in Christ, that they were in a safe and happy estate: as it was not proper for them to sorrow on such occasions, in so disconsolate a manner, or with such outward expressions of violent grief, as they who had no hope respecting their deceased friends, or expectation of meeting them again, were used to do. For "since" they believed that Jesus died for their sins, and "rose again for their justification;" they might thence assuredly infer, that God would raise again incorruptible the bodies of those who slept in Jesus: that they might be produced with him, and presented by him, at the last day. Death was become only a sleep "through" Jesus, as the body felt no pain, and the soul was present with the Lord in holiness and felicity. He must therefore inform them, by immediate revelation from the Lord, that such of the whole multitude of believers, as should be found alive at his coming, would not enter into the full enjoyment of heavenly felicity, in body and soul, before their brethren, who had previously died and been buried. For at that solemn period, the Lord Jesus will be seen to descend from heaven, with the acclamations of attending angels, and the voice of an archangel, who will be appointed to lead the hierarchies of heaven on this illustrious occasion; and with the trumpet of God, sounding in a manner similar to what it did from mount Sinai, but far more loud and tremendous. Then, all that are in the graves shall hear the voice of the Son of man, and shall come forth; but the dead in Christ shall rise first, and be rendered incorruptible, even before their brethren who never died shall be changed. Immediately after, these will be changed, and their bodies become immortal and spiritual: and thus will they be suddenly taken up together into the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; that being approved as heirs of the kingdom, the whole company may be his assessors in judgment, and then re-enter heaven with him triumphantly; and so will they be for ever with the Lord.—Scott.

Chap. V. Suddenness of Christ's Coming.—Ver. 2, 3. As the thief usually cometh in the dead time of the night, when he is least expected, such a surprise will the day of the Lord be; so sudden and surprising his appearance. The knowledge of this will be more useful than to know the exact time, because this should awaken us to stand upon our watch, that we may be ready whenever he cometh. He tells them how terrible Christ's coming would be to the ungodly. It will be to their destruction in that day of the Lord. The righteous God will bring ruin upon his and his people's enemies, and this their destruction, as it will be total and final, so, 1. It will be sudden. It will overtake them, and fall upon them, in the midst of their carnal security and jollity; when they say in their hearts, "Peace and safety," when they dream of felicity, and please themselves with vain amusements of their fancies or their senses, and think not of it; "as travail cometh upon a woman with child," at the set time indeed, but not perhaps just then expected, or greatly feared. 2. It will be unavoidable destruction too; "They shall not escape;" they shall in nowise escape.—Henry.

Vigilance.—Ver. 4—11. They were all, according to their profession, nay, his confidence in them, "the children of light, and of the day;" for none of Christ's true disciples were "of the night or of darkness." They neither continued in ignorance, nor lived in wickedness, nor wanted concealment for their secret practices; but, being delivered from the thick darkness of heathenism, or the comparative darkness of Judaism

¶ The first epistle unto the Thessalonians was written from Athens.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE # THESSALONIANS.

It is generally believed that the messenger who carried the former epistle into Macedonia, upon his return to Corinth, informed St Paul that the Thessalonians had inferred, from some expressions in it (1 Thes. iv. 15, 17; v. 0), that the coming of Christ and the final judgment were near at hand, and would happen in the time of many who were then alive. The principal design of this second epistle to the Thessalonians was to correct that error, and prevent the mischief which it would naturally occasion. It was written from Corinth, and probably at the end of the year 52.

CHAP. I.

He sheweth his good opinion of their faith, love, and patience, 1, and comforteth them against persecution, 11.

PAUL, and Silvanus, and Timotheus, unto the church of the Thessalonians in God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ:

2 Grace [b]unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 We are [c]bound to thank God always for you, brethren, as it is meet, because that [d]your faith groweth exceedingly, and the charity of every one of you all toward each other aboundeth:

4 So that we ourselves glory in you in the churches of God, for your patience and faith in all your persecutions and tribulations that ye endure;

5 Which is a manifest token of the [k]righteous judgment of God, that ye [l]may be counted worthy of the kingdom of God, for which ye also suffer:

6 Seeing [n]it is a righteous thing[l] with God to recompense tribulation to them that trouble you;

7 And to you who are troubled rest with us, [p]when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his [*]mighty angels,

8 In flaming fire, [†]taking vengeance on them that [s]know not God, [t]and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ:

9 Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction [x]from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power;

10 When he shall come [z]to be glorified in his saints,[2] and to be admired in all them that believe, (because our testimony among you was believed,) in that day.

11 Wherefore also [c]we pray always for you, that [d]our God [e]would [‡]count you worthy of this calling, and fulfil all the good pleasure of his goodness, and the work of faith with power;

they enjoyed, and walked according to, the clear light of the gospel. It behoved them, therefore, to act up to their privileges; and not to be supine, indolent, careless, and unwatchful, as others were: but to be vigilant, circumspect, upon their guard, against the assaults and stratagems of their enemies, and attentive to every opportunity of duty; and to be serious, considerate, moderate in every thing of a secular nature, and indifferent to all animal indulgences. In general, men chose to sleep during the quiet of the night; and to be drunken or riotous when others were asleep, that their excess might be the less noticed. In like manner, all sloth, unwatchfulness, intemperance, or excessive worldly pursuits, were more consistent with the condition of benighted heathens, than with that of Christians; who would, as it were, turn the day into night, if they were betrayed into such practices. As therefore they enjoyed the full light of "the Sun of righteousness," they ought to be sober and vigilant: for they had not only a great work to do; but an arduous warfare to maintain, against numerous, potent, active, and subtle enemies.—Scott.

Various Exhortations.—Ver. 16—22. 1. "Rejoice evermore." This must be understood of spiritual joy: for we must rejoice in our creature-comforts, as if we "rejoiced not," and must not expect "to live many years, and rejoice in them all;" but if we do rejoice in God, we may do that evermore. In "him our joy will be full;" and it is our fault if we have not "a continual feast." 2. "Pray without ceasing." Note, The way to rejoice evermore, is, to pray without ceasing. We should rejoice more, if we prayed more. We should keep up stated times for prayer, and "continue instant" in prayer. We should pray always, and "not faint:" pray without ceasing, and continue in prayer, till we come to that world where prayer shall be swallowed up in praise. The meaning is not that men should do nothing but pray, but that nothing else we do should hinder prayer in its proper season. Prayer will help forward, and not hinder, all other lawful business, and every good work. 3. "In every thing give thanks." If we pray without ceasing, we shall not want matter for thanksgiving "in every thing." As we must in every thing make our requests known to God by supplications, so we must not omit thanksgiving, Phil. iv. 6. 4. "Quench not the Spirit;" for it is the Spirit of grace and supplication that "helpeth our infirmities," that assisteth us in our prayers and thanksgivings. Christians are said "to be baptized with the Holy Ghost, and with fire." He worketh as fire, by enlightening, enlivening, and purifying the souls of men. We must be careful not to quench this holy fire. As fire is put out by withdrawing fuel, so we quench the Spirit, if we do not stir up our spirits. 5. "Despise not prophesyings;" for if we neglect the means of grace, we forfeit the Spirit of grace. By prophesyings here we are to understand the "preaching of the word," the interpretation and applying of the Scriptures. 6. "Prove all things, but hold fast that which is good." This is a needful caution, to prove all things; for though we must put a value on preaching, we must not take things upon trust from the preacher, but try them by the "law and the testimony." We must search the Scriptures whether what they say be true or not. 7. "Abstain from all appearance of evil." This a good means to prevent our being deceived with false doctrines, or unsettled in our faith; for our Saviour has told us, John vii. 17, "If a man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God."—Henry.

CHAP. I. The Last Day.—Ver. 5—10. Indeed, God permitted his servants to be afflicted, in order to prove and manifest their faith and grace, and to increase in them all holy dispositions: that they might at length be counted meet and proper persons, to inherit that kingdom of heavenly glory, which God hath prepared for them that love him; in hope of which they so patiently suffered, as well as from love to his kingdom of grace established upon earth, as introductory to the kingdom of glory in heaven. Seeing, by these means, it would be manifestly shown to be perfectly just and righteous in God, to recompense with tribulation and anguish those, who troubled his harmless and holy friends and worshippers, by their cruel enmity and persecution, because of their relation and conformity to him; as they would evidently be proved to be his inveterate enemies. On the other hand, it would appear honourable to his justice, as well as his mercy, to bestow rest and felicity in heaven on those, who willingly endured tribulation in his cause, for his sake, from his enemies, and according to his will: and, indeed, having given promises to this effect, his equity required the fulfilment of them. This righteous judgment of God will take place, when "the Lord Jesus shall be revealed," as visibly descending from heaven, attended by "the angels of his power;" his creatures, worshippers, and servants, who shall then act as the ministers of his authority, in showing mercy and executing vengeance. Then he will appear "in flaming fire," to burn up this visible creation, and this will be an emblem of his awful avenging justice: for he will take vengeance on all; not only on idolatrous Gentiles, persecuting Jews, and men of scandalous and abandoned characters; but on all who continue strangers and enemies to the true God, and his holy worship and service: who have not so known him, as to fear, love, trust, and serve him; and on all who obey not the gospel of the Lord Jesus, by receiving him, relying on him, and submitting to him, as their Saviour and King. All these persons, however numerous, or distinguished by rank, accomplishments, or splendid actions, will be punished with eternal destruction, being banished, as accursed, from the presence of the Lord, in which alone felicity can be found, and finding his avenging frown, like lightning, to appal and torture their inmost souls, and the

CHAP. II.

He willeth them to continue stedfast in the truth received, 1, shewing that there shall be a departure from the faith, 3, and a discovery of Antichrist, before the day of the Lord come, 9. He thanks God for his special grace shewn to the Thessalonians, 13; exhorts them to stedfastness, 15; and prays that they may be comforted and established in every good word and work, 16.

NOW we beseech you, brethren, [b]by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto him,

2 That ye be not soon shaken in mind, or be troubled, neither by spirit, nor by word, nor by letter as from us, as that the day of Christ is at hand.

3 Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come, [h]except there come a falling away first, and that [i]man of sin be revealed, [k]the son of perdition;

4 Who opposeth [l]and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he, as God, sitteth in the temple of God,[1] shewing himself that he is God.

5 Remember ye not, that, [p]when I was yet with you, I told you these things?

6 And now ye know what *withholdeth, that he might be revealed in his time.

7 For [r]the mystery of iniquity doth already work:[2] only he who now letteth will let, until he be taken out of the way:

8 And then shall [u]that Wicked be revealed, [x]whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming:

9 Even him, whose coming [a]is after the working of Satan, with all power, and signs, and lying wonders,[3]

10 And with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved.

11 And for this cause [b]God shall send them strong delusion, [i]that they should believe a lie;

12 That they all might be damned, who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness.[4]

13 But we are bound to give thanks alway to God for you, brethren [n]beloved of the Lord, because God hath from the beginning chosen you to salvation [q]through sanctification of the Spirit, and belief of the truth:

14 Whereunto he called you by our gospel, [u]to the obtaining of the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ.

The apostle requests the prayers of the Thessalonians, expresses his confidence respecting them, and prays for them, 1. He charges them to censure and withdraw from disorderly walkers, who neglected their own business, and intermeddled in that of others; interspersing suitable arguments, directions, and exhortations, 6. He concludes with benedictions, 16.

FINALLY, brethren, [a]pray for us, that [b]the word of the Lord may *have free course, and be glorified, even as it is with you;

2 And that we may be delivered from †unreasonable and wicked men; for all men have not faith.

glory of his power irrestibly forcing them with dreadful consternation into the place of torment. This will take place, when he shall appear with divine majesty in human nature, to be glorified by his saints; as the riches of his love, the preciousness of his redemption, the efficacy of his grace, the power of his arm, and his faithfulness to his promises will be most gloriously displayed by their complete salvation. And not only will he then be admired by those that now believe in him, who will then find their largest expectations far exceeded, and who will not think it possible sufficiently to admire and praise such a glorious benefactor; but he will be admired in them likewise, by all the inhabitants of heaven, who will celebrate the wonders wrought by him, in thus saving and exalting such polluted rebels and enemies.—Scott.

CHAP. II. THE MAN OF SIN.—Ver. 3—10. It is manifest, that no succession of men have yet appeared on earth, to whom this description so exactly accords, as that of the Roman pontiffs, as the visible head of the popish church. This deceiver, however, would "oppose, and exalt himself above all that is called God, or is worshipped," either by Christians or pagans: thus the Roman pontiffs have opposed the truths, commandments, and disciples of Christ, in every age, and by every means: they have opposed the prophetical office of Christ, by teaching human inventions; his priestly office, by the doctrine of human merits and created intercessors; and his kingly office, by changing and dispensing with his laws. They have exalted themselves above all that is called God, "and is worshipped," by pretending to forgive sins, even in those who manifestly continued impenitent; by granting indulgences to men to break the commandments of God, by dispensing with, and placing their own decrees above his laws, as if of superior validity; and by presuming to give meaning and authority to the Scriptures themselves, which must not be understood in any other sense than what they impose upon them. Moreover, this "man of sin" sits as God "in the temple of God," and we must therefore look for him within the visible church: there he blasphemously usurps the throne of God, showing himself to be God. Many Roman emperors affected divine honours, and demanded adoration: but there was no antecedent apostacy from Christianity; and they might rather be said to sit in the temple of Jupiter, or Mars, than in that of God; whose temple must be considered to be among his professed worshippers, and not among avowed heathens. But, the Roman pontiff, claiming to be the universal head of the whole church of God; called by his flatterers, Vice-God, a God upon earth; arrogating the title of His Holiness, boasting of infallibility, pretending to a right to depose kings, and bestow kingdoms on whom he pleased; (with those arrogant claims before-mentioned;) answers so exactly to the description here given, that we cannot doubt for whom it was designed. The Roman empire, united under one potent government, and extremely jealous of all other power and authority, prevented the establishment of that spiritual tyranny and usurpation, by which Satan was attempting to make his grand effort against Christianity: but, it would not have been prudent in the apostle to have explicitly mentioned it, in an epistle for general perusal: nor would it have accorded to the style of prophecy: however, most of the fathers so far understood him, as to declare that antichrist would not come, till after the downfall of the Roman empire. It would also be accompanied with all the various kinds of forgery, fraud, and imposture, with which men's senses and understandings have been deluded by artful deceivers, in different ages and nations of the world; and with every hypocritical device, which the ingenuity and sagacity of men or devils could possibly invent: to support the cause of unrighteousness, and delude the world into a stupid admiration, a blind reverence, and an implicit submission to the arrogant claims, the multiplied idolatries and abominations of this grand delusion. Thus, by artful stratagems and machinations, multitudes would be fatally deceived among such as were in the way of perdition.—Scott.

CHAP. III. PRAYER FOR THE CHRISTIAN MINISTRY.—Ver. 1. He always remembered them in his prayers, and would not have them forget him and his fellow-labourers, but bear them on their hearts at the throne of grace. Note, 1. This is one way by which the communion of saints is kept up, not only by their praying together, or with one another, but by their praying for one another, when they are absent one from another. And thus they who are at a great distance may meet together at the throne of grace; and thus they who are not capable of doing or receiving any other kindness, may yet this way do and receive real and very great kindness. 2. It is the duty of people to pray for their ministers; and not only for their own pastors, but also for all good and faithful ministers. And, 3. Ministers need, and therefore should desire, the prayers of their people. How remarkable is the humility, and how engaging the example, of this great apostle, who was so mighty in prayer himself, and yet despised not the prayers of the meanest Christian, but desired an interest in them.

CHURCH-ORDER.—Ver. 6. We must be very cautious in church-censures and church-discipline. We must, First, Note that man who is suspected, or charged with not obeying the word of God, or walking contrary thereto; that is, we must have sufficient proof of his fault before we proceed further. We must, Secondly, Admonish him in a friendly manner; we must put him in mind of his sin, and of his duty; and this should be done privately, Matt. xviii. 15, then, if he will not hear, we must, Thirdly, Withdraw from him,

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO

TIMOTHY.

THIS and the two following epistles are peculiarly replete with instruction to ministers, and should be continually studied and meditated on by all who bear that sacred character. The postscript dates the epistle from Laodicea; but it is almost certain that the apostle had never yet visited that city (Col ii. 1).

CHAP. I.

Timothy directed how to instruct others, 1. The proper use of the law, 5. Paul's call to the ministry, 12; and the end for which such rich mercy was vouchsafed to him, 16.

PAUL, an apostle of Jesus Christ, by the commandment of [c]God our Saviour, and Lord Jesus Christ, which is our hope;

2 Unto Timothy, my own son in the faith: Grace, mercy, and peace, from God our Father, and Jesus Christ our Lord.

3 As I besought thee to abide still at Ephesus, when I went into Macedonia, that thou mightest [k]charge some that they teach no other doctrine;

4 Neither give heed to fables,[1] and endless genealogies,[2] which minister questions, rather than [o]godly edifying which is in faith; so do.

5 Now [p]the end of the commandment is charity, out of [r]a pure heart, and of [s]a good conscience, and of [t]faith unfeigned:

6 *From which some having swerved, have turned aside unto vain jangling;

7 Desiring to be teachers of the law; understanding neither what they say, nor whereof they affirm.

8 But we know that [x]the law is good, if a man use it lawfully;

9 Knowing this, that [c]the law is not made for a righteous man,[3] but for [d]the lawless and disobedient, for [f]the ungodly and for sinners, for unholy and profane, for murderers of fathers and murderers of mothers, for [i]man-slayers,

10 For [k]whoremongers, for them that [l]defile themselves with mankind, for [m]men-stealers,[4] [n]for liars, for [o]perjured persons, and if there be any other thing that is contrary to sound doctrine;

11 [q]According to the glorious gospel of the blessed God, which was committed to my trust.

12 And [u]I thank Christ Jesus our Lord, who hath enabled me, for that he counted me faithful, [z]putting me into the ministry;

13 Who was before a blasphemer, and a persecutor, and injurious: [b]but I obtained mercy, because I did it ignorantly in unbelief.[5]

14 And [d]the grace of our Lord was exceeding abundant[6] with faith and love which is in Christ Jesus.

15 This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, [l]that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners; [k]of whom I am chief.

16 Howbeit [l]for this cause I obtained mercy, that in me first Jesus Christ might shew forth [n]all long-suffering, [o]for a pattern to them which should hereafter believe on him to life everlasting.

17 Now, unto [q]the King eternal, immortal, invisible, [s]the only wise God, [t]be honour and glory for ever and ever. [u]Amen.

18 This charge I commit unto thee; son and not keep company with him, that is, we must avoid familiar converse and society with such; for two reasons, namely, that we may not learn his evil ways: for he who follows vain and idle persons, and keeps company with such, is in danger of becoming like them. Another reason is, for the shaming, and so the reforming, of them that offend: that when idle and disorderly persons see how their loose practices are disliked by all wise and good people, they may be ashamed of them, and walk more orderly. Love therefore to the persons of our offending brethren, even when we hate their vices, should be the motive of our withdrawing from them; and yet those who are under the censures of the church, must not be "accounted as enemies;" ver. 15, for if they be reclaimed and reformed by these censures, they will recover their credit and comfort, and right to church-privileges as brethren.

INDUSTRY.—Ver. 10. It was a proverbial speech among the Jews "He who does not labour, does not deserve to eat." The labourer is worthy of his meat, but what is the loiterer worthy of? It is the will of God that every man should have a calling, and mind his calling, and make a business of it, and not live like useless drones in the world. Such persons do what in them lies to defeat the sentence, "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat thy bread." It was not the mere humour of the apostle, who was an active, stirring man himself, and therefore would have every body else to be so too, but it was the command of our Lord Jesus Christ, that, "with quietness we work, and eat our own bread," ver. 12. Men ought some way or other to earn their own living, otherwise they do not eat their own bread. Observe, There must be work or labour, in opposition to idleness; and there must be quietness, in opposition to being busy-bodies in other men's matters. We must study to be quiet, and do our own business. This is an excellent but rare composition, to be of an active, yet quiet spirit; active in our own business, and yet quiet as to other people's.—Henry.

CHAP. I. THE END OF THE LAW.—Ver. 5. The word rendered commandment is by some explained of the moral law, the scope and substance of which is charity, or love, towards God and man. Others understand it to mean the message of God to men by the gospel; the end of which is, to restore fallen sinners to the love required by the law; and this better suits the context: but others explain it of the charge given to Timothy by the apostle. This seems to be the right interpretation: and thus it had reference both to the law as the rule of duty, and to the grand design of the gospel. The charity or love here spoken of must arise out of a pure heart; or the affections of the soul, as cleansed by renewing grace from the love and pollution of sin, and from carnal enmity and selfishness, 1 Pet. i. 22, and a "good conscience;" or one well informed concerning the will of God, and made tender and active by divine grace, as well as purged from guilt by the blood of Christ; that so the possessor might be influenced to act conscientiously in his whole conduct. It must also come from "unfeigned faith," or a sincere belief of revealed truths, and a reliance on the merits of Christ, and the promises of God through him. This faith, working by love, purifying the heart, and producing a good conscience, constituted the substance of what the apostle ordered Timothy to give in charge to the Ephesian teachers.—Scott.

THE FAITHFUL SAYING.—Ver. 15. "This is a faithful saying," &c. Here we have the sum of the whole gospel, "that Jesus Christ came into the world." The Son of God took upon him our nature; was "made flesh, and dwelt among us," John i. 14. He came into the world, "not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance," Matt. ix. 13. His errand into the world was to seek and find, and so "save them that were lost," Luke xix. 10. The ratification of this is, "that it is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation." It is good news, "worthy of all acceptation;" and yet not too good to be true, for "it is a faithful saying." "It is a faithful saying," and therefore worthy to be embraced in the arms of faith: it is "worthy of all acceptation," and therefore to be received with holy love, which refers to the foregoing verse, where the grace of Christ is said to abound "in faith and love." In the close of the verse Paul applies it to himself: "Of whom I am chief." Paul was a sinner of the first rank; so he acknowledges himself to have been, for he breathed out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord, &c., Acts ix. 1, 2. Persecutors are some of the worst of sinners: such a one as Paul had been; or, of "whom I am chief;" that is, of pardoned sinners "I am chief." It is an expression of his great humility: he that elsewhere calls himself the "least of all saints," Eph. iii. 8, here calls himself the "chief of sinners." Observe, 1. Christ Jesus is come into the world; the prophecies concerning his coming are now fulfilled. 2. He came to save sinners, he came to save those who could not save and help themselves. 3. Blasphemers and persecutors are the chief of sinners, so St. Paul reckoned them. 4. The chief of sinners may become the chief of saints; so this apostle was, for he was not a whit behind the very chiefest of the apostles, 2 Cor. xi. 5, for Christ came to save the chief of sinners. 5. This is a very great truth, it is a faithful saying; these are true and faithful words, which may be depended on. 6. It deserves to be received, to be believed by us all for our comfort and encouragement.—Henry.

APOSTATES.—Ver. 18—20. The apostle here referred to what he had before spoken, ver. 3, 5, 11. The trust committed to him by Christ, as his apostle, he had committed to his "son Timothy;" he was encouraged to repose great confidence in him, not only by what he knew of his principles and character, but by entertaining hopes of him accord-

Timothy, according to the prophecies which went before on thee, that thou by them mightest war a good warfare;

19 [b]Holding faith, and a good conscience; which some having put away, concerning faith have [c]made shipwreck:

Prayer to be made for all men, and the reason why, 1. How women should be attired, 9. They are not permitted to teach, 12.

I *EXHORT therefore, that, first of all, [b]supplications,[1] prayers, intercessions, [c]and giving of thanks, be made for all men;

2 For kings, and for all that are in [f]authority; that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in [h]all godliness and honesty.

3 For [i]this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Saviour;

4 Who [l]will have all men to be saved, [m]and to come unto the knowledge of the truth.

5 For there is [o]one God, [p]and one mediator[2] between God and men, [q]the man Christ Jesus;

6 Who [r]gave himself a ransom for all, [t]to be testified in due time.

7 Whereunto I am ordained a preacher, and an apostle, (*I speak the truth in Christ, and lie not,) a teacher of the Gentiles in faith and verity.

8 I will therefore that men [c]pray every where, lifting up holy hands, without wrath and doubting.

9 In like manner also, that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with [$]broidered hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array;

10 But (which becometh [k]women professing godliness) [l]with good works.

11 Let the women learn in silence with all subjection.

12 But I suffer not a woman to teach,[3] nor to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence.

13 For [n]Adam was first formed, then Eve.

14 And Adam was not deceived; [o]but the woman, being deceived, was in the transgression.[4]

15 Notwithstanding [p]she shall be saved in child-bearing, if they continue in faith, and charity, and holiness, with sobriety.

CHAP. III.

How bishops and deacons, and their wives, should be qualified, 1; and to what end Paul wrote to Timothy of these things, 14.

THIS is a true saying, If a man desire [b]the office of a bishop, he [d]desireth a good work.

2 A bishop then must be [f]blameless, the husband of one wife,[1] vigilant, sober, [*]of good behaviour, given to hospitality, apt to teach;

3 [†]Not given to wine, no striker, not greedy of filthy lucre; but patient, not a brawler, not covetous;

4 One that ruleth well his own house, having his children in subjection, with all gravity;

5 (For [u]if a man know not how to rule his own house, how shall he take care of [x]the church of God?)

6 Not [‡]a novice,[2] [y]lest, being lifted up with pride, he fall into the condemnation of the devil.

7 Moreover, he must have [a]a good report of them which are without; lest he fall into reproach and [d]the snare of the devil.

8 Likewise must [c]the deacons be grave, not double tongued, not given to much wine, not greedy of filthy lucre;

9 Holding [k]the mystery of the faith in a pure conscience.

10 And let these also first be proved; then let them use [m]the office of a deacon, [n]being found blameless.

11 Even so must their wives be grave, not slanderers, sober, faithful in all things.

12 Let the deacons be [t]the husbands of one wife, ruling their children and their own houses well.

13 For [u]they that have [$]used the office of a deacon well purchase to themselves a good degree, and [y]great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus.

14 These things write I unto thee, hoping to come unto thee shortly.

15 But if I tarry long, that thou mayest know how thou oughtest to behave thyself in [b]the house of God, which is [c]the church of [d]the living God, [e]the pillar and [f]ground of the truth.

16 And, without controversy, great is the mystery of godliness: [l]God was [*]manifest in the flesh,[3] [k]justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory.

CHAP. IV.

The apostle foretelleth that in the latter times there shall be a departure from the faith, 1. He directs Timothy in respect to his doctrine and conduct, 6.

NOW [a]the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils;

ing to certain "prophecies," which inspired persons had uttered concerning him, before his appointment to the ministry; and he expected that, by meditating upon them, he should be animated and instructed, in "warring a good warfare," or rather "the good warfare," as a valiant soldier of Jesus Christ. This must be done by maintaining and insisting upon both the faith of the gospel, or its doctrines, as uncorrupted and unmutilated, and a good conscience, or an universally conscientious conduct. These Timothy must be careful to connect, both in his own example and in his preaching; for some professed Christians, having neglected to maintain and insist on a good conscience, had, after a time, renounced the faith also, and made shipwreck of their whole religion; either by a total apostacy from their profession, or the most heretical corruptions of the gospel. Of this number were Hymeneus and Alexander, with whom Timothy had doubtless been acquainted.—Scott.

CHAP. II. Prayer for all Men.—Ver. 1. We must pray "for all men," for the world of mankind in general, for particular persons who need or desire our prayers. See how far the Christian religion was from being a sect, when it taught men this diffusive charity; to pray, not only for those of their own way, but for all men. Pray "for kings," ver. 2, though the kings at this time were heathens, enemies to Christianity, and persecutors of Christians: yet they must pray for them, because it is for the public good that there should be civil government, and proper persons intrusted with the administration of it, whom therefore we ought to pray for, yea, though we ourselves suffer under them. "For kings," and "all that are in authority," that is, inferior magistrates: we must pray for them, and we must give thanks for them, pray for their welfare, and for the welfare of their kingdoms, and therefore must not plot against them, that in the peace thereof we may have peace, and give thanks for them, and for the benefit we have under their government; that "we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty."

Woman.—Ver. 12—15. "Adam was first formed, then Eve" out of him, to denote her subordination to him, and dependence upon him; and she was made for him, to be a "help-meet" for him. And as she was last in the creation, which is the one reason for her subjection, so she was first in the transgression, and that is another reason. "Adam was not deceived," that is, not first. Here are two very good reasons given for the man's authority over the woman, and her subjection to the man. Adam was first formed, then Eve; she was created for the man, and not the man for the woman, 1 Cor. xi. 9; then she was deceived, and brought the man into the transgression.—Though the difficulties and dangers of child-bearing are many and great, as they are part of the punishment inflicted on the sex for Eve's transgression, yet here is much for her support and encouragement; "notwithstanding she shall be saved," &c. Though in sorrow, yet she shall bring forth, and be a living mother of living children; with this proviso, that they continue in faith, and charity, and holiness, with sobriety; and women under the circumstance of child-bearing should, by faith, lay hold on this promise for their support in the needful time.—Henry.

CHAP. III. The Christian Bishop.—Ver. 2. The apostle shows, very particularly, what manner of persons these bishops or elders ought to be; that ambitious and improper desires after the sacred service might be repressed, and likewise that they who had been appointed to it might know how to behave in it. Whatever natural abilities, learning, elocution, or spiritual gifts, any man might possess; he might be considered as ineligible to this office, if he was not of a "blameless" character, and had not avoided scandalous vices, at least since his professed conversion to Christianity.—He ought also to be "the husband of one wife." Christ and the apostles expressly condemned polygamy, as well as divorces, except for adultery; yet there was no direct command for a man, who had previously taken more wives than one, to put the others away when they embraced the gospel; and such a requisition might have produced many bad consequences in domestic life, and increased the opposition of the civil powers to the preaching of Christianity. But the rule, that no man, however qualified in other respects, should be admitted into the pastoral office, who had more than one wife, or who had put away one to take another, tended to show the impropriety of polygamy, and divorces on frivolous pretences, and their inconsistency with the Christian dispensation, and concurred with other things to bring it into total disuse in the Christian church; yet without violence and confusion.

The Deacons.—Ver. 8—13. The deacons were primarily appointed to dispense the charity of the church, and to manage its secular concerns. Some of the same things were requisite in them, as in the pastors. They, too, must be "grave," serious, and prudent men; sincere, candid, and consistent in their discourse; nor speaking one thing before men's faces, and another behind their backs; neither flattering, slandering, dissembling, nor prevaricating, in any company, or on any occasion: not addicted to much wine, or greedy of filthy gain: which might tempt them, after the example of Judas, to embezzle the money committed to them, or unfit them for liberally and impartially supplying the wants of the poor. They must also profess and maintain the mysteries of the Christian faith, with a pure conscience, and a uniform integrity of conduct, that so they might recommend it to others. It was proper, even in respect of this inferior office, that trial should be made of new converts; that previous to their admission to it, they might 10 For therefore we both labour and suffer reproach, because we trust in [h]the living God, who is the Saviour of all men, specially of those that believe.

11 These things command and teach.

12 Let no man despise thy youth; but [n]be thou an example of the believers, [o]in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity.

13 Till I come, give attendance to reading, to exhortation, to doctrine.

14 Neglect not the gift that is in thee, which was given thee by prophecy, [z]with the laying on of the hands of the presbytery.[6]

15 Meditate upon these things; give thyself wholly to them, [a]that thy profiting may appear [†]to all.

16 Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this [c]thou shalt both save thyself, and [f]them that hear thee.

CHAP. V.

Rules to be observed in reproving, 1. Of widows, 3. Of elders, 17.

REBUKE not [b]an elder, but [c]entreat him as a father; and the younger men as brethren;

2 The [e]elder women as mothers; the younger as sisters, with all purity.

3 Honour widows that are widows indeed.

4 But if any widow have children or nephews, let them learn first to shew [*]piety at home, and to requite their parents: for that is [n]good and acceptable before God.

5 Now she that is a widow indeed, and desolate, [q]trusteth in God, and [r]continueth in supplications and prayers night and day.

6 But she that liveth [†]in pleasure is [t]dead while she liveth.

7 And these things give in charge, that they may be blameless.

8 But if any provide not for his own, [x]and specially for those of his own [‡]house, he hath denied the faith, [z]and is worse than an infidel.[1]

9 Let not a widow be [§]taken into the number[2] under threescore years old, [c]having been the wife of one man,

10 Well reported of for [*]good works; if she have brought up children, if she have lodged strangers, if she have [h]washed the saints' feet, [i]if she have relieved the afflicted, if she have diligently followed every good work.

11 But the younger widows refuse: for when they have begun [m]to wax wanton against Christ, they will marry;

12 Having damnation, because they have cast off their first faith.

13 And withal they learn to be idle, wandering about from house to house; and not only idle, but tattlers also, and [*]busybodies, [†]speaking things which they ought not.

14 [u]I will therefore [x]that the younger women marry, bear children, guide the house, [z]give none occasion to the adversary [‖]to speak reproachfully.

15 For some [a]are already turned asido after Satan.

16 If any man or woman that believeth have widows, let them relieve them, and let not the church be charged; that it may relieve them that are widows indeed.

17 Let [d]the elders[3] that [c]rule well be counted worthy of double honour, especially they who labour in the [‖]word and doctrine.

18 For the scripture saith, [‖]Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn. And, [m]The labourer is worthy of his reward.

19 Against an elder [n]receive not an accusation, but [*]before [o]two or three witnesses.

20 Them that sin rebuke before all, that others also may fear.

21 I [r]charge thee before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, and the elect angels, that thou observe these things, [†]without preferring one before another, doing nothing by partiality.

22 Lay hands suddenly on no man, neither be partaker of other men's sins: keep thyself pure.

be approved to be men of blameless conversation. The wives also of the deacons, (and much more those of the spiritual pastors,) must be of grave and serious deportment; nor addicted to the vanities and dissipations of the world; not, slanderers, or prone to circulate disadvantageous reports of their neighbours: but, sober women, temperate in all things, and faithful in the discharge of every relative and religious duty.—Scott.

CHAP. IV. POPERY PREDICTED.—Ver. 1—5. This apostacy would be effected, by men's hearkening to false teachers, who would be influenced by seducing spirits; and thus they would embrace doctrines of devils or demons; and adopt such notions about the souls of the dead, as would introduce the worship of saints as intercessors, and of angels as spirits superior to men, though inferior to God. This was a species of idolatry, like that of the heathens in worshipping their departed monarchs, legislators, and benefactors, as demons, or a middle order of beings, between God and men. And, as devils are the real objects of all worship paid to mere creatures, so, this delusion would tend to gratify the ambition of these apostate spirits. These doctrines and practices would be supported by the hypocrisy of liars, who would invent a variety of legends, impose on men with pretended miracles and revelations, cheat them by legendary tales; and so carry on an infamous traffic by forgery and imposture, under the pretext of great sanctity, to the aggrandizing of themselves, and the deluding of the credulous multitude. Nor would these men feel remorse for their lies and forgeries; as the habit of villany, under the mask of extraordinary piety, would cauterize their consciences, and render them entirely callous; even as the external skin becomes unfeeling by being frequently seared with a hot iron. To maintain their usurpations over men's minds, and to fix a large body in their interest, by detaching them from other connections, as well as to amuse mankind by the appearance of uncommon sanctity; they would discourage, and even forbid marriage, as if it were an unholy estate, and unfit for devout persons: they would deny this liberty to numbers, especially to the clergy, by means of which all kind of abominations would be introduced and connived at. They would also enjoin their abstinence from this and the other kind of meat, either entirely, or on particular days and seasons: by this likewise they would keep up their authority over men's consciences, and impose upon the multitude with apparent devotion; whilst they perpetrated all kind of iniquities, as the Pharisees had done before them. But, indeed, God had created every kind of wholesome food for the benefit of man, and allowed Christians the use of it all, indiscriminately, at all times and seasons, without restriction; and, therefore, any of his creatures might be received with thanksgiving by those who believed the truth, and so far understood it as to know their Christian liberty. For all his creatures being in themselves good, and serving the purposes for which he made them, nothing was to be refused as unclean, provided it was received with thankfulness; as the permission of God's word, a temperate use of it, according to his precepts, and prayer for a blessing upon it, sanctified it to the believer's use, and to fit him for the Lord's service.—Scott.

CHAP. V. WIDOWS.—Ver. 9—12. The apostle could not here mean, that no widows were to be relieved by the church, who were under sixty years of age: for the distresses of younger widows, as well as of other poor persons, might be very urgent. He is, therefore, generally supposed to refer, to a certain number of widows, who were discharged from all secular cares, and maintained by the church; of whom, such as were able acted as deaconesses, to visit sick and poor women, and to administer relief and counsel to them; to instruct young women, and perhaps children; or to attend on such other concerns of the church, its ministers, and pious strangers, as lay within their province. Though no command is given for such an order of persons in the church; (for many things of this kind were left discretionary, and to be determined according to circumstances;) yet, they might frequently be useful, if properly selected and regulated. In this view the propriety of the rule here given, is apparent. As the apostle counsels the younger widows to marry, it cannot be imagined, that he would exclude them, when grown old, from the number here intended, if otherwise qualified, merely because they had followed his counsel. By "the wife of one man," therefore, the apostle did not intend to exclude such as had married a second time, which the Scripture nowhere disallows. But, shameful and astonishing irregularities, in this respect, were common among the heathen women: they frequently left their husbands to live with other men, and then sometimes returned to them again; they often designedly gave them just cause to divorce them, that they might take other husbands; nay, they sometimes did what was equivalent to divorcing their husbands; nor were these things deemed scandalous: at least, not in that degree which they would be at present. If then any woman had formerly conformed to these corrupt customs, it would not be consistent with the credit of Christianity to admit her into this select number of devoted widows, though no other objection lay against her; for it must exclusively consist of those, who had lived virtuously and honourably in the married state. Some expositors think, that they who had married again, after being divorced, were intended: but there is not the least intimation in Scripture, that the divorced should be restrained from marrying again, even if justly put away, and surely then, not when unjustly divorced.—They must also be such women, as had an established character for good works since they were converted. Those were to be preferred, who had charitably educated the children of their poor relatives or neighbours, or who had faithfully done their duty towards their own children; who, when in more prosperous circumstances, had hospitably entertained strangers in their houses; who had willingly stooped to the office of washing the feet of the saints, when wearied with travelling; and who had, from love to Christ, readily relieved the afflicted, and diligently attended to every good work. These widows, when grown old and left desolate, were the proper persons for this service.—But, Timothy was directed to reject the application of younger widows: for experience showed, that their avowed purpose, of no more entering into the married state, was not to be depended on.

Care in Ordaining Office-bearers.—Ver. 21, 22. The apostle here most solemnly charged Timothy, as in the presence of God and the Lord Jesus Christ; and as he hoped to join the company of the elect angels, who had been preserved and confirmed in holiness, when many of their company apostatized and ruined themselves; who then witnessed his conduct, and would attend, when he should give an account of it to his sovereign Judge: that he observed these things, with the utmost care and exactness, whatever opposition and trials he might incur; and that in all these regulations, he should take care not to prefer one man to another, through any carnal affection, attachment, connection, or obligations; and that he should manifest no partiality, either in censuring offenders, or ordaining elders, or in any other part of his important service. In ordaining elders, especially, he must be careful not to act in a hasty manner; but, take time to examine into men's characters, principles, motives, and endowments, that he might not be induced to lay hands on improper persons, by importunity employed in their behalf. He would need great care, in this immensely important concern, to avoid being partaker of other men's sins, and becoming answerable, in part at least, for the crimes of those, who thus intruded into that sacred function, to the dishonour of God, the great detriment of the church, and the ruin of immortal souls: for even an obliging and easy temper might betray him into much criminality, from which he must by all means keep himself pure.—Scott.

CHAP. VI. Servants.—Ver. 1. Servants must respect their masters, "count them worthy of all honour," (because they are "their masters,") of all the respect, observance, compliance, and obedience, that are justly expected from servants to their masters. Not that they were to think that of them which they were not; but as their masters they must count them worthy of all that honour which was fit for them to receive, "that the name of God be not blasphemed." If servants that embraced the Christian religion, should grow insolent and disobedient to their masters, the doctrine of Christ would be reflected on for their sakes, as if it had made men worse livers than they had been before they had received the gospel. Observe, If the professors of religion misbehave themselves, "the name of God and his doctrine" are in danger of being "blasphemed" by those who seek occasion "to speak evil of that worthy name by which we are called." And this is a good reason why we should all conduct ourselves well, that we may prevent the occasion which many seek, and will be very apt to lay hold of, to speak ill of religion for our sakes. Or suppose the master were a Christian, and a believer, and the servant a believer too, would not that excuse him, because "in Christ there is neither bond nor free?" No, by no means, for Jesus Christ did not come to dissolve the bond of civil relation, but to strengthen it. "They that have believing masters, let them not despise them, because they are brethren;" for that brotherhood relates only to spiritual privileges, not to any outward dignity or advantage; (those misunderstand and abuse their religion, who make it a pretence for denying the duties that they owe to their relations;) nay, "rather do them service, because they are faithful and beloved." They must think themselves the more obliged to serve them, because the faith and love that bespeak men Christians, oblige them to do good; and that is all wherein their service consists. Observe, It is a great encouragement to us in doing our duty to our relations, if we have reason to think they are faithful and beloved, "and partakers of the benefit," that is, of the benefit of Christianity. Again, Believing masters and servants are brethren, and partakers of the benefit; for in Christ Jesus there is neither bond nor free, for ye are all one in Christ Jesus, Gal. iii. 28.—Henry.

Danger of Excessive Love of Riches.—Ver. 6—10. Having therefore food and raiment, (or covering,) including both raiment and habitation, and things barely needful for the present, we ought to be contented and satisfied with them; without indulging any desire of acquiring greater affluence, or of being exempted from hard labour and mean fare; for discontent in a lowly situation commonly produced a determination to be rich if possible, and led men out of the plain path of honest industry and prudent economy, in dependence on the providence, and obedience to the commandment, of God. It was indeed evident from facts, they who would at any rate be rich, gave Satan the opportunity of tempting and ensnaring them into such actions, as could not consist with godliness or a good conscience; urging them to use dishonest means of increasing their gains, and a variety of fraudulent practices: it betrayed them into such a multiplicity of employments and hurry of business, as left no time or inclination for spiritual religion; and it led them into such connections and companies, as tended to draw them still further into sin and folly. Thus they were brought under the power of "many foolish and hurtful lusts," even "the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye, and the pride of life;" which mocked their expectations, and proved most injurious to themselves and others; till they were plunged into inevitable ruin and eternal perdition: as men are drawn in by the vortex of a whirlpool, when they venture too near it, and so are swallowed up and drowned, without any possibility of escape. When once "the love of money" is allowed to rule in the heart, it becomes the prolific root of all kinds of evil. Impostures, frauds, lies, thefts, robberies, oppressions, murders, ungodliness, hypocrisy, apostacy, contention, lawsuits, wars, cruelty, pride, luxury, sensuality, or penurious avarice, are some of the noxious weeds, of which it daily produces a most abundant increase, according to the different constitutions, habits, and circumstances of mankind. Every species of impiety, iniquity, and vice, in one way or another, grows from it; and a large proportion of the miseries, as well as the crimes of mankind originate from the same source.—Scott.

The Glory of God.—Ver. 15, 16. Concerning Christ and God the Father he here speaks great things. 1. That God is the "only Potentate:" the powers of earthly princes are all derived from him, and depend upon him. The powers that are, are ordained of God, Rom. xiii. 1. He is the only Potentate that is absolute and sovereign, and perfectly independent. 2. He is the "blessed" and only Potentate, infinitely happy, and nothing can in the least impair his happiness. 3. He is "King of kings, and Lord of Lords." All the kings of the earth derive their power from him; he gave them their crowns, they hold them under him, and he has a sovereign dominion over them. This is Christ's title, Rev. xix. 16, "upon his vesture and his thigh;" for he has a name higher than the kings of the earth. 4. He only has immortality; he only is immortal in himself, and has immortality, as he is the Fountain of it, for the immortality of angels and spirits is derived from him. 5. He dwells in inaccessible light; "light which no man can approach unto;" no man can get to heaven, but those whom he is pleased to bring thither, and admit into his kingdom. 6. He is invisible; "whom no man hath seen, nor can see." It is impossible that mortal eyes should bear the brightness of the divine glory. No man can see God, and live. Having mentioned these glorious attributes, he concludes with a doxology; "To him be honour and power everlasting. Amen." God having all power and honour to himself, it is our duty to ascribe all power and honour to him. (1.) What an evil is sin, when committed against such a God, the blessed and only Potentate! The evil of it rises in proportion to the dignity of him against whom it is committed. (2.) Great is his condescension, to take notice of such mean and vile creatures as we are. What are we then, that the blessed God, the King of kings, and Lord of lords, should seek after us? (3.) Blessed are they who are admitted to dwell with this great and blessed Potentate; "Happy are thy men," (says the queen of Sheba to king Solomon,) "happy are these thy servants, who stand continually before thee," 1 Kings x. 8. # THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO

T I M O T H Y.

THE apostle was evidently a prisoner at Rome when he wrote this epistle. The scope of the epistle evidently was to animate Timothy to endure persecutions with courage and constancy; to caution him and others against false teachers and corrupt professors of Christianity, the increase of whom the apostle predicted in most energetical language; and to direct and animate him in fulfilling his ministry, and in following after holiness.

CHAP. I.

Paul's love to Timothy, 1, whom he exhorts to suffer for the gospel's sake, 8; having respect to the mercy shewn him, 9, and the example set him, 12. Of Onesiphorus, 16.

Anno Domini cir. 66.

PAUL, an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, according to [b]the promise of life which is in Christ Jesus,

2 To Timothy, my dearly-beloved son: Grace, mercy, and peace from God the Father, and Christ Jesus our Lord.

3 [c]I thank God, [f]whom I serve from my forefathers with pure conscience, [h]that without ceasing I have remembrance of thee in my prayers night and day;

4 Greatly desiring to see thee, being mindful of thy tears, that I may be filled with joy;

5 When I call to remembrance the unfeigned faith that is in thee, which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois,[1] and thy mother Eunice; and I am persuaded that in thee also.

6 Wherefore I put thee in remembrance, [a]that thou stir up[2] the gift of God, which is in thee by the putting on of my hands.

7 For God hath not given us the spirit of fear; [x]but of power, and [y]of love, and of a sound mind.[3]

8 Be not thou therefore ashamed of [b]the testimony of our Lord, nor of me his prisoner: but be thou partaker of the afflictions of the gospel, [e]according to the power of God;

9 Who [f]hath saved us, and [g]called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but [i]according to his own purpose and grace,[4] [k]which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began;

10 But is [m]now made manifest by the appearing of [n]our Saviour Jesus Christ, [o]who hath abolished death,[5] [q]and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel:

11 Whereunto I am appointed a preacher, and an apostle, and a teacher of the Gentiles.

12 For the which cause I also suffer these things: nevertheless I am not ashamed; [u]for I know whom I have *believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that [a]which I have committed unto him against that day.

13 Hold fast the form of sound words, which thou hast heard of me, [f]in faith and love which is in Christ Jesus.

14 That good thing which was committed unto thee keep [h]by the Holy Ghost [i]which dwelleth in us.

15 This thou knowest, that all they which are in Asia be turned away from me;[6] of whom are Phygellus and Hermogenes.

16 The [m]Lord give mercy unto [n]the house of Onesiphorus; for he oft refreshed me, and was not ashamed of my chain:

17 But, when he was in Rome, he sought me out very diligently, and found me.

18 The Lord grant unto him that he may find [t]mercy of the Lord in that day: and in how many things he ministered unto me at Ephesus, thou knowest very well.

CHAP. II.

Timothy exhorted to constancy and perseverance, 1; and to avoid unprofitable disputes, 14.

THOU therefore, my son, [b]be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus.

2 And the things that thou hast heard of me *among many witnesses, [e]the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also.

3 Thou therefore [h]endure hardness, as [l]a good soldier of Jesus Christ.

4 No man that warreth[1] [l]entangleth himself with the affairs of this life, that he may please him who hath chosen him to be a soldier.

5 And if a man also strive for masteries, yet is he not crowned, except he strive lawfully.[2]

6 The husbandman [t]that laboureth must be first partaker of the fruits.

happy are they who are allowed to stand before the King of kings. (4.) Let us love, adore, and praise the Great God; for who shall not fear thee, O Lord, and glorify thy name? For thou only art holy, Rev. xv. 4.—Henry.

CHAP. I. TIMOTHY'S PIOUS ANCESTRY.—Ver. 3–5. Paul was especially thankful that he was enabled continually to remember Timothy in his fervent and frequent prayers, by night and by day; being mindful of the tears which he shed as expressive of his love and sorrow when they last separated; and longing greatly for another interview, which he was assured would fill his own heart with joy and satisfaction. This persuasion arose from his recollection of the unfeigned faith which Timothy's whole conduct had manifested to dwell in him, and to influence and sanctify his heart. This was the same precious faith that had first been communicated to his grandmother Lois, and to his mother Eunice. These pious women seem to have "waited for the consolation of 'Israel,'" before they heard the gospel, and thus were prepared to receive it; and having diligently given Timothy a religious education, it greatly conduced to his being made partaker of the same faith, as the apostle was fully persuaded concerning him.—Scott.

THE ABOLITION OF DEATH.—Ver. 10. By the gospel of Christ death is abolished; "he has abolished death," not only weakened it, but taken it out of the way, has broken the power of death over us; by taking away sin, he has abolished death, (for the sting of death is sin, 1 Cor. xv. 56,) in altering the property of it, and breaking the power of it. Death now of an enemy is become a friend, and is the gate by which we pass out of a troublesome, vexatious, sinful world, into a world of perfect peace and purity; and the power thereof is broken, for death does not triumph over those who believe the gospel, but they triumph over it. "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" 1 Cor. xv. 55. He has "brought life and immortality to light by the gospel;" he has showed us another world, more clearly than it was before discovered under any former dispensation, and the happiness of that world, the certain recompense of our obedience by faith: we all with open face, as in a glass, behold the glory of God. He has brought it to light, not only set it before us, but offered it to us, by the gospel. Let us value the gospel more than ever, as it is that whereby life and immortality are brought to light; for herein it has the pre-eminence above all former discoveries; so that it is the gospel of life and immortality, as it discovers them to us, and directs us in the ready way that leads thereto, as well as proposes the most weighty motives to excite our endeavours in seeking after glory, honour, and immortality.—Henry.

PAUL'S CONFIDENCE.—Ver. 11. 12. St. Paul had been constituted a preacher, and an apostle of the gospel, before described, that he might instruct the Gentiles in the way to immortal life and happiness: but instead of receiving honour and affluence as a recompense for his labours, he suffered all kind of injuries, and was then in prison as a criminal, in continual expectation of an ignominious death. He was not, however, in the least ashamed of having engaged and spent so many years in the service of that Saviour whom men thus despised: for he knew by faith, divine teaching, and happy experience, the power, faithfulness, and love of him in whom he had believed; and as he could not doubt of his compassion and kindness, so he was fully persuaded of his authority and ability to take care of him in all events. He had intrusted his life, his soul, and his eternal interests, into his hands, as a precious deposit. He had discovered especially the value and danger of his immortal soul; he had been convinced that none else could effectually deliver and secure it through the trials of life and death; and that Jesus both could and would: he had therefore long before, and by renewed and constant application to him from time to time ever since, intrusted it in his hands by faith and prayer; to be washed, justified, and sanctified, and at last to be produced complete in holiness, and meet for glory. What he might pass through by the way he knew not; but he was persuaded that Christ was fully able to keep the precious deposit to that day to which he continually had respect, as the grand accomplishment of all his hopes; when his beloved Lord would again appear in glorious majesty to judge the world. His most important interests, therefore, being thus secured beyond the reach of all enemies, he was prepared to endure ignominy, pain, and death, without shrinking.—Scott.

ONESIPHORUS.—Ver. 18. Paul prays for Onesiphorus himself, as well as for his house, "that he might find mercy in that day," in the day of death and of judgment, when Christ will account all the good offices done to his poor members as done to himself. Observe, 1. The day of death and judgment is an awful day, which may be emphatically called "that day." 2. We need desire no more to make us happy than to find mercy of the Lord in that day, when those that have showed no mercy will have judgment without mercy. 3. The best Christians will want mercy in that day, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ, Jude ver 21. 4. If you would have mercy then, you must seek for it now of the Lord. 5. It is of and from the Lord that we must have mercy; for unless the Lord has mercy on us, in vain will be the pity and compassion of men or angels.—Henry.

CHAP. II. THE GOOD SOLDIER.—Ver. 3. 1. All Christians, but especially ministers, "are soldiers of Jesus Christ;" they fight under his banner, in his cause, and against his enemies, for he is the Captain of our salvation, Heb. ii. 10. 2. The soldiers of Jesus Christ must approve themselves good soldiers, faithful to their Captain, resolute in his 7 Consider what I say; [r]and the Lord give thee understanding in all things.

8 Remember that Jesus Christ, of the seed of David,[s] was raised from the dead, according to my gospel:

9 Wherein I suffer trouble, as an evildoer, even unto bonds; [s]but the word of God is not bound.

10 Therefore I endure all things for the elect's sakes, that they may also obtain the salvation which is in Christ Jesus with eternal glory.

11 It is a faithful saying: [g]For if we be dead with him, [h]we shall also live with him:

12 If [i]we suffer, we shall also reign with him: [k]if we deny him, he also will deny us:

13 If we believe not, [l]yet he abideth faithful; he cannot deny himself.

14 Of these things put them in remembrance, charging them before the Lord that they strive not about words to no profit, but to the subverting of the hearers.

15 Study to shew thyself [t]approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing[4] the word of truth.

16 But shun profane and vain babblings; for they will increase unto more ungodliness.

17 And their word will eat as doth a ‡canker; of whom is Hymenæus and Philetus;[5]

18 Who concerning the truth have erred, saying [d]that the resurrection is past already; and overthrow the faith of some.

19 Nevertheless [f]the foundation of God standeth [g]sure, having this seal, [i]The Lord knoweth them that are his. And, [k]Let every one that nameth the name of Christ [l]depart from iniquity.

20 But in a great house there are not only vessels of gold and of silver, but also of wood and of earth; [o]and some to honour, and some to dishonour.

21 If a man therefore purge himself from these, he shall be a vessel unto honour, sanctified, and meet for the master's use, and [p]prepared unto every good work.

22 Flee also youthful lusts: but follow righteousness, faith, charity, peace, with them that [q]call on the Lord out of a pure heart.

23 But foolish and unlearned questions avoid, knowing that they do gender strifes.

24 And [e]the servant of the Lord must not strive; but be gentle unto all men, apt to teach, [l]patient;

25 In meekness instructing those that oppose themselves; if God peradventure will give them [m]repentance to the acknowledging of the truth;

26 And that they may *recover themselves [n]out of the snare of the devil, [c]who are †taken captive by him at his will.

He advertiseth him of the times to come, 1; describeth the enemies of the truth, 6; and commendeth the holy Scriptures, 16.

THIS know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come:

2 For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy,

3 Without natural affection, truce-breakers, *false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good,

4 Traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasures [r]more than lovers of God;

5 Having [s]a form[1] of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away.

6 For of this sort are they which creep into houses, and lead captive silly women laden with sins, led away with divers lusts;

7 Ever learning, and never able to come to [b]the knowledge of the truth.

8 Now, as Jannes and Jambres[2] withstood Moses, so do these also [d]resist the truth: men of corrupt minds, †reprobate concerning the faith.

9 But they shall proceed no further: for their folly shall be manifest unto all men, as theirs also was.

10 But ‡thou hast fully known my doctrine, manner of life, purpose, faith, longsuffering, charity, patience, 11 Persecutions, afflictions, which came unto me at Antioch, at Iconium, at Lystra; what persecutions I endured: [o]but out of them all the Lord delivered me.

12 Yea, and all that will [p]live godly in Christ Jesus [q]shall suffer persecution.

13 But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived.

14 But [t]continue thou in the things which thou hast learned, and hast been assured of, [x]knowing of whom thou hast learned them;

15 And that from a child thou hast known [z]the holy scriptures, [a]which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus.[3]

cause, and must not give over fighting till "they are made more than conquerors, through him that loved them," Rom. viii. 37. 3. Those who would approve themselves good soldiers of Jesus Christ must endure hardness; that is, we must expect it, and count upon it in this world; must endure and accustom ourselves to it, and bear it patiently when it comes, and not be moved by it from our integrity. He must not entangle himself in the affairs of this world, ver. 4. A soldier, when he is enlisted, leaves his calling, and all the business of it, that he may attend his captain's orders. If we have given up ourselves to be Christ's soldiers, we must sit loose to this world.

A Good Workman.—Ver. 15. "Study to show thyself approved unto God." Observe, the care of ministers must be to approve themselves unto God, to be accepted of him, and to show that they are so approved unto God. In order thereunto, there must be constant care and industry; "study" to show thyself such a one, "a workman that needs not be ashamed." Ministers must be "workmen," they have work to do, and they must take pains in it; "workmen" that are either unskilful, or unfaithful, or lazy, have "need to be ashamed;" but those who mind their business, and keep to their work, are workmen that need not be ashamed. And what is their work? It is "rightly to divide the word of truth." Not to invent a new gospel, but rightly to divide the gospel that is committed to their trust. To speak terror to those to whom terror belongs, comfort to whom comfort; to give every one "their portion in due season," Matt. xxiv. 25.

Ministerial Character.—Ver. 23–26. Again the apostle saw it necessary to caution his beloved Timothy against foolish and unlearned questions: such curious, presumptuous, or useless questions, as often appear to spring from a depth of discernment, reflection, and erudition; but which, in fact, are suggested by folly, and a want of solid acquaintance with the majesty of God, with man's true condition and character, and with other subjects of similar importance. For these questions, which different persons would resolve in different ways, must engender fierce and hostile contests among proud and obstinate disputants, which would be managed with such acrimony and mutual revilings, or even injuries, that they might be called fightings. Whatever Jewish or Gentile disputers did, "the servant of the Lord must not strive" in this manner, or with such weapons. On the contrary, he must be gentle in his address and conduct to all men, even to the most virulent and unreasonable opposers or perverters of the truth: he must be apt and ready to instruct men in the doctrines of Christ, with clear explanations, cool discussions, conclusive arguments and testimonies, pertinent illustrations, and kind language: at the same time he must patiently bear revilings, ridicule, and ill usage, without recrimination or resentment. Thus, in a meek, dispassionate, forbearing, and forgiving temper, he must continue to instruct such as oppose themselves, however perverse and obstinate they were, provided they would attend to the word: still hoping that "God, peradventure, would give them repentance." This might be sometimes the case; and then they would humbly receive and profess the truth, and depend on the mercy and grace of God in Christ for pardon, assistance, and deliverance.—Scott.

CHAP. III. Jannes and Jambres.—Ver. 8. False teachers are here compared to the Egyptian magicians who withstood Moses, they are here named "Jannes and Jambres;" though the names are not to be met with in the story of the Old Testament, yet they are found in some old Jewish writers. Moses came with a divine commission to fetch Israel out of Egypt, these magicians opposed him, and thus those heretics "resisted the truth," and like them were men "of corrupt minds;" men who had their understandings perverted, biassed, and prejudiced against the truth, and "reprobate concerning the faith," very far from being true Christians; "but they shall proceed no further;" or not much further, as some read it. Observe, Seducers seek for corners, and love obscurity; for they are afraid to appear in public, and therefore creep into houses. Further, They attack those who are the least able to defend themselves; that is, silly and wicked women. Seducers in all ages are much alike, their characters are the same, "men of corrupt minds," &c., and their conduct much the same, they resist the truth, as Jannes and Jambres withstood Moses, and they will be alike in their disappointment.—Henry.

Inspiration.—Ver. 14–17. The apostle, applying what he had before stated, called on Timothy vigilantly to maintain, and persevere in, the profession and preaching of that doctrine which he had learned, and assuredly believed; knowing that he had received it from the Lord through his ministry, and remembering, that it accorded to the holy Scriptures, with which he had from his childhood been acquainted. These, when properly understood, were sufficient to render him wise unto salvation, and to instruct him in all things pertaining to it; as they all spake of the promised Messiah, and prepared the mind for receiving him in faith, and submitting to his authority. For all the writings of Moses and the prophets were given by inspiration of God, to instruct men in divine things: and every part of them was not only perfect truth, but profitable, to teach them sound doctrine respecting God and themselves, the eternal state, the way of acceptance, and other interesting and difficult subjects; to reprove and convince them of their errors and sins, that they might learn their guilt and danger, and so value and embrace the remedy proposed; to correct and regulate their affections, dispositions, and conduct: and to instruct them in every part of universal righteousness, with the obligations, motives, and encouragements to it. Thus they were suited, and sufficient, not only to make the Christian wise unto salvation, and to direct his

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO TITUS.

TITUS was a Gentile, and whether a native of Antioch in Syria, or of some other place, he was early converted to the Christian faith. He was the fellow-labourer of the apostle (2 Cor. viii. 23). We find nothing said respecting him until Paul left him in Crete: but this implies that he went there with Paul; and it is most probable that he attended Paul to Rome on his appeal to Cesar. The design of the epistle is similar to the first to Timothy.

whole behaviour, but to perfect "the man of God," the faithful minister of Christ; and fully to supply him with knowledge and wisdom, and whatever could tend to his fitness for every good work, in his private conduct, and public services. —Scott.

CHAP. IV. CHARGE TO TIMOTHY.—Ver. 1—5. In preaching the word of God, he was charged to reprove with authority the sins and negligences of professors; to rebuke with more sharpness those that were guilty of gross evils; and to exhort, persuade, and beseech his hearers, to attend to every part of the divine message with the obedience of faith. In this he was to persevere, "with all long-suffering," though many were unruly, ungrateful, or slow to understand his instructions; and he must enforce his exhortations, by explaining and applying the doctrines of the gospel, in the simplest and most convincing manner. In these important services, he ought to be the more assiduous; as the time was about to come when professed Christians would not endure sound doctrine, the faithful salutary truths, and practical instructions of God's word: but, being led away with divers lusts, would be exasperated or disgusted by it; and desire a doctrine, which gave them no disturbance or offence, whilst they indulged their several inclinations. They would therefore seek for "teachers after their own lusts," and they would heap such unto themselves, as dissatisfied without a large number of them, to gratify their love of novelty and variety, and to keep them in countenance in their delusions. Thus "their itching ears" would be humoured and pleased; they would turn them away from the truth with contempt and disgust, and pay all their attention to cunningly devised fables and specious heresies. To oppose the progress of this corrupt leaven, which was even then beginning to work, Timothy was called upon to "be vigilant in all things," and to shun all pursuits, which might prevent him from watching against the fallacies, with which Satan and his servants would in varied ways endeavour to seduce men from the simplicity of Christ; to endure cheerfully all the afflictions, to which his zeal and faithfulness might expose him from false brethren, or avowed enemies; to perform the office of an evangelist, in the several places to which he might have access; and to make full proof of his ministry, by trying to the uttermost every method of doing good to the souls of men, in the exercise of all its duties.

DUTY DISCHARGED—HOPE TRIUMPHANT.—Ver. 6—8. It behoved Timothy to act with the greater vigilance and fortitude, as the apostle foresaw that he himself should shortly suffer martyrdom, and pour out his blood as a drink-offering to the honour of the Lord. For this approaching event he was ready: and he knew the time was at hand when he should be removed out of the world, as the sojourner took up his tent and departed to another place. He considered himself as one who had finished his public ministry, and had only the concluding scene to pass through: and since the time, when Christ had chosen him to be his soldier, he was conscious that he had "fought a good fight;" he had valiantly contended against sin, the world, and Satan; he had, at Christ's command, through labours, perils, and sufferings, sought the subversion of the kingdom of darkness, the deliverance of Satan's captives, and the advancement of the kingdom of Christ: this he had done, with the appointed weapons of his warfare, by faithful preaching, a holy example, fervent payers, and patient sufferings. He had "finished his course." He had set out to run the Christian race, laid aside every weight, pressed forward through every obstacle to the mark, and was now about to seize the prize. "He had also kept the faith," both in his profession, and in the execution of his important ministry. He therefore assuredly expected the "crown of righteousness;" that glory and immortality, which were prepared for all true believers in Christ, according to the measure of their grace, services, and sufferings in his cause. This the apostle knew had been "laid up for him," and he had little more to do, than to receive and enjoy it. The righteous Judge would openly award it to him "in that day," to which he constantly called man's attention; for, though as a sinner he merited condemnation according to the law; yet, as a believer, whose faith had been shown by his works, he was entitled to the reward of righteousness, according to the gospel. He expected, indeed, "when absent from the body, to be present with the Lord," to and have prelibations of his complete felicity with "the spirits of just men made perfect:" but, the public declaration of his right to the conqueror's crown, and his admission to the full enjoyment of immortal glory, would be reserved for that day, when Christ shall appear to show his righteousness, as well as his mercy, in rewarding his faithful followers.—Scott.

CHAP. I. TITUS.—The person written to is described. 1. By his name, Titus, a Gentile Greek, yet called both to the faith and ministry. Observe, The grace of God is free and powerful. What worthiness or preparation was there in one of heathen stock and education? 2. He is described by his spiritual relation unto the apostle; "Mine own" (or my genuine) "son," not by natural generation, but by supernatural regeneration. "I have begotten you through the gospel," said he to the Corinthians, 1 Cor. iv. 15. Ministers are spiritual fathers to those whom they are the means of converting, and will tenderly affect and care for them, and must be answerably regarded by them. "'Mine own son after the common faith;' that faith which is common to all the regenerate, and which thou hast in truth, and expresses to the life." This might be said to distinguish Titus from hypocrites and false teachers, and to recommend him to the regard of the Cretans, as being among them a lively image of the apostle himself, in faith, and life, and heavenly doctrine.

The Christian Ministry.—Ver. 5. 1. Observe, A church without a fixed and standard ministry in it, is imperfect and wanting. 2. Observe, Where a fit number of believers is, presbyters or elders must be set; their continuance in churches is as necessary as their first appointment, "for perfecting the saints, and edifying the body of Christ, till all came to a perfect man in Christ," till the whole number of God's chosen be called and united to Christ in one body, and brought to their full stature and strength, and that measure of grace that is proper and designed for them, Eph. iv. 12, 13. Work this is, that must and will be doing to the world's end, to which therefore the necessary and appointed means for it must last. What praise is due to God for such an institution! What thankfulness from those that enjoy the benefits of it! What pity and prayer for such as want it!—Henry.

Ver. 6—9.—See corresponding passage in Timothy.

The Cretans.—Ver. 12, 13. The character of the Cretans indeed was so bad, that numbers of such persons, both deceivers and deceived, might be expected in their churches: for Epimenides, a native of Crete, a poet of some reputation, who might be "called a prophet of their own," and who perhaps was deemed a prophet by his countrymen, had said, "the Cretans are always liars, evil beasts, slow bellies;" they had in all ages been notorious for lies, frauds, and impostures; they were like poisonous or ferocious animals, gluttonous and indolent to excess; so that, whilst a great proportion of their time was employed in eating and drinking, they were rendered torpid and inactive by their excesses, and made no good use of the rest. They united the subtlety of the fox, the venom of the serpent, or the fierceness of wolves and tigers, with the greediness and inactivity of swine. It is not easy to determine, from what concurrence of circumstances the Cretans obtained so odious and contemptible a national character; but the inspired apostle attested the truth of this testimony; and the effects of it appeared in the conduct of many false teachers and professors of Christianity. Titus was therefore directed "to rebuke them sharply," or with cutting reproofs and awful warnings; "that the churches might be sound in the faith;" when the mouths of deceivers were thus stopped, hypocrites detected, and unestablished Christians put upon their guard. Timothy had been taught to instruct opposers with meekness, and to rebuke with long-suffering; but Titus was ordered to rebuke with sharpness. Some have conjectured, that Timothy was too vehement in his natural spirit, and Titus too timid and pliant: others ascribe the difference to the opposite characters of the persons to be rebuked. But, in fact, Christian meekness is as distant from pusillanimous connivance at sin and error, as from impetuous anger and impatience.—Scott.

CHAP. II. The Grace of God.—Ver. 11, 12. In every age, the gospel teaches men in general, and grace teaches believers in particular, "to deny ungodliness;" to refuse compliance with every inward and outward suggestion to neglect God and their duty to him, or to treat him with irreverence, ingratitude, contempt, and enmity; and constantly to resist and counteract that principle of alienation from God, whence all idolatry, infidelity, impiety, and irreligion, in thought, word, and deed, originate. It teaches them also to deny "worldly lusts," refusing to gratify those impetuous, carnal and selfish desires of the human heart, which influence men to seek happiness from the world, and not from God; such as pride, ambition, avarice, sensuality, wrath, malice, and envy; whence spring all kinds of contentions, wars, cruelties, injustice, frauds, oppressions, murders, intemperance, and licentiousness, which disturb, desolate, and plague the earth: these the saving grace of God teaches us, constantly and resolutely, to deny, resist, and mortify; refusing them every kind of indulgence, opposing their first risings in the heart, and avoiding all temptations to them.—The holy law of God, indeed, teaches men to love God and each other: but, requiring perfect obedience, it gives sinners neither injunction nor encouragement to repentance, to self-denial, or to works meet for repentance. It shuts them up under sin, and leaves them in that state, without hope or help: for every command, counsel, and encouragement, to a sinner, properly belongs, not to the law, but to "the saving grace of God," according to the gospel.

Coming of Christ—the Saviour.—Ver. 13. In this tenor of conduct, the gospel teaches believers to persevere, looking for that blessed object of hope, which the promises of the gospel lead them to expect at the end of their course of obedient faith; and waiting in patient preparation for "the appearing of the glory of the great God, even of our Saviour Jesus Christ;" to judge the world, and perfect the salvation of his people. The invisible God, the divine essence, "which no man hath seen or can see," will not be manifested at that solemn period: but Christ will be displayed, "in his own glory" as Mediator, "and in the glory of the Father:" and thus will appear "the glory of the great God, even of our Saviour Jesus Christ;" when, through his human nature, he shall exercise omnipotence, omniscience, and all the perfections of the Godhead, in assigning, by a single word, the everlasting state of unnumbered millions; whilst none shall be able to withstand the power, or object to the justice of that awful decision!—Scott.

8 This is a faithful saying,[2] and these things I will that thou affirm constantly, that they [c]which have believed in God might [d]be careful to maintain good works. These things are good and profitable unto men.

9 But avoid foolish questions, and genealogies, and contentions, and strivings about the law; for they are unprofitable and vain.

10 A man that is an heretick,[3] after the first and second admonition, reject;

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO PHILEMON.

Philemon seems to have been a Christian of some eminence, residing at Colossè (Col. iv. 9. 17), who had been converted under Paul's ministry; Onesimus, his slave, ran away from him, and was converted under Paul's ministry at Rome. The apostle sends him back to his master with this epistle, which places the private character of the apostle in a most interesting and attractive light.

Paul salutes Philemon, 1; rejoiceth to hear of his faith and love, 4; earnestly entreats him to receive into favour his fugitive servant, Onesimus, now a consistent believer, 8; and concludes with salutations and benedictions, 23.

PAUL, a prisoner of Jesus Christ, and Timothy our brother, unto Philemon our dearly beloved, and fellow-labourer,[1]

2 And to our beloved Apphia, and [d]Archippus [e]our fellow-soldier, and to [f]the church in thy house:

3 [g]Grace to you, and peace, from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ.

4 I [h]thank my God, making mention of thee always in my prayers,

5 Hearing of thy love and faith, which thou hast [k]toward the Lord Jesus, and toward all saints;

6 That the communication[2] of thy faith may become effectual, by the acknowledging of every good thing which is [n]in you in Christ Jesus.

7 For we have great joy and consolation in thy love because [p]the bowels of the saints are refreshed by thee, brother.

8 Wherefore, though I might be much [q]bold in Christ to enjoin thee that which is convenient,

9 Yet, for love's sake, I rather beseech thee, being such an one as Paul the aged,[3] and now also [u]a prisoner of Jesus Christ.

10 I beseech thee for my son Onesimus, [x]whom I have begotten in my bonds:[4]

11 Which in time past was to thee [a]unprofitable, but now [b]profitable to thee and to me:

12 Whom I have sent again: thou therefore receive him that is mine own bowels;

13 Whom I would have retained with me, that [c]in thy stead[5] he might have ministered unto me in [f]the bonds of the gospel.

14 But [g]without thy mind would I do nothing; that thy benefit should not be as it were of necessity, but willingly.

15 For perhaps he therefore departed for a season, that thou shouldest receive him for ever;[6]

16 Not now as a servant, but above a servant, a brother beloved, specially to me, but how much more unto thee, [l]both in the flesh, and in the Lord?

17 If thou count me therefore a partner, receive him as myself.

18 If he hath wronged thee, or oweth thee ought, [o]put that on mine account; for the good of all, and therefore must be regarded and submitted to by all; not for wrath and by force only, but willingly and for conscience-sake. Principalities, and powers, and magistrates, all civil rulers, whether supreme and chief, or subordinate, in the government under which they live, of whatever form it be; that they be subject to them and obey them, in things lawful and honest, and which it belongs to their office to require. The Christian religion was misrepresented by its adversaries, as prejudicial to the rights of princes and civil powers, and tending to faction and sedition, and to rebellion against lawful authority; therefore "to put to silence the ignorance of foolish men," and stop the mouths of malicious enemies, Christians must be reminded to show themselves examples, rather, of all due subjection and obedience to the government that is over them.—Henry.

19 [p]I Paul have written it with mine own hand, I will repay it: albeit I do not say to thee [q]how thou owest unto me even thine own self besides.

The Plan of Salvation.—Ver. 4—7. After this love of God to man had been displayed in the incarnation, obedience, death, and resurrection of the eternal Son of God, and by the preaching of the gospel, he had also brought the apostle and his brethren to partake of this salvation: not through the merit, or efficacy, of "works of righteousness, which they had done;" but according to his exceedingly rich and free mercy, and compassionate good-will to them; and by "the washing of regeneration," that new birth of the Spirit, of which the laver of baptism was the sacramental sign, but nothing more. This was not only a washing of the heart from the prevailing love and pollution of sin, but made way for the renewal of the soul to the divine image by the power of the Holy Spirit, which God the Father had richly and abundantly poured forth upon them, in all the variety of his gifts, graces, and consolations, through Jesus Christ our Saviour.

Rejection of a Heretic.—Ver. 10, 11. A heretic, in St. Paul's sense, seems to have been a professed Christian, who obstinately denied, and opposed, some fundamental doctrine of the gospel, as taught by the apostles; especially if he were earnest to propagate his notions, from a vain desire of being the head of a party, and so made divisions in the church. Titus was therefore directed to admonish such a man, once and again; showing him the error and evil tendency of his principles, and their corrupt source; warning him of his guilt and danger, and exhorting him to retract them. If this failed of effect, he ought afterwards to reject him, as an excommunicated person: being assured that his dangerous errors, and his proud and pertinacious adherence to them, evinced him "to be subverted," or turned aside from Christ, the foundation of the church, by the artifices of Satan; that his mistakes arose not from unavoidable ignorance, but from proud and carnal prejudices, so that he sinned in them; and that "he was condemned of himself," as his avowal of such heresies rendered further proof against him unnecessary: he was therefore not to be considered as a Christian, or allowed to continue in the communion of the church.—Scott.

Chap. I. Design of this Epistle.—Ver. 8—11. The apostle at length enters on the immediate business of the epistle. When he considered his own apostolical authority, and Philemon's character, he supposed that he might, with propriety, have enjoined him, in the name of Christ, to do what was so evidently convenient or agreeable to the loving spirit of Christianity: yet he preferred the language of a supplicant in the present case, and besought Philemon for love's sake, even the love of Christ to them, and their love to him, and to each other through him, that he would grant him one special favour, which he had it much at heart to obtain. He would remind him that his humble supplicant was such a one "as Paul, the aged" minister of the gospel, (for he was probably above sixty years old at this time,) who, having encountered numberless afflictions and perils, in seeking the salvation of men's souls, was then enduring the hardships of a tedious imprisonment in the cause of Christ; and he could not doubt of Philemon's readiness to do any thing which might mitigate the severity of his sufferings. His petition, indeed, was not presented for himself; but it was in behalf of "his son," even of one "whom he had begotten in his bonds," the son of his old age, for whom he had the most tender parental affection; and the name of this son was "Onesimus!"—Onesimus was Philemon's legal property, and St. Paul had required and prevailed with him to return to him, having made sufficient trial of his sincerity; and he requested Philemon to receive him with the same kindness as he would the aged apostle's own son according to the flesh, being equally dear to him as his spiritual child. He would gladly have kept him at Rome, to minister to him in his confinement, which Onesimus would willingly have done in the bonds of the gospel, being attached to him from Christian love and gratitude; and as he knew that Philemon would gladly have done him any service in person, if he had been at Rome, so he would have considered Onesimus as ministering to him in his master's stead. But he would not do any thing of this kind without his consent, lest he should seem to extort the benefit, and Philemon should appear to act from necessity, rather than from a willing mind. And though he had hopes of deriving benefit from Onesimus's faithful service, at some future period, by Philemon's free consent, yet he was not sure that this was the Lord's purpose respecting him; for, perhaps, he permitted him to leave his master for a season in [illegible] manner, in order that, being converted, he might be received [illegible] and might abide with Philemon [illegible] choose to live together [illegible]

20 Yea, brother, let me have joy of thee in the Lord: [a]refresh my bowels in the Lord.

21 Having confidence in thy obedience I wrote unto thee, knowing that thou wilt also do more than I say.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE # HEBREWS.

This epistle is not directed to any particular church or people; and on this account some have doubted its authenticity; but, from the matter, style, and sentiments, there is the strongest evidence both of its authenticity, and of its being written for the use of the Hebrew Christians (see chap. xiii. 13-19). The design of the epistle is to confirm them in the steady profession of the faith, by exhibiting its Divine Author, and shewing in what manner the gospel had been typified by the Mosaic economy, and how that economy was fulfilled and superseded by the gospel.

CHAP. I.

Christ in these last times coming to us from the Father, 1, is preferred before angels, both in person and office, 4.

GOD, who at sundry times, and in divers manners, spake in time past unto [c]the fathers by the prophets,

2 Hath in [d]these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath [f]appointed heir of all things, [g]by whom also he made the worlds;

3 Who, being the brightness [1] of his glory, and the express image of his person, and upholding all things by the word of his power, when he had by himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high;

4 Being made so much better than the angels, as he hath by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than they.

5 For unto which of the angels said he at any time, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee? And again, I will be to him a Father, and he shall be to me a Son?

6 *And again, when he bringeth in the first-begotten into the world,[2] he saith, And let all the angels of God worship him.

7 And [†]of the angels he saith, Who maketh his angels spirits, and his ministers a flame of fire.

case he knew that Philemon would no longer consider Onesimus merely as a slave, but view him as "above a slave, even as a brother beloved." This he was become to Paul in an especial manner, who had before been entirely a stranger to him; how much more then might it be supposed that he would be endeared to Philemon, when he became well acquainted with his excellency! seeing he would be near to him, both in the flesh, as one of his domestics, and in the Lord, as one with him in Christ by faith. —If Philemon deemed the apostle a partner, or partaker of the same grace, and dear to him for Christ's sake, let him express his love to him by receiving Onesimus with as much kindness as he would have received himself, if he had come in person; and in case Onesimus had wronged Philemon, or was in his debt, let him place that to his account: and, as he wrote the epistle with his own hand, he gave, as it were, a promissory note, that he would repay it upon demand.—It is generally observed that this is a plain instance of a debt being imputed to one which was contracted by another; and of one by a voluntary engagement becoming answerable for the misconduct of another, that he might be exempted from the punishment due to his crimes, and partake of benefits to which he had no right; according to the doctrine of Christ's voluntarily bearing the punishment of our sins, that we might receive the reward of his righteousness by a reciprocal imputation. Perhaps the apostle understood that Philemon had expressed some sharpness concerning Onesimus's conduct; or, knowing him to be naturally somewhat severe in his temper, he might fear lest he should punish him, as the laws permitted masters to do their slaves in such cases; which would not only have been grievous to Onesimus, but disgraceful to the gospel, and to Philemon himself. He therefore so far interested himself in the matter, though he could scarcely suppose that payment would be demanded of him, and added, that although he made this proposal, yet in doing so he had forborne to bring into the account that Philemon owed to him his own self, besides other benefits, as God had made him the instrument of his eternal salvation; thus intimating that he never could sufficiently requite that obligation. He therefore pathetically besought him to let him have an opportunity of rejoicing on his account, in the Lord's kindness to him, and to grant him this request, which would as much refresh his compassionate heart, as Philemon's liberality did the bowels of the saints.—Scott.

CHAP. I. The Old Testament.—Ver. 1. God spake to his ancient people at sundry times and in divers manners. 1. "At sundry times," or "by several parts," as the word signifies, which may refer either to the "several ages" of the Old Testament dispensation —the patriarchal, the Mosaical, and the prophetical; or to the several gradual openings of his mind concerning the Redeemer: to Adam, that the Messiah should come of the seed of the woman; to Abraham, that he should spring from his loins; to Jacob, that he should be of the tribe of Judah; to David, that he should be of his house; to Micah, that he should be born at Bethlehem; to Isaiah, that he should be born of a virgin. 2. "In divers manners," according to the different ways in which God thought fit to communicate his mind to his prophets; sometimes by the illapses of his Spirit, sometimes by dreams, sometimes by visions, sometimes by an audible voice, sometimes by legible characters under his own hand, as when he wrote the ten commandments on tables of stone. —Henry.

Glory of Christ.—Ver. 3, 4. The essence of the Deity is invisible to man; but the only-begotten Son, of whom the writer spake, had been appointed to make known his glory and perfections; being one with the Father, and equal to him in the Divine nature; and shining "in the form of God," with all the effulgency of his glory; and being also distinct from the Father, as to his personal subsistence. By assuming human nature he became "the effulgency of the Divine glory" to men, and made known the perfections of the Godhead to them, so that "he who saw Him saw the Father also." For the Son was "the express image," or the character, of the Father's person, or subsistence; and showed every part of the nature and perfections of God to man, with the greatest exactness and in the most effectual manner possible; so that, in proportion as any man knows Christ in his person, character, and salvation, he knows the Father also; and he that knows not Christ, hath no real knowledge of God at all.

Christ's Government.—Ver. 8, 9. As the sceptre, with which he would rule his people, and all nations, yea, the universe, for their benefit, was a sceptre of righteousness; the exercise of his pardoning mercy would be most honourable to divine justice, and most effectual to promote righteousness in the world. His laws and administration would be altogether righteous; whilst he acted as the friend and Saviour of sinners, he would most perfectly love righteousness and hate iniquity; as the Son of God, he was essentially and unchangeably holy; his human nature would be produced, and preserved, entirely free from all pollution of sin; his whole conduct even unto death would be perfectly righteous, and the government of his kingdom would be the same for ever. On this account God, even his God and Father, would anoint him, (for the future was spoken of, as if it had already taken place,) "with the oil of gladness," or the gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit, (the source of all substantial gladness in the heart of man,) in a more abundant manner, than any of those prophets, or servants of God, had received, whom he owned as his fellows, companions, or brethren in the human nature.

Christ's Dignity.—Ver. 13, 14. Jehovah had never spoken to any angel in such

2 For if the word spoken by angels was stedfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompence of reward;

3 How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him;

4 God also bearing them witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and [t]gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to his own will?

5 For unto the angels hath he not put in subjection the world to come, whereof we speak.

6 But one in a certain place testified, saying, [p]What is man, that thou art mindful of him?[2] or [q]the son of man, that thou [r]visitest him?

7 Thou madest him a little [s]lower than the angels; thou crownedst him with glory and honour, and didst set him over the works of thy hands:

8 Thou [t]hast put all things in subjection under his feet. For in that he put all in subjection under him, he left nothing that is not put under him. [u]But now we see not yet all things put under him.

9 But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels [s]for the suffering of death, [x]crowned with glory and honour; that he by the grace of God should [a]taste death for every man.[3]

10 For it became him, [d]for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing [e]many sons unto glory, to make [g]the Captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings.

11 For both he that sanctifieth and they who are sanctified are all of one: for which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren, 12 Saying, [n]I will declare thy name unto my brethren; [o]in the midst of the church will I sing praise unto thee.

13 And again, [p]I will put my trust in him. And again, [q]Behold I and the children which God hath given me.[4]

14 Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, [u]he also himself likewise took part of the same; that [z]through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, [z]the devil;

15 And [a]deliver them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage.

16 For verily he [b]took not on him the nature of angels; but he took on him[5] the seed of Abraham.

17 Wherefore in all things it behoved him to be made like unto his brethren, that he might be a merciful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God, [h]to make reconciliation for the sins of the people.

18 For in that he himself hath [i]suffered, being tempted, [k]he is able to succour them that are tempted.

CHAP. III.

Christ is more worthy than Moses, 1. Therefore, if we believe not in him, we shall be more worthy of punishment than hard-hearted Israel, 7.

WHEREFORE, holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, [c]consider the Apostle and High Priest[1] of our profession, Christ Jesus:

2 Who was [f]faithful to him that *appointed him, as also Moses was faithful in all his house.

3 For [l]this man was counted worthy of more glory than Moses, inasmuch as he [k]who hath builded the house hath more honour than the house.

4 For every house is builded by some man; [l]but he that built all things is God.

5 And Moses verily was faithful in all his house, as a servant,[2] for a testimony of those things which were to be spoken after;

6 But Christ [p]as a Son over his own house; whose house are we, if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end.

7 Wherefore (as the Holy Ghost saith, To-day, if ye will [x]hear his voice,

8 [y]Harden not your hearts, [z]as in the provocation, in the day of [a]temptation in the wilderness:

9 When your fathers tempted me, proved me, [b]and saw my works forty years.

10 Wherefore I was grieved with that generation, and said, They do alway err in their heart; and [f]they have not known my ways.

11 So [g]I sware in my wrath, [f]They shall not enter into [h]my rest.)

12 Take heed, brethren,[3] lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, [l]in departing from the living God.

13 But exhort one another daily, while it is called To-day; lest any of you be hardened through [p]the deceitfulness of sin.

14 For [q]we are made partakers of Christ,[4] if we hold the beginning of our confidence stedfast unto the end.

15 While it is said, [s]To-day, if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts, as in the provocation.

16 For some, when they had heard, did provoke: howbeit not all that came out of Egypt by Moses.

language, as was contained in another well-known prophecy of the Messiah; in which he called him to sit, as a mighty prince, on his right hand, till he had crushed and put under his feet all those who presumed to rebel against his authority. Did not the Hebrews well know, that all the angels, even the most exalted of them, were so far from possessing such supreme and universal authority; that they all were worshipping spirits, and servants of the Lord, to execute his commands with unreserved submission; and that they were sent forth by him, to minister to those of the human race, who were appointed to be the heirs of salvation? Their willing and delightful obedience to such commands, and their loving services to such inferior and sinful creatures, for the Lord's sake, showed a most excellent disposition, and was worthy of imitation.—Scott.

CHAP. II. Escape Impossible to the Indifferent.—Ver. 3. "How shall we escape;" this intimates, 1. That the despisers of this salvation are condemned already, under arrest and in the hands of justice already. So they were by the sin of Adam; and they have strengthened their bonds by their personal transgression, John iii. 18. "He that believeth not, is condemned already." 2. There is no escaping out of this condemned state but by accepting the great salvation discovered in the gospel; as for those who neglect it, the wrath of "God is upon them, and it abides upon them;" they cannot disengage themselves, they cannot emerge, they cannot get from under the curse. 3. That there is a yet more aggravated curse and condemnation waiting for all those who despise the grace of God in Christ, and that most heavy curse they cannot escape: they can neither conceal their persons, at the great day, nor deny the fact, nor bribe the judge, nor break the prison. There is no door of mercy left open for them, there shall "be no more sacrifice for sin," they are irrecoverably lost.—Henry.

Christ's Humiliation and Glory.—Ver. 9. Believers, looking to Jesus, see the accomplishment of the words in his exaltation, and the event of it: he had become a little lower than the angels, by appearing in the likeness of sinful flesh, that he might be capable of suffering death; but speedily he had been, as the Son of man, crowned with glory and honour, placed on the mediatorial throne, invested with universal dominion, and made head over all things to his church. So that, in fact, all things in heaven and earth, and under the earth, were put in subjection to him; and though some for a time refuse to submit to him, they must all at length either be his willing servants, or be crushed under his feet as enemies. Thus, by means of his humiliation, he became capable of dying; and, by his subsequent exaltation, he was enabled to apply the benefits of his death to his people: and so he tasted death in all its bitterness for the benefit of every man, who came to trust in his salvation; which constitution was the effect of the plenteous mercy and free favour of God to our rebellious race, as the psalmist had intimated; nor could that grace ever be sufficiently admired.

Deliverance from Death.—Ver. 14, 15. Satan, by seducing man into sin, first brought him under the sentence of death; and every man must be exposed to the sting, the terror, the stroke, and the consequences of death, whilst he continues unpardoned and unconverted; and the devil, as accuser and executioner, may have much power in inflicting or aggravating them. But the atonement of Christ made way for the deliverance of his people from Satan's bondage, and for the pardon of their sins through faith: then the devil loses his power in respect of death also, they are delivered from its sting, its terror, and its consequences; whilst inward peace and hope reconcile them to its stroke, and the whole will terminate in their glorious resurrection to eternal life. Thus Christ "delivered those, who all their lifetime had been subject to bondage through fear of death." Whatever pride, ambition, and desperate passions may sometimes effect, or perpetrate; the fear of death is universal, and in some degree enslaves all mankind: the juster apprehensions men have of God and eternal things, the greater must be their dread of death and its awful consequences, except as faith in Christ delivers them. Many of those, who have been enslaved by it, during the former part of their lives, or at least from the time when they began seriously to reflect on the subject, are actually delivered from their terror by the gospel, and habitually think of dying with composure and satisfaction: many, who do not before rise superior to their terrors, are entirely freed from them at that critical season.—Scott.

CHAP. III. Christ and Moses.—Ver. 2—5. 1. Christ was a Maker of the house, Moses but a member in it. By the house we are to understand the church of God, the people of God incorporated together under Christ their Maker and Head, and under subordinate officers, according to his law, observing his institutions. Christ is the maker of this house of the church in all ages: Moses was a minister in the house, he was instrumental under Christ, in governing and edifying the house, but Christ is the Maker of all things. 2. Christ was the Master of this house, as well as the Maker, ver. 6. This house is styled "his" house, as the Son of God. Moses was only a faithful servant, for a testimony of those things that were to be spoken after; Christ as the eternal Son of God, is the rightful Owner and Sovereign Ruler of the church. Moses was only a typical governor, for a testimony of all those things relating to the church, which would be more clearly, completely, and comfortably revealed in the gospel by the Spirit of Christ.—Henry.

Unbelief.—Ver. 2. It was incumbent upon the Hebrews to look well to themselves, lest there should be in any of them the same evil or wicked heart, the same proud, car-

17 But with whom was he grieved forty years? was it not with them that had sinned, whose carcases fell in the wilderness?

18 And to whom sware he that they should not enter into his rest, but to them that believed not?

19 So we see that they could not enter in because of unbelief.

CHAP. IV.

An admonition to humble fear, 1. The certainty and excellency of the heavenly rest, 3. The energy of the word of God, 12. The compassion of our great High Priest used as a motive to stedfastness and earnestness in coming to the throne of grace, 14.

LET us therefore fear, lest, [b]a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it.

2 For [c]unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them: but [*]the word preached [f]did not profit them, [†]not being [g]mixed with faith[1] in them that heard it.

3 For [h]we which have believed do enter into rest; as he said, As I have sworn in my wrath, if they shall enter into my rest: although [k]the works were finished [l]from the foundation of the world.

4 For he spake in a certain place of the seventh day on this wise, And [n]God did rest the seventh day from all his works.

5 And in this place again, [o]If they shall enter into my rest.

6 Seeing therefore it remaineth that some must enter therein, and they to whom [‡]it was first preached [s]entered not in because of unbelief:

7 (Again, he limiteth a certain day, saying in David, To-day, after so long a time;[2] as it is said, To-day, if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts.

8 For if [$]Jesus [y]had given them rest, then would he not afterward have spoken of another day.

9 There [z]remaineth therefore [a]a rest to the people of God.

10 For he that is entered into his rest, he also [c]hath ceased from his own works, as God did from his.)

11 Let us labour therefore to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of [*]unbelief.

12 For the word of God [h]is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder[3] of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, [k]and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart.

13 Neither is there any creature that is not manifest in his sight: but all things are [m]naked and opened unto the eyes of him with whom we have to do.

CHAP. V.

The authority and honour of our Saviour's priesthood, 1. Negligence in the knowledge thereof reproved, 11.

FOR every high priest, taken from among men, is ordained for men in things pertaining to God, that he may offer both gifts and sacrifices for sins:

2 [d]Who can [*]have compassion on the ignorant, and on them that are out of the way; for that he himself also is compassed with infirmity.[1]

3 And by reason hereof he ought, as for the people, so also for himself, to offer for sins.

4 And no man taketh this honour unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron.

5 So also [k]Christ glorified not himself to be made an high priest; but he that said unto him, [l]Thou art my Son, to-day have I begotten thee.

6 As he saith also in another place, [m]Thou art a priest for ever, after the order of Melchisedec.

7 [o]Who in the days of his flesh, [p]when he had offered up prayers and supplications, [q]with strong crying and tears,[2] [s]unto him that was able to save him from death, [t]and was heard [†]in that he feared:

8 Though [x]he were a Son, [y]yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered;[3]

9 And being made perfect, [a]he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him;

10 Called of God an high priest, after the order of Melchisedec.

11 Of whom[4] we have many things to say, and hard to be uttered, seeing ye are dull of hearing.

12 For when for the time ye ought to be teachers, ye have need that one teach you again which be [k]the first principles of the oracles of God; and are become such as have need of milk, and not of strong meat.

13 For every one that useth milk [‡]is unskilful in the word of righteousness; for he is a babe.

nal, rebellious, and ungrateful temper, whence the unbelief of their ancestors had originated; and lest this should be manifested by their apostatizing from the living God; either in rejecting Christianity, or in afterwards renouncing it: for in both cases, they would be deemed apostates from the living God, who now spoke to him by his beloved Son, and in no other way; and they would be punished accordingly. To prevent this, they ought also, day after day, to exhort one another to embrace and adhere to the gospel of Christ; while the day of their personal and national probation continued: as they were shortly to be cast off from being the people of God; and that generation was about to be visited in a far more tremendous manner, than their fathers had been in the wilderness. This was needful to every one, "lest any of them should be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin."

ITS PENALTY.—Ver. 14—19. They, who professed the gospel, were made partakers of Christ, and of all the blessings of his kingdom and salvation; provided they maintained the beginning of their "confidence," (or their "subsistence" in him by faith,) steadfast unto the end; and thus showed that they really were what they appeared to be. Considering, therefore, the immense advantages of perseverance, and the tremendous consequences of apostacy; they should consider the words of the Holy Spirit, as if addressed to themselves. For, though the whole nation of Israel had been brought out of Egypt, to hear the will of God from Moses; yet, some of them (how vast a proportion need not be said,) did provoke God to exlude them from Canaan.—Scott.

CHAP. IV. WARNING.—Ver. 1. "Let us fear, lest a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it." Observe, 1. Grace and glory are attainable by all under the gospel; there is an offer, and a promise to those who shall accept the offer. 2. Those who may attain them, may also fall short. They who might have attained salvation by faith, may fall short by unbelief. 3. It is a dreadful thing so much as to seem to fall short of the gospel-salvation, to seem so to themselves, to lose their comfortable hope; and to seem so to others, so losing the honour of their holy profession. But if it be so dreadful to seem to fall short of this rest, it is much more dreadful really to fall short? Such a disappointment must be fatal. 4. One good mean to prevent either our real falling short, or seeming to fall short, is, to maintain a holy and religious fear lest we should fall short.

THE WORD OF GOD.—Ver. 12. "It is sharper than any two-edged sword;" it cuts both ways; it is "the sword of the Spirit," Eph. vi. 17. It is the two-edged sword that cometh out of the mouth of Christ, Rev. i. 16. It is sharper than any two-edged sword, for it will enter where no other sword can, and make a more critical dissection; it "pierces to the dividing asunder of the soul and the spirit," the soul and its habitual prevailing temper; it makes a soul that has been a long time of a proud spirit, to be humble; of a perverse spirit, to be meek and obedient. Those sinful habits that are become as it were natural to the soul, and radicated deeply in it, and become in a manner one with it, are separated and cut off by this sword. It cuts off ignorance from the understanding, rebellion from the will, enmity from the mind, which, when carnal, is enmity itself against God. This sword divides between "the joints and the marrow."—Henry.

THE THRONE OF GRACE.—Ver. 14—16. They had not a high priest who disregarded, or could not sympathize with them in, their pains and sufferings for his sake; or who would make no allowance for their infirmities, or refuse assistance in their temptations: but he was one, who, to procure their pardon and salvation, voluntarily submitted to be tried and tempted, even as they were; as far as he could be, without a sinful nature, or at least sin in his life: and this exemption was needful, in order that he might be their sacrifice and their advocate. As therefore there was a mercy-seat above the ark of the covenant, in the most holy place, before which the high priests once a year appeared in behalf of the people, and over which the glory of God was displayed, as propitious to them: even so, God the Father was, as it were, placed on a throne of grace, a mercy-seat, in the heavenly sanctuary, before which Christ appeared as the high priest of his people, through whom he waited to receive petitions, to grant pardons, and to communicate blessings, to all who applied for them in humble faith and by fervent prayer. Let then every one of them, before they were summoned to the throne of judgment, come with humble confidence in Christ, and in the love of the Father through him, to supplicate forgiveness and mercy.—Scott.

CHAP. V. OFFICE OF THE HIGH PRIEST.—Ver. 1. He was appointed "That he might offer both gifts and sacrifices for sin." 1. "That he might offer gifts," or free-will offerings, brought to the high priests, so offered for the glory of God, and as an acknowledgment that our all is of him and from him; we have nothing but what he is pleased to give us, and of his own we offer to him an oblation of acknowledgment. This intimates, (1.) That all we bring to God must be free and not forced; it must be a gift, it must be given and not taken away again. (2.) That all we bring to God must go through the high priest's hands, as the great agent between God and man. 2. "That he might offer sacrifices for sin:" that is, the offerings that were appointed to make atonement, that sin might be pardoned, and sinners accepted. Thus Christ is constituted a High Priest for both these ends. Our good deeds must be presented by Christ, to render ourselves and them acceptable.—Henry.

CHAP. VI.

The apostle exhorteth not to fall back from the faith, 1, but to be diligent in good works, 11, because God is most sure in his promise, 13.

THEREFORE, leaving the *principles[1] of the doctrine of Christ, [b]let us go on unto perfection; not [c]laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of [d]faith toward God,

2 Of [e]the doctrine of baptisms, and of [h]laying on of hands, and of [i]resurrection of the dead, and of [k]eternal judgment.

3 And this will we do, if God permit.

4 For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, [o]and have tasted of the heavenly gift,[2] and were made [p]partakers of the Holy Ghost,

5 And have [q]tasted the good word of God, and [r]the powers of the world to come,

6 If they shall fall away, [s]to renew them again unto repentance; seeing [t]they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame.

7 For the earth, which drinketh in the rain that cometh oft upon it, and bringeth forth herbs meet for them [t]by whom it is dressed, [y]receiveth blessing from God:

8 But that which beareth thorns and briers is rejected, and is nigh unto cursing; whose end is to be burned.[3]

9 But, beloved, we are persuaded better things of you, and [c]things that accompany salvation, though we thus speak.

10 For [d]God is not unrighteous, to forget your [f]work and labour of love, which ye have shewed toward his name, in that ye have ministered to the saints, and do minister.

11 And we desire that every one of you do shew the same diligence, [l]to the full assurance of hope unto the end:

12 That ye be not slothful, [n]but followers of them who through faith and patience [p]inherit the promises.

13 For when God made promise to Abraham, because he could swear by no greater, he sware by himself,

14 Saying, Surely blessing I will bless thee, and [r]multiplying I will multiply thee.

15 And so, after he had patiently endured, he obtained the promise.

16 For men verily swear by the greater; and an oath for confirmation is to them an end of all strife.

17 Wherein God, willing more abundantly to shew unto [y]the heirs of promise [z]the immutability of his counsel, [‡]confirmed it by an oath;

18 That by two immutable things,[4] in which it was [b]impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation, [d]who have fled for refuge to [e]lay hold upon the hope set before us:

19 Which hope we have [h]as an anchor of the soul,[5] both sure and stedfast, and which [k]entereth into that within the vail;

20 Whither [l]the forerunner is for us entered, even Jesus, made [n]an high priest for ever, after the order of Melchisedec.

CHAP. VII.

Christ Jesus is a priest after the order of Melchisedec, 1, and therefore more excellent than the priests of Aaron's order, 11.

FOR this Melchisedec, king of Salem, priest of the most high God, who met Abraham returning from the slaughter of the kings, and blessed him;

2 To whom also Abraham gave [e]a tenth part of all: first being, by interpretation, King of righteousness, and after that also, King of Salem, which is, King of peace:

3 Without father,[1] without mother, without *descent, having neither beginning of days, nor end of life; but, made like unto the Son of God, abideth [g]a priest continually.

4 Now consider how great this man was, unto whom even [h]the patriarch Abraham gave the tenth of the spoils.

5 And verily they that are of the sons of Levi, who receive the office of the priesthood, have a commandment [m]to take tithes of the people according to the law, that is, of their brethren, though they [n]come out of the loins of Abraham:

6 But he, whose [t]descent is not counted from them, received tithes of Abraham, and blessed him that [p]had the promises.

7 And, without all contradiction, the less is blessed of the better.

8 And here [s]men that die[2] receive tithes; but there he receiveth them, of whom it is witnessed that [t]he liveth.

9 And, as I may so say, Levi also, who receiveth tithes, [n]payed tithes in Abraham.

10 For he was yet in the loins of his father when Melchisedec met him.

11 If therefore perfection were by the Levitical priesthood, (for under it the people received the law,) [z]what further need was there that [a]another priest should rise after the order of Melchisedec, and not be called after the order of Aaron?

12 For the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law.

Christ's Sufferings.—Ver. 7—10. Though our Lord was free from all sinful infirmity, yet he came as near the condition of a sinner as he possibly could: he was compassed about with the sinless infirmities of our frail nature; he "appeared in the likeness of sinful flesh;" he was dealt with as a sinner, both by God and man; he endured the most violent temptations, sufferings and agonies; and even his soul was full of consternation, and of horror unspeakable. This was "in the days of his flesh," subsequent to his incarnation; and previous to his exaltation, when his human nature became incapable of suffering, and was made inconceivably glorious. His humiliation and distresses were extreme in his agonies in the garden. Then especially he offered up to his Father most earnest prayers and supplications, accompanied with strong cries and tears, as vehement expressions of his inward anguish: he addressed himself to God, as able to save him from death, and he was heard and answered because of his piety, his reverence of the divine Majesty, his love, and his zeal for the glory of the Father. Or, as most commentators explain it, "he was heard, 'and delivered' from his fear." No doubt the most distressing dread of that awful wrath of God against our sins, which he had undertaken to endure, was one cause of our Lord's agony in the garden. This might well oppress his human soul, without his having the least apprehension, that he should finally sink under it, or come short of "the joy set before him;" the least distrust of the Father's faithfulness to his engagement; any defect in his patience and submission, or any degree of sin.—Scott.

CHAP. VI. Apostacy.—Ver. 4—6. It should be remembered that the apostle wrote in an age of miracles; and to the Hebrews, among whom the Holy Spirit was first poured out in his extraordinary operations. The persons whose case is described had been enlightened, and had obtained that measure of knowledge concerning the truth and nature of Christianity, which enabled them to make a satisfactory profession of it, in order to their admission into the church; "they had tasted the heavenly gift, and been made partakers of the Holy Ghost;" being at their baptism, or afterwards by the laying on of the apostles' hands, endued with some measure of spiritual gifts, or miraculous powers; such as speaking with tongues, or discoursing with supernatural fluency on divine subjects: so that in this respect their own experience proved to them the truth of the gospel. They had moreover "tasted of the good word of God," and their convictions, impressions, and transient affections, made them sensible that it was a good word, of a holy and salutary tendency, and that it was for their good to attend to it; and their purposes of doing so had produced such hopes and joys as have been described in the case of the stony-ground hearer. Thus they had tasted of "the powers of the world to come," in their temporary realizing apprehensions of a future state, and of its happiness or misery; or they had experienced the powers communicated, under the dispensation of the Messiah. All these things, (except miraculous powers,) often take place in the hearts and consciences of men in these days, who yet continue unregenerate. But they who received such gifts from Christ, through the laying on of the hands of his apostles, had a personal demonstration of the truth of Christianity, which the most enlightened apostates in these days can scarcely be supposed to have had; and therefore but very few cases now occur, in which a conclusion concerning their state can be unreservedly drawn in the apostle's awful words, though the case of some few may be nearly similar, and they alone are immediately concerned in it. If the persons whom the apostle had thus characterized, (for he spake of none else,) had totally apostatized from Christianity, and were become its avowed enemies, it was not the minister's duty to bestow pains about them; it was generally found "impossible to renew them to repentance," and thus to restore them with the spirit of meekness. For, considering the clear light against which they sinned in so desperate a manner, it might be concluded that they had committed the blasphemy against the Holy Spirit, and had ascribed his operations, by themselves and by others, to a satanical influence. In fact, as far as they could, they crucified to themselves the Son of God afresh; despitefully acting as if they approved the conduct of those who nailed him to the cross, assented to their deed, and apparently wished it in their power to repeat his ignominy and torture; and they put him to an open shame, by renouncing his religion, blaspheming his name, joining his enemies, and doing evil to his disciples. They were therefore to be considered as given up to final obduracy, and left to the awful judgment of God.—Scott.

CHAP. VII. Melchisedek.—Ver. 1—3. The apostle had repeatedly referred to the prophecy, that the Messiah should be "a priest for ever after the order of Melchisedek," Ps. cx. 4; signifying that his priesthood would resemble that of Melchisedek, and not that of Aaron: he therefore next proceeded to illustrate that prophecy, and argue more explicitly from it, as compared with the scriptural account of this extraordinary person. Being king of Salem, probably Jerusalem, and priest of the most high God, by an appointment of which we have no information, he came to meet Abraham, after he had vanquished the invading kings, who had carried Lot captive from Sodom: and as the priest of the most high God, he blessed Abraham, and received of him a tenth part of the spoils taken from his conquered enemies. His very name, being by interpretation "king of righteousness," and doubtless corresponding with his character and administration, marked him out as a type of the Messiah and of his kingdom. The name of his 13 For he of whom these things are spoken pertaineth to another tribe, of which no man gave attendance at the altar.[3]

14 For it is evident that our Lord [o]sprang out of Juda; of which tribe Moses spake nothing concerning priesthood.

15 And it is yet far more evident: for that after the similitude of Melchisedec there ariseth another priest, 16 Who is made, not after the law of a carnal commandment, but after the power of an endless life.

17 For he testifieth, Thou art a priest for ever, after the order of Melchisedec.

18 For there is verily a disannulling of the commandment going before, for the weakness and unprofitableness thereof.

19 For the law made nothing perfect,[4] but [‡]the bringing in of a better hope did; by the which [n]we draw nigh unto God.

20 And inasmuch as not without an oath he was made priest:

21 (For those priests were made without [§]an oath; but this with an oath by him that said unto him, The Lord sware, and will not repent, Thou art a priest for ever, after the order of Melchisedec:)

22 By so much was Jesus made [q]a surety of a better testament.

23 And they truly were many priests, because they were not suffered to continue by reason of death:

24 But this man, because [t]he continueth ever, hath an [‖]unchangeable priesthood.[5]

25 Wherefore [u]he is able also to save them [*]to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth [a]to make intercession for them.

26 For [b]such an high priest became us, who is [d]holy, harmless, undefiled,[6] separate from sinners, and made higher than the heavens;

27 Who needeth not [f]daily, as those high priests, to offer up sacrifice, [g]first for his own sins, [h]and then for the people's: for [i]this he did once, when he offered up himself.

28 For the law maketh men high priests which have infirmity; but the word of the oath, which was since the law, [m]maketh the Son, [n]who is [†]consecrated for evermore.

CHAP. VIII.

Further evidence of the superiority of the Messiah's priesthood to that of Aaron, 1; and that the Sinai covenant was to be abrogated, to make way for a new and better covenant, through a superior mediator, 7.

NOW of the things which we have spoken this is the sum: [a]We have such an high priest, who is set on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens;

2 A minister of the [*]sanctuary, and of the true tabernacle, which the Lord pitched, and not man.

3 For every high priest is ordained to offer gifts and sacrifices: wherefore it is of necessity that this man have somewhat also to offer.

4 For if he were on earth, he should not be a priest, seeing that [†]there are priests that offer gifts according to the law;

5 Who serve unto the example and shadow of heavenly things, as Moses was admonished of God when he was about to make the tabernacle: for, [1]See (saith he) that thou make all things according to the pattern shewed to thee in the mount.[1]

6 But now hath he [m]obtained a more excellent ministry, by how much also he is [n]the mediator of a better [‡]covenant, which was established upon better promises.

7 For if that first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second.

8 For, finding fault with them, he saith, Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, when I will make [s]a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah.

9 Not according to [u]the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day when I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt; because [z]they continued not in my covenant, and I [a]regarded them not, saith the Lord.

10 For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the Lord; [c]I will [§]put my laws into their mind, and write them [‖]in their hearts; and [d]I will be to them a God, and [e]they shall be to me a people:[2]

11 And they shall not teach every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: [h]for all shall know me, from the least to the greatest.

12 For [k]I will be merciful to their unrighteousness, and their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more.

13 In that he saith, A new covenant, he hath made the first old. Now that which decayeth and waxeth old is ready to vanish away.[3]

city signified Peace, and as king of peace he typified Christ, "the prince of peace," the great reconciler of God and man, and of men to one another, in perfect consistency with the interests of righteousness, and the honour of the Divine justice: and the union of royal authority with the priestly office, (which were divided between the family of Aaron and that of David, in the case of Israel,) plainly pointed to the royal priesthood of the Messiah. We have no account of Melchisedek's parentage, or pedigree, as in the case of the priests appointed by the law, who were all required to prove their descent from Aaron; and exact rules were given concerning their marriages, for this, as well as for other reasons. But Melchisedek was introduced into the sacred history as a priest of the most high God, who had no father, or mother, or genealogy; that he might the more exactly typify that high priest who, as the Son of man, had no human father, as the Son of God was without mother, and who was appointed to the priesthood, and without deducing his pedigree from Aaron. Moreover, nothing was said of Melchisedek respecting the beginning of his life, or the end of his days, and priesthood; that he might resemble the Son of God, whose existence is from eternity to eternity, and who hath had no predecessor, and will have no successor in his efficacious, meritorious, and perpetual priesthood. In all these respects the silence of the Scripture, being intentional, and referring to the great antitype, is mentioned in language taken from the instruction to be conveyed, rather than from historical fact; of which learned men have brought instances from other writers of antiquity.

CHRIST'S PRIESTHOOD SUPERIOR TO AARON'S.—Ver. 4—10. Some one higher than Abraham, or Aaron, or any mere man of his race, was evidently to be expected, as a priest for ever after the order of Melchisedek. Under the law, indeed, mere sinful dying men took tithes of their brethren; and so one generation after another rose up to receive them; but in the case of Melchisedek, one received tithes of Abraham, the representative of all his posterity, concerning whom it was only witnessed that he lived; by which it was intimated that a priest should arise, to whom the whole Israel of God would pay their devoted homage, and from whom they would receive the blessing: so that "to speak it in a word," the apostle might say that even Levi, and all the priests descended from him, paid tithes to Melchisedek; for they were in the loins of their father and representative when Melchisedek met him. This sufficiently proved the inferiority of the Levitical priesthood to that of the Messiah; yea, its absolute dependence on him, and subserviency to him.—Scott.

CHAP. VIII. CHRIST—THE HIGH PRIEST.—Ver. 1—5. Here the apostle sets before the Hebrews the necessary parts of Christ's priesthood, or what it was that belonged to that office, in conformity to what every high priest is ordained to. 1. "Every high priest is ordained to offer gifts and sacrifices," whatever was brought by the people to be presented to God, whether expiatory sacrifices, or peace-offerings, or thank-offerings; these must be offered by the priest, who was to expiate their guilt by the blood of the sacrifice, and perfume their gifts and services by his holy incense, to render their persons and performances typically acceptable; so then it necessarily belongs to the priesthood of Christ, that he should have somewhat to offer; and he, as the Antitype, had himself to offer, his human nature, upon the altar of his divine nature, as the great atoning Sacrifice that finished transgression, and made an end of sin once for all; and he has the incense of his own righteousness and merits too, to offer with all that his people offer up to God by him, to render them acceptable. We must not dare to approach to God, or to present any thing to him, but in and through Christ, depending upon his merits and mediation; for if we are accepted, it is in the Beloved. 2. Christ must now execute his priesthood in heaven, in the holy of holies, the true tabernacle which the Lord hath fixed. Thus the type must be fully answered; having finished the work of sacrificing here, he must go into heaven, to present his righteousness, and to make intercession there.—Henry.

THE NEW COVENANT.—Ver. 7—13. The Hebrews might learn from their own prophets, that their national covenant and the legal dispensation were not intended to be perpetual: for if that covenant had been free from defect, and suited to bring the church to the highest state of perfection, to which it was to be advanced on earth; there would have been no place for a second, or occasion of introducing it, or proposing any plans for another covenant; as the Lord never changes his methods without reason. The Mosaic law, indeed, and the Sinai covenant, were well suited to introduce the promised Messiah and the gospel dispensation, and to form, as it were, a proper scaffolding for that magnificent edifice: yet they did not secure the sanctification and salvation of the people; nor did they even prevent such national apostacies, as were a forfeiture of all their privileges.—The prophecy was fulfilled in the conversion of multitudes of Judah and Israel, in the primitive times of the gospel: but it is also fulfilled to all the spiritual Israel, who are really a holy nation, as Israel according to the flesh was relatively: the repentance, faith, divine and efficacious teaching, and sanctification of the chosen people of God, as well as their complete forgiveness, were provided for, in the better promises of this new covenant; and thus their holy obedience their final perseverance, and their eternal salvation were secured.—Scott.

CHAP. IX. THE FIRST TABERNACLE.—Ver. 1—5. The apostle, knowing the excess-

2 For there was a tabernacle made; the first[1] wherein was the candlestick, and the table, and the shew-bread; which is called †the Sanctuary.

3 And after the second vail, the tabernacle which is called the Holiest of all;

4 Which had the golden censer, and the ark of the covenant overlaid round about with gold, wherein was the golden pot that had manna, and Aaron's rod that budded, and the tables of the covenant;

5 And over it the cherubims of glory shadowing the mercy-seat; of which we cannot now speak particularly.

6 Now when these things were thus ordained, [p]the priests went always into the first tabernacle, accomplishing the service of God:

7 But [q]into the second went the high priest alone once[2] every year, [r]not without blood, which he offered for himself, and for the [s]errors of the people:

8 The [t]Holy Ghost this signifying, that [u]the way into the holiest of all was not yet made manifest, while as the first tabernacle was yet standing:

9 Which was a figure for the time then present, in which were offered both gifts and sacrifices, [x]that could not make him that did the service perfect, as pertaining to the conscience;

10 Which stood only in meats and drinks, and divers washings, and [d]carnal ‡ordinances, imposed on them [e]until the time of reformation.

11 But [f]Christ being come [g]an high priest of good things to come, [i]by a greater and more perfect tabernacle,[3] [k]not made with hands, that is to say, not of this building;

12 Neither by the blood of goats and calves, but [m]by his own blood, he entered in [o]once into the holy place, [p]having obtained eternal redemption for us.

13 For if the blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to [r]the purifying of the flesh;

14 [s]How much more shall [t]the blood of Christ, [u]who through the eternal Spirit [y]offered himself [z]without [§]spot to God, [a]purge your conscience from dead works, [c]to serve the living God?

15 And for this cause he is [e]the mediator of the new testament, that by means of death, [h]for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament, they which are called might receive the [l]promise of eternal inheritance.

16 For where a testament is, there must also of necessity [l]be the death of the testator.

17 For a testament is of force after men are dead: otherwise it is of no strength at all while the testator liveth.

18 Whereupon neither the first testament was *dedicated without blood.[4]

19 For when Moses had spoken every precept to all the people according to the law, he took the blood of calves and of goats, with water, and †scarlet wool, and hyssop, and sprinkled both the book and all the people, 20 Saying, [t]This is the blood of the testament which God hath enjoined unto you.

21 Moreover, he sprinkled likewise with blood both the tabernacle, and all the vessels of the ministry.

22 And almost all things are by the law purged with blood; [y]and without shedding of blood is no remission.[5]

23 It was therefore necessary that the patterns of things in the heavens should be purified with these; but the heavenly things themselves with better sacrifices than these.

24 For Christ is not entered into [b]the holy places made with hands, which are [c]the figures of the true; [d]but into heaven itself, now [c]to appear in the presence of God for us:

25 Nor yet that he should [f]offer himself often, as the high priest entereth into the holy place every year with blood of others;

26 (For then must he often have suffered since the foundation of the world:) but now once, [i]in the end of the world, hath [k]he appeared, to put away sin by [i]the sacrifice of himself.

27 And [m]as it is appointed unto men once to die, [n]but after this the judgment;

28 So Christ [o]was once offered to bear the sins of many:[6] and unto [q]them that look for him shall [r]he appear the second time, without sin unto salvation.

CHAP. X.

The weakness of the sacrifices under the law, 1. The sacrifice of Christ's body, once offered, hath for ever taken away sins, 10. but there is no hope for us if we once renounce our faith in him, 26.

FOR the law having a shadow of good things to come, and not the very image[1] of the things, can never, with those sacrifices, which they offered year by year continually, make the comers thereunto perfect:

2 For then *would they not have ceased to be offered? because that the worshippers once purged should have had no more conscience of sins.

3 But in those sacrifices there is a remembrance again made of sins every year.

[1] This is a beautiful allusion to the different states of a picture, the first sketch being contrasted with the finished and exact portraiture.—Pict. Bible.

* Or, they would have ceased to be offered, because, &c.

sive and dangerous attachment of the Hebrews to the legal ceremonies, proceeded more particularly to show their typical reference to Christ. The first covenant had indeed ordinances of divine worship, the observance of which constituted a considerable part of the legal righteousness, as a nation; and it had a sanctuary, built of such materials, and decorated with such magnificence, as this present world affords, and as carnal men admire. For Moses, at God's command, caused the tabernacle to be erected, which, besides the courts and the porch, consisted of two parts; in the first division, called "the holy place," or the sanctuary, were the candlestick, the table, and the shew-bread; and within the second veil, in the holiest of all, were the ark, and the other things here mentioned. The golden censer, on which the high priest burned incense within the veil on the day of expiation, seems to have been left in the most holy place during the rest of the year. The rod of Aaron and the golden pot of manna, were within the holy of holies, and by, or near, the ark, as the word may be rendered; but they seem not to have been put within it, 1 Kings viii. 9. The typical import of all these things has been shown: and it is not necessary to speak of them particularly in this place, even as it was not for the apostle. The golden altar of incense is not mentioned in this catalogue; for what reason we know not: but the conjecture of some expositors, that the words rendered, "the golden censer," meant that altar, is groundless; for that was stationary in the first sanctuary, and was not used by the high priest on the day of atonement, who burned incense on a portable censer within the veil.—Scott.

The Holy of Holies.—Ver. 7. This part was an emblem of heaven and Christ's ascension thither. Here observe, 1. None but the high priest must go into the holiest; so none but Christ could enter into heaven in his own name, by his own right, and by his own merits. 2. In entering into the holiest, the high priest must first go through the outer sanctuary, and through the veil; signifying that Christ went to heaven through a holy life and a violent death; the veil of his flesh was rent asunder. 3. The high priest entered but once a-year into the holiest, and in this the Antitype excels the type, (as in every thing else,) for he is entered once for all during the whole dispensation of the gospel. 4. The high priest must not enter without blood; signifying that Christ, having undertaken to be our High Priest, could not have been admitted into heaven without shedding his blood for us; and that none of us can enter either into God's gracious presence here, or his glorious presence hereafter, but by the blood of Jesus. 5. The high priest, under the law, entering into the holiest, offered up that blood for himself and his own errors first, and then for the errors of the people. This teaches us that Christ is a more excellent Person and High Priest than any under the law, for he has no errors of his own to offer for.

The Blood of Christ.—Ver. 14. First, It is sufficient to purge the conscience from dead works, it reaches to the very soul and conscience; the defiled soul, defiled with sin, which is a dead work, proceeds from spiritual death, and tends to death eternal. As the touching of a dead body gave a legal uncleanness, so meddling with sin gives a moral and real defilement, fixes it in the very soul; but the blood of grace has efficacy to purge it out. Secondly, It is sufficient to enable us to serve the living God, not only by purging away that guilt that separates between God and sinners, but by sanctifying and renewing the soul through the gracious influences of the Holy Spirit, purchased by Christ for this purpose, that we might be enabled to serve the living God in a lively manner.—Henry.

Ratification of the Covenant.—Ver. 16—18. Several modern expositors have endeavoured to establish this interpretation:—"For this reason, of the new covenant he is the mediator, or the high priest, by whom its blessings are dispensed, and also the sacrifice, by which it is procured and ratified; that his death being accomplished, for obtaining the pardon of the transgressions of the first covenant, believers of all ages and nations, as the called seed of Abraham, may receive the promised eternal inheritance. For where a covenant is made by sacrifice, there is a necessity that the death of the appointed sacrifice be produced. For, according to the practice of God and man, a covenant is made firm over dead sacrifices; seeing it never hath force, whilst the goat, calf, or bullock, appointed as the sacrifice of ratification, liveth. Because from the beginning, God ratified his covenants by sacrifice, to preserve among men the expectation of the sacrifice of his Son; hence not even the covenant at Sinai was made without sacrifice, or blood."—Scott.

CHAP. X. The Law—a Type.—Ver. 1, 2. As the Hebrews would be backward in acceding to the apostle's inferences, concerning the inefficacy of the legal expiations; he proceeded still further to argue with them, on that important subject. He observed, that the ceremonial law had only a shadow of the good things to come to the church by the Messiah, and not so much as the very image of them; its ordinances rather resembled, faintly and obscurely, the way of salvation through Christ, and the several blessings conferred on believers through him, as a shadow; or the rude sketch of a picture, does a man: than gave a lively or adequate idea of them; as the reflection in a mirror, a good portrait, or statue, does of the person thus represented. The sacrifice of Christ, being of intrinsic and infinite value and efficacy, there is no occasion that it should be repeated: but believers, having once had their consciences purged from dead works by faith in his blood, are perfectly justified and accepted unto eternal life: thenceforth they seek no other sacrifice.

4 For it is not possible that the blood of bulls and of goats should take away sins.

5 Wherefore, when he cometh into the world, he saith, [h]Sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not, [i]but a body [†]hast thou prepared me:

6 In [k]burnt-offerings and sacrifices for sin [l]thou hast had no pleasure:

7 Then said I, [m]Lo, I come (in the volume of the book it is written of me) to do thy will, O God.

8 Above, when he said, Sacrifice, and offering, and burnt-offerings, and offering for sin, thou wouldest not, neither hadst pleasure therein; (which are offered by the law;)

9 Then said he, Lo, I come to do thy will, O God. [p]He taketh away the first,[2] that he may establish the second.

10 By the which will [q]we are sanctified, through [r]the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all.

11 And every priest standeth daily ministering, and offering oftentimes the same sacrifices, which can never take away sins:

12 But this man, after he had offered one sacrifice for sins, for ever sat down on the right hand of God;

13 From [s]henceforth expecting till his enemies be made his footstool.

14 For by one offering [t]he hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified;

15 Whereof the Holy Ghost also is a witness to us: for after that he had said before,

16 This is the covenant that I will make with them after those days, saith the Lord; I will put my laws into their hearts, and in their minds will I write them;

17 [‡]And their sins and iniquities will I remember no more.

18 Now, where remission of these is, there is no more offering for sin.

19 Having therefore, brethren, [§]boldness [*]to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus,

20 By [u]a new and living way, which he hath [‖]consecrated for us [v]through the vail,[3] that is to say, [w]his flesh;

21 And having [x]an high priest over the house of God;

22 Let us draw near with a true heart, in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from [y]an evil conscience, and [z]our bodies washed with pure water.[4]

23 Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering; (for he is faithful that promised;)

24 And let us consider one another, to provoke unto love, and to good works:

25 Not [a]forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; [b]but exhorting one another: and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching.

26 For if we sin wilfully[5] after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, [c]there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins,

27 But [d]a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, [e]which shall devour the adversaries.

28 He that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses:

29 Of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath [f]trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted [g]the blood of the covenant, [p]wherewith he was sanctified,[6] an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto [r]the Spirit of grace?

30 For we know him that hath said, [s]Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will recompense, saith the Lord. And again, [t]The Lord shall judge his people.

31 It is [u]a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God.

32 But call to remembrance the former days, in which, after ye were illuminated, [a]ye endured a great fight of afflictions;

33 Partly, whilst ye were made a gazingstock[7] both by reproaches and afflictions; and partly, whilst ye became companions of them that were so used.

34 For ye had compassion of me in my bonds, [f]and took joyfully the spoiling of your goods, knowing [*]in yourselves [g]that ye have in heaven a better and an enduring substance.

35 Cast not away therefore your confidence, which hath great recompence of reward.

36 For ye have need of patience, that, [l]after ye have done the will of God, [m]ye might receive the promise.

37 For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry.

38 Now, [o]the just shall live by faith: [p]but if any man draw back, [q]my soul shall have no pleasure in him.

39 But we are not of them who draw back unto perdition; [t]but of them that believe to the saving of the soul.

JESUS IN PROPHECY.—Ver. 5—10. To prove his doctrine in the most unanswerable manner, the apostle referred the Hebrews to a remarkable prophecy of the Messiah; which showed that his coming was the necessary consequence of the inefficacy of the legal sacrifices, and of God's purpose of saving sinners. The Messiah, speaking concerning his coming into the world, remarked, that JEHOVAH had no delight in the sacrifices of the law; but "that he had prepared a body for him." The words in the psalm are, "mine ears hast thou opened," or "bored;" Ex. xxi. 5, 6; and it hath perplexed many to determine why the apostle, writing to the Hebrews, should quote from the Septuagint, where that translation seems to deviate from the original. But he probably supposed that the words conveyed the true meaning, though not the literal rendering of the passage: and that the production of the holy human nature of Christ was the preparation for his mediatorial obedience, which the Holy Spirit intended by the expression, "mine ears hast thou opened." When JEHOVAH had no satisfaction in the legal sacrifices, not merely because the people rested in them in a formal and self-righteous manner, but especially because they did not sufficiently display the honour of his justice in pardoning sinners; the eternal Son declared his readiness to come into the world in human nature, for that purpose; according as it had been written of him in the volume of the book, or in the opening of the roll of prophecy, in which he had been promised as the seed of the woman. Now the apostle argued from this, that the opposition between the sacrifices, in which JEHOVAH had no pleasure, and the obedience of Christ to his whole will, in which he would be fully satisfied, was an evident intimation, that he intended to remove the former, in order to establish the latter in its full glory, and as the only ground of sinners being pardoned and saved. By this will of God, perfectly performed by Christ, in his obedience unto the death upon the cross, Christians were sanctified and consecrated to God, as accepted and spiritual worshippers; through the offering of his body once for sin, with which his mediatorial obedience had been completed.

LET US DRAW NEAR.—Ver. 22. This new and living way Christ hath consecrated, authorized, and set apart for this purpose, that we may come to God in the holiest, upon a mercy-seat, "through the veil, that is, his flesh." JEHOVAH displayed his glory above the mercy-seat, in the holy of holies, before the coming of Christ; but this glory was covered and concealed by the veil: that is, the harmony of infinite holiness with pardoning mercy, in the Divine conduct and character, was not clearly discovered or understood. But when the human nature of Christ, the Son of God, was wounded and bruised for our sins, the veil was rent from top to bottom, the obscurity was removed, and "a just God and a Saviour" was openly revealed to mankind, displaying his glory from the mercy-seat, and exercising most abundant grace to the vilest of sinners, in a manner most honourable to his infinite purity. Having such a way to God, and such a high priest over the true sanctuary, it was not proper that the Hebrews should stand at a distance, as if afraid to approach, or averse to the most cordial reconciliation and friendship. The apostle therefore joined himself to them, and called on them to accompany him in drawing near to the Lord, with fervent desires, large expectations, and continual prayers and thanksgivings; with sincerity and integrity of heart, as real penitents, and upright worshippers, fearing nothing but hypocrisy; and "in full assurance of faith," most firmly believing, that God would accept the persons and services of all those who came to him in this appointed manner.

APOSTATES.—Ver. 29. In renouncing Christianity, they traduced, with most virulent reproaches, that religion, which was adorned by the holy fruits of the Spirit in the lives of its professors: and above all, by ascribing his miraculous power to satanical agency, even contrary to their own knowledge; they acted as if they were determined to provoke him in the most despiteful manner possible. So that the authority and mercy of the Father; the person, love, and atoning blood of the Son; and the person and operations of the Holy Spirit; were alike insulted and blasphemed by them, after having professed the gospel, and having been baptized "into the name of the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Ghost," yea, most of them at least, after having received the Holy Spirit, by the laying on of the hands of the apostles! and what punishment could be too severe for such accumulated guilt? Nor should any man, when tempted to so atrocious a crime, flatter himself with hopes of impunity, from the immensity of the Divine mercy; seeing God had declared that vengeance belonged to him as his peculiar prerogative.—Scott.

LIFE OF FAITH.—Ver. 38, 39. "Now the just shall live by faith," &c. 1. It is the honourable character of just men, that in times of the greatest afflictions, they can live by faith; they can live upon the assured persuasion they have of the truth of God's promises. Faith puts life and vigour into them; they can trust God, and live upon him, and wait his time; and as their faith maintains their spiritual life now, it shall be crowned with eternal life hereafter. 2. Apostacy is the mark and the brand of those in whom God takes no pleasure; and it is a cause of God's severe displeasure and anger.—Henry.

CHAP. XI. FAITH.—Ver. 1, 2. The apostle, having referred to the prophet's testimony, that "the just should live by faith," proceeded more fully to show the nature and efficacy of that principle; and to prove, that it had always been the grand peculiarity of JEHOVAH'S worshippers, from the beginning of the world. 3 Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God; so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear.

4 By [s]faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which [t]he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts;[3] [k]and by it he, being dead, [†]yet speaketh.

5 By faith Enoch was [m]translated that he should not see death; [n]and was not found, because God had translated him: for before his translation he had this testimony, [p]that he pleased God.

6 But without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God [s]must believe that he is, and that he is [t]a rewarder of them that diligently seek him.

7 By faith Noah, being [y]warned of God of things not seen as yet, [‡]moved with fear, [a]prepared an ark to the saving of his house; by the which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith.

8 By faith [d]Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place [e]which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out, not knowing whither he went.

9 By faith [g]he sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles[4] with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise:

10 For [k]he looked for a city which hath foundations, [l]whose builder and maker is God.

11 Through faith also Sara herself received strength to conceive seed, and was delivered of a child when she was past age, [n]because she judged him faithful who had promised.

12 Therefore sprang there even of one, and him as good as dead, so many as the stars of the sky in multitude, and as the sand which is by the sea-shore innumerable.

13 These all [r]died [§]in faith, [s]not having received the promises, [t]but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth.

14 For they that say such things declare plainly that [y]they seek a country.[5]

15 And truly, if they had been mindful of that country from whence they came out, they might have had opportunity to have returned.

16 But now they desire a better country, that is, an heavenly: wherefore God is not ashamed [c]to be called their God; [d]for he hath prepared for them a city.

19 Accounting that [l]God was able to raise him up, even from the dead; [m]from whence also he received him in a figure.

20 By faith[6] Isaac blessed Jacob and Esau concerning things to come.

21 By faith Jacob, when he was a dying, blessed both the sons of Joseph; [p]and worshipped, leaning upon the top of his staff.

22 By faith[7] Joseph, when he died, [*]made mention of the departing of the children of Israel; and gave commandment concerning his bones.

23 By faith Moses, when he was born, was hid three months of his parents, because they saw he was a proper child; and they were not afraid of [t]the king's commandment.

24 By faith Moses, [u]when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter;

25 [x]Choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season;

26 Esteeming [a]the reproach [†]of Christ[7] greater riches than the treasures in Egypt: for he had respect unto the recompence of the reward.

27 By faith he forsook Egypt, not fearing the wrath of the king: for he endured, [s]as seeing him who is invisible.

28 Through faith [h]he kept the passover, and the sprinkling of blood, lest he that destroyed the first-born should touch them.

29 By faith [k]they passed through the Red sea as by dry land; which the Egyptians assaying to do were drowned.

30 By faith [l]the walls of Jericho fell down, after they were compassed about seven days.

31 By faith the harlot Rahab perished not with them that [‡]believed not, when she had received the spies with peace.

32 And what shall I more say? for the time would fail me to tell of Gedeon, and of Barak, and of Samson, and of Jephthae; of David also, and Samuel, and of the prophets:

33 Who [y]through faith subdued kingdoms,[8] wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions,

34 Quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, [e]out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens.

he prefaced by a definition of faith; in which he did not confine his views to one single exercise of that fundamental grace, but took in all the variety of its actings, in the whole of a believer's experience and conduct. Where the principle, from which faith springs, is implanted by the regenerating Spirit of God, it leads a man to receive the truth concerning justification by the merits of Jesus Christ, according to the measure of light afforded him; but it will also embrace the whole word of God, and expect its accomplishment as to all the extent in which he hath spoken and promised. This divine faith is "the substance of things hoped for;" crediting the testimony of God, resting on his promises, and expecting the accomplishment of them, it gives the object hoped for at some future period, a present subsistence in the soul, as if it were already possessed; for the believer is satisfied with the security afforded, and acts under the persuasion that God will not fail of his engagements. Thus he gives up present advantages, and endures present hardships, in obedience to God, and in waiting for his promise; even as men give ready money for an estate in reversion, or endure present labour in hope of future ease and indulgence. But faith has not only respect to the good things hoped for; it is also, "the evidence of things not seen." The things revealed to faith, but invisible to sense, and undiscoverable by reason, may relate to the past, the present, or the future; to God, and to his works of creation, providence, and redemption; to his omniscient presence and his future judgment; to the world of spirits, and the eternal state of happiness or misery; to the law and its sanctions, or the gospel and its privileges; and, in short, to a vast variety of particulars which cannot be enumerated. But faith is the evidence, the internal conviction, or demonstration, of them all. To unbelievers they appear false, dubious, or visionary; as they have no medium by which to obtain satisfaction about them: but believers take the plain testimony of God as a truth already demonstrated, and which requires no further proof; their argument is this: "God hath said it, and it must be true." And, in proportion to the strength of their faith, their judgment and conduct are influenced by this realizing conviction, with reference to things revealed; even as if they were the objects of sight, or capable of strict demonstration.—Scott.

CREATION.—Ver. 3. Now what does faith give us to understand concerning "the worlds," that is, the upper, middle, and lower regions of the universe? 1. "That these worlds were" not eternal, nor did they produce themselves, but they were made by another. 2. That the Maker of "the worlds is God;" he is "the Maker of all things;" and whoever is so must be God. 3. That he made "the world" with great exactness; it was a "framed" work, in every thing duly adapted and disposed to answer its end, and to express the perfections of the Creator. 4. That God made "the world by his word," that is, by his essential wisdom and eternal Son, and by his active will, saying, "Let it be done, and it was done," Ps. xxxiii. 9. 5. That "the world" was thus "framed" out of nothing, out of no pre-existent matter, contrary to the received maxim, that "out of nothing nothing can be made;" which, though true of created power, can have no place with God, who can call "things that are not, as if they were," and command them into being. These things we understand by faith. The Bible gives us the truest and most exact account of the origin of all things, and we are to believe it, and not to wrest or run down the Scripture account of the creation, because it does not suit with some fantastic hypotheses of our own, which has been in some learned but conceited men the first remarkable step towards infidelity, and has led them into many more.

CATALOGUE OF WORTHIES.—Ver. 4—32. The apostle, having given us a more general account of the grace of faith, now proceeds to set before us some illustrious examples of it in the Old Testament times, and these may be divided into two classes: I. Those whose names are mentioned, and the particular exercise and actings of whose faith are specified. II. Those whose names are barely mentioned, and an account given in general of the exploits of their faith, which it is left to the reader to accommodate, and apply to the particular persons, from what he gathers up in the sacred story.—Henry. The reader will find illustrations in the passages of the Old Testament referred to by the apostle.

POWER OF FAITH IN ACTION.—Ver. 32—34. By faith, crediting the testimony of God, and substantiating his promises, some of them, as Joshua and David, subdued the nations of Canaan and the neighbouring kingdoms, as the servants of God in the cause of Israel. Others performed most eminent obedience to his commandments, or executed justice, and reformed the nation; and they waited for, and obtained, most remarkable accomplishments of the Divine promises to them and their people. Some had even, in the exercise of faith in God, been enabled to stop the mouths of lions: Samson and David slew each of them a lion; and Daniel the prophet spent the night in a den of hungry lions. Others quenched the violence of the fire. Elijah was repeatedly delivered from the persecuting rage of Ahab, Jezebel, and Ahaziah; Michaiah, from that of Ahab; and Elisha, from the sword of the kings of Israel and Syria; and Jeremiah, from that of Jehoiakim, and Zedekiah's princes. Hezekiah and others were miraculously recovered from sickness; and Hezekiah's kingdom was restored from the utmost debility to a very flourishing condition, in answer to his confidence in God. Many instances occur in the history of Israel, of those who waxed valiant in fight, and turned to flight the armies of the aliens; yet it has generally been supposed, that there is a peculiar reference to the successes of Judas Maccabeus and his brethren, against the forces of Antiochus Epiphanes; when, from feeble beginnings, they arrived at great power, and defeated all that pos-

WHEREFORE, seeing we also are compassed about with so great [b]a cloud of witnesses, [d]let us lay aside every weight, [e]and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run [g]with patience the race that is set before us,[1]

2 [h]Looking unto Jesus, [i]the *author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him, [m]endured the cross, [n]despising the shame, [o]and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God.

3 For consider him that endured such [q]contradiction of sinners against himself, lest ye be wearied and faint in your minds.

4 Ye have [s]not yet resisted unto blood, striving against sin.

5 And ye have forgotten the exhortation which speaketh unto you as unto children, My son, [x]despise not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of him:

6 For [z]whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, [a]and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth.

7 If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons:[2] for what son is he whom the father chasteneth not?

8 But if ye be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then are ye bastards, and not sons.

9 Furthermore, we have had fathers of our flesh which corrected us, and we gave them reverence: [b]shall we not much rather be in subjection unto the Father of spirits, and live?

10 For they verily for a few days chastened us [†]after their own pleasure; [k]but he for our profit, that we might be [l]partakers of his holiness.

11 Now, no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous: nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the [o]peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby.

12 Wherefore lift up the hands which hang down, and the feeble knees;

13 And make [‡]straight paths for your feet, lest that which is lame be turned out of the way; but let it rather be healed.

14 [u]Follow[3] peace with all men, [x]and holiness, without which [y]no man shall see the Lord:

15 Looking diligently lest [a]any man [§]fail of the grace of God; lest [b]any root of bitterness springing up trouble you, [d]and thereby many be defiled;

16 Lest there be any fornicator, or profane person, as Esau, who for one morsel of meat sold his birthright.

17 For ye know how that afterward, [g]when he would have inherited the blessing, [h]he was rejected: [i]for he found no [‖]place of repentance,[4] though he sought it carefully with tears.

18 For ye are not come unto the mount that might be touched, and that burned with fire, nor unto blackness, and darkness, and tempest,

19 And [l]the sound of a trumpet, and the voice of words; which voice [n]they that heard entreated that the word should not be spoken to them any more:

20 (For they could not endure that which was commanded, And if so much as a beast touch the mountain, it shall be stoned, or thrust through with a dart:

21 And so terrible was the sight, that Moses said, I exceedingly fear and quake:[5])

22 But [r]ye are come unto mount Sion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to [u]an innumerable company of angels,

23 To [x]the general assembly and church of the first-born, [z]which are [*]written in heaven, and to [a]God the Judge of all, and to [b]the spirits of just men made perfect,

24 And to [c]Jesus the mediator of the new [†]covenant, and [e]to the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel.

25 See that ye [h]refuse not him that speaketh: for if they escaped not who refused him that spake on earth, much more shall not we escape, if we [k]turn away from him that speaketh from heaven;

secutor's devices, by faith in the promises and protection of the Lord. While we make a decided difference, between the word of God and all other writings; there seems no impropriety in supposing that the apostle had these events in his view, on this occasion: as the historical facts respecting the persecutions of Antiochus and the victories of the Maccabees, were well known among the Hebrews; and really formed an illustrious example of the efficacy and nature of faith.

POWER OF FAITH IN SUFFERING.—Ver. 35—38. Through the same principle of faith, as exercised by the prophets and the persons concerned, women had received their dead children raised to life again. Others were tortured with all the horrid ingenuity, which their cruel persecutors could exercise; and yet refused to accept of deliverance from their agonies, when offered them on condition that they would commit idolatry. They rather chose to expire in their torture, than to purchase life on such terms; because by faith they expected a better resurrection, even a resurrection to eternal life; which was far better than being restored again from the jaws of death, and living a while longer in this world, and better than the resurrections to temporal life before mentioned. This is supposed to refer to the tortures and death of a woman and her seven sons, as recorded in the history of the Maccabees. — This is a most decisive testimony of the sacred writer, that his countrymen expected a resurrection to eternal life, and that the word of God warranted that expectation.—Scott.

CHAP. XII. THE CHRISTIAN RACE.—Ver. 1. Here observe what is the great duty which the apostle urges upon the Hebrews, and which he so much desires they would comply with, and that is, to "lay aside every weight, and the sin that did so easily beset them, and run with patience the race set before them." The duty consists of two parts, the one preparatory, the other perfective. 1. Preparatory; "Lay aside every weight, and the sin," &c. (1.) "Every weight," that is, all inordinate affection and concern for the body, and the present life and world; inordinate care for the present life, and fondness for it, is a dead "weight" upon the soul, that pulls it down when it would ascend upward, and pulls it back when it should press forward; it makes duty and difficulties harder and heavier than they would be. (2.) "The sin that doth so easily beset us; the sin that" has the greatest advantage against us, by the circumstances we are in, our constitution, our company. This may mean either the damning sin of unbelief, or rather the darling sin of the Jews, an over-fondness for their own dispensation. "Let us lay aside" all external and internal hinderances. 2. Perfective; "Run with patience the race that" was "set before" them. The apostle speaks in the gymnastic style, taken from the Olympic and other exercises. 1. Christians have a "race" to "run;" a "race" of service and a "race" of suffering; a course of active and passive obedience. 2. This "race is set before" them; it is marked out unto them, both by the word of God and the examples of the faithful servants of God, that "cloud of witnesses" with which they "are compassed about." It is set out by proper limits and direction; the mark they "run" to, and the prize they "run" for, are "set before" them. 3. This "race" must be "run with patience" and perseverance. There will be need of "patience" to encounter the difficulties that lie in our way, of perseverance to resist all temptations to desist, or turn aside. "Faith" and "patience" are the conquering graces.—Henry.

CHASTISEMENT.—Ver. 9—11. The persons addressed had had fathers according to the flesh, who corrected them in their younger years: and though the chastisement seemed grievous to them; yet they did not leave them on that account, but rather learned to stand in awe of their authority, and to fear giving them further offence: and, when they were grown up, they became sensible, that such discipline had been productive of good to them. Was it not therefore much more proper for them to submit to the Father of their spirits, the Creator of their souls, and the giver of spiritual life: when that subjection was essentially connected with their salvation, and nothing but death could be the consequence of their rebellion against him? For indeed the corrections of their earthly parents, during the few days of their childhood, had been inflicted "after their own pleasure;" and were often, in a great degree, the effect of their own passions, rather than of a prudent design for the good of their children: but their heavenly Father corrected them, though with apparent severity, during the short time of their continuance on earth; yet entirely with a wise and faithful regard to their profit; and in order to make them partakers of his holiness, by mortifying their pride and carnal lusts, and bringing them, through such discipline, under the influence of the Holy Spirit, to be conformed to himself in their judgment, dispositions, and conduct. Now, they were not to suppose, that these salutary corrections ever appeared pleasant, or matter of joy, to the persons who were enduring them: on the contrary, they always seemed for the present grievous, and cause much anguish; nor could they otherwise answer their intention. So that, the sufferers often thought that their trials did them harm, and would end in their ruin: yet afterwards, when the tumult of their passions had subsided, and they were able to digest the lessons which they received under them; they amply compensated for the anguish, by yielding the peaceable fruits of righteousness, and bringing them into a disposition quietly to submit to God, and meekly to bear the injuries of men; and by rendering them fruitful in all those good works, which evinced them to be justified, and at peace with God, and which tended to give them inward peace, joy, and confidence in him.

consider themselves, as summoned by the preachers of the gospel to come to mount Zion, or as actually convened there, to hear the voice of God from the mercy-seat; they were professedly become inhabitants of the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, the place of the Lord's special residence with his covenant-people and accepted worshippers, of which Jerusalem had been but a feeble type: at least they were invited to enter, and become citizens of, that favoured city. This meant the church of Christ on earth, with all its special privileges, ordinances, and promises; as connected with the holy residence of God in heaven, and continually replenishing it with new inhabitants. They were also called to hear the voice of God, in the presence of an innumerable company of angels, who were all "ministering spirits to the heirs of salvation," whose happiness they were invited to participate, and whose worship they were called upon to join and emulate. Moreover, they were come to unite, (not with the congregation of Israel,) but with the assembly and church of the first-born, those who were specially devoted to God; his children, and heirs of the heavenly inheritance, whose names were not only enrolled in the genealogies or registers of the Lord's people on earth, but written in heaven as the elect of God, born of the Spirit, denizens of that heavenly city, and entitled to all its invaluable immunities. They were also called, and many of them were in profession come, to hear the voice of that God, as a Saviour and a Father, who was the impartial, omniscient, omnipotent, and righteous Judge of all men, and of all the world; and by whom all unbelievers would be condemned to everlasting punishment: yea, they were come to share the blessedness of "the spirits of just men made perfect;" even of all the company of ancient believers, and of those who had died since the coming of Christ, and had thus been made perfect in holiness and felicity.—This is a most decisive proof, that the souls of believers enter into a state of perfect happiness when they die, as far as this can consist with being separated from their bodies.—They were also convened, as it were, to hear the voice of God, speaking to them by Jesus the mediator of the new covenant: which was founded on better promises, and ratified by nobler blood, than that mediated by Moses; even by the shedding of that blood, through the application of which, the conscience, the heart, and the duties of sinners were cleansed, and the heavenly things themselves were purified; of which all the sprinklings of blood under the law had been mere shadows. Not only was this blood more efficacious than that of bulls and goats, but Jesus, by it, being dead, yet spake far better things than righteous Abel had done; for, while the blood of Abel called from the ground for vengeance on the murderer; the blood of Christ, applied in faith, not only took away the guilt of all other sins, however atrocious, but even that of being his crucifiers; as multitudes of those, who had been immediately concerned in that most heinous crime, could thankfully witness. —Scott.

CHAP. XIII. BROTHERLY LOVE.—Ver. 1. The spirit of Christianity is a spirit of love, "faith works by love;" the true religion is the strongest bond of friendship; if it be not so, it has its name for nothing. This "brotherly love" was in danger of being lost, and that in a time of persecution, when it would be most necessary; it was in danger of being lost by those disputes that were among them concerning the respect they ought still to have to the ceremonies of the Mosaic law. Disputes about religion too often produce a decay of Christian affection: but this must be guarded against, and all proper means used to preserve "brotherly love:" Christians should always love and live as brethren, and the more they grow in devout affection to God their heavenly Father, the more they will grow in love to one another for his sake. —Henry.

HOSPITALITY AND SYMPATHY.—Ver. 2, 3. The apostle exhorted them not to forget to entertain strangers, especially such as were driven or travelled from home for the sake of the gospel, and who in general were destitute of other accommodation, and dependent on the hospitality of their brethren, though not personally known by them. To encourage this kind of charity, he reminded them that some had entertained angels unawares, as Abraham and Lot. It hath been observed that one of the three who came to Abraham was called JEHOVAH, and was doubtless the eternal Word and Son of God: but it was not necessary for the apostle to advert to that circumstance, when he merely suggested a hint on the subject. It was not indeed to be expected that the Hebrews would literally be visited by angels, in the form of strangers; but by hospitality to their brethren, for Christ's sake, they in fact received him, and would be rewarded accordingly: and even if they were mistaken in the character of those strangers to whom they showed this kindness, their intentions would in no wise fail of a gracious recompense. Many of their brethren also were bound in prison for the sake of the gospel; and they ought to remember the hardships endured by such sufferers, as if they were confined with them; that they might be excited to adopt every method of alleviating their sorrows, or procuring their release. In short, whatever adversity any of their brethren were exposed to, in their persons, connections, or circumstances, they ought to sympathize with them, and endeavour to relieve them: recollecting that they were still in the body, and liable to similar afflictions; and that they would in that case expect the soothing lenient care of their brethren.—Scott.

MARRIAGE.—Ver 4. Here you have, 1. A recommendation of God's ordinance of "marriage," that it "is honourable in all," and ought to be so esteemed by all, and not denied to those to whom God has not denied it; it "is honourable," for God instituted it for man in paradise, knowing it was "not good for him to be alone;" he married and blessed the first couple, the first parents of mankind, to direct all to look unto God in that great concern, and to "marry in the Lord." Christ honoured "marriage" with his presence and first miracle; it "is honourable" as a means to prevent impurity and a "defiled bed;" it "is honourable" and happy, when persons come together pure and chaste, and preserve "the marriage bed undefiled," not only from unlawful, but inordinate affections. 2. A dreadful, but just censure of impurity and lewdness; "whoremongers and adulterers God will judge." (1.) God knows who are guilty of such sins, no darkness can hide them from him. (2.) He will call such sins by their proper names, not by the names of love and gallantry, but of "whoredom" and "adultery;" whoredom in the single state, and adultery in the married state. (3.) He will bring "them into judgment," he "will judge" them.—Henry.

IMMUTABILITY OF JESUS.—Ver. 8. Jesus Christ, the great Head of the church, was "the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever;" equally merciful, powerful, faithful, and all-sufficient. As the Son of God, he was possessed of all possible perfection from eternity; he had continued to exercise those perfections for the good of the church, through all preceding ages; nor was he less perfect and powerful, when manifested in the flesh, to "purchase the church with his own blood." He continued the same when exalted in human nature to the mediatorial throne: and when he shall come to judge the world, he will exhibit the same divine perfection and glory, and so to all eternity. The expression seems to be a periphrasis of immutability, a divine attribute incommunicable to a mere creature: his person is as immutable as his doctrine; his justice and holiness as his mercy and truth: and all kinds of persons will meet a Judge exactly of the same character as he manifested when he appeared on earth as a Saviour. The Hebrews might therefore confide in him, to support and comfort them under their sufferings for his sake, even as he had those who had so happily finished their course.—Scott.

THE GENERAL EPISTLE OF # J A M E S.

JAMES the Less or younger, son of Alpheus or Cleophas, and cousin to our Lord by his mother, called His brother, is allowed to have been the author of this epistle. The other James, who was also an apostle, was the son of Zebedee, and brother of the beloved disciple John. This James was put to death by Herod (Acts xii. 2) about ten years after the death of our Lord. The design of his epistle is to correct the errors that had sprung up respecting faith and justification, and to enforce on all a strict regard to holy obedience.

CHAP. I.

We must exercise patience, 1, and ask wisdom of God, 5; not imputing our sins to him, 13, from whom all good cometh, 17 but obediently hearing his word, 21.

[a] JAMES, a servant of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ, to the twelve tribes which are scattered abroad, greeting.

2 My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations;

3 Knowing this, [b] that the trying of your faith worketh patience.

4 But [k] let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing.

5 If [n] any of you lack wisdom, [o] let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him.

6 But [q] let him ask in faith, nothing wavering: for he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed.

7 For let not that man think that he shall receive any thing of the Lord.

8 A double-minded man [1] is unstable in all his ways.

9 Let the brother of low degree *rejoice in that he is exalted;

10 But the rich, in that he is made low: [s] because as the flower of the grass he shall pass away.

11 For the sun is no sooner risen with a burning heat, but it withereth the grass, and the flower thereof falleth, and the grace of the fashion of it perisheth: so also shall the rich man fade away in his ways.

12 Blessed is [c] the man that endureth temptation: [2] for when he is tried, he shall receive [e] the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him.

13 Let [g] no man say, when he is tempted, I am tempted of God: for God cannot be tempted with †evil, neither tempteth he any man:

14 But every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own lust, and enticed.

15 Then, [i] when lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin; and sin, when it is finished, [3] bringeth forth death.

16 [l] Do not err, my beloved brethren.

18 Of his own will [4] begat he us with the word of truth, that we should be [r] a kind of first-fruits of his creatures.

19 Wherefore, my beloved brethren, let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak, [x] slow to wrath:

20 For [y] the wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God.

21 Wherefore, lay apart all filthiness, and superfluity of naughtiness, [b] and receive with meekness the ingrafted word, [5] [d] which is able to save your souls:

22 But [6] be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, [f] deceiving your own selves.

CHAP. I. THE DISPERSION.—Ver. 1. It is probable, that the apostolical authority of James was not disputed, among those whom he more immediately addressed; so that he waived the mention of it, and only styled himself the servant of God and of the Lord Jesus. It appears from the Acts of the Apostles, as well as from historical records, that he resided chiefly at Jerusalem; and he is said to have been the first bishop of that church; though this is spoken inaccurately; for he possessed far more than episcopal authority, however that may be defined. He is supposed to have suffered martyrdom there, not very long after writing this epistle, though the date of it is uncertain. He addressed himself to the twelve tribes, which were considered as still existing, though scattered by various calamities, and from different motives, into many distant nations of the earth; but he principally intended the Christians among them: and he simply greeted them, or wished them health and peace, without using the benedictions which preface most of the other epistles.—Scattered. "That is, to all the believing Jews, of whatever tribe, who were dispersed over the earth; to whom, it is probable, James, remaining still at Jerusalem, sent this epistle, by those who were used to meet at that city from all nations, at the festivals." [Beza.]—Some of all the other tribes still subsisted, as distinct from the Gentiles, and as generally incorporated with the descendants of Judah; and the nation was dispersed abroad in almost all parts of the known world; as it is evident from the Scriptures themselves, as well as from the testimony of ancient writers.—Scott.

PATIENCE.—Ver. 3, 4. "The trial of faith worketh patience." Trying of one grace produces another; and the more the suffering graces of a Christian are exercised, the stronger they grow. "Tribulation worketh patience," Rom. v. 3. Now to exercise Christian "patience" aright, we must, 1. "Let it work." It is not a stupid, but an active thing. A stoical apathy and a Christian "patience" are very different: by the one men become, in some measure, insensible of their afflictions; but by the other they become triumphant in and over them. Let us take care, in times of trial, that "patience," and not "passion," be set at work in us: whatever is said or done, let "patience" have the saying and doing of it: let us not allow the indulgence of our passions to hinder the operation and noble effects of "patience;" let us give it leave to work, and it will work wonders in a time of trouble. 2. We must "let it have its perfect work." Do nothing to limit it, or to weaken it; but let it have its full scope: if one affliction come upon the heels of another, and a train of them are drawn upon us, yet "let patience" go on till "its work is perfected." When we bear all that God appoints, and as long as he appoints, and with a humble obedient eye to him, and when we not only bear troubles, but rejoice in them, then "patience hath its perfect work." 3. When the work of "patience" is complete, then the Christian is "entire," and "nothing" will be "wanting:" it will furnish us with all that is necessary for our Christian race and warfare, and will enable us to persevere "to the end," and then "its work" will be ended, and crowned with glory.—Henry.

THE FATHER OF LIGHTS.—Ver. 16—18. Every thing truly good, of whatever kind, must be considered as a gift and bounty coming down from God; being beneficial in itself and perfect in its kind, like its great Author, who is the father, the source, and fountain, of light, natural, moral, and spiritual; the author of whatever is beautiful, excellent, and good in all creatures and in the whole universe; as well as of all true knowledge, wisdom, holiness, and felicity, in those rational agents that never sinned, and in redeemed sinners. But nothing of a contrary nature comes down from him, "with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." The sun and moon, the two great natural lights which he hath made, appear to us to have several changes and turnings, whence originate summer and winter, day and night; but in fact these appearances arise entirely from our situation respecting them. Thus God is immutably the fountain of good, and of nothing else; all good is to be ascribed to him, and sought from him.—Scott.

PURE RELIGION.—Ver. 27. 1. It is the glory of religion to be "pure and undefiled;" not mixed with the inventions of men, nor the corruptions of the world. False religions may be known by their impurity and uncharitableness; according to that of St. John, "He that doeth not righteousness," is not of God, neither he that "loveth not his brother," 1 John iii. 10. But on the other hand, a "holy life" and a "charitable heart" show a true religion. Our religion is not (says Dr. Manton) adorned with ceremonies, but purity and charity. And it is a good observation of his, that a religion which is pure, should be kept undefiled. Observe, 2. That religion is pure and undefiled, which is so before God and the Father. That is right, which is so in God's eye, and which chiefly aims at his approbation. True religion teaches us to do every thing as in the presence of God; and to seek his favour, and study to please him in all our actions. Observe, 3. Compassion and charity to the poor and distressed, is a very great and necessary part of true religion; "visiting the fatherless and widow in their affliction." Visiting is here put for all manner of relief which we are capable of giving to others: and "fatherless" and "widows" are here particularly mentioned, because they are generally most apt to be neglected or oppressed: but by them we are to understand all others who are objects of charity; all who are in affliction. It is very remarkable, that if the sum of religion be drawn up in two articles, this is one—to be "charitable," and "relieve the afflicted."—Henry.

3 And ye have respect to him that weareth the gay clothing, and say unto him, Sit thou here [†]in a good place; and say to the poor, Stand thou there, or sit here under my footstool:

4 Are ye not then partial in yourselves, and are become judges of evil thoughts?[1]

5 Hearken, my beloved brethren, [m]Hath not God chosen the poor of this world [n]rich in faith, and [o]heirs of [‡]the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him?

6 But ye have despised the poor. [r]Do not rich men oppress you, [s]and draw you before the judgment-seats?

7 Do not they [t]blaspheme that worthy name by the which ye are called?

8 If ye fulfil the royal law according to the scripture, [u]Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself, ye do well:

9 But [v]if ye have respect to persons, ye commit sin, and [w]are convinced of the law as transgressors.

10 For [x]whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all.[2]

11 For [y]he that said, [z]Do not commit adultery, said also, Do not kill. [a]Now, if thou commit no adultery, yet if thou kill, thou art become a transgressor of the law.

12 So speak ye, and so do, as they that shall be judged by [b]the law of liberty.

13 For [c]he shall have judgment without mercy that hath shewed no mercy; [d]and mercy [e]rejoiceth against judgment.

14 What doth it profit, my brethren, though a man say he hath faith, and have not works? [f]can faith save him?

15 If a brother or sister be naked, and destitute of daily food,

16 And one of you say unto them, Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body, what doth it profit?

17 Even so faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being [*]alone.

18 Yea, a man may say, Thou hast faith, and I have works: shew me thy faith [†]without thy works, [u]and I will shew thee my faith by my works.

19 Thou [x]believest that there is one God; [y]thou doest well: [z]the devils also believe, and tremble.

20 But wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead?[3]

21 Was not Abraham our father justified by works, when he had offered Isaac his son upon the altar?

22 [‡]Seest thou how faith wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect?

23 And the scripture was fulfilled which saith, [1]Abraham believed God, and it was imputed unto him for righteousness: and he was called [k]the Friend of God.

24 Ye see then how that by works a man is justified, and not by faith only.

25 Likewise also, was not Rahab the harlot justified by works, when she had received the messengers, and had sent them out another way?

26 For [p]as the body without the [§]spirit is dead, [q]so faith without works is dead also.[4]

We ought to bridle our tongues, 1, and to cultivate heavenly wisdom, 13.

MY brethren, be not many masters, [b]knowing that we shall receive the greater [*]condemnation.

2 For in many things we offend all. If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body.

3 Behold, we put bits in the horses' mouths, that they may obey us; and we turn about their whole body.

4 Behold also the ships, which, though they be so great, and are driven of fierce winds, yet are they turned about with a very small helm, whithersoever the governor listeth.

5 Even so the tongue is a little member, and boasteth great things. Behold how great a [†]matter a little fire kindleth!

6 And [k]the tongue is a fire, [l]a world of iniquity: so is the tongue among our members, that it defileth the whole body, and setteth on fire the [‡]course of nature; [l] and [m]it is set on fire of hell.

7 For every [§]kind of beasts, and of birds, and of serpents, and of things in the sea, is tamed, and hath been tamed of [1]mankind:

8 But the tongue can no man tame; it is [o]an unruly evil, [p]full of deadly poison.

9 Therewith [r]bless we God, even the Father; and [s]therewith curse we men, which are [t]made after the similitude of God.

10 Out [u]of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing. My brethren, these things ought not so to be.

11 Doth a fountain send forth at the same [*]place sweet water and bitter?

12 Can the fig-tree, my brethren, bear olive-berries? either a vine, figs? so can no fountain both yield salt water and fresh.[2]

13 Who is a wise man, and endued with knowledge among you? let him shew out of a good conversation his works with meekness of wisdom.

CHAP. II. Christian Impartiality.—Ver. 1—4. While the persons whom the apostle addressed held the doctrine of Christ, and professed faith in him as "the Lord of glory," most glorious in himself, and the source of all that was honourable in men, they ought to take care not to show respect of persons; giving honour to some and despising others, on account of their external circumstances and appearances, without estimating the real excellency of their characters, or the contrary: for this would be very inconsistent with professing themselves the disciples of the lowly Jesus. For instance, if any person, adorned with rings on his fingers and costly garments, as one of high rank in the community, should come into their assembly, when they were met for the worship of God, as the Jews did in their synagogues; and another should at the same time enter in mean and worn-out clothes, as a poor man; and they should pay great attention to him in gay clothing, accommodating him with some chief place in the synagogue; and contemptuously order the poor man to stand in some inconvenient place, or to sit on the ground at their feet, without further enquiry into their characters and conduct: would not this prove that they were partial in forming an opinion in themselves concerning others, and were become judges, who were misled by vain reasonings and imaginations, by unjust thoughts and corrupt affections? For their conduct would show that they deemed wealth and splendour, however acquired, to be honourable; and poverty, however incurred or supported, to be disgraceful: forgetting that the Lord of glory was pleased to be poor for the sake of sinners, to enrich them with eternal felicity.—Scott.

Temporal Poverty—Spiritual Wealth.—Ver. 5. Many "poor of the world" are "rich in faith;" thus the poorest may become rich; and this is what they ought to be especially ambitious of; it is expected from those who have wealth and estates, that they be "rich in good works;" because the more they have, the more they have to do good with; but it is expected from "the poor in the world" that they be "rich in faith;" for the less they have here, they may, and should, live in the believing expectation of better things in a better world. Believing Christians are "rich in" title, and in being "heirs of a kingdom," though they may be very poor as to present possessions: what is laid out upon them is but little, what is laid up for them is unspeakably rich and great.—Henry.

The Royal Law.—Ver. 8—13. The apostle reminded his brethren that they would do well if they attended to, and fulfilled the comprehensive scriptural precept of loving their neighbours as themselves, in the several parts of their conduct towards each other. This might be called a royal law, because of its pre-eminent excellency and permanent authority; and because it was the law of Christ their King, respecting their conduct towards one another and all men. It is of vast importance to observe how often this abstract of the second table of the law is referred to in the New Testament, as a rule of conduct to believers; as it is alone sufficient to show the fatal mistake of those who deny the moral law to be the rule of our duty.—Scott.

Faith—Works—James and Paul.—Ver. 14—25. 1. St. Paul speaks of works wrought in obedience to the law of Moses, and before men's embracing the faith of the gospel; and he had to deal with those who valued themselves so highly upon those works, that they rejected "the gospel;" (as Rom. x., at the beginning, most expressly declares;) but St. James speaks of works done in obedience to the gospel, and as the proper and necessary effects and fruits of a sound believing in Christ Jesus. Both are concerned to magnify "the faith of the gospel," as that which alone could save us and justify us; but St. Paul magnifies it, by showing the insufficiency of any works of the law before faith, or in opposition to the doctrine of justification by Jesus Christ; St. James magnifies the same faith, by showing what are the genuine and necessary products and operations of it. 2. St. Paul not only speaks of different works from those insisted on by St. James, but he speaks of a quite different use that was made of good works, from what is here urged and intended. St. Paul had to do with those who depended on the merit of their works in the sight of God, and thus he might well make them of no manner of account: St. James had to do with those who cried up faith, but would not allow works to be used even as evidence.—Henry.

CHAP. III. The Tongue.—Ver. 3—12. To show the importance of the subject, the apostle observed, that the estimate must not be made according to appearance, but by the effect. The horse, though a powerful and spirited animal, might be directed by the bit in his mouth according to the will of the rider, and his whole body followed that guidance: whereas if that were omitted, great danger and mischief would ensue: and the ships, though of vast bulk, and driven by violent winds on the impetuous ocean, might be directed by a very small helm, according to the motion of the pilot's hand. Even so the tongue, though a little member, boasted and gloried in being able to do great things: when properly bridled and directed, it could produce the most blessed effects; but if neglected, the most fatal consequences must follow. Every kind, or nature, of living creature, however monstrous, ravenous, fierce, or venomous, has been and is subdued by the reason, courage, and persevering efforts of the human species; by which mean the mischiefs, which otherwise would have been occasioned by them, are in great measure prevented; but no man could ever find out a way to subdue the tongue; or to hinder wicked men from corrupting the principles, polluting the imaginations, and inflaming the passions of others, by their mischievous discourse. No one, however wise,

FROM whence come wars and *fightings among you? come they not hence, even of your [†]lusts that war in your members?

2 Ye lust, and have not: ye kill, and desire to have, and cannot obtain: ye fight and war, yet ye have not, because ye ask not.

3 Ye [f]ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that [g]ye may consume it upon your [†]lusts.

4 Ye adulterers and adulteresses, know ye not that the [l]friendship of the world is enmity with God? [l]whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God.

5 Do ye think that the scripture saith in vain, [o]The spirit that dwelleth in us lusteth [§]to envy?

6 But he giveth more grace:[1] wherefore he saith, [p]God resisteth the proud, but [q]giveth grace unto the humble.

7 [r]Submit yourselves therefore to God. [s]Resist the devil, and he will flee from you.

8 [t]Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you. [u]Cleanse your hands, ye sinners; and [x]purify your hearts, ye double-minded.

9 Be afflicted, and mourn, and weep: let your laughter be turned to mourning, and your joy to heaviness.

10 [b]Humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord, and [c]he shall lift you up.

11 Speak not evil one of another,[2] brethren. He that speaketh evil of his brother, and judgeth his brother, speaketh evil of the law, and judgeth the law: but if thou judge the law, thou art not a doer of the law, but a judge.

12 There is one lawgiver, who is able to save and to destroy: who art thou that judgest another?

13 Go to now, ye that say, To-day, or to-morrow, we will go into such a city, and continue there a year, and buy and sell, and get gain;[3]

14 Whereas ye know not what shall be on the morrow: for what is your life? [‡]It is even [o]a vapour, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away.

15 For that ye ought to say, [p]If the Lord will, we shall live, and do this, or that.

16 But now ye rejoice in your boastings: all such rejoicing is evil.

17 Therefore to him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.

GO to now, ye rich men, [c]weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you.

2 [d]Your riches are corrupted,[1] and [e]your garments are moth-eaten.

3 Your gold and silver is cankered; and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, [h]and shall eat your flesh as it were fire. [i]Ye have heaped treasure together for the last days.

4 Behold, [j]the hire of the labourers which have reaped down your fields, which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth: and [m]the cries of them which have reaped are entered into the ears of the [n]Lord of sabaoth.

5 Ye have lived in pleasure on the earth, and been wanton; ye have nourished your hearts, [q]as in a day of slaughter.

6 Ye have condemned and killed the just; and he doth not resist you.

7 *Be patient therefore, brethren, [u]unto the coming of the Lord. Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, [x]until he receive the early and latter rain.

8 Be ye also patient; [z]stablish your hearts; [a]for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh.[2]

9 [b]Grudge [†]not one against another, brethren, lest ye be condemned: behold, [d]the Judge standeth before the door.

10 Take, my brethren, the prophets, [e]who have spoken in the name of the Lord, for an example of suffering affliction, and of patience.

11 Behold, we count them happy which endure. Ye have heard of the patience of Job, [l]and have seen the end of the Lord; that [k]the Lord is very pitiful, and of tender mercy.

12 But above all things, my brethren, powerful, or excellent, has ever been able, by laws, punishments, arguments, or any other method, to stop the progress of this evil; which effects far more tremendous desolations, in communities, churches, and families; and does far more to make men miserable, here and hereafter, than all the venomous and voracious creatures in the world combined together can do.

WISDOM FROM ABOVE.—Ver. 17, 18. "The wisdom which is from above," even that wisdom which God gives to his people in answer to their humble and believing prayers, "is first pure," in respect of its objects, motives, and tendency; it relates to the holy and purifying truths and precepts of Scripture, and tends to holiness of heart, language, and conduct. As far as it can consist with this, and with steadily avowing the truths, and obeying the commandments of God our Saviour this wisdom is peaceable; the possessor of it is disposed to give up every thing for peace, except truth and duty; and these he will firmly adhere to, but in a peaceable and loving manner.—It is also gentle; and influences men to be slow to anger, candid, calm, forbearing, and courteous. Moreover, it is easy to be entreated, and persuaded to what is reasonable, or forgiving; and to listen to the words of truth and equity, though spoken by an inferior, a child, or an enemy; and it is full of mercy, compassion, tenderness, and all good fruits. It is likewise "without partiality," in judging of persons or actions; free from bigotry for one party, or against another; and from contending for one part of religion, to the neglect and disparagement of others; or producing that partiality to the rich, and that prejudice against the poor, which the apostle had before reproved. Finally, it is free from hypocrisy; leading a man to a greater regard to the acceptance of God, than to the good opinion of men.—Heavenly wisdom, according to St. James' description of it, is nearly allied to that love, for which St. Paul contended: and we may observe of both, that they are described as they are in themselves, and that every man may ascertain the reality, of the degree, of his attainments in them, by the effects of them on his temper and conduct.—Scott.

CHAP. IV. ASKING AMISS.—Ver. 3. When men follow their worldly business, (suppose them tradesmen or husbandmen,) and ask of God prosperity, but do not receive what they ask for, it is because they ask with wrong aims and intentions; they ask God to give them success in their callings or undertakings, not that they may glorify their heavenly Father, and do good with what they have, but that they may "consume it upon their lusts;" that they may be enabled to eat better meat, and drink better drink, and wear better clothes, and so gratify their pride, vanity, and voluptuousness. But if we thus seek the things of this world, it is just in God to deny them; whereas, if we seek any thing, that we may serve God with it, we may expect he will either give what we seek for, or give us hearts to be content without it, and give opportunities of serving and glorifying him some other way. Let us remember this, that when we speed not in our prayers, it is "because we ask amiss;" either we do not ask for right ends, or not in a right manner.—Henry.

UNCERTAINTY OF LIFE AND ITS LESSONS.—Ver. 13—17. The apostle here proceeds to reprove and expose the self-sufficiency, worldly spirit, and unbelieving irreligious language, which were manifested by many, in another way. The expression, "Go to now," or "Come now," here implied strong disapprobation, and a call to any one to consider the absurdity or baseness of his conduct. The persons reproved were eager in pursuing worldly advantages, pleased with the sagacious plans which they had formed for obtaining them, and sanguine in expecting success: but they neither considered the shortness and uncertainty of life, nor their entire dependence on God in every thing. Thus some would say, "We shall set out to-day, or to-morrow, and go to such a city, where we purpose to reside for a year, and by carrying on such and such a trade, we expect to enrich ourselves." Whereas, they could not know what might take place respecting them, even on the morrow, or for a single day. For indeed what were their lives to be compared unto, but a vapour, or luminous meteor, which gliding through the air in the night, may perhaps appear beautiful for a moment, but then vanishes for ever? So short, unreal, unsubstantial, uncertain, and fading was human life, and all the splendour, prosperity, or enjoyments that attended on it; though an eternity of bliss or wo, to each of them, must be determined according to their conduct during his fleeting moments!—Scott.

CHAP. V. RICHES.—Ver. 1—6. The apostle here evidently meant a direct address to the unbelieving Jews, among whom were, in general, the rich and great men of the nation. He wrote but a short time before the destruction of Jerusalem, and those desolations which Christ had predicted and his disciples expected; and as the more prosperous of his countrymen rejected the gospel, from regard to their worldly interests, and were become most atrociously wicked; he foresaw the speedy termination of all their enjoyments, and the most grievous temporal calamities about to overwhelm them; as well as the event of their crimes in future misery, if they continued unbelieving and impenitent. He therefore called on them to come and attend to his words, and to consider the danger of their condition: that they might weep and howl with the most doleful lamentations, on account of the complicated miseries that were even then coming upon them. As to their treasures, they would not at all profit them in the day of the Lord's vengeance. Their corn, or other perishable goods, which they had avariciously hoarded, were corrupted; or they would be of no more use to them than if they were swear not; neither by heaven, neither by the earth, neither by any other oath: but let your yea be yea; and your nay, nay; lest ye fall into condemnation.

13 Is any among you afflicted? let him pray. Is any merry? [r]let him sing psalms.

14 Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them [t]pray over him, [u]anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord:[3]

15 And [x]the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him.

16 [z]Confess your faults one to another, and [a]pray one for another, that ye may be healed.[4] The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much.

17 Elias was a man subject to like passions as we are, [§]and he prayed [‡]earnestly that it might not rain; [b]and it rained not on the earth by the space of three years and six months.

18 And he prayed again, and the heaven gave rain, and the earth brought forth her fruit.

19 Brethren, if any of you do err from the truth, and one convert him;

20 Let him know, that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way [n]shall save a soul from death, and shall [p]hide a multitude of sins.

[3] The gospel being sufficiently confirmed, this gift of healing has ceased, and therewith the rite of anointing; so that the Church of Rome keeps up an idle ceremony in anointing the sick, unless her ministers had a miraculous power of healing them. Besides, they anoint those who are given over for dead; whereas the apostle's anointing was for the benefit of the living, as appears from the following verse.—Burkitt.

[4] The Papists absurdly ground their practice of auricular confession upon this text; for there is nothing here said of confessing to the priest; and if there were, it would be as much the priest's duty to confess to the people, as the people's to the priest, for the duty required is mutual—"confess one to another."—Burkitt.

THE FIRST EPISTLE GENERAL OF # PETER.

THIS Epistle was directed to the Christians scattered through Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia; and, with most expositors, I consider it directed both to those converted from Judaism and heathenism. Without much order or connexion, he writes with great dignity and energy, enforcing moral duties with the strongest motives. It was probably written about Anno Domini 63.

CHAP. I.

He blesseth God for their prospects of glory, 1, which were a support to them in trouble, 6, and an occasion of much love to Christ, 8; of whom the prophets had spoken, 10, and whom they were bound to serve in all holy obedience, 13.

PETER, an apostle of Jesus Christ, to the strangers scattered throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia,

2 [1]Elect according to [k]the foreknowledge of God the Father, through [l]sanctification of the Spirit,[1] unto obedience and [m]sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ: Grace unto you, and peace, be multiplied.

3 [q]Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, [r]which, according to his *abundant mercy, [s]hath begotten us again unto a lively hope, by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead,

4 To [x]an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven [†]for you,

5 Who are [c]kept[2] by the power of God through faith unto salvation, [f]ready to be revealed in the last time:

6 Wherein ye greatly rejoice, though now for a season (if need be) [1]ye are in heaviness through manifold temptations;

7 That the [n]trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise, and honour, and glory, at the appearing of Jesus Christ:

8 Whom [t]having not seen, [u]ye love; in whom, though now ye see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy [y]unspeakable, and full of glory:

9 [a]Receiving the end of your faith, even the salvation of your souls.

10 Of which salvation the prophets have enquired and searched diligently,[3] who prophesied of the grace that should come unto you:

11 Searching what, or what manner of time, [c]the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify, when it testified beforehand [f]the sufferings of Christ, and [§]the glory that should follow.

12 Unto whom it was revealed, that not unto themselves, but unto us, they did minister the things which are now reported unto entirely decayed. Their costly garments, which they kept in splendid wardrobes, were consuming by moths; and there was such a curse upon them, that they would soon be of no value. Nay, even their gold and silver, which should have been brightened by circulation, were laid by till they were tarnished, as with rust, and the very appearance of their money would bear witness against their covetousness: whilst, in consequence of heaping it up, their enemies would have the richer plunder: the anguish of having it torn from them would be a torment to their minds; and their guilty consciences would upbraid them with the crimes by which they became rich, and the bad use which they had made of their abundance: so that they would be tortured, as if the rust of their metals were converted into a caustic, to burn their flesh like fire. Indeed, with much wickedness and great labour, they had amassed treasures for the last days of their city and nation, when God was about to execute tremendous vengeance upon them for their personal and public iniquities; and when riches would no more profit them, than in the hour of death and at the day of judgment; which was in fact to "treasure up wrath against the day of wrath."—Scott.

Power of Prayer.—Ver. 16, 17. Prayer must be fervent, in-wrought, well-wrought. It must be a pouring out of the heart to God; and it must proceed from a faith unfeigned. Such prayer avails much. It is of great advantage to ourselves, it may be very beneficial to our friends, and we are assured of its being acceptable to God. It is good having those for friends, whose prayers are available in the sight of God. The power of prayer is here proved from the success of Elijah. This may be encouraging to us even in common cases, if we consider that Elijah was "a man of like passions with us." He was a zealous, good man, and a very great man, but he had his infirmities, and was subject to disorder in his passions as well as others. In prayer, we must not look to the merit of man, but to the grace of God. Only in this we should copy after Elijah, that he prayed earnestly, or, as it is in the original, "in prayer he prayed." It is not enough to say a prayer, but we must pray in prayer. Our thoughts must be fixed, our desires firm and ardent, and our graces in exercise; and when we thus pray in prayer, we shall speed in prayer. Elijah "prayed that it might not rain;" and God heard him in his pleading against an idolatrous, persecuting country, so that "it rained not on the earth by the space of three years and six months. Again he prayed, and the heaven gave rain," &c. Thus you see prayer is the key which opens and shuts heaven. To this there is an allusion, Rev. xi. 6, where the two witnesses are said to "have power to shut heaven, that it rain not." This instance of the extraordinary efficacy of prayer is recorded for encouragement, even to ordinary Christians, to be [illegible] in prayer.—Henry.

CHAP. I. The Heavenly Inheritance.—Ver. 4. Earthly inheritances are corruptible in themselves, and in respect of their possessors; defiled, in respect of the means by which they are obtained, the use which is generally made of them, and the persons who possess them; and fading, as to the very trivial comfort, honour, or distinction which they confer, and its withering nature, especially as possession soon abates the relish with which the objects were at first received. But the inheritance to which the regenerate are entitled, and for which they hope, is incorruptible in itself, and they will be rendered incorruptible and immortal to enjoy it; it is undefiled, in respect of its pleasures, and the character of all those who partake of them; and unfading, as to its satisfaction, glory, and splendour, which will be unalloyed, unsullied, permanent, uninterrupted, always increasing, and eternal. This inheritance was "reserved in heaven," out of the reach of all enemies and changes, in the abode of perfect holiness and felicity, "for them," even for all the elect, or the regenerate, who "were kept," as in a strongly fortified and garrisoned castle, by "the power of God," engaged by covenant to fulfil his irrevocable promises; and the purposes of his everlasting love.—Scott.

Study of Angels.—Ver. 12. The mysteries of the gospel, and the methods of man's salvation, are so glorious, that the blessed "angels" earnestly "desire to look into" them; they are curious, accurate, and industrious in prying into them; they consider the whole scheme of man's redemption with deep attention and admiration, particularly the points the apostle had been discoursing of; "which things the angels desire to" stoop down and "look into," as "the cherubims" did continually "toward the mercy-seat."—Henry.

Redemption.—Ver. 18. They were redeemed from slavery, and wretched imprisonment, into which they had been sold for their crimes; not only by power exerted, but by a price paid for them, as a satisfaction to the justice of God, that he might act honourably in delivering them. This price had not consisted of corruptible things, such as silver and gold, the treasures which men mostly value; but it had been paid with the blood of Christ, the Son of the living God, which was indeed most precious, by reason of his divine nature and excellency; so that it was sufficient to render it glorious to the justice and law of God, for the sake of it, to show mercy, and give grace, to sinners of every nation and description. For this was the Lamb of God, without the least spot or blemish of sin, of whose purity and excellency, as well as his sufferings unto death, the innumerable multitude of paschal lambs, and daily burnt-offerings, under the law, had been no more than shadows.—Scott.

word of God is the great means of regeneration, Jam. i. 18. The grace of regeneration is conveyed by the gospel. 3. This new and second birth is much more desirable and excellent than the first. This the apostle teaches by preferring the incorruptible to the corruptible seed. By the one we become the children of men, by the other the sons and daughters of the Most High. The word of God, being compared to seed, teaches us, that though it be little in appearance, yet it is wonderful in operation; though it lies hid a while, yet it grows up and produces excellent fruit at last. 4. Those that are regenerate should love each other with a pure heart fervently. Brethren by nature are bound to love one another. 5. The word of God liveth and abideth for ever. This word is a living word, or a lively word, Heb. iv. 12. It is a means of spiritual life, to begin it and persevere in it, animating and exciting us to our duty, till it brings us to eternal life; and it is abiding.—Henry.

Frailty of Man.—Ver. 25. "All flesh," all that is born of Adam's fallen nature, is as grass; and "all the glory of man," whatever any of the human race ever boasted of, or rejoiced in, was and is but as the gaudy flower of the grass: whether it were royal or noble birth, genius, wisdom, learning, accomplishments, wealth, magnificence, or splendid actions: or even the glorying of the Jews in being the children of Abraham: for the whole must soon wither and be cut down, and end in the grave, and in hell. But the word of God abideth for ever: its truths, promises, and threatenings will be accomplished to eternity.—Scott.

CHAP. II. The Milk of the Word.—Ver. 2. The duty exhorted to, is, a strong and constant desire of the "word of God," which word is here called "reasonable milk." Only that phrase not being proper English, our translators render it "the milk of the word," by which we are to understand food proper for the soul, or a reasonable creature, whereby the mind, not the body, is nourished and strengthened. This milk of the word must be sincere, not adulterated by the mixtures of men, who often corrupt the word of God, 2 Cor. ii. 17. The manner how they are to desire this sincere milk of the word, is stated thus: "As new-born babes." He puts them in mind of their regeneration. A new life requires suitable food. They being newly born, must desire the milk of the word. Infants desire common milk, and their desires toward it are fervent and frequent, arising from an impatient sense of hunger, and accompanied with the best endeavours the infant is capable of; such must Christians' desires be after the word of God: and that for this end, that they may grow thereby, that we may improve in grace and the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour, 2 Pet. iii. 18.

The Living Stone.—Ver. 4. Christ is called "a living stone," (as elsewhere "living bread.") This metaphor showed his power, stability, and permanent sufficiency, in his person and mediation, to sustain the whole weight of the glory of God, and the salvation of his people, which was to be laid upon him: and the epithet "living," whilst it showed that the expression was figurative, pointed out the quickening efficacy of his grace on the souls of those who had been dead in sin; and intimated that he ever liveth to make intercession for his people, and to maintain their cause. This stone was "disallowed of men," both Jews and Gentiles, so long as they continued unregenerate; because men are naturally ignorant, self-wise, self-righteous, carnal, and at enmity with God; so that they cannot receive his humbling, holy, doctrines and salvation: but it was "chosen of God," to be the support, cement, and ornament of the whole spiritual building; and was most precious in itself, and perfectly fitted for that purpose. All, therefore, who were born again, and thus enlightened, humbled, made in a measure spiritual, and taught to seek reconciliation unto God, came to Christ, to build their hopes and souls on him whom men despised.

Group of Christian Privileges.—Ver. 9—10. Israel, as a typically chosen generation, was cast off from being the peculiar people of God: but Christians, as the spiritual seed of Abraham, and as born again in consequence of their election in Christ, were indeed "a holy generation," nay, "a royal priesthood." A small company of Israel, compared with the whole nation, officiated as priests, and they were not of the same tribe to which the kingdom was allotted: but in Christ the kingly and priestly offices were united, and through him believers became both kings and priests, being every way dignified and made honourable; called to exercise a spiritual dominion over those passions to which others are enslaved, and to obtain victories over Satan, the world and sin; and appointed heirs of the kingdom of heaven. They also constituted "a holy nation," incorporated under the government of Christ, subject to his holy laws, sanctified by his Spirit, conformed to his image, and safe under his protection: and they were "a peculiar people," purchased with the blood of Christ, redeemed from worse than Egyptian bondage, favoured with peculiar privileges, and formed to a peculiar character and conduct.

Civil Government.—Ver. 13—17. The words rendered "every ordinance of man," may signify every human constitution. God has appointed magistracy as his ordinance, for the peace and good order of society, but the peculiar form of it is left to human prudence, under the direction of providence. So that Christians are required to submit to that government, which is established in the countries where they reside, without attempting any alteration, except in a peaceable and legal manner, according to their rank in the community. The apostle wrote when Nero was the Roman emperor; but he was led to use the more general name of king, as his epistle was intended for the use of all

[5] The antitype of this, even baptism, now saveth us also. I do not mean the putting away "the filth of the flesh by the washing of water, but the answer of a good conscience towards God," the testimony of a good conscience that we really and sincerely believe what we profess. The apostle distinguishes the outward rite of baptism from its spiritual design, as Paul did that of circumcision (Rom. ii. 23, 28); and if the spiritual design of the former, as some contend, makes it improper to administer it to infants, the same reason would apply to the latter. —Boothroyd.

8 Finally, be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another; †love as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous:

12 For °the eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and ᵖhis ears are open unto their prayers: ᵍbut the face of the Lord is ‡against them that do evil.

13 And who is he that will harm you, if ye be followers of that which is good?

14 But and ᵗif ye suffer for righteousness' sake, happy are ye: and be not afraid of their terror, neither be troubled;

17 For it is better, ᵍif the will of God be so, that ye suffer for well-doing, than for evil-doing.

21 The like figure whereunto even ˢbaptism[5] doth also now save us, (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God,) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ:

22 Who is gone into heaven, and is on the right hand of God; angels, and authorities, and powers, being made subject unto him.

future ages. This savage tyrant, who was at length put to death as the enemy of mankind, but not till he had slain multitudes of Christians by his persecuting cruelty, and among the rest the apostles Peter and Paul, (as it is generally supposed,) was the "supreme," whom Christians must submit to and honour! And the governors of provinces deputed by him and the Roman senate, together with other subordinate magistrates, must also be obeyed. The intention of civil government was "to punish evil-doers," and to protect and honour those who did well; and, in general, the administration even at that time would be productive of much good; though in many things the end of government was doubtless counteracted, for which the rulers would be accountable to God. But in respect of Christians, it was his will, that by their good behaviour, in all godliness and honesty, as peaceable subjects, notwithstanding the oppressions which they suffered, they might put to silence the ignorant slanders of foolish and wicked men.—Scott.

CHAP. III. Duty of Wives.—Ver. 1—4. The apostle next gave directions concerning the duties of wives and husbands, as a matter of great importance to the credit and success of the gospel. In general, wives were commanded to be subject to their own husbands: and even they who were married to Gentiles, or other unbelievers, whether they had been converted since their marriage, or had sinfully brought themselves into so trying a situation, ought to obey this commandment in all things lawful. This must be attended to, in a conscientious manner, not only in order to lighten their own trial, and to "adorn the gospel," but with an especial aim at the conversion of their husbands; which was not so much to be expected from a disputatious attempt to teach them the gospel, as from the silent persuasive eloquence of a becoming deportment. Thus they might hope to win upon those, who did not obey the word, but treated it with contempt and neglect; as the constant, obliging, amiable conduct, and prudent discourses of their wives would tend to soften their prejudices, and conciliate their affections; and so induce them to pay more attention to the preached gospel. For it would have a considerable tendency to their conviction, habitually to witness the excellent effects of Christianity, in the chaste, modest, and faithful conduct of their wives, as united with respectful fear of disobliging or grieving them, and reverential regard to the authority and commands of God. In this endeavour to promote the gospel, they must not deem outward things, such as plaiting the hair, wearing golden rings and bracelets, or putting on elegant or becoming garments, to be "their adorning," in any degree: but they must value and seek for an inward beauty, residing in the heart as a hidden man, visible in its essence only unto God, and consisting of a renewal and sanctification of the whole soul into the Divine image, through the incorruptible seed of the word made effectual by the power of the Holy Spirit: for this alone would continue for ever, without decay, or being tarnished. This inward beauty and ornament of a sanctified heart would especially be manifested by "a meek and quiet spirit," which was in the sight of God very valuable.

The Spirits in Prison.—Ver. 19, 20. It need not be thought wonderful, that so many refused to believe in the risen and glorified Saviour, through the preaching of his apostles by the Holy Spirit; as the case had been the same of old. For Christ, as God, and with reference to his future incarnation, had gone, by his Spirit, chap. i. 11, inspiring his servant Noah to denounce the approaching deluge, and preach repentance to that incorrigible generation, who perished in their sins, and were in the prison of hell, (that is, the adults among them,) when the apostle wrote; being confined there till the judgment of the great day. For they had "sometime been disobedient" and unbelieving, chap. ii. 7, 8, even during the hundred and twenty years of God's long-suffering, after the deluge was threatened, before it was sent. At that time Noah was occupied in preparing the ark, showing his faith by his works, and calling on them to repent and seek mercy from God. But they manimously and obstinately rejected his message; and thus they were destroyed by the flood; whilst only eight persons had their lives preserved in the ark, being delivered from the waters, and carried above them: so that the flood, which drowned others, concurred in their deliverance.

Baptism.—Ver. 21, 22. It is not "washing away the filth of the flesh," or the mere outward ordinance of baptism, which can effect safety; but it is "the answer of a good conscience towards God;" when a man, by the regeneration of the Spirit, is able to profess repentance, faith, and purposes of a new life, uprightly, and as in the presence of God; and to answer such questions as were put to persons on those occasions. When Jews and Gentiles professed Christianity, they were thus received into the church, even as Gentiles had been into the Jewish church by circumcision: but the argument, concerning the baptism of infants born of Christian parents, is not at all affected by it. The apostle spake of baptism, as the initiatory ordinance of Christianity; but he took care to remind men, that the inward grace of baptism, even regeneration, from which all holy affections and actions spring, alone could introduce them into the true church, the ark of real security; and that no outward administration of the outward sign could effect this blessed translation into the kingdom of the Son of God.—Scott.

CHAP. IV. The Will of the Gentiles.—Ver. 3. When the ends for which men were sent into the world is duly considered by Christians, it will appear that the time past

FORASMUCH then as [a]Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, [b]arm yourselves likewise with the same mind: [c]for he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin;

2 That he [d]no longer should live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to [e]the will of God.

3 For the time past of our life may suffice us [f]to have wrought the will of the Gentiles, when we walked in lasciviousness, lusts, excess of wine, revellings, banquetings, and abominable idolatries:

4 Wherein they think it strange that ye run not[1] with them to the same excess of riot, [g]speaking evil of you;

5 Who [h]shall give account to him [i]that is ready to judge the quick and the dead.

6 For, for this cause was the gospel preached also [k]to them that are dead, [l]that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, [m]but live according to God in the Spirit.

7 But the end of all things is at hand: [n]be ye therefore sober, [o]and watch unto prayer.

8 And, above all things, have [p]fervent charity among yourselves: for charity[2] *shall cover the multitude of sins.

9 Use hospitality one to another without grudging.

10 As every man hath received the gift, even so [q]minister the same one to another, as [r]good stewards of the manifold grace of God.

11 If any man speak, let him speak [s]as the oracles of God;[3] if any man minister, let him do it as of [t]the ability which God giveth; [u]that God in all things may be glorified [v]through Jesus Christ: to whom be praise and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

12 Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you:

13 But rejoice, inasmuch as [w]ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that, [x]when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy.

14 If ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye; [y]for the Spirit of glory and of God resteth upon you: on their part he is evil spoken of, but on your part he is glorified.

15 But let none of you suffer as a murderer, or as a thief, or as an evil-doer, or as a busybody in other men's matters.

16 Yet if any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed; [z]but let him glorify God on this behalf.

17 For the time is come that [a]judgment must begin at the house of God: and if it first begin at us, what shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel of God?

18 And [b]if the righteous scarcely be saved, [c]where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?

19 Wherefore, let them that suffer according to the will of God commit[4] the keeping of their souls to him in well-doing, as unto [d]a faithful Creator.

CHAP. V.

The apostle exhorts the elders to feed the flock of God, willingly, cheerfully, disinterestedly, and humbly; and to be examples to it; expecting from the chief Shepherd, at his appearance, an unfading crown of glory, 1: he requires the younger to submit to the elder; and all of them to be clothed with humility, casting all their care on God, 5; and to be sober and vigilant; and stedfastly, by faith, to resist the devil, and bear tribulation, 8. He concludes by prayers, salutations, and benedictions, 10.

THE [a]elders which are among you I exhort, who am also an elder,[1] [c]and a witness of the sufferings of Christ, and also a partaker of the glory that shall be revealed:

2 Feed [f]the flock of God[2] *which is among you, [g]taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; [i]not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind;

3 Neither [l]as [t]being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock:

4 And when [o]the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive [q]a crown of glory that fadeth not away.

5 Likewise, ye younger, submit yourselves unto the elder: yea, [s]all of you be subject one to another, and be clothed with humility: for [u]God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble.

6 Humble yourselves therefore under [y]the mighty hand of God, [z]that he may exalt you in due time:

7 [b]Casting all your care upon him; [c]for he careth for you.

8 Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary [f]the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour:

9 Whom [k]resist stedfast in the faith, knowing that the same afflictions are accomplished in your brethren that are in the world.

10 But [n]the God of all grace, [o]who hath called us unto his eternal glory by Christ Jesus, after that ye have suffered a while, make you perfect, stablish, strengthen, settle you:

11 To [u]him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

of their lives might suffice to have "wrought the will of the Gentiles;" or to have wasted it in committing those sins, and pursuing those objects, to which the ignorant heathens were addicted. Some of those whom the apostle addressed had been Gentiles, and the rest had acted according to the manners of the nations, rather than as it became the peculiar people of God: for they had habitually allowed themselves in various lascivious imaginations, dalliances, or secret practices, or in more gross lewdness: or they had been guilty of drunkenness and excess, and had frequented those riotous, luxurious, and dissipated revellings and banquetings, where intemperance was practised; and many of them had joined in those idolatries which were most detestable in themselves, and by the shameful and enormous licentiousness connected with them.

THE FIERY TRIAL.—Ver. 12. The apostle here again exhorted his brethren to patience, fortitude, and cheerfulness, under their sufferings for the sake of Christ. He had before spoken of these, as intended to prove their faith, and purify their souls, even as the furnace tries and refines the gold. They ought not therefore to be surprised, or made desponding, or alarmed, by the fiery trial which God had appointed to try them, and which they must needs pass through; as if some strange thing had happened to them, which was not experienced by others of the Lord's people. On the contrary, they ought rather to rejoice at being conformed to Christ, by suffering from the same description of men, and for the same cause in which he suffered; for their trials should be considered as pledges of love, and introductory to the participation of his glory, when that should be revealed at his coming, and they admitted to partake of it with exceeding joy. If they were reproached, because they bare the name, professed the truth, and obeyed the commands of Christ, they were happy and favoured persons.

COMING JUDGMENTS.—Ver. 17—19. It was indeed to be expected that Christians would be thus called to suffer for Christ's sake; for the time predicted by him, when he would first begin his judgments, by sharply trying his professed disciples, or the family of God, was then arrived; and if such fiery trials must prove and purify the church, and purge out hypocrites from among them, before judgments were executed on the Jewish nation and other open enemies, what would be the end of those who did not obey the gospel? The persecutions, by which the church was tried were introductory to the destruction of Jerusalem, and the tremendous ruin of the Jews, and preparatory to the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men. If, then, the righteous were saved "with difficulty;" if, notwithstanding their interest in Christ, and their conscientious self-denying obedience, so many trials, dangers, conflicts, and sufferings were deemed needful for them; and if, according to their own feelings and apprehensions, they were often but just saved, and got to heaven at last through many narrow escapes, as a shipwrecked mariner scarcely gains the shore on a plank; where would the impenitent sinner, and the ungodly despiser or opposer of Christianity, appear at the day of judgment? What refuge from the wrath of God could he expect to find? Or how could he hope to escape the everlasting punishment with which he was threatened in the holy Scriptures? As, therefore, the trials of Christians were so trivial, compared either with the perdition of ungodly men, or the felicity prepared for the righteous, they ought, when suffering in the cause, and according to the will of God, to commit the keeping of their souls (as well as the protection of their lives, and all their other concerns,) to his almighty care, who, being their Creator, had a propriety in them as his rational creatures, and who regarded them as his redeemed servants, new-created unto holiness, and interested in all the blessings of his covenant, and in his faithfulness to perform it to them.—Scott.

CHAP. V. PETER AN ELDER.—Ver. 1. 1. They whose office it is to teach others ought carefully to study their own duty, as well as teach the people theirs. 2. How different the spirit and behaviour of Peter were from that of his pretended successors! He does not command and domineer, but exhorts. He does not claim sovereignty over all pastors and churches, nor style himself "prince of the apostles, vicar of Christ," or "head of the church," but values himself upon being an "elder." All the apostles were elders, though every elder was not an apostle. 3. It was the peculiar honour of Peter, and a few more, to be the witnesses of Christ's sufferings; but it is the privilege of all true Christians to be partakers of the glory that shall be revealed.

THE CHIEF SHEPHERD.—Ver. 4. Learn, 1. Jesus Christ "is the chief Shepherd" of the whole flock and heritage of God. He bought them and rules them; he defends and saves them for ever. He is also the chief Shepherd over all inferior shepherds; they derive their authority from him, act in his name, and are accountable to him at last. 2. This chief Shepherd will appear to judge all ministers and under-shepherds to call them to account, whether they have faithfully discharged their work both publicly and privately, according to the foregoing directions. 3. They that are found to have done their duty shall have what is infinitely better than temporal gain; they shall receive from the grand Shepherd a high degree of everlasting glory, "a crown of glory that fadeth not away."

THE DEVIL.—Ver. 8. 1. The apostle describes Satan by his characters and names; (1.) He is an "adversary, that adversary of yours;" not a common "adversary," but an enemy that impleads you, and litigates against you in your grand depending cause, and aims at your very souls. (2.) "The devil the grand accuser of all the brethren;" this title is derived from a word which signifies to strike through, or to stab; he would

THE SECOND EPISTLE GENERAL OF # PETER.

THIS epistle is thought to have been written about six years after the former; and notwithstanding the objections which have been made, both in early and later times, from strong internal evidence, it is clearly the genuine production of the apostle Peter. It appears not to have been so early known to the churches of the East, as it is not found in the first Syriac version. Peter considered when he wrote it that the time of his departure was at hand; and exhorting them to holy obedience, he forewarns them of certain false teachers that would arise, against whom he speaks with great severity, as he does against profane scoffers.

CHAP. I.

He exhorteth them to cultivate every Christian grace, 1, in order to their more certain and joyful entrance into heaven, 10. From a view of his own approaching departure, 12, and an assured expectation of Christ's second coming, he labours to imprint his exhortations indelibly on their minds, 16.

*SIMON Peter, a servant and an apostle of Jesus Christ, to them that have obtained like precious faith with us, through the righteousness [†]of God and our Saviour Jesus Christ:

2 [‡]Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through [§]the knowledge of God, and of Jesus our Lord,

3 According as [‖]his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us [¶]to glory and virtue:

4 Whereby [#]are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises; that by these []ye might be partakers of the divine nature, [††]having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust.

5 And besides this, [‡‡]giving all diligence, add[1] to your faith, virtue;[2] and to virtue, knowledge;

6 And to knowledge, [§§]temperance;[3] and to temperance, [‖‖]patience; and to patience, [¶¶]godliness;

7 And to godliness, [##]brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, []charity.

8 For if these things be in you, and abound, [†††]they make you that ye shall neither be [‡‡‡]barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.

strike malignity into our natures, and poison into our souls; if he could have struck these people with passion and murmuring in their sufferings, perhaps he might have drawn them to apostacy and ruin. By his business; "he walks about, seeking whom he may devour;" his whole design is to "devour" and destroy souls; to that end he is unwearied and restless in his malicious endeavours.

CONCLUSION OF THE EPISTLE.—Ver. 14. He exhorts them to fervent love and charity one toward another, and to express this by giving "the kiss of peace," according to the common custom of those times and countries, and so concludes with a benediction, which he confines to those only "that are in Christ Jesus," united to him by faith, and sound members of his mystical body. The blessing he pronounces upon these is "peace," by which he means all necessary good, all manner of prosperity; to this he adds his "amen," in token of his earnest desire and undoubted expectation, that the blessing of "peace" would be the portion of all the faithful.—Henry.

CHAP. I. THE PROMISES.—Ver. 4. Observe, 1. The good things which the "promises" make over, are "exceeding great;" pardon of sin is one of the blessings here intended; how great this is, all who know any thing of the power of God's anger will readily confess; and this is one of those promised favours, in bestowing whereof "the power of the Lord is great," Num. xiv. 17. To pardon sins that are numerous and heinous, (every one of which deserves God's wrath and curse, and that for ever,) is a wonderful thing, and so called, Ps. cxix. 18. 2. The promised blessings of the gospel are very "precious;" as the great promise of the Old Testament was, "the Seed of the woman," the Messiah, Heb. xi. 39; so the great promise of the New Testament is, the "Holy Ghost," Luke xxiv. 49; and how "precious" must the enlivening, enlightening, sanctifying Spirit be. —Henry.

GROUP OF CHRISTIAN GRACES.—Ver. 5—7. They ought furthermore diligently "to add to their virtue, knowledge;" that, by an increasing acquaintance with the whole truth and will of God, they might be enabled to regulate their zeal and courage, with judgment and discretion; knowing how to behave in all circumstances and to all men, like well-informed intelligent persons, who could not justly be charged with any thing rash, foolish, or contrary to the duty of their place, in the church or the community. To "knowledge," they must add "temperance," or an exact government of all the animal appetites, in subordination to the will of God, and the benefit of themselves and others: as well as great moderation in all worldly things, and indifference about them. To "temperance" they must unite "patience," or a cheerful submission to the will of God under afflictions, meekness amidst injuries and affronts, perseverance in well-doing notwithstanding severe trials, and a quiet waiting for the Lord, to interpose for their comfort and deliverance. To this, "godliness" must be added; as consisting of all those holy affections and dispositions, which constitute the spiritual worshipper and truly devoted servant of God, in all his ordinances and commandments: and to this, "brotherly kindness," or an unfeigned fervent love of Christians, as brethren in the Lord; and to all the rest they must join "charity," or benevolent and compassionate love to all men, according to the commandments of God, and in imitation of his kindness to the sinful children of men. These holy dispositions, and the effects of them upon their conduct, must be diligently and carefully added together, as different voices in harmony form a chorus.—Scott.

THE EARTHLY TABERNACLE.—Ver. 14. Observe, 1. The body is but the tabernacle of the soul. It is a mean and moveable structure, whose stakes can be easily removed, and its cords presently broken. 2. This tabernacle must be put off. We are not to continue long in this earthly house. As at night we put off our clothes, and lay them by, so at death we must put off our bodies, and they must be laid up in the grave till the morning of the resurrection. 3. The nearness of death makes the apostle diligent in the business of life. Our Lord Jesus had shown him, that the time of his departure was at hand, and therefore he bestirs himself with greater zeal and diligence, because the time is short; he must soon be removed from those to whom he wrote.—Henry.

THE DAY-STAR.—Ver. 19. To the word of prophecy, therefore, all who read the epistle would do well to give peculiar attention: for it was to be considered as a light shining in a dark place, not only in respect of the total ignorance of the Gentiles, and the comparative darkness of the Mosaic economy; but as the earth was at all times a dark place, except where the word of God had diffused light in it, by leading men to Christ, the light of the world. Christians ought therefore to attend to the prophecies of Scripture, for their direction and conviction, concerning the truth of the Christian religion: till the Holy Spirit should discover to their souls the glory and excellency of the gospel, and, by his sanctifying and comfortable influences, give them the dawning of heaven in their hearts; and, till the knowledge of Christ, and the experience of his power, truth, and love, had formed within them an assurance and anticipation of the light, holiness, and felicity of the saints, in the presence of their glorified Saviour; even as the morning-star preceded and ushered in the rising sun and the perfect day.

PROPHECY.—Ver. 20, 21. The lively imaginations of men often lead them to suppose events to be accomplishments of Scriptural prophecies, which in fact have no relation to them; and this way of misapplying them, as fancy, inclination, or passion dictates, has ven we heard, when we were with him in the holy mount.

19 We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place,[r] until the day dawn, and the day-star arise in your hearts:

20 Knowing this first, that no prophecy of the scripture is of any private interpretation.

21 For the prophecy came not [t]in old time by the will of man; but [u]holy men of God [v]spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.

CHAP. II.

He foretelleth of false teachers, their impiety and punishments, 1, from which the godly shall be delivered, as Lot out of Sodom, 7; and more fully describeth the manners of those profane and blasphemous seducers, 10.

BUT there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even [c]denying the Lord that bought them,[1] and bring upon themselves swift destruction.

2 And [h]many shall follow their * pernicious ways; by reason of whom the way of truth shall be [i]evil spoken of.

3 And through covetousness shall they with feigned words [o]make merchandise of you: whose judgment now of a long time lingereth not, and their damnation slumbereth not.

4 For if God [q]spared not the angels that sinned, [s]but cast them down to hell, and delivered them into chains of darkness,[2] [u]to be reserved unto judgment;

5 And [x]spared not the old world, but saved Noah, the eighth person, a preacher of righteousness, [a]bringing in the flood upon the world of the ungodly;

6 And [b]turning the cities of Sodom and Gomorrha into ashes, condemned them with an overthrow, making them an ensample unto those that after should live ungodly;

7 And [d]delivered just Lot, vexed with the filthy conversation of the wicked:

8 (For that righteous man dwelling among them, in seeing and hearing, vexed his righteous soul from day to day with their unlawful deeds;)

9 The Lord [h]knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations, [k]and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished;

10 But chiefly them that walk after the flesh[3] in the lust of uncleanness, and despise †government: presumptuous are they, self-willed, they are not afraid to speak evil of dignities:

11 Whereas angels, which are greater in power and might, bring not railing accusation ‡against them before the Lord.

12 But these, as natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed, speak evil of the things that they understand not; and shall utterly [m]perish in their own corruption;

13 And shall receive [x]the reward of unrighteousness, as they that count it pleasure to riot in the day-time: spots they are and blemishes, sporting themselves with their own deceivings[4] while they feast with you:

14 Having eyes full of [§]adultery, and [c]that cannot cease from sin; beguiling unstable souls: an heart they have exercised with covetous practices; cursed children:

15 Which have [g]forsaken the right way, and are gone astray, following the way of Balaam the son of Bosor, who loved [k]the wages of unrighteousness;

16 But was rebuked for his iniquity: [l]the dumb ass, speaking with man's voice, forbad [m]the madness of the prophet.

17 These [n]are wells without water, [o]clouds that are carried with a tempest; to whom the mist of [p]darkness is reserved for ever.

18 For when they speak great swelling words of vanity, they allure through the lusts of the flesh, through much wantonness, those [s]that were [l]clean escaped from them who live in error.

19 While they promise them liberty, [n]they themselves are the servants of corruption: for of whom a man is overcome, of the same is he brought in bondage.

20 For if after they have escaped the pollutions of the world [a]through the knowledge of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, they are again entangled therein, and overcome, [b]the latter end is worse with them than the beginning.

21 For it had been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than, after they have known it, to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto them.

22 But it is happened unto them according to the true proverb, [s]The dog is turned to his own vomit again; and the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire.[5]

CHAP. III.

The certainty of Christ's coming to judgment, 1, which we ought to prepare for, 11, by stability, 17, and growth in grace, 18.

THIS second epistle, beloved, I now write unto you; in both which [b]I stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance:

2 That ye may be mindful of the words which were spoken before by the holy prophets,[1] [f]and of the commandment of us the apostles of the Lord and Saviour:

always tended to render them suspected, or disregarded. Instead then of employing a lively imagination, to discover some agreement between our own private concerns, or those of our party, and the predictions of Scripture; and so, pretending to foretell future events from them; we should remember and be assured, that every prophecy has its precise and determinate meaning, which no human ingenuity can alter. We should therefore exercise our judgment, with proper helps, and in dependence on divine teaching, to discover, as far as we can, the real meaning of the predictions, and the accomplishment of them in the public concerns of Christ and his church, and in those of the world as connected with the church; and to rest satisfied with understanding such as have evidently been fulfilled; without too curiously prying into those, which appear to be hitherto unaccomplished. Thus the perversion of prophecy would be prevented, and the objections against the argument brought from it, in proof of the divine inspiration of the Scriptures, would be answered.—Scott.

CHAP. II. DAMNABLE HERESIES.—Ver. 1. There were false prophets in the Old Testament; and false Christs, false apostles, and seducing teachers, in the New. Concerning these, Observe, 1. Their business is to bring in destructive errors, "even damnable heresies;" as the business of teachers sent of God is to show the way of truth, even the true way to everlasting life. There are "damnable heresies" as well as damnable practices; and false teachers are industrious to spread pernicious errors. 2. "Damnable heresies" are commonly brought in privily, under the cloak and colour of truth. 3. They who introduce destructive heresies, "deny the Lord that bought them." They reject and refuse to hear and learn of the great Teacher sent from God, though he is the only Saviour and Redeemer of men, who paid a price sufficient to redeem as many worlds of sinners as there are sinners in the world.—Henry.

FALLEN ANGELS.—Ver. 4. When angels, who were created of a far superior order to men, sinned against God; he showed them no mercy and exercised no compassion towards them: but, on the first instance of their rebellion, he cast them, as guilty and polluted, from his holy habitation in heaven; and allotted them their residence and portion in hell, even in that place of torment, which his righteous vengeance had prepared for them, and their great ringleader in rebellion. Thus they were bound as criminals, and reserved to take their trial at the day of judgment; when sentence will be openly passed and finally executed upon them: in the mean time their incurable enmity and wickedness, and the omnipresent and omnipotent justice of God, hold them fast, as in chains of darkness, misery, and despair, from which there can be no possible escape. Their doom is therefore irreversible: though the Lord, for wise reasons, as it were, lengthens their chains, enlarges the bounds of their prison, and defers the extremity of their punishment; which respite and relaxation they employ in opposing to the uttermost his purposes of love to mankind, and in attempting their destruction. But this will all be overruled for the fuller display of God's glory, the accomplishment of his eternal counsels, and the more conspicuous exercise of his awful justice, in the everlasting misery of such implacable enemies.

RIGHTEOUS LOT.—Ver. 7. The Lord delivered, in a most gracious and wonderful manner, "righteous Lot" from the destruction of his neighbours; for though he had been very faulty in many respects, and was severely corrected; yet, being a true believer and a justified servant of God, he was taken care of, and brought out of Sodom before it was destroyed. He had indeed, from carnal motives, gone to reside in that wicked place, and had very pertinaciously adhered to the foolish choice which he had made, but he was extremely uneasy there, being continually vexed and harassed by the filthy conduct and discourse of the abandoned Sodomites, and their clamorous and furious opposition to his counsels and instructions. What he saw and heard of their unlawful and hateful crimes, caused his righteous mind daily vexation and inquietude; seeing he could not prevail in any degree to stop the inundation of their wickedness. But this disposition to hate, avoid, and be troubled for the sins of his neighbours, joined to his general conduct proved him to be a pious man.

BALAAM.—Ver. 15, 16. The persons, described by the apostle, had evidently forsaken the right way of holy obedience from evangelical principles, and were gone astray; not merely from an erroneous judgment, but from the sensuality, ambition, and avarice of their hearts: so that they followed the example of Balaam, the son of Beor, (or Bosor,) who so "loved the wages of unrighteousness," that he endeavoured, in disobedience to the injunction of JEHOVAH, to go unto Balak, and curse the people whom God had blessed. But he was rebuked for his iniquity, not by the immediate voice of God, nor by one of his prophets; but by the ass on which he rode, which, though naturally dumb, was yet miraculously enabled to speak; that by so despised a creature God might, in the most mortifying manner, forbid the prophet, who was very proud of his visions and revelations, to proceed in his infatuated course of rebellion.

APOSTACY.—Ver. 20—22. If professed Christians, having escaped the outward pollutions of the world, by the knowledge of Christ, as far as convictions and a notional faith could reach, ver. 1, 4, were again, by the artful seductions of false teachers, entangled in those polluting practices, as consistent with the service of Christ, and so overcome as habitually to indulge in their corrupt inclinations; their latter end, after they had learned thus to abuse the gospel, would be far worse than the beginning, when they sinned in ignorance; in the last days scoffers, [1]walking after their own lusts,

5 For this they willingly are ignorant of,[2] that [n]by the word of God the heavens were of old, and the earth *standing out of the water and in the water:

6 Whereby the world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished:

7 But the heavens and the earth which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire [q]against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men.

8 But, beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, [t]that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day.

9 The Lord [u]is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; [x]but is long-suffering to us-ward, [y]not willing that any should perish, [z]but that all should come to repentance.

10 But [a]the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night;[3] [c]in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall [e]melt with fervent heat, the earth also, and the works that are therein, shall be burnt up.

13 Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness.

14 Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, [r]be diligent, that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless:

15 And [s]account that the long-suffering of our Lord is salvation; even as our beloved brother Paul[4] also, according to the wisdom given unto him, hath written unto you;

16 As also in all his epistles, speaking in them of these things: in which are some things [5]hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest,[5] as they do also the other scriptures, [6]unto their own destruction.

17 Ye therefore, beloved, seeing ye know these things before, beware lest ye also, [h]being led away with the error of the wicked, fall [i]from your own stedfastness:

18 But [k]grow in grace, and in [l]the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. To him be glory both now and for ever. Amen.

THE FIRST EPISTLE GENERAL OF JOHN.

By the unanimous consent of antiquity, this epistle is ascribed and acknowledged to be John's, the author of the Gospel. It seems to have been written long after the Gospel. This epistle is directed to no particular church, but seems designed for the use of all Christians, to oppose the various errors which sprang up in the church, and which subverted the doctrine of Christ.

4 And these things write we unto you, that our joy may be full.

5 This then is the message which we have heard of him, and declare unto you, that God is light, and in him is no darkness at all.[4]

as they must have done violence to far clearer light and fuller conviction. It would therefore have been better for such wretched heretics, hypocrites, or apostates, if they had never known the way of righteousness, and the truths, promises, and precepts of Christianity; than, after all their instructions, convictions, and professions, to turn in avowed disobedience from the holy commandment, to repent of their sins, to believe in Christ, and to love and obey him: as this would leave them more deeply condemned and completely hardened.—Scott.

CHAP. III. Infidel Scoffers.—Ver. 5—7. The scorners, of whom the apostle wrote, (some of whom seem to have been even then endeavouring to corrupt the church,) were willingly ignorant of the Scriptural account of the creation, and of the dealings of God with men in former ages: for they perversely withdrew their attention from such subjects, because they tended to confute their self-conceited and profligate infidelity, and to confirm the doctrine of a future judgment. Otherwise, they would have known, from the books of Moses, that the heavens and the earth were originally created by the omnipotent word of God; who "spake and it was done, who commanded and it stood fast;" and that the earth, especially, was formed out of the chaos, which had been previously brought into existence for that purpose; the dry ground being, at the command of God, separated from the waters, which retired to the channels prepared for them. Thus the earth, with its productions and inhabitants, as distinguished from the seas, "stood up out of and above the water;" but it was surrounded by the water, which was needful to moisten, purify, and render it fruitful. Yet, when the wickedness of men had provoked the Lord to execute vengeance on them; this very arrangement, in itself so conducive to the welfare of mankind, became the means of their destruction: for all the parts of the globe being deeply covered with waters, by the omnipotence of God, the world that then was, perished; all the inhabitants of the dry land, and all the works of men, were entirely destroyed; nothing remained, "but Noah, and they that were with him in the ark;" the external form of the earth was no doubt extremely altered, and a new race of inhabitants were raised up to people it. At the same time, the Lord promised and covenanted never more to destroy the earth by an universal deluge: yet intimations had been given of a total dissolution, which was to terminate the present state of things; and it had, under the New Testament dispensation, been more expressly revealed that this was to be effected by fire. It might therefore be said, that the visible heavens, and the earth with all the lower creation, were condemned to be destroyed by fire; and, by the word of God, which could not be broken, were treasured up as fuel for the general conflagration.

Last Day.—Ver. 12. The heavens and all the host of them, (as far, at least, as connected with this earth and its inhabitants,) will pass away, and rush into confusion and destruction, with a tremendous noise, of which thunders, earthquakes, and all other convulsions of nature, are wholly inadequate to give the least conception. Then all the elements, of which the earth and its atmosphere, and all the luminaries connected with it, are composed, shall melt with intense heat; and not only one vast city, or one whole nation, but the earth, with all its cities, forests, mountains, yea, the contents of its bowels to the very centre; as well as all the works of men, (however admired or magnificent,) which cover the surface of it; shall constitute one vast conflagration, and be reduced to as confused a chaos, as that from which it was at first created. As, therefore, all those things, which were then the objects of their senses, and the coveted, admired, or envied possessions of men, would certainly be dissolved and perish, as to their present mode of existence; "what manner of persons ought they to be" in all holy conversation and godliness?

New Heavens.—Ver. 13. Though all other inheritances and distinctions must then be terminated: yet they, according to the sure word of God's promises, looked for and expected "new heavens and a new earth," another and far more glorious and blessed state of things, and an abiding habitation into which righteous persons alone could find admission, and in which all the inhabitants would be perfected in purity, obedience, and love of each other; so that no sin could enter, to defile or disquiet them to all eternity. In some Scriptures, "new heavens and a new earth," seem figuratively to describe the most prosperous and peaceful days of the church on earth; but here the state of the righteous after the day of judgment, and the dissolution of this present world, are evidently intended: but what is meant in various particulars, the fulfilment alone can fully explain—Scott.

CHAP. I. Jesus.—Ver. 1, 2. He should be well known; and he is represented here, 1. "As the Word of life." In the gospel these two are disjoined, and he is called first, "the Word," ver. 1, and afterward "Life," intimating withal that he is intellectual life. In that he is the Word, it is intimated that he is the Word of some person or other; and that is God, even the Father. "He is the Word of God," and so he is intimated to issue from the Father, as truly (though not in the same manner) as a word (or speech, which is a train of words) from a speaker. But he is not a mere vocal word, but a vital one; "the Word of life;" the living word; and thereupon, 2. "As eternal Life." His duration shows his excellency. He was from eternity, and as is, in scripture account, necessary, essential, uncreated life. [illegible]

the light, we have fellowship one with another, [c]and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin.

8 If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and [f]the truth is not in us.

9 If [g]we confess our sins, [h]he is faithful and just[4] to forgive us our sins, [k]and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.

10 If we say that we have not sinned, [m]we make him a liar, and [n]his word is not in us.

CHAP. II.

Comfort against sins of infirmity, 1. To know God is to keep his commandments, 3, and love our brethren, 9. All, whether children, young men, or fathers, are guarded against the love of the world, 12, and antichristian errors, 18.

MY little children, these things write I unto you, that ye sin not. [d]And if any man sin, [e]we have an advocate[1] with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous:

2 And [b]he is the propitiation for our sins; and not for ours only, but also [l]for the sins of the whole world.

3 And hereby we do know that [l]we know him, [m]if we keep his commandments.

4 He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, [p]is a liar, and the truth is not in him.

5 But [q]whoso keepeth his word, [r]in him verily is the love of God perfected: hereby know we that we are in him.

6 He that saith [u]he abideth in him, ought himself also so [x]to walk, even as he walked.

7 Brethren, I write no new commandment unto you, but an old commandment[2] which ye had from the beginning: the old commandment is the word which ye have heard from the beginning.

8 Again, [a]a new commandment I write unto you, which thing is true in him and in you; because [c]the darkness is past, [d]and the true light now shineth.

9 He that saith he is in the light, and hateth his brother, [h]is in darkness even until now.

10 He [i]that loveth his brother abideth in the light, and there is none *occasion of stumbling in him:

11 But [k]he that hateth his brother is in darkness, [l]and walketh in darkness, and knoweth not whither he goeth, [m]because that darkness hath blinded his eyes.

12 I write unto you, little children, because [p]your sins are forgiven you [q]for his name's sake.

13 I write unto you, fathers, because ye have known him that is from the beginning. I write unto you, young men, because ye have overcome the wicked one. I write unto you, little children,[3] because [s]ye have known the Father.

14 I have written unto you, fathers, because ye have known him that is from the beginning. I have written unto you, young men, because ye are strong, and [t]the word of God abideth in you, and ye have overcome the wicked one.

15 [c]Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him.

16 For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh,[4] and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, [l]is not of the Father, but is of the world.

17 And [m]the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: [n]but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever.

18 Little children, it is the last time: and as ye have heard that *antichrist shall come, even now are there many antichrists; whereby we know that it is the last time.

19 They [u]went out from us, but they were not of us; [x]for if they had been of us, they would no doubt have continued with us: but they went out, that [y]they might be made manifest that they were not all of us.

20 But [z]ye have an unction[5] from the Holy One, and ye know all things.

21 I have not written unto you [c]because ye know not the truth, but because ye know it, and that no lie is of the truth.

22 Who is a liar but [c]he that denieth that Jesus is the Christ? [f]He is antichrist, that denieth the Father and the Son.

23 Whosoever [g]denieth the Son, the same hath not the Father: [but he that acknowledgeth the Son, hath the Father also.]

24 Let that therefore abide in you, which ye have heard from the beginning. If that which ye have heard from the beginning shall remain in you, [k]ye also shall continue in the Son, and in the Father.

25 And this is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal life.

26 These things have I written unto you concerning them that seduce you.

27 But [n]the anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you;[6] [o]and ye need not that any man teach you: but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in [†]him.

28 And now, little children, abide in him; that, [s]when he shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming.

29 If ye know that he is righteous, [‡]ye know that every one that doeth righteousness is born of him.

to us. The eternal Life would assume mortality; would put on flesh and blood, (in the entire human nature,) and so dwell among us, and converse with us.—Henry.

CONFESSION AND PARDON.—Ver. 8—10. While the apostle strenuously insisted on the necessity of an habitual holy walk, as the effect and evidence of the knowledge of God in Christ Jesus, and of communion with him; he guarded, with equal care, against the opposite error of self-righteous pride. If any professed Christians, while they seemed to walk in the light, should be so elated with a conceit of their own attainments, as to say, "that they had no sin;" but were perfectly pure, and as holy in heart and life as the law of God required; they were certainly deceived in a most awful manner: nay, the truth was not in them, as a principle of life and illumination; or they never could have fallen into a mistake, which implied the most gross ignorance of God, of his spiritual law, and of their own hearts. On the other hand, such as confessed their sins, with unreserved, ingenuous, and sincere humiliation before God, (for that alone can be here intended;) owning their guilt and desert of wrath; not attempting to extenuate or deny their offences, but casting themselves wholly on the mercy of God for the pardon of them; would certainly find him faithful to his promises, and just to his covenant-engagements to Christ their surety, and to them through him; yea, his very justice, (as satisfied by the atonement of his Son,) would induce him to forgive all their sins, how numerous and aggravated soever they had been; and to cleanse them, not only from the guilt, but gradually, and at length perfectly, from all the pollution of their unrighteousness.—Scott.

CHAP. II. OUR ADVOCATE.—Ver. 2. "We have an Advocate." The original name is sometimes given to the Holy Ghost; and then it is rendered "the Comforter." He acts within us: he puts pleas and arguments into our hearts and mouths; and so is our Advocate, by teaching us to intercede for ourselves. But here is an Advocate without us, in heaven and with the Father. The proper office and business of an advocate is with the judge; with him he pleads the client's cause. The Judge with whom our Advocate pleads, is the Father; his Father and ours. He who was our Judge in the regal court, (the court of the violated law,) is our Father in the gospel-court, the court of heaven and of grace. His throne or tribunal is the mercy-seat. And he that is our Father, is also our Judge; the supreme Arbitrator of our state and circumstances, either for life or death, for time or eternity. "Ye are come—to God, the Judge of all," Heb. xii. 23. That believers may be encouraged to hope that their cause will go well, as their Judge is represented to them in the relation of a Father, so their Advocate is recommended to them upon these considerations: 1. By his person and personal names. "It is Jesus Christ the Son of the Father." One anointed by the Father for the whole office of mediation, the whole work of salvation; and consequently for that of the Intercessor or Advocate. 2. By his qualification for the office. "It is Jesus Christ the righteous;" the Righteous One in the court and sight of the Judge. This is not so necessary in another advocate. Another advocate (or an advocate in another court) may be an unjust person himself, and yet may have a just cause (and the cause of a just person in that case) to plead, and may accordingly carry his cause. But here the clients are guilty; their innocence and legal righteousness cannot be pleaded; their sin must be confessed or supposed. It is the Advocate's own righteousness that he must plead for the criminals. He has been righteous to the death, righteous for them; he has brought in everlasting righteousness. This the Judge will not deny. Upon this score he pleads, that the clients' sins may not be imputed to them. 3. By the plea he has to make; the ground and basis of his advocacy. "And he is the Propitiation for our sins." He is the expiatory Victim, the propitiatory Sacrifice, that has been offered to the Judge for all our offences against his majesty and law and government.—Henry.

EXHORTATION ADDRESSED TO DIFFERENT CLASSES AND AGES.—Ver. 12—14. The apostle had before addressed Christians in general, as "his little children," or his dear children; but here he spoke of such as were young in years, or newly converted; and distinguished them from those who were further advanced in the life of faith and grace. He particularly addressed his exhortations to those "new-born babes, who had tasted that the Lord is gracious:" because their sins were as certainly forgiven them, for the sake of Christ, and through faith in his name, as those of their more established and experienced brethren were; though their weakness of faith, and want of distinct and exact knowledge, might prevent them from possessing the abiding comfort of it: and the counsel, which he was about to give them, would preserve them from many snares and sorrows, enable them to obtain the assurance of their acceptance, and direct them in making a suitable return for so invaluable a benefit. He wrote also to the fathers; having the same counsel and admonitions to give to those Christians who were "old disciples," matured in knowledge and experience, and who ought to be the guides and examples to their juniors, as well as to "shine as lights in the world." These had long known him who was from the beginning; and their long acquaintance with Christ, and with the eternal Father in him; with all their discoveries of his glory, and experience of his love, truth, and power, should engage them to simple dependence, lively gratitude, fervent love, devoted obedience, and steady confidence in God, and zeal for his honour and that of the gospel. Moreover, he wrote to the same effect to the young men who had for some time professed the gospel, and had passed through the state of childhood,

CHAP. III.

He admires the love of God in making us his children, 1: shews that this hope, 3, and union to Christ, 6, and the regenerating influences of the Spirit, will promote holiness, 9. He marks the necessity, 11, the extent, 16, and benefit of brotherly love, 19.

BEHOLD [a]what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, [b]that we should be called the sons[1] of God! therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not.

2 Beloved, now are we the sons of God; and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; [b]for we shall see him as he is.

3 And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure.

4 Whosoever [m]committeth sin transgresseth also the law: for sin is the transgression of the law.

5 And ye know that he was manifested to take away our sins; [r]and in him is no sin.

6 Whosoever [s]abideth in him sinneth not: [t]whosoever sinneth[2] hath not seen him, neither known him.

7 Little children, let no man deceive you: he that doeth righteousness is righteous, even as he is righteous.

8 He [u]that committeth sin is of the devil; for [a]the devil sinneth from the beginning. For [b]this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil.

9 Whosoever is [c]born of God doth not commit sin;[3] for his seed remaineth in him: and he cannot sin, because he is born of God.

10 In this [f]the children of God are manifest, [g]and the children of the devil: whosoever doeth not righteousness is not of God, neither he that loveth not his brother.

11 For this is the *message that ye heard from the beginning, [m]that we should love one another.

12 Not as Cain, who was of that wicked one, and slew his brother. And wherefore slew he him? Because his own works were evil, and his brother's righteous.

13 Marvel not, my brethren, if the world hate you.

14 [t]We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren: he that loveth not his brother abideth in death.

15 Whosoever [z]hateth his brother is a murderer: [4] and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him.

16 Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us: and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren.

[3] St John means, that by the doctrine and writings of the apostles and evangelists, the truth or falsehood of any doctrine may and must be judged.—Burkitt.

[a] 16; i. 5. Ex. xxxiv. 6, 7. Ps. lxxxvi. 5, 15. Eph. ii. 4. Heb. xii. 29.

17 But whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?

18 My little children, let us not love in word, neither in tongue; but in deed and in truth.

19 And hereby we know that we are of the truth, [k]and shall [†]assure our hearts before him.

20 For if our heart condemn us, [m]God is greater than our heart, [n]and knoweth all things.

21 Beloved, if our heart condemn us not, then have we confidence toward God.

22 And whatsoever we ask, we receive[s] of him, because we keep his commandments, and [r]do those things that are pleasing in his sight.

23 And this is his commandment, That we should believe on the name of his Son Jesus Christ, [t]and love one another, as he gave us commandment.

24 And he that keepeth his commandments [x]dwelleth in him, and he in him: and hereby we know that he abideth in us, by the Spirit which he hath given us.

CHAP. IV.

He warneth them not to believe all teachers who boast of the Spirit, but to try them by the principles of the Christian faith, 1; and, by many reasons, exhorteth to brotherly love, 7.

BELOVED, believe not every spirit,[1] but [b]try the spirits whether they are of God; because many false prophets are gone out into the world.

2 Hereby know ye the Spirit of God: [d]Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is [e]come in the flesh is of God:

3 And [f]every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God: [g]and this is that spirit of antichrist, whereof ye have heard that it should come; and even now already is it in the world.[2]

4 Ye are of God, little children, and have overcome them; because [h]greater is he that is in you, than he that is in the world.

5 They are of the world; therefore speak they of the world, and the world heareth them.

6 [o]We are of God: [p]he that knoweth God heareth us; he that is not of God heareth not us. Hereby know we [r]the spirit of truth, [s]and the spirit of error.[3]

7 Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God.

8 He that loveth not, knoweth not God; for [a]God is love.

but were not arrived at that maturity in grace, to which the fathers had attained. These he addressed and exhorted, from the consideration that "they had overcome the wicked one."

Antichrist.—Ver. 18, 19. These antichrists did not rise from among such as had before been avowed unbelievers; but they were professed Christians, who separated from the church, and became leaders of heretical sects, contrary to the doctrine of the apostles, and derogatory to the honour of Christ. But, though they went out from the disciples, having been admitted to outward fellowship with them; yet they had never been of them, as regenerated persons, and living members of the body of Christ; for if this had been the case, they would "surely have continued with them;" as the Lord would not have given them over to a strong delusion, but would "have put his fear into their hearts, that they should not depart from him," according to the engagement of his everlasting covenant to all true believers. But, as they had not received the truth in love, they had been left to the pride and lusts of their hearts, and to the artifices of Satan, to be deceived into fatal heresies, and to separate from the churches of Christ: that it might evidently appear, that all they who professed the gospel were not true disciples. Thus the church was purified; and true Christians were approved, and rendered more watchful and humble; whilst the distinction between them and hypocrites was more strongly marked.—Scott.

CHAP. III. God's Amazing Love.—Ver. 1—3. The apostle having declared, that they who did righteousness were born of God, here broke out into a joyful and admiring view of the love of the eternal Father, in having bestowed on them the unspeakable honour and felicity of being called "his children." What manner of love was this! or by what words could it be described? Whether his majesty, purity, and justice, or their guilt, vileness and misery, were considered; whether the blessing conferred on them, or the method in which it was bestowed, were contemplated; the love of the Father in it must be adored, as passing knowledge and comprehension.

God's Children.—Ver. 2, 3. We know in general, that when he, even Christ, or God in human nature, should be manifested, his believing people would be made completely like him, both in the incorruptibility of their bodies, and the perfect holiness of their souls. For, in the beatific vision, the eyes of the children of God shall behold his glory in the person of Christ, and their souls shall know his fulness and excellence by immediate perception: then, beholding of "him as he is," will complete the renewal of the Divine image upon them, and for ever destroy all unholy affections; and thus they will be prepared for the consummate, unalloyed, and most felicitating enjoyment of God, in and through Jesus Christ, of which we can gain the most remote idea. But, wherever the regenerating Spirit of God had produced this genuine hope in a man's heart, it would certainly induce him to desire and follow after holiness, as the preparation for this final happiness and the anticipation of it.—Scott.

Sin.—"Whosoever committeth sin, transgresseth" also (or even) the law; or, whosoever committeth sin, even committeth enormity, or aberration from law, or from the law; "For sin is the transgression of the law," or is lawlessness, ver. 4. Sin is the destitution or privation of correspondence and agreement with the divine law; that law that is the transcript of the divine nature and purity, that contains his will for the government of the world, that is suitable to the rational nature, and enacted for the good of the world, that shows man the way of felicity and peace, and conducts him to the Author of his nature and of the law. The current commission of sin now, is the rejection of the divine law, and that is the rejection of the divine authority, and consequently of God himself.—Henry.

Love the Token of Life.—Ver. 13—15. Humble disinterested love of men, for the Lord's sake, is indeed a good evidence of regeneration: but it is manifest that the apostle spoke especially of the love of believers towards their brethren in Christ, as such. Naturally, they all were disposed to hate, deride, revile, and injure those who professed the truths of the gospel, bare the image of Christ, and were spiritual worshippers and servants of God through him: they had once been ready to deem them unsociable, precise, morose, and troublesome enthusiasts, or hypocrites, and to shun and dislike them as such. But, being born of God, and having thus passed from death unto life, they were made congenial with them in judgment and disposition; and thus they were brought to love, esteem, and honour them; to sympathize with them, and show them kindness; and to take pleasure in them, as the excellent of the earth.

Confidence.—Ver. 23, 24. If the hearts of Christians do not condemn them of any allowed or unrepented sin, or neglect of duty; then have they confidence towards God, through the Spirit of adoption, and by faith in their great High Priest; and thus coming to the throne of grace, they may ask what they will of their reconciled Father, and shall certainly receive it, (if good for them,) because their conduct evidences the reality of their repentance and faith; as they uprightly keep his commandments, and habitually do those things that are pleasing in his sight. He has especially commanded sinners, by the gospel, to believe in his Son Jesus Christ, and to come to him pleading his name and merits; that they may thus receive forgiveness of sins, and all the blessings of salvation; and that, for Christ's sake and after his example, they should love one another, in a forgiving, compassionate, liberal, and self-denying manner, even as Christ had given them

9 In this was manifested the love of God towards us, because that [c]God sent his only-begotten Son into the world, [c]that we might live through him.

10 Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, [h]and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins.

11 Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another.

12 No man hath [k]seen God at any time. If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, [m]and his love is perfected in us.

13 Hereby know we that we dwell in him, and he in us, because he hath given us of his Spirit.

14 And we have seen and do testify, that [p]the Father sent the Son to be the Saviour of the world.[4]

15 Whosoever shall [r]confess that Jesus is the Son of God, [s]God dwelleth in him, and he in God.

16 And we have known and believed the love that God hath to us. [u]God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him.

17 Herein is *our love made perfect,[5] that [y]we may have boldness in the day of judgment: because as he is, so are we in this world.

18 There [b]is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear: because fear hath torment. [d]He that feareth is not made perfect in love.

19 We [e]love him, because he first loved us.[6]

20 If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar: for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?

21 And this commandment have we from him, That he who loveth God love his brother also.

CHAP. V.

The new birth is evidenced by love to the brethren, 1, and victory over the world, 4. The Messiahship of Jesus is attested by three witnesses in heaven, and three on earth, 6; and, when believed, hath a further witness in ourselves, 10. The prayer of faith shall be heard, both for ourselves, 13, and others, 16.

WHOSOEVER [a]believeth that Jesus is the Christ [b]is born of God:[1] and every one that loveth him that begat, loveth him also that is begotten of him.

2 By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God, and keep his commandments.

3 For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments: and his commandments are not grievous.

4 For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith.

5 Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God?

6 This [h]is he that came by water and blood, even Jesus Christ; not by water only, but by water and blood: and it is the Spirit that beareth witness, because the Spirit is truth.

7 For there are three that [p]bear record in heaven, [q]the Father, [s]the Word, and [t]the Holy Ghost:[2] [u]and these three are one.

8 And there are three that bear witness in earth, [y]the Spirit,[3] and the water, and the blood: [z]and these three agree in one.

9 If we receive the witness of men, the witness of God is greater: for this is the witness of God which he hath testified of his Son.

10 He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself: he that believeth not God, hath made him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son.

11 And this is the record, that [f]God hath given to us eternal life; and [g]this life is in his Son.

12 He [h]that hath the Son hath life; [i]and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life.

13 These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God, that ye may know that ye have eternal life, and that ye may believe on the name of the Son of God.

14 And this is the confidence that we have *in him, that, if we ask any thing according to his will, he heareth us.

15 And if we know that he hear us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we desired of him.

16 If any man see his brother sin a sin which is not unto death,[4] [r]he shall ask, and he shall give him life for them that sin not unto death. [g]There is a sin unto death: I do not say that he shall pray for it.

17 All unrighteousness is sin: and there is a sin not unto death.

18 We know that [y]whosoever is born of God sinneth not: but he that is begotten of God keepeth himself, and that wicked one toucheth him not.

19 And we know that we are of God,[5] [c]and the whole world lieth in †wickedness.

20 And we know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an understanding, that we may know him that is true; and we are in him that is true, even in his Son Jesus Christ. This is the true God, and eternal life.

21 Little children, keep yourselves from idols. Amen.

commandment. He, therefore, who uprightly obeys these commandments, and others connected with them; is thus proved to "dwell in Christ," his ark, refuge, and rest, and in the Father through him. It was also manifest, that Christ dwelt in him, as the lord of his affections, and as exercising his power, and displaying his glory in and by him: and it was known, that this mystical union subsisted between Christ and their souls, by the Spirit which he had given them.—This could not relate to the miraculous operations of the Holy Spirit, which were no full proof of this gracious indwelling: but to his new-creating energy, producing holy love, and renewing the image of Christ on their souls, and then "witnessing with their spirits that they were the children of God."—Scott.

CHAP. IV. Test.—Ver. 1—3. The apostle exhorted his brethren, in determining who spake by the Spirit of God, and who did not, to observe, that "every spirit, which confessed Jesus Christ 'as having come' in the flesh, was of God." This must be understood of an intelligent confession of the doctrine delivered by the apostles, concerning the Lord Jesus, his person, and his offices. The reality of his human nature was no doubt peculiarly adverted to by the expression, "come in the flesh;" but, who could have doubted of his having been really a man, if it had been generally understood and believed that he was merely a man? And if the apostle had not known, that, as the Son of God, he could have come otherwise than "in the flesh;" he would scarcely have noticed his "coming in the flesh," as an essential part of this confession; for who would have said that John Baptist, or John the apostle, came "in the flesh," when they were employed in preaching the gospel, as they must have come in human nature, seeing they had no other nature? But the coming of Christ in human nature, when God "the Word became flesh, and tabernacled among men," was indeed essential to the apostle's doctrine concerning his redemption. So that they, who did not confess him as "come in the flesh;" or advanced any tenets contrary to his being the Christ, the Son of the living God, or any of those offices which, as God manifested in the flesh, he was anointed to perform; were not of God, whatever pretences they advanced to inspiration, or appearances they exhibited of miraculous powers.—Scott.

Love.—Ver. 8. "He that loveth not, knoweth not God." What attribute of the Divine Majesty so clearly shines in all the world as his communicative goodness, which is love? The wisdom, the greatness, the harmony, and usefulness, of the vast creation, that so fully demonstrate his being, do at the same time show and prove his love; and natural reason, inferring and collecting the nature and excellence of the most absolute, perfect being, must collect and find that he is most highly good: and "he that loveth not," (is not quickened by the knowledge he hath of God to the affection and practice of love,) "knoweth not God;" it is a convictive evidence that the sound and due knowledge of God dwells not in such a soul: his love must needs shine among his primary brightest perfections; "for God is love;" his nature and essence are love: his will and works are primarily love.—Henry.

CHAP. V. Victory.—Ver. 5. This new creature, as born of God, hath the ascendency in the heart of the youngest and feeblest true Christian; and therefore they all aspire after and attain unto this victory: for though the conflict of grace with corrupt nature, and the allurements and terrors of the world, is often very sharp, and the regenerate man may be baffled, cast down, and apparently slain in the battle, yet the divine life within him, being invigorated by the Holy Spirit, will again excite him to arise and renew the combat with redoubled fortitude and resolution. So that at length the victory will be his decidedly; and he will habitually profess the truth, and do the will of God, as far as he knows them, whatever loss, suffering, disgrace, or hardship may ensue, even if he should be exposed to death in its most terrifying form, by his adherence to his duty. In acquiring this honourable victory, faith is principally concerned: a realizing belief of the testimony of God concerning invisible and eternal things.

Water and Blood.—Ver. 6. Having mentioned Jesus, the Son of God, the apostle observed, that this was the anointed Saviour, who came by water and blood. As he entered on his ministry on earth when he was baptized by John, and closed it by shedding his blood on the cross; so, after his death, water and blood flowed from his pierced side, as emblematical of the removal of our guilt by his atoning sacrifice, and the purifying of our souls by his grace, after his example, and according to his commandments. For "he came" to save sinners, "not by water only;" not merely by teaching them the way of holiness, and enabling them to walk in it, "but by water and blood," by atoning for their guilt, and thus making way for their sanctification, and the acceptance of their persons, and works of faith and love.

Three Witnesses on Earth.—Ver. 8. There are "three that bare witness on earth," perpetuating, as it were, the testimony of the Father, the Word, and the Holy Spirit, whose special abode is in heaven, and whose testimony was immediately from thence: even "the Spirit," in the miraculous powers communicated to the disciples, by the laying on of the apostles' hands; the sanctifying efficacy of their doctrine; the holy conduct and consolations of Christians; and the prophecies delivered to the new-testament church, which would be fulfilled from age to age:—"the water," or the initiatory ordinance of baptism, by water, "into the name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit," as the perpetual emblem of the polluted sinner's sanctification by faith and grace

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF # JOHN.

FROM the epistle itself it appears that the female to whom it was written was a person of rank and wealth. She was distinguished for her liberality and kind attention to the ministers of the Word and the disciples of Jesus. The design of this letter was to guard her against false teachers and their heresies.

He exhorteth a certain honourable matron, with her children, to persevere in Christian love and belief, 1, lest they lose the reward of their former profession, 8; and to have nothing to do with those seducers that bring not the true doctrine, 10.

Anno Domini cir. 90.

THE elder unto the [b]elect lady and her children, [c]whom I love in the truth:[1] and not I only, but also all they that have known the truth.

2 For the truth's sake, [f]which dwelleth in us, and shall be with us for ever:

3 [g]Grace *be with you, mercy, and peace, from God the Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ, [h]the Son of the Father, [i]in truth and love.

4 I rejoiced greatly that I found[2] of thy children [i]walking in truth, as we have received a commandment from the Father.

5 And now I beseech thee, lady, not as though I wrote a new commandment unto thee, but that which we had from the beginning, that we love one another.

6 And [o]this is love, that we walk after his commandments. This is the commandment, That, as ye have heard from the beginning, ye should walk in it.

7 For many deceivers are entered into the world, [r]who confess not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh. This is a deceiver and an antichrist.

8 Look to yourselves, that we lose not those things which we have †wrought, but [u]that we receive a full reward.

9 Whosoever transgresseth, [x]and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, [z]hath not God: he that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, [b]he hath both the Father and the Son.

10 If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid God speed.[3]

11 For he that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds.

12 Having many things to write unto you, I would not write with paper and ink; but I trust to come unto you, and speak ‡face to face, that §our joy may be full.

THE THIRD EPISTLE OF # JOHN.

THIS epistle is directed to Gaius, who, according to Lardner, was an eminent Christian who lived in some city of Asia not far from Ephesus. The apostle speaks of shortly coming to him, which he could not have done had he lived at Corinth, or in some other distant place.

He commendeth Gaius for his piety, 1, and hospitality, 5, to true preachers, 7. He blames the very opposite conduct of Diotrephes, 9; but gives a good report of Demetrius, 12.

from the Lord Jesus:—"and the blood," or the Lord's supper, which was appointed as a memorial and attestation of the sacrifice of the death of Christ, till his second coming, and permanently testifies that pardon and salvation can only be obtained by faith in the atoning blood of him whose name is Emmanuel, who is "God manifest in the flesh," and who will surely come to be our judge.

DISPUTED TEXT.—Ver. 7—8. It is well known that many volumes have been written concerning part of the seventh verse and the beginning of the eighth, in order to prove or to disprove its authenticity. It is certainly wanting in many of the ancient versions and manuscripts; but whether the Trinitarians interpolated it, or the Arians and other Unitarians omitted it, is to this day a matter of controversy, and not likely to be determined. Upon such questions men will in general decide according to their preconceived opinions; yet it is very wrong to deviate from truth in support of system. It is, however, perhaps somewhat more likely that the Arians or Anti-Trinitarians should silently omit in their copies a testimony that was so decisive against them, or that it should be left out by the mistake of some ancient transcriber, than that the Trinitarians should directly forge and insert it. The Trinitarian, in fact, would be deprived only of one argument with which he might attempt the conviction of his opponent, if this text were wholly rejected as spurious; for his doctrine is abundantly supported by other scriptures; but if this testimony were admitted as the unerring word of God, all the ingenuity and diligence of their opponents would scarcely suffice to explain it away, or to avoid the inference that must naturally be drawn from it, except by rejecting the apostle's testimony.—Scott.

II. EPISTLE OF JOHN—LESSONS.—A consistent and fruitful profession of the gospel is the principal honour even of those few of the noble and exalted of the earth, who are thus distinguished; and that love is most cordial and permanent which Christians bear to one another in the truth, and for the sake of it; for this will dwell in their souls to eternity, and be with them as the source of most perfect felicity. All who know and love the gospel will love such as profess and adorn it, and will pray that "grace may be with them, even mercy and peace, from God the Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of the Father, in truth and love;" and it will greatly rejoice faithful and zealous ministers to see the honourable of the earth employ their influence and improve their talents to promote true religion; to observe them educating their "children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord," and to witness any of their descendants walking in the truth and obedience of the gospel, as ready to support that good cause while they live, and to bequeath a regard towards it to the succeeding generation. Some few families of this kind are found among us: may the Lord bless them more and more, and their children after them, and raise up many others to copy their example! For, alas! most of the superior orders in the community are rapidly diffusing irreligion, infidelity, and vice, in their extensive circles, and preparing to leave them as a fatal legacy to their posterity. We should employ every argument and persuasion to induce Christians to abound in love of their brethren, and to render obedience to all the Lord's commandments: for those "many deceivers, who confess not that Jesus Christ," the Son of God, "is come in the flesh," "to redeem us to God with his blood," will have great success among those professors of Christianity who are not rooted and grounded in love, and taught to delight in God's commandments. As such deceivers and antichrists multiply on every side, it behoves us to look to ourselves and to each other; especially ministers to their people, and parents to their children; that we may not lose the things which we have wrought, but receive a full reward. Let us then equally disregard those who transgress the commandments, and those who abide not in the doctrine of Christ; that by maintaining and obeying the truth, we may have both the Father and the Son, for our "shield and exceeding great reward." Let us protest against such teachers as do not bring with them the doctrine of Christ: not giving them any entertainment, and not seeming to "wish them God speed;" lest any should by our means be induced to hearken to their damnable heresies, and so we should be found partakers of their evil deeds, which are often a thousand times more mischievous to mankind than those of profligates or even assassins; as they murder far more souls than the others can do bodies of men.—Scott.

GAIUS.—Ver. 1—4. It hath been generally supposed, that the Gaius, to whom St. John wrote, was the same person, of whom frequent mention is made in the writings and history of Paul; and his character may seem to favour the opinion: but it is probable that John wrote his epistle many years after St. Paul's death. Gaius was a very common name; and the person here addressed appears to have been converted by John's ministry; so that, no certainty can be attached to the opinion: nor is this of any consequence. After an address, couched in that affectionate and fervent language, for which the apostle was remarkable, he added his earnest wish, "that, concerning all things," (for that seems to be the proper rendering,) "Gaius might prosper, and that he might be in health, even as his soul prospered." Gaius was probably of a weak constitution, and had perhaps sustained heavy losses from the rapacity of persecutors; whilst at the same time "his soul prospered" exceedingly, as the apostle well knew: he therefore earnestly desired the confirmation of his health, that his valuable life might be prolonged; and that all his well-formed designs for usefulness might be prospered, and his ability for

THE EPISTLE GENERAL OF # JUDE.

THIS epistle was written near the same time and on the same subject as the second of Peter; and in many parts the same words and sentiments occur which are found in 2 Pet. ii. From this some suppose that both were derived from some Jewish writing, and that little authority is due to them; while others more justly think that Jude had seen the epistle of Peter, and, as his intention was to expose the same errors, probably prevailing in some different part of the Christian church, he borrowed what was adapted to his design.

He exhorts them to contend for the faith, 3; and describes certain false teachers, 10.

JUDE, the servant of Jesus Christ, and brother of James, to them [c]that are sanctified by God the Father, and [d]preserved in Jesus Christ, and called:

2 Mercy unto you, and peace, and love, be multiplied.

3 Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the [b]common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you, [1]that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints.[1]

4 For there are certain men crept in unawares, who were before of old ordained to this condemnation, ungodly men, [p]turning the grace of our God into lasciviousness,[2] and [q]denying the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ.

5 I will therefore put you in remembrance, though ye once knew this, how that the Lord, having saved the people out of the land of Egypt, afterward destroyed them that believed not.

6 And the angels which kept not their [*]first estate, but left their own habitation,[3] [y]he hath reserved in everlasting chains, under darkness, [z]unto the judgment of the great day.

7 Even as Sodom and Gomorrha, and the cities about them, in like manner, giving themselves over to fornication, and going after [†]strange flesh, are set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of [e]eternal fire.

8 Likewise also [d]these filthy dreamers defile the flesh, despise dominion, and speak evil of dignities.

9 Yet Michael the archangel, when contending with the devil,[4] he disputed about the body of Moses, [1]durst not bring against him a railing accusation, but said, [m]The Lord rebuke thee.

10 But these speak evil of those things which they know not: but what they know naturally, as brute beasts, [o]in those things they corrupt themselves.

11 Woe unto them! [q]for they have gone in the way of Cain, [r]and ran greedily after the error of Balaam for reward, and [s]perished in the gainsaying of Core.

12 These are spots in your feasts of charity, when they feast with you, feeding conducting them continued and increased. For the apostle had been greatly rejoiced when certain brethren, (who seem to have been preachers of the gospel,) had come from the residence of Gaius, "and had testified of the truth that was in him;" and of the consistency of his disposition, discourse, and conduct, with the truths which he had received and professed.

DIOTREPHES.—Ver. 9—12. Some expositors think, that the apostle here only meant, that he should have written to the church, had not the report which he had heard concerning Diotrephes, determined him rather to address his letter to Gaius: but it does not appear that the words are capable of that construction. He seems to have written to the church, to induce them to help on their journey the persons before mentioned: but Diotrephes, (who probably was a pastor of the church, whose circumstances or abilities, concurring with his ambition of pre-eminence, had acquired him an undue influence over his brethren,) would not own his authority, or pay any regard to his counsel. Wherefore the apostle observed, that if he came thither, as he intended to do shortly, he would publicly censure his conduct; or even enforce his decision by inflicting some miraculous punishment upon him: as he was not afraid or ashamed to vent malicious or wicked invectives and slanders against him in the most indecent manner. Nay, he did not think this a sufficient expression of his contempt and enmity; but he refused to entertain, or countenance, those evangelists, whom St. John recommended; and even forbade others to do it; and when they regarded the apostle's authority more than his prohibition, he proceeded to excommunicate them for so doing.—It is indeed most wonderful, that a professed minister of Christ should thus pertinaciously oppose the aged apostle; and should acquire such authority over the affairs of any church, as to be supported in such a contest; yet this was most evidently the case.—Scott.

JUDE.—EARNEST MAINTENANCE OF A PURE FAITH.—Ver. 3, 4. When the apostle applied himself, with all assiduity and care, to write to his fellow-Christians, concerning that salvation which was common to him and them, and every man who would accept of it; it appeared to him, upon mature consideration, most needful to address them upon the duty of "contending earnestly for the faith," or doctrine, "once delivered to the saints," by the apostles and evangelists, who first preached the gospel after the day of Pentecost. They could not but know the great fundamentals of that doctrine, respecting the person and salvation of the Lord Jesus, and his mediatorial authority over his redeemed subjects; and, as these were violently assaulted at that time, they ought to contend earnestly for them; patiently and constantly professing the faith, and adhering to the commands, of Christ, in the midst of hardships, opposition, and persecution, and diligently striving to disseminate the knowledge of uncorrupted Christianity in the world; refusing all countenance to those who opposed it; decidedly using all their influence to put others upon their guard, and to confirm them in the faith and practice of the gospel; and to show them the falsehood and pernicious tendency of the heresies, which were propagated instead of them. Thus their example, profession, conversation, prayers, and improvement of talents, might be instrumental to impede the progress of fatal delusions, to establish the faith of the weak and wavering, and even to recover some of the fallen: and an earnest contending for the faith, with such weapons as these, would consist with meekness and benevolence; and differ widely from that controversy, which was conducted with acrimony, slander, invective, and reciprocal contempt.

MICHAEL AND SATAN.—Ver. 9, 10. It is most probable, that the apostle took this account concerning Michael from an ancient tradition which was well known among the Jews; and by thus adducing it, he hath given sufficient attestation of its truth. In some of the passages here referred to, Michael has been supposed to be the Son of God himself as the great ruler over all angels, and worshipped by them all. But we do not seem authorized to interpret this text of him, as spoken of in the tradition by the name of Michael: but rather of some created angel, invested with great authority over his fellows, perhaps as Messiah's peculiar vicegerent. This exalted archangel, however, had a contest with the devil about the body of Moses. It may be supposed that he wanted to make the place of his burial known to the Israelites, in order to tempt them to worship him, as the papists do the bodies of martyrs real or supposed; but Michael would not suffer him to do it: and probably the devil expressed his rage in desperate blasphemy. Yet Michael durst not bring against him a railing accusation; he did not presume to denounce on him the judgment of blasphemy, or to retort his revilings; but merely said to him, "The LORD rebuke thee." (Zech. iii. 2.) Though the hateful character and atrocious conduct of the devil must have excited the holy abhorrence and indignation of the archangel, he yet dared not to utter any reviling expression: not from fear of the devil; but because, even in those circumstances, it would not have been consistent with the perfection of his character. But these heretics, pretending superior eminence, as the favourites of heaven, dared to speak evil of dignities, whom God had commanded them to honour and obey.

FALSE PROFESSORS OF CHRISTIANITY.—Ver. 11—13. These wicked men had turned aside from the pure doctrine of Christ, become haters of those who adhered to it, and were about to cast off all their profession of Christianity. They had also run with eagerness and greediness in the same way which Balaam had taken, in order to obtain the reward of unrighteousness: like him they had gone contrary to the commandment of the themselves without fear: clouds they are without water, carried about of winds; trees whose fruit withereth, without fruit, twice dead,[3] plucked up by the roots;

13 Raging waves of the sea, foaming out their own shame; wandering stars, [f]to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness for ever.

14 And Enoch also, the seventh from Adam, prophesied of these,[4] saying, [h]Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints,

15 To [i]execute judgment upon all, and [k]to convince all that are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed, [l]and of all their hard speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against him.

16 These are murmurers, complainers, walking after their own lusts; and their mouth speaketh great swelling words, having men's persons in admiration because of advantage.

17 But, beloved, remember ye the words which were spoken before of the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ;

18 How that they told you there should be mockers in the last time, [o]who should walk after their own ungodly lusts.

19 These be they who separate themselves, sensual, [x]having not the Spirit.

20 But ye, beloved, [y]building up yourselves on your most holy faith, praying in the Holy Ghost, 21 [b]Keep yourselves in the love of God, [d]looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life.

22 And of some have compassion, making a difference:[5]

23 And others save with fear, pulling them out of the fire; hating even the garment spotted by the flesh.[6]

24 Now unto him that is [l]able to keep you from falling, and to present you [n]faultless before [o]the presence of his glory with exceeding joy,

25 To [q]the only wise God our Saviour, be [s]glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever. Amen.

THE REVELATION OF JOHN THE DIVINE.

ACCORDING to Dr Mill, this work, in a few years after it was written, was numbered among the apostolic writings, and received as the genuine production of the evangelist John, by the churches of Asia, Syria, and Samaria, and the more distant ones of Africa, Egypt, Rome, and other churches of Europe. It is worthy of notice, in respect of the Revelation, that the views given in it of God and heavenly things, of the kingdoms of providence and grace, of the Redeemer's glory, the happiness and character of His people, with the wickedness and ruin of His enemies, are set forth in so striking and peculiar a manner, that even they who do not at all understand the prophetical meaning, are uniformly interested and edified by reading it, in proportion to the degree of their humility, faith, and piety.

It was also the custom of that age to read all the apostolical writings in the congregations of the faithful. 4 JOHN [m]to the seven churches which are in Asia: Grace be unto you, and peace, from him which is, and which was, and which is to come; and [p]from the seven Spirits[2] which are before his throne;

5 And from Jesus Christ, [q]who is the faithful Witness, and the first begotten of the dead, and the Prince of the kings of the earth. Unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood,

6 And hath made us kings and priests[3] unto God and his Father; to him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

7 Behold, he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him: and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him. Even so, Amen.

Lord, from love to filthy lucre: they had sought the ruin of the professing people of God; and they had seduced many of them into licentiousness, and thus exposed them to divine vengeance. Moreover, as Korah and his company opposed the authority of Moses and Aaron, and excited the people to rebel against them; so these wicked men had rejected the authority of Christ's apostles, and contradicted their doctrine: yea, they had induced many others to oppose them; and they were about to perish in their gainsaying, or rebellion, as Korah and his associates did. These were spots in their religious feasts, in which they met together as Christian brethren: for, feasting with Christians and indulging their appetites without fear, they would, by that and other scandalous practices, be a disgrace to the whole company. They were indeed "clouds without water," from whom no good could be expected: whilst their own lusts and Satan's temptations, drove them from one folly and wickedness to another, as the clouds are driven about by the wind. They might also be compared to trees, that seemed to take root and give hopes of fruit: but their buddings were withered, and they remained wholly unfruitful: so that they were "twice dead;" as the transient hope that had been given of their receiving life and taking root, only made way for their being reduced to a more desperate state, from which they could not be expected to recover: for they were as barren trees torn up by the roots, that they might be cast into the fire. They might also be compared to "raging waves of the sea," in the turbulency, clamour, and violence of their conduct; whilst, by boasting, reviling, and filthy language, they foamed out their own shame; and proved to all, who judged by the word of God, what scandalous persons they were. They were like "wandering stars," whose irregular courses could not easily be described or understood; whilst their appearance, though luminous, foreboded mischief to mankind; and the blackness of darkness, despair, and misery, were reserved for their eternal portion; along with the devil and his angels, with whom they had united in opposing the authority and honour of Christ.

ENOCH'S PROPHECY.—Ver. 14—16. In a prophecy, which had been delivered by Enoch to the antediluvians, concerning the coming of the Lord to judgment, men of this character had been predicted and condemned. It had not pleased God, that this ancient prophecy should be committed to writing by Moses, or by any other inspired person: but it had been preserved by tradition; and it not only accorded to the general doctrine of revelation, but was authenticated as a part of it, when thus quoted by the apostle of Christ. Though Enoch lived so soon after the creation, as to be the seventh in descent from Adam: yet he foresaw and predicted the second coming of the Lord, even of the promised Messiah, to judge the world: of which the approaching deluge was an emblem. He, therefore, called on the men of that abandoned generation, to behold and take notice, that the Lord would come, and was even then coming, with ten thousands of his holy ones, his holy angels, in the most conspicuous manner, to execute judgment upon all wicked men: and to arraign, convict, and condemn all that were ungodly among them, both in respect of their profane, rebellious, and wicked works, which they had most impiously perpetrated, in contempt and defiance of him; and of all the hard speeches, the virulent, presumptuous, scornful, blasphemous, and malicious words, which they had dared to utter, from the proud and carnal enmity of their hearts against him. This conviction and condemnation, the false teachers of whom Jude wrote could not escape; seeing their works and words were exactly of the same kind.—Scott.

CHAP. I. THE APOCALYPSE.—Ver. 1, 2. The Lord Jesus, in his mediatorial character, is the great prophet of the church, the incarnate Word of God, by whom he reveals himself to men. In this sense some things were given to him, "as his revelation," to be through him communicated to his servants, and others were not. An infinity of the divine decrees remain impenetrably concealed in the mind of God, till the event discovers them; but he hath seen good previously to make known some of his purposes respecting future ages; in order to confirm the faith, encourage the hope, and enlarge the views of his people; and that the accomplishment of them in after times might demonstrate the truth of the Scriptures to every diligent inquirer.—This book was therefore called "The Revelation of Jesus Christ;" because its principal subject is, "A previous discovery of the purposes of God, respecting the affairs of the church, and of the nations as connected with it, from the time when it was given, even to the end of the world." This Revelation was given to Jesus Christ, that he might show to his servants those events, which would immediately begin to take place; and which would all shortly be accomplished: as the transient term of some thousands of years bears no proportion to eternity, in which the whole will at length be swallowed up.—Scott.

DUTY TO READ.—Ver. 3. Observe, 1. It is a blessed privilege to enjoy the oracles of God. This was one of the principal advantages the Jews had above the Gentiles. 2. It is a blessed thing to study the Scriptures; they are well employed who search the Scriptures. 3. It is a privilege not only to read the Scriptures ourselves, but to hear them read by others, who are qualified to give us the sense of what they read, and to lead us into an understanding of them. 4. It is not sufficient to our blessedness, that we read and hear the Scriptures, but we must keep the things that are written; we must keep them in our memories, in our minds, in our affections, and in practice, and we shall be blessed in the deed. 5. The nearer we come to the accomplishment of the Scriptures, the greater regard we shall give to them.—Henry.

9 I John, who also am your brother, and companion in tribulation, and in [k]the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ, was in the isle that is called Patmos,[4] [l]for the word of God, and for the testimony of Jesus Christ.

10 I was [m]in the Spirit on the Lord's day,[5] and heard behind me a great voice, [o]as of a trumpet, 11 Saying, I am Alpha and Omega, the first and the last: and, What thou seest, write in a book, and send it unto [r]the seven churches which are in Asia; unto [s]Ephesus, and unto Smyrna, and unto Pergamos, and unto Thyatira, and unto Sardis, and unto Philadelphia, and unto [t]Laodicea.

12 And I turned to see the voice that spake with me. And, being turned, I saw seven golden candlesticks;

13 And in the midst of the seven candlesticks one [y]like unto the Son of man, clothed with a garment down to the foot, and girt about the paps with a golden girdle.[6]

14 His head and his hairs were white like wool, as white as snow; and his eyes were as a flame of fire;

15 And his feet like unto fine brass, as if they burned in a furnace; and his voice as the sound of many waters.

16 And [f]he had in his right hand seven stars; [g]and out of his mouth went a sharp two-edged sword; [h]and his countenance was as the sun shineth in his strength.

17 And when I saw him, [i]I fell at his feet as dead. And he laid his right hand upon me, saying unto me, Fear not; [m]I am the first and the last:

18 I am he that liveth, and [o]was dead; and, behold, [p]I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have [q]the keys of hell and of death.

19 Write the things which thou hast seen, [s]and the things which are, [t]and the things which shall be hereafter;

20 The mystery of the seven stars which thou sawest in my right hand, and the seven golden candlesticks. The seven stars are the angels[7] of the seven churches; and the seven candlesticks which thou sawest are the seven churches.

CHAP. II.

Epistles dictated by Christ, and written by John to the pastors of the Asian churches: of that in Ephesus, 1, in Smyrna, 8, in Pergamos, 12, in Thyatira, 18; commending, reproving, warning, and encouraging them, as their several states required.

UNTO the angel of the church of Ephesus[1] write; [f]These things saith he that holdeth the seven stars in his right hand, who walketh in the midst of the seven golden candlesticks;

2 I [e]know thy works, and thy labour, and thy patience, and how thou canst not bear them which are evil: and thou hast tried them which say they are apostles, and are not, and hast found them liars:

3 And hast borne, and hast patience, and for my name's sake hast laboured, and hast not fainted.

4 Nevertheless [m]I have somewhat against thee, [n]because thou hast left thy first love.

5 Remember therefore from whence [p]thou art fallen, [q]and repent, [r]and do the first works; or [s]else I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy candlestick out of his place, except thou repent.

6 But this thou hast, that thou hatest the deeds of the Nicolaitanes,[2] which I also hate.

7 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; [y]To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of [s]the paradise of God.

8 And unto [b]the angel of the church in Smyrna[3] write; These things saith [c]the first and the last, which was dead, and is alive;

9 I know thy works, [e]and tribulation, [f]and poverty, (but [g]thou art rich,) and I know [h]the blasphemy of them which say they are Jews, and are not, but are [k]the synagogue of Satan.

10 Fear none of those things which thou [l]shalt suffer: behold, [m]the devil shall cast some of you into prison, that ye may be tried; and [n]ye shall have tribulation ten days: [p]be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life.

11 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death.

12 And [t]to the angel of the church in Pergamos[4] write; These things saith he [u]which hath the sharp sword with two edges;

13 I know thy works, and where thou dwellest, even where [y]Satan's seat is: and [z]thou holdest fast my name, and hast not [b]denied my faith, even in those days wherein Antipas [c]was my faithful martyr, who was slain among you, where Satan dwelleth.

14 But I have a few things against thee, because thou hast there them that hold the doctrine of Balaam,[5] who taught Balak to cast a stumblingblock before the children of Israel,

The Triune Jehovah.—Ver. 4—6. "From him, who is, and who was, and who is to come;" that is, from the self-existent, eternal, and unchangeable Jehovah. The original is peculiar, perhaps unexampled, and almost, if not absolutely, incapable of an exact translation; the preposition governing the genitive case of the article, and yet all the subsequent words being in the nominative. It is supposed to refer to the name of God, revealed to Moses, Exod. iii. 14, and with a similar disregard to the ordinary rules of grammar. This is here especially meant of the person of the Father. As the one true and living God communicates blessings to sinful man, through the mediation of the incarnate Son, and by the agency of the eternal Spirit: so it is almost unavoidable, under such an economy, to speak of the Father in the absolute style of deity, and of the Son and the Spirit with relation to their assumed characters and offices; though in language evidently implying a participation in all divine perfections, and co-equality with the Father, in their original and essential nature and dignity. "Grace and peace" were moreover sought for the Christians addressed, "from the seven Spirits which are before the throne." This is generally, and doubtless justly, interpreted of "the divine Spirit," with respect to the abundance, sufficiency, and variety of his gifts, graces, and operations; and in relation to the seven churches, with each of which, and all others, the one and self-same Spirit dwelt, as the fountain of life, grace, and peace; being omnipresent and omnipotent, and one with the Father and the Son, "God over all, blessed for evermore."

Vision of Christ.—Ver. 12—20. When the apostle had distinctly heard these words, he turned to see from whom the voice proceeded; and he then had a vision of seven golden candlesticks, in allusion to the golden candlestick with seven branches, which was made for the tabernacle, and in the midst of them, as presiding over and taking care of them, he saw one like unto the Son of man. The apostle had been well acquainted with Jesus, when he was on earth a man of sorrows: but, though he perceived him in human form, and with some resemblance of his former appearance: yet he now saw him in such resplendent glory, that he seemed another person: "He was clothed," after the manner of the priests, "with a garment down to his foot;" perhaps representing his mediatorial righteousness and royal priesthood: this vesture was girt around his breast with a golden girdle; which may denote the preciousness of his love, and the cordiality with which he maintains the cause of his people.—Scott.

Church in Ephesus.—Ver. 1—7. Ephesus was the capital of the province called Asia, and the epistle was directed to write the first epistle to the church in that city, by [illegible] "him that held the seven stars in his right hand, and walked amidst the seven golden candlesticks." This intimated the absolute authority of Christ over his ministers, with their entire dependence on him; and his constant, though invisible, presence with his churches, in which he had fixed the light of his word and ordinances; his attention to their whole conduct; his readiness to help and bless them, whilst they made a proper use of their light; and his power and purpose to remove it, if provoked by their abuse or neglect of it. Our Lord reminded the presiding minister at Ephesus, and by him all the church, that he knew, or observed and accepted, their works of faith and love. Nevertheless, he had somewhat to allege against them; because the fervency of their love to him and their zeal for his glory, had sensibly declined, since they first embraced Christianity; and they had become more negligent and formal, than they used to be. This abatement of holy affection naturally tended to still more apparent evil: the Lord therefore called on them to recollect how lively, zealous, fervent, united, and active they had been; and to compare their present fallen condition with it; that thus they might be excited to repent, and do their first works; else he would come, by his providence, in a short time and an unexpected manner, and remove their candlestick out of its place; or deprive them of the light of the gospel, and the advantages of its ordinances: nor could this judgment be averted without repentance, and works meet for repentance. This sentence was after a time most awfully executed: and at this day, Ephesus, which was so renowned a city, is an inconsiderable village, in which there are no persons that bear the Christian name.

Church in Smyrna.—Ver. 8, 9. Smyrna was a large city to the north of Ephesus. The epistle sent to the angel of the church established there, was the message of him, who is "the first and the last." These words were spoken by Jehovah of himself, when declaring his own eternal deity, and asserting "that beside him there was no God, yea, he knew not any," Is. xliv. 6—8; so that the repeated use of them by the Lord Jesus must be allowed to be a full proof, that he is the self-existent and eternal God. Though Smyrna was a rich and populous city; either the poorest of the inhabitants alone had been converted, or the Christians there had been impoverished by persecution. They were indeed poor in the world, as well as poor in spirit; yet Christ declared, "that they were rich" in faith, and by an interest in his unsearchable riches, and the precious promises of the new covenant, in wisdom, grace, and good works. The Lord therefore exhorted them to be "faithful unto death;" maintaining their allegiance to him inviolable, fighting valiantly as his soldiers, and adhering to his truth and will, even if called to suffer death for his sake, or in any case till the close of their lives; and then he "who had been dead, and was alive," would recompense them, as no other prince or [illegible] do his faithful adherents; for he would give them "a crown of life" [illegible] fidelity.

20 Notwithstanding I have a few things against thee, because thou sufferest that woman Jezebel,[8] which calleth herself a prophetess, to teach and to seduce my servants to commit fornication, and to eat things sacrificed unto idols.

21 And I gave her space to repent of her fornication; and she repented not.

22 Behold, I will cast her into a bed, [d]and them that commit adultery with her into great tribulation, except they repent of their deeds.

23 And I will kill her children with death; and all the churches shall know that [h]I am he which searcheth the reins and hearts: [l]and I will give unto every one of you according to your works.

24 But unto you I say, and unto the rest in Thyatira, (as many as have not this doctrine, and which have not known [k]the depths of Satan, as they speak,) I will put upon you none other burden:[9]

25 But that which ye have already hold fast [n]till I come.

26 And he that overcometh, [p]and keepeth my works unto the end, [q]to him will I give power over the nations:

27 And [r]he shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers; [s]even as I received of my Father.

Epistles, with warnings, threatenings, and promises, suitable to the state of the church at Sardis, 1, at Philadelphia, 7, at Laodicea, 14.

AND unto the angel of the church in Sardis[1] write; These things saith he that hath the seven Spirits of God, and the seven stars; I know thy works, that thou hast a name that thou livest, [e]and art dead.

2 Be watchful, and [g]strengthen the things which remain, that are ready to die: for I have not found thy works [h]perfect before God.

3 [i]Remember therefore how thou hast received and heard, and hold fast, and [l]repent. If therefore thou shalt not watch, [m]I will come on thee as a thief, and [n]thou shalt not know what hour I will come upon thee.

4 Thou hast a few names even in Sardis [q]which have not defiled their garments; and they shall [r]walk with me in white:[2] [s]for they are worthy.

5 He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; [x]and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will [z]confess his name before my Father, and before his angels.

6 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.

7 And to the angel of the church in Philadelphia[3] write; These things saith he that is holy, he that is true, he that hath [e]the key of David, [f]he that openeth, and no man shutteth; and shutteth, and no man openeth:[4]

8 I know thy works: behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it: for thou hast a little strength, and hast kept my word, and hast not denied my name.

9 Behold, I will make them of [m]the synagogue of Satan, which say they are Jews, and are not, but do lie; behold, [n]I will make them to come and worship before thy feet, and to know that I have loved thee.

10 Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, [p]I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world, [r]to try them that dwell upon the earth.

11 Behold, [s]I come quickly: [t]hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take [u]thy crown.

12 Him that overcometh will I make a pillar[5] in the temple of my God, and he shall go no more out: and [z]I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of [a]the city of my God, which is new Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my

Church in Pergamos.—Ver. 12—17. The epistle to the angel of the church in Pergamos, (a city to the north of Smyrna,) contains both reproof and threatenings; and, therefore, it was sent as from him "who hath the sharp sword with two edges," chap. i. 16. Christ took favourable notice of the works of the Christians in this city, as far as they were obedient to his commandments; and he reminded them, that he knew their habitation to be in a place, where Satan had especially established his throne, and taken up his abode. Ver. 14—16. The Lord had, however, a few things to allege against this church: because they permitted in their communion, or otherwise connived at, some of those licentious teachers, against whom his apostles had protested; even such as held the doctrine of Balaam. For that wicked man, though really favoured with prophetic visions, had yet for filthy lucre's sake, plotted mischief against Israel. To each person, who thus adhered to the truth and precepts of Christ, he promised to give "the hidden manna;" or those invigorating and satisfying consolations, which spring from the lively exercise of faith in a crucified Saviour.—He also promised to give to every conqueror in this holy war "a white stone." In those times, when any person, accused of crimes against the state, was tried by the suffrage of the citizens, they voted for his acquittal by a white stone, and for his condemnation by a black one: so that Christ, the sole judge of his people, in promising to give them "a white stone," assured them of their full justification at the great day of account; and of the present comfortable sense that they were pardoned and accepted in him.

Church in Thyatira.—Ver. 18—29. Thyatira lay to the south-east of Pergamos; and the epistle, to the church established in that city, was sent in the name of the "Son of God, who hath his eyes as a flame of fire," &c., chap. i. 14, 15; which represented his authority and omniscience, and the steadfastness and righteousness of his appointments and decisions. Notwithstanding all this cause of commendation, Christ had a few things to allege against them: especially their allowance of such as taught those abominable tenets, and perpetrated those evils, which Christ hated; for the same heresy is here opposed as in the foregoing epistle. It is not agreed whether the expression, "that woman Jezebel," is to be understood literally, or figuratively. For the reading in some manuscripts it hath been thought, that the wife of the presiding minister was meant; that she had obtained great influence in the affairs of the church and made a bad use of it; that she pretended to prophetic gifts, and under that sanction propagated abominable principles.—Scott.

CHAP. III. Church in Sardis.—Ver. 1—6. Sardis lay to the south of Thyatira, and was once the renowned capital of Lydia, the kingdom of Crœsus.—The epistle to the presiding pastor, and to the church in that city, was sent as a message from him "that hath the seven Spirits of God, and the seven stars;" chap. i. 4; that is, the divine Saviour, through whom the Holy Spirit, in the variety and abundance of his precious gifts and graces, was communicated to all the churches, and to the seven here mentioned in particular; and who was their sovereign proprietor and ruler. Even at Sardis, there were a few Christians, whose names would be at length mentioned with distinguished honour, on account of their holy singularity: as they had not "defiled their garments," or disgraced their profession by the worldly lusts and sinful practices, to which the rest were addicted: and Christ assured them, that they "should walk with him in white," the emblem of perfect purity, triumph, and joy, and so be his accepted, holy, and honoured companions in heavenly felicity: "for they were worthy," or meet and proper persons to be admitted to that glorious and happy state, having approved themselves to be his faithful friends and servants, whilst they lived on earth. In short, to every conqueror in the spiritual warfare, at a place especially where temptations and bad examples so much abounded, the Lord promised, "that he should be clothed in white raiment," as completely and eternally justified, sanctified, and made glorious in the presence and favour of God.

Church in Philadelphia.—Ver. 7—13. Philadelphia lay to the south-east of Sardis.—The epistle to the angel of the church in that city was sent in the name of "Him that is holy," and "that is true," or of, "the holy one, and the true one;" which words contain a very conclusive proof of the deity of Christ: for what mere creature can with propriety speak of himself in this language? As the Philadelphians had kept the word of Christ, in that constancy and patience, which he had commanded and exemplified; and which he bestowed on his people, who could not stand their ground, unless thus enabled to "deny themselves, take up their cross, and follow him:" he promised to keep them "from the hour of temptation," or some remarkable season of persecution, heresy, or apostacy, which was about to come on all the churches in the world, especially through the whole Roman empire, to try and prove the sincerity and strength of their faith and love. "At a distance from the sea, forgotten by the emperors, encompassed on all sides by the Turks, her valiant sons defended their religion and freedom above fourscore years, and at length capitulated with the proudest of Ottomans. Among the Greek colonies and churches of Asia, Philadelphia is still erect, a column in a scene of ruins; a pleasing example that the paths of honour and safety may sometimes be the same." [Gibbon.] To animate the Christians at Philadelphia, and all others, to the spiritual conflict, our Lord next promised to make every conqueror "a pillar in the temple of his God; to establish him as an ornamental part of the spiritual edifice, which he, as Mediator, was building to the glory of his God and Father.

13 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.

14 ¶ And unto the angel of the church *of the Laodiceans[6] write; These things saith the Amen, [f]the faithful and true witness, [g]the beginning of the creation of God;

15 I know thy works, [i]that thou art neither cold nor hot: I would thou wert cold or hot.

16 So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, [m]I will spue thee out of my mouth.

17 Because thou sayest, [n]I am rich, and increased with goods, and [o]have need of nothing; and [p]knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked:

18 I counsel thee to [u]buy[7] of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich; and white raiment, that thou mayest be clothed, and that [a]the shame of thy nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eye-salve, that thou mayest see.

19 As [c]many as I love, I rebuke and chasten: be zealous therefore, and repent.

20 Behold, [f]I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me.

21 To [i]him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, [l]and am set down with my Father in his throne.

John, in vision, beholds heaven opened, and the glory of God, as seated on an exalted throne, 1, surrounded by twenty-four elders, and four living creatures, who united in adoring him as the Creator and Lord of all, 4.

AFTER this I looked, and, behold, [b]a door was opened in heaven: and [c]the first voice which I heard was as it were of a trumpet talking with me; which said, Come up hither, and I will shew thee things which must be hereafter.

2 And immediately I was in the Spirit: and, behold, [g]a throne was set in heaven, and one sat on the throne.

3 And he that sat was to look upon like a jasper[1] and a sardine-stone: and there was a rainbow round about the throne, in sight like unto an emerald.

4 And round about the throne were four and twenty seats: and upon the seats I saw four and twenty elders[2] sitting, clothed in white raiment; and they had on their heads crowns of gold.

5 And out of the throne proceeded lightnings, and thunderings, and voices: and there were [r]seven lamps of fire burning before the throne, which are [s]the seven Spirits of God.

6 And before the throne there was [t]a sea of glass like unto crystal: and in the midst of the throne, and round about the throne, were four beasts[3] [z]full of eyes before and behind.

7 And the first beast was like a lion, and the second beast like a calf, and the third beast had a face as a man, and the fourth beast was like a flying eagle.

8 And the four beasts had each of them six wings about him; and they were full of eyes within; and they *rest not day and night, saying, [h]Holy, holy, holy, [i]Lord God Almighty, [k]which was, and is, and is to come.

9 And when those beasts give glory, and honour, and thanks to him that sat on the throne, who liveth for ever and ever,

10 The four and twenty elders fall down before him that sat on the throne, and worship him that liveth for ever and ever, and cast their crowns before the throne, saying,

11 Thou [q]art worthy, O Lord, [r]to receive glory, and honour, and power: [s]for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created.

Christ in Laodicea.—Ver. 14—22. Laodicea lay to the south of Philadelphia, and in the road to Ephesus: for the seven churches were situated in a kind of circle, and the progress from one to the other of them, in rotation, might be made in the order of these epistles.—A flourishing church had been planted here, in the time of the apostle Paul; but it had greatly declined before this epistle was sent thither, in the name of "The Amen;" of him, who is truth in himself, and who will surely confirm and ratify all his words, which are established, and unchangeable as his own nature. Whilst the state of this church was so lamentably declined, that very few real Christians, and those of small proficiency, remained in it; their spiritual pride and self-confidence had proportionably increased: this gave occasion to the following reproof, instruction, and counsel. They were ready to say within themselves, to each other, and even in a boasting manner to their neighbours, that "they were rich" in spiritual gifts and attainments; that they were "increased in goods," and had obtained a larger measure of every spiritual gift and endowment, than they formerly had, when the apostles were with them: so that they thought they had need of nothing, but were complete in knowledge, wisdom, goodness, strength, and establishment in the privileges and liberty of the gospel; like poor lunatics, who fancy every house and estate which they see, or hear of, to be their own. The case, described in the preceding verse, was that of the church in general, and of its pastors and members in particular, by the testimony of Christ himself: and he counselled them "to buy of him," those things, of which they were in such urgent need. They could have them from no other person in the world; and he sold them to the poorest, who applied for them, "without money and without price."—Scott.

CHAP. IV. Vision in Heaven.—Ver. 4—8. Round about, at some distance from the exalted throne of God, were placed twenty-four thrones of an inferior order, on which were seated so many elders. These are generally allowed to have been the emblematic representatives of the whole church of God, both under the old and the new dispensation. The thrones on which they sat, their white raiment, and their crowns of gold, implied their acceptance, sanctification, and royal priesthood. For though the church militant was thus represented, as well as the church triumphant; yet the whole was described with relation to the security of their state, their glorious privileges, and the honour to which the Lord purposed to advance. The number of these elders may refer to the twenty-four courses, into which the priests were divided; or to the twelve patriarchs, and twelve apostles, as the heads of the Old and the New Testament churches. The lightnings, thunders, and voices which proceeded from the throne, according to the scene exhibited on mount Sinai, might imply, that God was as terrible as ever to the impenitent and unbelieving. The seven lamps of fire, burning before the throne, were emblematical of the seven Spirits of God. Various opinions have been held concerning "the four beasts," or living creatures, as it ought to have been translated, in order to adhere to the exact meaning of the original, and to preserve the truth of the emblem. The unaccountable notion, that the trinity of persons in the Godhead was represented by them, whilst two emblems were given of the Son, because of his incarnation and sacrifice, can have no other support, than the names which have sanctioned it; for this plain reason, that these living creatures are throughout represented as the principal worshippers, not as the object of worship. Nor can the more general and plausible opinion, that they were representatives of the angels, as the cherubim in Ezekiel's vision seem to have been, be supported by any sufficient proof; not only, because angels are personally introduced in the subsequent part of this vision; but especially, because these living creatures are spoken of, as adoring "the Lamb that was slain, who had redeemed them to God with his blood," ver. 8, 9. They must therefore undeniably represent some part of the church of redeemed sinners, of the human race. Perceiving this, some expositors have supposed them to be representatives of the whole church, and the twenty-four elders of its rulers and pastors: but it is surely far more reasonable to reverse this arrangement, and to conclude that the four living creatures represent a part, the twenty-four elders the whole, of the church: and indeed it seems evident that they were emblems of the true ministers of the gospel, in the different parts of the earth.—Scott.

CHAP. V. The Book.—Ver. 1. Hitherto the apostle had only seen the great God, Governor of all things; he is favoured with a sight of the model and methods of his government, as they are all written down in a book which he holds in his hand; and this we are now to consider as shut up and sealed in the hand of God. Observe, 1. The designs and methods of Divine Providence toward the church and the world are stated and fixed; they are resolved upon and agreed to, as that which is written in a book. 2. God holds this book in his right hand, to declare the authority of the book, and his readiness and resolution to execute all the contents thereof, all the counsels and purposes therein recorded. 3. This book in the hand of God is shut up and sealed; it is known to none but himself, till he allows it to be opened. 4. "It is sealed with seven seals." This tells us with what inscrutable secrecy the counsels of God are laid, how impenetrable by the eye and intellect of the creature; till the whole mystery of God's [illegible] conduct be finished in the world.

The Lamb.—Ver. 6—14. Here, the apostle beholds this book taken into [illegible] midst of the elders, stood °a Lamb as it had been slain, having seven horns[3] and seven eyes, which are the seven Spirits of God sent forth into all the earth.

7 And he came and took the book out of the right hand of him that sat upon the throne.

8 And when he had taken the book, the four beasts and four and twenty elders fell down before the Lamb, having every one of them harps, and golden vials full of *odours, which are ʸthe prayers[4] of saints.

9 And they ᶻsung a new song, saying, ᵃThou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof: ᵇfor thou wast slain, ᶜand hast redeemed us to God by thy blood ᵈout of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation;

10 And hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth.

11 And I beheld, and I heard the voice of ᵉmany angels round about the throne, and the beasts, and the elders: and the number of them ᶠwas ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands of thousands;

12 Saying with a loud voice, ᵏWorthy is the Lamb that was slain ˡto receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing.

13 And every creature[5] which is in heaven, and on earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, heard I saying, °Blessing, and honour, and glory, and power, be unto ᵖhim that sitteth upon the throne, ᑫand unto the Lamb, for ever and ever.

14 And the four beasts said, Amen. And the four and twenty elders fell down and worshipped him that liveth for ever and ever.

7 And ᑫwhen he had opened the fourth seal, I heard the voice of the fourth beast say, Come and see.

8 And I looked, and behold a pale horse;[4] and his name that sat on him ʰwas Death, and hell followed with him: and power was given †unto them ⁱover the fourth part of the earth, ᵘto kill with sword, and with hunger, and with death, and with the beasts of the earth.

9 And when he had opened the fifth seal,[5] ˣI saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held:

10 And they cried with a loud voice, saying, How long, O Lord, holy and true, ᵈdost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?

11 And white robes were given unto every one of them; and it was said unto them, that they should rest yet for a little season, until their fellow-servants also, and their brethren, that should be killed as they were, should be fulfilled.

12 And I beheld when he had opened the sixth seal, and, lo, there was a great earthquake; ʲand the sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood;

13 And ᵏthe stars of heaven fell unto the earth, even as a fig-tree casteth her ‡untimely figs, when she is shaken of a mighty wind:

14 And ˡthe heaven departed as a scroll when it is rolled together; ᵐand every mountain and island were moved out of their places.

15 And the kings of the earth,[6] and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bond man, and every free man, hid themselves in the dens, and in the rocks of the mountains;

16 And said to the mountains and rocks, ᑫFall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, ʳand from the wrath of the Lamb:

17 For ˢthe great day of his wrath is come; and who shall be able to stand?

the Lord Jesus Christ, in order to its being opened and executed by him. Where Christ is described, 1. By his place and station; "in the midst of the throne, and of the four beasts, and of the elders." He was on the same throne with the Father; he was nearer to him than either the elders or ministers of the churches. Christ, as Man and Mediator, is subordinate to God the Father, but is nearer to him than all the creatures, "for in him all the fulness of the Godhead dwells bodily." The ministers stand between God and the people. Christ stands as Mediator between God and both ministers and people. 2. The form in which he appeared. Before, he is called "a Lion;" here, he appears "as a Lamb slain."—A "Lamb, having seven horns and seven eyes;" perfect power to execute all the will of God, and perfect wisdom to understand it all, and to do it in the most effectual manner; "for he hath the seven Spirits of God," he has received the Holy Spirit without measure, in all perfection of light, and life, and power, by which he is able to teach and rule all parts of the earth. 3. He is described by his act and deed; "He came and took the book out of the right hand of him that sat on the throne;" not by violence, nor by fraud, but he prevailed to do it, as ver. 5, he prevailed by his merit and worthiness, he did it by authority, and by the Father's appointment. God very willingly and justly put the book of his eternal counsels into the hand of Christ, and Christ as readily and gladly took it into his hand; for he delights to reveal and to do the will of his Father. The apostle observes the universal joy and thanksgiving that filled heaven and earth upon this transaction. No sooner had Christ received this book out of the Father's hand, than he receives the applauses and adorations of angels and men, yea, of "every creature." And indeed, it is just matter of joy to all the world, to see that God does not deal with men in a way of absolute power and strict justice, but in a way of grace and mercy through the Redeemer. He governs the world, not merely as a Creator and Lawgiver, but as our God and Saviour. All the world has reason to rejoice in this.—Henry.

CHAP. VI. The Seals.—Ver. 1, 2. When the Lord Jesus, as "the Lamb that had been slain," opened the first seal, the apostle's attention was excited, by a voice like thunder from one of the four living creatures, who called on him to come and see what passed. The apostle then beheld, with astonishment, a white horse, on which one was mounted, armed with a bow, as for the battle: to him a crown, denoting royal authority, was given, and he went forth conquering all that opposed him, and still preparing to obtain new victories. This emblem denotes righteousness and purity: and the mild beneficent victories of Christ, by his word and Holy Spirit, in the conversion of sinners to the obedience of faith, seem to have been thus predicted. The red horse, which appeared at the opening of the second seal, leads our thoughts to wars and conquests of another nature, than those before considered. The Lord Jesus, in his righteous providence, seems to be here presented, as commissioning, and employing, the executioners of his vengeance on his obstinate enemies. Accordingly, historians record that insurrections, bloody battles, massacres, and devastations of a most extraordinary kind, took place between A. D. 100, and A. D. 138. Five hundred and eighty thousand Jews are computed to have been slaughtered, in different places, during that period. Ver. 5, 6. The black horse, which appeared on the opening of the third seal, was a proper emblem of calamity and mourning; and the balances in the hand of the rider denoted, that, in the times referred to, there would be a great scarcity of provisions: so that men would have their food weighed out to them with great exactness, as it is done when any company are reduced to short allowance. If a poor man could only earn enough to buy a sufficient quantity of bread, without any other necessary of life; to what straits must he be reduced in endeavouring to sustain a family! Ver. 7, 8. The pale horse, which appeared at the opening of the fourth seal, on which death rode as a terrific conqueror, followed by hell, (or the grave, and state of departed souls to seize on the dead,) was an apt emblem of the several divine judgments, which are afterwards enumerated. This universal war and confusion, by taking men off from the cultivation of the earth, and destroying the fruits of it when produced, naturally made way for famine; which grievously prevailed in every place. The scanty, low, and unwholesome diet, occasioned by hunger or famine, naturally introduced pestilence, which is often called death by the Eastern writers. Ver. 9—11. On the opening of the fifth seal, the apostle observed "under the altar," (for there is a continual reference to the appearance of the Divine glory in the sanctuary, and to the peculiarities of the Jewish worship,) the souls of those persons who had been slain for believing and obeying the word of God, and for the testimony which they had borne to the truth of the gospel. These appeared as sacrifices, that had newly been offered. The great earthquake, (or concussion, whether of the earth or the heavens,) which followed the opening of the sixth seal, was the emblem of extraordinary revolutions in the civil and religious state of the world, attended with vast commotions of every kind. The blackness of the sun, and the moon appearing as blood, denote the extinction, with horror and bloodshed, of the most exalted and conspicuous persons, such as the emperors, and their chief ministers: the falling of the stars, was emblematical of the degradation, or death, of illustrious persons in great numbers, such as magistrates and senators.—Scott.

AND after these things I saw four angels standing on the four corners of the earth, holding the four winds of the earth, that the wind should not blow on the earth, nor on the sea, nor on any tree.

2 And I saw another angel ascending from the east, [f]having the seal of the living God: and he cried with a loud voice to the four angels, to whom it was given to hurt the earth and the sea,

3 Saying, [i]Hurt not the earth, neither the sea, nor the trees, [k]till we have sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads.[1]

4 And I heard the number of them which were sealed: and there were sealed an hundred and forty and four thousand of all the tribes of the children of Israel.[2]

5 Of the tribe of Juda were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Reuben were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Gad were sealed twelve thousand.

6 Of the tribe of Aser were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Nephthalim were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Manasses were sealed twelve thousand.

7 Of the tribe of Simeon were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Levi were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Issachar were sealed twelve thousand.

8 Of the tribe of Zabulon were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Joseph were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Benjamin were sealed twelve thousand.[3]

9 After this I beheld, and, lo, [s]a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, [x]stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, [y]clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands;

10 And cried with a loud voice, saying, [a]Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb.

11 And all the angels stood round about the throne, and about the elders and the four beasts, [e]and fell before the throne on their faces, and worshipped God, 12 Saying, Amen: Blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honour, and power, and might, be unto our God for ever and ever. Amen.

13 And one of the elders answered, saying unto me, What are these which are arrayed in white robes? and whence came they?

14 And I said unto him, Sir, thou knowest. And he said unto me, These are they which [o]came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in [q]the blood of the Lamb.

15 Therefore [r]are they before the throne of God, [s]and serve him day and night in his temple: and he that sitteth on the throne shall dwell among them.

16 They shall [u]hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall [x]the sun light on them, nor any heat.

17 For the Lamb, which is [y]in the midst of the throne, shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters; and [b]God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes.[4]

4 And the smoke of the incense, which came with the prayers of the saints, ascended up before God out of the angel's hand.

5 And the angel took the censer, [m]and filled it with fire of the altar, and cast it [t]into the earth: [n]and there were voices, and thunderings, and lightnings, and an earthquake.

6 And the [p]seven angels which had the seven trumpets, prepared themselves to sound.

7 The first angel sounded, and there followed hail and fire mingled with blood, and they were cast upon the earth: and [s]the third part of trees was burnt up, and all green grass was burnt up.

clusively of Jewish converts, it can hardly be supposed that the same number of each tribe were sealed.—The tribes are here arranged differently than elsewhere: Judah is placed first, in honour of Christ, who sprang from him: Dan is wholly omitted, perhaps because idolatry was first publicly established by that tribe. Others, however, think, that the tribe of Dan had long before become nearly extinct: and, indeed, it is not mentioned in the genealogies contained in the first of Chronicles. Levi is numbered with the rest; and Joseph is placed instead of Ephraim, whilst Manasseh is likewise continued. The order of primogeniture is neglected; nor is any regard shown to the children of the free-women above those of the bond-women; as both are alike in Christ.

THE NUMBERLESS MULTITUDE OF THE SAVED.—Ver. 9—12. A multitude, so large that no man could number them, collected from the several nations of the earth known in those days, appeared to stand before the throne, as accepted worshippers of God, and "before the Lamb," as his redeemed people.—Every one of this company was clothed with white robes, as perfectly justified, sanctified, and made happy in heaven. They had also been engaged in war: as victors they carried the well-known emblem of palm-branches; and having obtained complete salvation, in respect of their souls, they ascribed it in no degree to themselves, or to their own wisdom, strength, labours, services, sufferings, or martyrdom; but gave the whole glory of it to their God and Father, who was seated on the throne, as being the effect of his special love and grace; "and unto the Lamb," as it was bestowed on them through his atonement and mediation. Whilst these redeemed sinners stood next to the throne, and led the worship of heaven, in virtue of their union, and relation to, the incarnate Son of God; the angels (free from the least emotion of envy, and rejoicing in their exaltation, and the glory of God in it,) stood without the circle made by the emblematical representatives of the church and its ministers, and in prostrate adoration added their cordial Amen, to the praises rendered to God and the Lamb.

THE MARTYRS.—Ver. 13—17. The Martyrs had not made their robes white by their own services or sufferings, nor had they been originally white: but they had washed them from the guilt and pollution which had contaminated them, in the blood of the Lamb; by faith in his atoning sacrifice, and prevailing intercession, and by trusting in his name for the mercy and grace which he died to procure for sinners. Therefore they had found acceptance with God and admission into heaven, and stood before the throne; where, with unceasing, yea, augmented pleasure, they served and worshipped God day and night; whilst he graciously dwelt among them as their Father and Friend, overshadowing them with his presence, and filling them with ineffable and rapturous joy. Thus, by his love, and the displays of his glory, all their thirstings after him and holiness were fully satisfied; nor were they troubled with one desire of any other or greater happiness, than they securely enjoyed. Neither were they exposed to any affliction, temptation, fear, or persecution; (like the heat of the noonday sun;) as all these were finally passed away. For the Lamb, who redeemed them to God with his blood, and who, in consequence of his victory, was seated with his Father upon his throne, employed all his power and authority in satisfying, and anticipating all their wants, and conducting them to the inexhaustible fountain-head of unalloyed felicity; whilst the eternal Father, as delighting over them to do them good, wiped away all their tears from their eyes, and turned their former sorrows into the fulness of eternal joy.—Scott.

CHAP. VIII. THE MEDIATOR-ANGEL.—JESUS.—Ver. 1—6. The last of the seven seals contains under it far more than all the others; as it introduces, and seems indeed to include, that period which fell under the seven trumpets. When it was opened, there was silence in heaven for about half-an-hour; which either intimated, that the peace of the church and the empire would be of a very short continuance, or it was expressive of the solemn expectation excited on this occasion. During this interval, the apostle saw "the seven angels who stood before God," having been appointed to this service, and of whom we shall read more afterwards: and to each of them was given a trumpet, that they might in succession sound an alarm to the nations.—At the same time another angel appeared as a priest standing before the altar of incense. The appearance of a lamb was emblematical of Christ "our passover, sacrificed for us;" and this angel represented him in his priestly character, offering up the prayers of all his saints before God, accompanied by his all-prevailing intercession. This being done, the angel filled the censer with fire from the altar. There was no fire on the golden altar, except that in the censer, which was taken from the altar of burnt-offering: the fire, here spoken of, must have come from thence. This the angel cast on the earth: which occasioned voices, thunderings, and lightnings: this denoted, that the approaching calamities would be the effect of God's displeasure with men, for their opposition to the gospel of his Son, and their injurious and cruel treatment of his people; and so in fact he inflicted, as an answer to their prayers for deliverance, through the intercession of Christ.

LESSONS ON GOD'S JUDGMENTS AS MANIFESTED IN THE TRUMPET'S BLASTS.—The intervals of peace, which the church hath hitherto enjoyed, have commonly been of short continuance. Amidst the confusion occasioned by the vices of mankind, we should rejoice that "the LORD reigneth;" and that the prayers of all true believers, being presented through the meritorious intercession of our great High Priest, will surely be accepted and answered. All created angels are ministering spirits for the benefit of the heirs of

3 And there came out of the smoke locusts upon the earth: and unto them was given power, [h]as the scorpions of the earth have power.

4 And it was commanded them that they should not hurt the grass of the earth, neither any green thing, neither any tree; but only those men [l]which have not the seal of God in their foreheads.

5 And to them it was given that [n]they should not kill them, but that they should be tormented five months: [p]and their torment was as the torment of a scorpion, when he striketh a man.

6 And in those days [q]shall men seek death, and shall not find it; and shall desire to die, and death shall flee from them.

7 And the shapes of the locusts were like unto horses[3] prepared unto battle; and on their heads were as it were crowns like gold, and their faces were as the faces of men.

8 And they had hair as the hair of women, and their teeth were as the teeth of lions.

9 And they had breast-plates, as it were breast-plates of iron; [y]and the sound of their wings was as the sound of chariots of many horses running to battle.

10 And they had tails like unto scorpions; and there were stings in their tails: and their power was to hurt men five months.

15 And the four angels[5] were loosed, which were prepared ‡for an hour, and a day, and a month, and a year, [k]for to slay the third part of men.

16 And [l]the number of the army of the horsemen were two hundred thousand thousand: and I heard the number of them.

17 And thus I saw the horses in the vision, and them that sat on them, [o]having breastplates of fire,[6] and of jacinth, and brimstone: and the heads of the horses were as the heads of lions; and out of their mouths issued fire, and smoke, and brimstone.

18 By these three was the third part of men killed, by the fire, and by the smoke, and by the brimstone, which issued out of their mouths.

19 For their power is in their mouth, and in their tails: for their tails were like unto serpents, and had heads, and with them they do hurt.

20 And the rest of the men, which were not killed by these plagues, [u]yet repented not of the works of their hands, that they should not [x]worship devils, [y]and idols of gold, and silver, and brass, and stone, and of wood;[7] which neither can see, nor hear, nor walk:

[4] This woe commenced with the rise of the Mohammedan imposture, about 612, when he publicly appeared as a prophet of God, and extended it to 762, or five prophetic months, in which period they subdued all Arabia, Egypt, and other parts of Africa, Judea, Syria, Chaldea, and Persia. From the commencement of this woe, Faber begins the 1260 years of the great apostasy, the reign of the wild beast and the false prophet.—BOOTHROYD.

[5] Mede, who applies what follows to the rise of the Turkish empire, supposes that the four angels were emblems of the four governments of the Turks in Asia; but Lowman, after Daubuz, considers that the number expresses universality (Is. xi. 12; Jer. xlix. 36). This woe began with the reign of Othman, 1301, and ended 1697, when the Turks were conquered at Zeuta, and from that period their empire has been declining.—BOOTHROYD.

salvation; even when they are employed to visit nations with terrible calamities; nay, the fire from the altar, being cast on the earth, (the vengeance inflicted for men's contempt of the sacrifice and salvation of Christ, and the injuries done to his people,) causes the most terrible desolations that are made on earth. Whilst the present wrath of God and of the Lamb, through those executioners of vengeance who mean not so, fills countries with misery, destroys the wretched inhabitants, and imbitters and poisons all the comforts of life; till the greatest prosperity be totally darkened and extinguished: the messengers of the Lord are ordered to proclaim aloud in all the world, that still more dreadful woes are in reserve for the impenitent workers of iniquity; for what are all temporal evils, compared with the destruction of body and soul in hell? Let sinners then take warning to flee from the wrath to come; let believers learn to value, and be thankful for, their privileges; and let them "patiently continue in well-doing," and so "look for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life."—Scott.

CHAP. IX. THE LOCUSTS.—Ver. 5—12. These locusts were of a monstrous size and shape. They were equipt for their work like horses prepared to battle. 1. They pretended to great authority, and seemed to be assured of victory; "They had crowns like gold on their heads;" it was not true, but a counterfeit, anthority. 2. They had the show of wisdom and sagacity, "the faces of men," though the spirit of devils. 3. They had all the allurements of seeming beauty, to ensnare and defile the minds of men, "hair like women;" their way of worship was very gaudy and ornamental. 4. Though they appeared with the tenderness of women, they had "the teeth of lions," were really cruel creatures. 5. They had the defence and protection of earthly powers, "breastplates of iron." 6. They made a mighty noise in the world, they flew about from one country to another, and the noise of their motion was like that of an army with chariots and horses. 7. Though at first they soothed and flattered men with a fair appearance, there was a sting in their tails; the cup of their abominations contained that, which, though luscious at first, would at length bite like a serpent, and sting like an adder. 8. The king and commander of this hellish squadron is here described. (1.) As an angel; so he was by nature an angel, once one of the angels of heaven. (2.) "The angel of the bottomless pit;" an angel still, but a fallen angel, fallen into the bottomless pit, vastly large, and out of which there is no recovery. (3.) In those infernal regions he is a sort of prince and governor, and has the power of darkness under his rule and command. (4.) His true name is Abaddon, Apollyon—a destroyer, for that is his business, his design, his employment, to which he diligently attends, in which he is very successful, and takes a horrid, hellish pleasure.

IMPENITENCE UNDER SUFFERING.—Ver. 20, 21. Observe the impenitency of the antichristian generation under these dreadful judgments: the rest of the men who were not killed, repented not, they still persisted in those sins for which God was so severely punishing them: which were, 1. "Their idolatry;" they would not cast away their images, though they could do them no good, "could neither see, nor hear, nor walk." 2. "Their murders," which they had committed upon the saints and servants of Christ. Popery is a bloody religion, and seems resolved to continue such. 3. "Their sorceries;" they have their charms, and magic arts, and rites in exorcism and other things. 4. "Their fornication;" they allow both spiritual and carnal impurity, and promote it in themselves and others. 5. "Their thefts;" they have by unjust means heaped together a vast deal of wealth, to the injury and impoverishing of families, cities, princes, and nations. These are the flagrant crimes of antichrist and his agents; and though God has revealed his wrath from heaven against them, they are obstinate, hardened, and impenitent, and judicially so, for they must be destroyed. From this sixth trumpet learn, (1.) God can make one enemy of the church to be a scourge and plague to another. (2.) He who is the Lord of hosts, has vast armies at his command, to serve his own purposes. (3.) The most formidable powers have limits set them, which they cannot transgress. (4.) When God's judgments are in the earth, he expects the inhabitants thereof should "repent of sin, and learn righteousness." (5.) Impenitency under divine judgments is an iniquity that will be the ruin of sinners; for where God judges he will overcome.—Henry.

CHAP. X. THE LITTLE BOOK.—Ver. 8—11. Here we have, 1. A strict charge given to the apostle, which was, (1.) That he should "go and take the little book" out of the hands of that mighty angel mentioned before. This charge was given, not by the angel himself who stood upon the earth, but by the same "voice from heaven" that in the fourth verse had laid an injunction upon him not to write what he had discerned by the seven thunders. (2.) "To eat the book;" this part of the charge was given by the angel himself, hinting to the apostle, that before he should publish what he had discovered, he must more thoroughly digest the predictions, and be in himself suitably affected with them. 2. An account of the taste and relish which this little book would have, when the apostle had taken it in; at first, while "in his mouth, sweet." All persons feel a pleasure in looking into future events, and in having them foretold; and all good men love to receive a word from God, of what import soever it be. But when this book of prophecy was more thoroughly digested by the apostle, the contents would be bitter; these were things so awful and terrible, such grievous persecutions of the people

[1]Seal up those things which the seven thunders uttered, and write them not.

5 And the angel which I saw stand upon the sea and upon the earth lifted up his hand to heaven,[3]

6 And sware [o]by him that liveth for ever and ever, who created heaven, and the things that therein are, and the earth, and the things that therein are, and the sea, and the things which are therein, [q]that there should be time no longer:

7 But in the days of the voice of the seventh angel, when he shall begin to sound, [r]the mystery of God shall be finished, as he hath declared to his servants the prophets.

8 And the voice which I heard from heaven spake unto me again, and said, Go and take the little book which is open in the hand of the angel which standeth upon the sea and upon the earth.

9 And I went unto the angel, and said unto him, Give me the little book. And he said unto me, [x]Take it, and eat it up;[4] and it shall make thy belly bitter, but it shall be in thy mouth sweet as honey.

10 And I took the little book out of the angel's hand, and ate it up; and it was in my mouth sweet as honey: and as soon as I had eaten it, my belly was bitter.

11 And he said unto me, [a]Thou must prophesy again before many peoples, and nations, and tongues, and kings.

The two prophesying witnesses, 3. The seventh trumpet soundeth, and the heavenly choir celebrate God's glory, 15.

AND there was given me a reed like unto a rod: and the angel stood, saying, Rise, and [c]measure the temple of God, and the altar, and them that worship therein.

2 But the court which is without the temple *leave out, and measure it not; for [e]it is given unto the Gentiles: [f]and the holy city shall they tread under foot forty and two months.[1]

3 And †I will give power unto my [i]two witnesses,[2] and they shall prophesy a thousand two hundred and threescore days,[3] clothed in sackcloth.

4 These are the two olive-trees, and the two candlesticks [p]standing before the God of the earth.

5 And if any man will hurt them, fire proceedeth out of their mouth, and devoureth their enemies; and if any man will hurt them, he must in this manner be killed.

6 These have [s]power to shut heaven, that it rain not in the days of their prophecy: and have power over waters to turn them to blood, and to smite the earth with all plagues, as often as they will.

7 And when they shall have finished their testimony,[4] [x]the beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit shall make war against them, and shall overcome them, and kill them.

8 And their dead bodies shall lie in the street of the great city, which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also [c]our Lord was crucified.

9 And they of [d]the people, and kindreds, and tongues, and nations, shall see their dead bodies three days and a half, [f]and shall not suffer their dead bodies to be put in graves.

10 And they that [g]dwell upon the earth shall rejoice over them, and make merry, and shall send gifts one to another; because these two prophets tormented them that dwelt on the earth.

11 And after three days and an half [m]the Spirit of life from God entered into them, and they stood upon their feet; and great fear fell upon them which saw them.

12 And they heard a great voice from heaven saying unto them, Come up hither. [p]And they ascended up to heaven in a cloud; [q]and their enemies beheld them.

13 And the same hour was there a great earthquake, and the tenth part of the city fell,[5] and in the earthquake were slain of ‡men seven thousand: and the remnant were affrighted, and [u]gave glory to the God of heaven.

14 The [x]second woe is past; and, behold, the third woe cometh quickly.

15 And [y]the seventh angel sounded; and there were great voices in heaven, saying, [a]The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; [b]and he shall reign for ever and ever.[6]

16 And [c]the four and twenty elders, which sat before God on their seats, fell upon their faces, and worshipped God,

17 Saying, We give thee thanks, O Lord God Almighty, [r]which art, and wast, and art to come; because [s]thou hast taken to thee thy great power, and hast reigned.

18 And the nations were angry, [t]and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead, that they should be judged, [t]and that thou shouldest give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, [m]and them that fear thy name, small and great; and [n]shouldest destroy them which [§]destroy the earth.

19 And [o]the temple of God was opened in heaven, and there was seen in his temple [p]the ark of his testament: and there were lightnings, and voices, and thunderings, and an earthquake, and great hail.

of God and such desolation made in the earth, that the foresight and foreknowledge of them would not be pleasant, but painful, to the mind of the apostle: thus was Ezekiel's prophecy to him, chap. iii. 3. The apostle's discharge of the duty he was called to. "He took the little book out of the angel's hand, and ate it up," and he found the relish to be as was told him. (1.) It becomes the servants of God to digest in their own souls the messages they bring to others in his name, and to be suitably affected therewith themselves. (2.) It becomes them to deliver every message with which they are charged, whether pleasing or unpleasing to men. That which is least pleasing may be most profitable; however, God's messengers must not keep back any part of the counsel of God. 4. The apostle is made to know that this book of prophecy which he had now taken in, was not given him merely to gratify his own curiosity, or to affect him with pleasure or pain, but to be communicated by him to the world; here his prophetical commission seems to be renewed, and he is ordered to prepare for another embassy, to convey those declarations of "the mind and will of God," which are of great importance to all the world, and to the highest and greatest men in the world, and such should be read and recorded in many languages.—Henry.

CHAP. XI. The Two Witnesses.—Ver. 3—12. Two witnesses were mentioned, because one was insufficient for the legal proof of any fact; and these witnesses were as few as could suffice to attest the true gospel, and to enter a public protest against the antichristian perversions of it: though perhaps Moses and Aaron, Elijah and Elisha, and the apostles and seventy disciples, sent forth two and two, might be alluded to. All real Christians, who boldly professed their religion, may be considered, as uniting in this testimony: yet ministers, and especially bold and zealous men who attempted reformation, were the witnesses primarily intended. The angel before-mentioned, even the Lord Jesus, declared, that he would give them power, or authority, to prophesy, during the assigned time; yet this must be done in sackcloth, as expressive of their afflicted persecuted state, and of their deep concern and sorrow of heart, on account of the abominations against which they protested. It hath been shown by many writers, that during the darkest ages of popery, men were raised up, who bore a decided testimony against the prevailing corruptions of the Roman church, and for the leading doctrines of the gospel. It was indeed the interest, and the constant practice, of their opponents, to silence their testimony, to blacken their characters, or to destroy them as heretics: yet, after all their endeavours to suppress, misrepresent, and mutilate their writings, enough remains to show, that Christ had a remnant of faithful witnesses and disciples, through all the ages here referred to. From the eighth to the eleventh century inclusive, we find accounts of individuals or collective bodies, who, under the brand of heresy, and in the face of persecution, evidently held, and openly professed, the great doctrines of salvation by faith in Christ, and through his mediation, merits, and grace, and protested against the abuses of popery: and these, who just prevented the total darkness of that gloomy period, could by no means be extirpated. On the contrary, they continued to increase in many places: in the valleys of Piedmont especially, vast multitudes were collected, and called Waldenses and Albigenses, who were evidently moderate Calvinists; (to speak in modern language,) and their lives were generally exemplary, as some of the papists themselves have allowed. These subsisted during the twelfth, thirteenth, and following centuries; though they were persecuted with such unrelenting fury, and pursued with such cruel and destructive wars, that in France alone, a million of them are computed to have been slain, for the sole crime of protesting against the tyranny of the pope, and the corruptions of the church of Rome. They, however, continued to prophesy in "sackcloth;" and when driven from Piedmont, they settled in other places, propagated their religion, and prepared the way for the Reformation. Connected with them, and agreed in their leading doctrines, and in opposition to the church of Rome, were the Lollards in England; and the Bohemians, from among whom arose John Huss and Jerom of Prague, who were burnt in the fifteenth century by the council of Constance. Multitudes embraced the doctrines of the gospel in many places during those times, and professed or preached it at the hazard of their lives; and great numbers were burnt, or put to death in the most cruel manner, for so doing. At length Luther arose, and the Reformation took place; since which time, the same testimony for the truth of Christ, and against the errors of antichrist, hath been maintained. Nor is the term yet expired; the witnesses are not indeed at present exposed to such terrible sufferings, as in former times; but those scenes will probably be re-acted before long; and they have abundant cause to prophesy in sackcloth, on account of the state of religion even in the Protestant churches.—However, though men despised and hated the witnesses, they were in reality, "the two olive-trees," endued with spiritual gifts and grace, that through their instrumentality, others also might receive the unction from the Holy One; and "the two candlesticks," to hold forth the light of divine truth in this benighted world, they stood to minister with acceptance, "before the God of the earth," the proprietor and governor of all mankind; and were the champions, as it were, of his cause, and the heralds of his glory, in the countries where they lived.—Scott.

AND there appeared a great *wonder in heaven; [b]a woman[1] clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars:

2 And she, being with child, cried, [f]travailing in birth, and pained to be delivered.

3 And there appeared another †wonder[2] in heaven; and behold [g]a great red dragon, having seven heads and ten horns, and seven crowns upon his heads.

4 And his tail drew the third part of the stars of heaven, and did cast them to the earth: and [m]the dragon stood before the woman which was ready to be delivered, for to devour her child as soon as it was born.

5 And [n]she brought forth a man-child, who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron: and her child was [p]caught up unto God, and to his throne.

6 And [q]the woman fled into the wilderness, where she hath a place prepared of God, that they should feed her there a thousand two hundred and threescore days.

7 And there was [t]war in heaven: Michael and his angels[3] fought against the dragon; and the dragon fought and his angels,

8 And prevailed not; neither was their place found any more in heaven.

9 And [c]the great dragon was cast out, [d]that old serpent, called the devil, and Satan, which [g]deceiveth the whole world: [h]he was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him.

10 And I heard a loud voice saying in heaven, Now is come salvation, and strength, and [l]the kingdom of our God, and [m]the power of his Christ: for the accuser of our brethren is cast down, which accused them before our God day and night.

11 And [o]they overcame him by the blood of the Lamb, and by [q]the word of their testimony; and [r]they loved not their lives unto the death.

12 Therefore rejoice, ye heavens, and ye that dwell in them. Woe to the inhabiters of the earth and of the sea! for the devil is come down unto you, having great wrath, because he knoweth that he hath but a short time.

13 And when the dragon saw that he was cast unto the earth, he persecuted the woman which brought forth the man-child.[4]

14 And to the woman were given two wings of a great eagle, that she might fly into the wilderness, into her place, where she is nourished for a time, and times, and half a time, from the face of the serpent.

15 And the serpent cast out of his mouth water as a flood after the woman, that he might cause her to be carried away of the flood.

16 And the earth helped the woman;[5] and the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed up the flood which the dragon cast out of his mouth.

17 And the dragon was wroth with the woman, and went [e]to make war with the remnant of her seed, [f]which keep the commandments of God, [g]and have the testimony of Jesus Christ.

[3] And who can calculate the millions of saints who have perished by this persecuting monster? Mede states that a million of Waldenses in France alone were put to death; and how many in other countries is not known. In about thirty years the Jesuits destroyed about 900,000 orthodox Christians. In the Netherlands the Duke of Alva boasted that he had executed 36,000; and in the same period the Inquisition destroyed 150,000 Christians. Power was given—all the nations of the Western empire were united in this war, instigated by the Pope and priesthood.—BOOTHROYD.

destined to return thither, was beheld, by the apostle in vision, in heaven; with such attire and circumstances, as rendered the appearance peculiarly wonderful, and denoted that it was significant of some great events. She was clothed with the sun; as an emblem of her being justified, sanctified, and irradiated by virtue of union with Christ, "the Sun of righteousness:" she had the moon under her feet; to denote her superiority to the reflected and feebler light of the Mosaic dispensation, and to the love of all sublunary objects: her crown with twelve stars, represented her honourable maintenance of the doctrine of the twelve apostles. Her pregnancy and travailing pains, seem to be an emblem of the afflicted state of the church in the three first centuries; during which time, amidst many hardships and persecutions, with fervent prayers and earnest labours, she sought deliverance from her oppression, and an increase of her family, and waited the appointed term, which was to bring a happy crisis to these her sorrows, Gal. iv. 19. At the same time another marvellous sight was seen in heaven, even "a great red dragon." A dragon was a known emblem of Satan, and of his principal agents or vicegerents on earth. Purple or scarlet was the distinguishing colour of the Roman emperors, consuls, and generals; even as it hath been since of the popes and cardinals. The seven heads of the dragon signify the seven hills, on which Rome was built; and the seven forms of government which successively prevailed there; the ten horns marked out the ten kingdoms, into which the western empire was at length divided; but "the seven crowns on the dragon's heads," and not ten crowns on his horns, showed, that the whole power was vested in the emperors and senate, at Rome.

THE CHURCH'S DELIVERANCE.—Ver. 14—17. Two wings, as of a great eagle, were given to the woman, that she might be ready to flee to her place in the wilderness, when the time came, Exod. xix. 4. These are supposed by some writers to refer to the eastern and western empires, whose standard was an eagle, and whose protection was the means of preservation to the church, till the prefixed time of her obscurity arrived. In the midst of the preceding convulsions and heresies, the church was, as it were, preparing to flee away to her retreat, from the fury of her opposers; where she was at length to be nourished "for a time, and time, and half a time," or for three years and a half, forty-two months, or one thousand two hundred and sixty days: but her flight was not completed, till the establishment of the antichristian power spoken of in the next chapter. To prevent her escape, the dragon cast out of his mouth a flood of water, to carry her away. This is explained, with great propriety, of the inundation of the Huns, Goths, Vandals, and other barbarous nations, by which the western empire was overwhelmed: for it is known, that the idolatrous adherents to paganism encouraged these irruptions, in hopes of subverting Christianity by their means; and no doubt Satan expected to overwhelm the church, when idolaters overturned the empire. But the event proved entirely contrary to all their expectations. "The earth helped the woman, and swallowed up the flood;" the victorious barbarians united themselves to the vanquished Romans, and formed one people with them, in the several provinces of the empire; they even embraced, in form at least, the Christian religion. Ungodly men of various descriptions, from regard to their secular interests, protected the church, amidst these convulsions: and the subversion and dismembering of the western empire did not at all help the cause of idolatry; nay, it rather tended to the propagation of Christianity.—Scott.

CHAP. XIII. THE BEAST OUT OF THE SEA.—Ver. 5—7. To this monstrous beast "was given a mouth, speaking great things and blasphemies." It will soon be stated that the ecclesiastical power of Rome was the agent, and the pope the speaking image of this beast, ver. 11—15; and every one knows what blasphemous and enormous claims of his holiness, infallibility, sovereign of kings and kingdoms, Christ's vicegerent on earth, yea, God upon earth, have been spoken by this mouth of the beast. Power also, or the secular empire, was given him to continue, or rather to practise, or to prosper in his undertakings for forty-two months, or twelve hundred and sixty years. He would during this period "open his mouth in blasphemies against God;" combining with the ecclesiastical power in its usurpations, and in entrenching upon the Lord's peculiar honours and prerogatives. "He would blaspheme the name of God," by requiring all men, at the instigation of the ecclesiastical power, to render that worship to creatures which belonged to him only, "and his tabernacle," or true Christians, by stigmatizing, anathematizing, and murdering them as heretics; "and them that dwell in heaven," by scandalizing angels and departed saints, as if they sacrilegiously sought, and were pleased with the worship paid to them; and by ascribing to the latter a variety of ridiculous actions which they never did. It was also given "to the beast to wage war against, and overcome the saints:" and no computation can reach the numbers who have been put to death in different ways, on account of their maintaining the profession of the gospel, and opposing the corruptions of the church of Rome. A million of the poor Waldenses perished in France; nine hundred thousand orthodox Christians were slain in less than fifty years after the institution of the Jesuits; the Duke of Alva boasted of having put to death in the Netherlands, by the hands of the executioner, during the space of a few years, [illegible] and fifty thousand Christians [illegible]

11 And I beheld another beast [k]coming up out of the earth;[4] and he had two horns like a lamb, and he spake as a dragon.

12 And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him, and causeth the earth, and them which dwell therein, to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed.

13 And he doeth great wonders, so that [q]he maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men,

14 And [r]deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast, saying to them that dwell on the earth, [t]that they should make an image to the beast, which had the wound by a sword, and did live.

15 And he had power to give [$]life unto the image of the beast,[5] that the image of the beast should both speak, and [x]cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed.

16 And he caused all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to [y]receive [b]a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads:

17 And that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name.

AND I looked, and, lo, [b]a Lamb stood on the mount Sion,[1] and with him an hundred forty and four thousand, [e]having his Father's name written in their foreheads.

2 And I heard [f]a voice from heaven, as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of a great thunder; and I heard the voice of harpers harping with their harps:

3 And they sung as it were [k]a new song before the throne, and before the four beasts, and the elders: and no man could learn that song but the hundred and forty and four thousand, which were [n]redeemed from the earth.

4 These are they which are not defiled with women; for they are virgins. [p]These are they which follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth. These [q]were *redeemed from among men, being the first-fruits unto God and to the Lamb.

5 And in their mouth was found no guile: for they are without fault before the throne of God.

6 And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having [y]the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people,[2]

7 Saying with a loud voice, [c]Fear God, [d]and give glory to him; for [e]the hour of his judgment is come: and [f]worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters.

8 And there followed another angel, saying, [h]Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, [i]because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.

9 And the third angel[3] followed them, saying with a loud voice, [m]If any man worship the beast and his image, and receive his mark in his forehead, or in his hand,

10 The same shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation; and he shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb:

11 And [r]the smoke of their torment ascendeth up for ever and ever: and they have no rest day nor night, who worship the beast and his image, and whosoever receiveth the mark of his name.

13 And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Write, [c]Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord [†]from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may [e]rest from their labours; [f]and their works do follow them.

14 And I looked, and behold a white cloud, and upon the cloud one sat [h]like unto the Son of man, having on his head a golden crown, and in his hand a sharp sickle.

15 And another angel came out of the temple, crying with a loud voice to him that sat on the cloud, Thrust in thy sickle, and reap: for the time is come for thee to reap;[4] [o]for the harvest of the earth is [‡]ripe.

16 And he that sat on the cloud thrust in his sickle on the earth; and the earth was reaped.

17 And another angel came out of the temple which is in heaven, he also having a sharp sickle.

18 And another angel came out from the altar, which had power over fire;[5] and cried with a loud cry to him that had the sharp sickle, saying, Thrust in thy sharp sickle, and gather the clusters of the vine of the earth; for her grapes are fully ripe.

"doing great wonders," &c. These, whether they be human impostures, or wrought by the agency of Satan, he doeth in the sight of men to deceive them, and in the sight of the first beast to serve him; but they are neither performed by the power nor for the glory of God. By these means the two-horned beast, or the regular and secular clergy, deceived the inhabitants of the earth, to make an image of the first beast, or the temporal authority of the empire, as it formerly subsisted in the reigning emperor at Rome. This image has indeed been variously interpreted. But is not the pope, as a temporal prince, the very image of the ancient emperors? Is he not, as the pretended infallible head of the church, the great idol of all zealous papists? and is he not, in both respects the representative of the whole antichristian tyranny? Can we then doubt who this image is? Or can we help being amazed at this exact and circumstantial prediction of such improbable events, so many hundred years before they took place? The two-horned beast, or the Roman clergy, as represented by the consistory of cardinals, which assembles at the death of a pope, makes the image, when they elect a private person to that exalted station, and by putting him in possession of the supreme authority, they give life to him as the image of the ten-horned beast, and enable him to speak, by uttering his bulls and mandates, as well as to use the names of blasphemy before mentioned. But before this, they robe and crown the image which they have made; they place him on an altar, and kiss his feet, and they call this ceremony adoration! Like other idolaters they make their idol, and then worship him: and an ancient medal, struck on that occasion, has this motto, Quem creant, adorant, "Whom they create they adore!" Then they use all their power and influence to support his authority through all the nations of their communion, and concur in persecuting, even unto death, all those who will not join in the same idolatrous observance of it.

Number and Name of the Beast.—Ver. 18. Lateinos signifies the Latin man; or the man of Latium, from which place the Romans derived their original and their language; and this word, according to the genuine orthography, contains, in numerical letters, exactly the number six hundred and sixty-six. The church of Rome is properly the Latin church, and they use the Latin language in every thing: and so the beast, or the authority exercised through the ten kingdoms in support of that church, of which the pope is the living image, may well be called Lateinos. But though the apostle wrote in Greek, he yet used some Hebrew names in this book; so we may perhaps think he alluded to a name in that language; and it is most astonishing that the word Romith in Hebrew, which answers to Lateinos, signifies Roman, contains in numeral letters exactly six hundred and sixty-six. Nor can any other two words be produced from two different languages which so nearly coincide together in meaning, and exactly stand for the same number in numerical letters: the coincidence is really most surprising. As John could only refer to the Greek or the Hebrew language in this matter, and as the number of the name of the Latin man, or the Roman, in both languages is exactly the number of the beast, so I see no occasion to doubt any more either about the beast or his number, especially as Ireneus in the second century put the same construction on it.—Scott.

CHAP. XIV. The New Song.—Ver. 3. This multitude were singing a new song before the throne, with a voice loud as that of mighty rushing waters, or that of thunder; yet exquisitely melodious, and accompanied with the music of harpers of consummate skill. No doubt the new song which they sang was the same for substance with that which has been already considered, chap. v. 9—14; vii. 9—12. This was sung in the presence of the emblematic representatives of the church and its ministers; and none could learn it but the redeemed. For as it related immediately to redemption, the proud, the impenitent, the unbelieving, and the carnal, could not understand the nature or the glory of this subject; nor could angel join in it, not being redeemed to God by the blood of the Lamb, though they unite in worshiping him, as worthy to receive all honour and blessing.—Scott.

Blessedness of the Dead.—Ver. 13. Observe, 1. The description of those that "are" and shall be "blessed"—such as "die in the Lord," either "die" in the cause of Christ, or rather "die" in a state of vital union with Christ, such as are found in Christ when death comes. 2. The demonstration of this blessedness—"they rest from their labours, and their works do follow them." (1.) They are "blessed" in their "rest," "they rest from" all sin, temptation, sorrow, and persecution; "there the wicked cease from troubling, there the weary are at rest." (2.) They are "blessed" in their recompense, "their works follow them;" they do not go before them, as their title or purchase, but "follow them," as their evidence of having lived and "died in the Lord;" and the memory of them will be pleasant, and the reward glorious, far above the merit of all their services and sufferings. (3.) They are happy in the time of their dying, when they have lived to see the cause of God reviving, the peace of the church returning, and the wrath of God falling upon their idolatrous, cruel enemies.

The Vintage.—Ver. 19. Observe, 1. To whom this vintage-work was committed—to an "angel, another angel that came out from the altar," that is, from the holiest of all in heaven. 2. At whose request this vintage-work was undertaken; it was, as before, at the cry of an "angel out of the temple," the ministers and churches of God on earth. 3. 2 And I saw as it were a sea of glass mingled with fire; and them [g]that had gotten the victory over the beast, and over his image, and over his mark, and over the number of his name, stand on the sea of glass, [l]having the harps of God.

3 And they sing the song of Moses the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb, saying, [n]Great and marvellous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; [p]just and true are thy ways, thou King of *saints.

4 [r]Who shall not fear thee, O Lord, and glorify thy name? for [t]thou only art holy: [u]for all nations shall come and worship before thee; [x]for thy judgments are made manifest.

5 And after that I looked, and, behold, the temple of the tabernacle of the testimony in heaven was opened:[2]

6 And the seven angels came out of the temple, having the seven plagues, clothed in pure and white linen, and having their breasts girded with golden girdles.

7 And one of the four beasts gave unto the seven angels [c]seven golden vials full of the wrath of God, who liveth for ever and ever.

8 And the temple was filled with smoke [f]from the glory of God, and from his power; and no man was able to enter into the temple, till the seven plagues of the seven angels were fulfilled.

CHAP. XVI.

The seven vials of wrath poured out, 1. Christ cometh suddenly, 15.

AND I heard a great voice out of the temple saying to the seven angels, Go your ways, [e]and pour out the vials of the wrath of God upon the earth.[1]

2 And the first went, and poured out his vial upon the earth; and there fell a noisome and grievous sore upon the men which had the mark of the beast, and upon them which worshipped his image.

3 And the second angel poured out his vial upon the sea; and it became as the blood of a dead man: [l]and every living soul died in the sea.

4 And the third angel poured out his vial upon the rivers and fountains of waters; [l]and they became blood.

5 And I heard the angel of the waters say, [n]Thou art righteous, O Lord, [o]which art, and wast, and shalt be, because thou hast judged thus:

6 For they have shed the blood of saints and prophets, and thou hast given them blood to drink; [q]for they are worthy.

7 And I heard another out of the altar say, Even so, Lord God Almighty, [t]true and righteous are thy judgments.

8 And the fourth angel poured out his vial upon the sun; [x]and power was given unto him to scorch men with fire.

9 And men were *scorched with great heat, and blasphemed the name of God, which hath power over these plagues: [z]and they repented not to give him glory.

10 And the fifth angel poured out his vial upon the seat of the beast;[2] and his kingdom was [c]full of darkness; and they gnawed their tongues for pain,

11 And [e]blasphemed the God of heaven because of their pains and their sores, [h]and repented not of their deeds.

12 And the sixth angel poured out his vial upon the great river Euphrates;[3] [k]and the water thereof was dried up, that the way of the kings of the east might be prepared.

13 And I saw [m]three unclean spirits like frogs[4] come out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of [p]the false prophet.

14 For they are the spirits of devils, [r]working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world, [u]to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty.

15 ¶ Behold, [y]I come as a thief. [z]Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame.

16 And he gathered them together into a place called in [e]the Hebrew tongue Armageddon.[5]

17 And the seventh angel poured out his vial into the air;[6] and there came a great voice out of the temple of heaven, from the throne, saying, [g]It is done.

18 And there were voices, and thunders, and lightnings; and there was a great earthquake, such as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, and so great.

Casting these grapes "into the wine-press;" here we are told what was the "wine-press;" it was "the wrath of God," the fire of his indignation, some terrible calamity, very probably the sword, shedding the blood of the wicked.—Henry.

CHAP. XV. SCENE IN HEAVEN. The sea of glass, mingled with fire, is very differently explained: but as the persons referred to stood upon it, we cannot well understand it of the fountain in which they had washed away their sins: perhaps it was emblematical of the tempestuous times, during which believers then lived; the slippery and fragile nature of their standing considered in itself, and the fiery trials which they endured. They, however, who were conquerors over the beast; who had cleaved to the truth and will of God, and had refused subjection to the spiritual tyranny of antichrist, or to be branded as his slaves; stood on this brittle, slippery, sea of glass mingled with fire, unhurt and undismayed; as the children of Israel passed through the Red Sea, or standing on its shore, saw their enemies dead before them. Feeling, therefore, a holy assurance of their own safety, and a triumphant joy in the prospect of the destruction of their persecutors, they sang the song of Moses, the servant of God: they praised the Lord for their deliverance, as Israel by orders from Moses had done; and they sang the song of the Lamb, the new song before-mentioned. Thus they celebrated the great and marvellous works of God, the Almighty Lord of all; and his justice and faithfulness, as in Christ Jesus, the king of saints, the protector, comforter, ruler, and portion, of all his redeemed people. In this view, they inquired, who would not, or ought not, to fear, adore, and glorify the name of JEHOVAH; seeing he only was holy; and neither the worship of idols, nor the names of blasphemy used, by the beast and his image, were to be endured: for the time was arrived, in which all should come and worship before the Lord: as his judgments were then about to be made manifest. The appearance of glory above the mercy-seat in the most holy place, the tabernacle of God in the temple, was an emblem of his appearance in heaven as reconciled to sinners, through Jesus Christ: the seven angels, coming forth from thence, showed, that these judgments would be executed on the enemies of the church, in mercy to God's people: while their white clothing and golden girdles, represented their holiness, and the righteousness and excellency of these awful dispensations.—Scott.

CHAP. XVI. THE SEVEN VIALS.—Ver. 1, 2. The angels were ordered, by a voice from the temple, to pour out the contents of the vials, censers, or cups, that they had received, which were emblems of the wrath of God to be poured out on the antichristian empire, and all who adhered to it. Whether the sores, produced by the pouring out of the first vial, are to be understood literally, with respect to terrible pestilences, or in a figurative meaning, the event must determine. Ver. 3—7. chap. viii. 8—10. Seas and rivers turned into congealed blood, are proper emblems of vast slaughter and devastation. Yet the angel of the waters, who was appointed to preside over them, or to be a ministering spirit in these dispensations, celebrated the justice of the eternal Lord, who had determined to punish with such calamities, the blood-thirsty murderers of saints and prophets; and in appointing them, as it were, blood to drink. Ver. 8, 9. Chap. viii. 12. Whether burning seasons producing drought or famine, or some other judgment thus figuratively described, be intended, the event must show. But the extreme distress of the sufferers, instead of inducing them to glorify God, by confessing, repenting of, and forsaking their sins, will irritate them to blaspheme the name of God, and so tend to the increase of their guilt and final condemnation. Ver. 10, 11. This predicts some great calamity to Rome itself, yet of such a nature as will darken the whole antichristian empire. But it will only excite the sufferers to horrid blasphemies, and more desperate defiance of God.—Commentators in general allow, that this vial is not yet poured out: and this is a sufficient reason, why a commentator should decline giving any conjecture, in what manner so compendious and so obscure a prediction will be fulfilled: but, when fulfilled, it will cease to be obscure. Ver. 12—16. If the river Euphrates is here to be understood literally; some eastern nation or nations may be expected to invade Europe, as the executioner of the Lord's vengeance on the kingdom of the beast. But as Rome is mystical Babylon, which stood on the river Euphrates, and was both enriched and protected by it; perhaps we may understand, by the drying up of the Euphrates, such deductions from the power and resources of Rome, as shall embolden and excite other nations to attack her. Three unclean spirits, like frogs, will come out of the mouth of the dragon, as representing Satan, who gave his power to the beast: out of the mouth of the beast or antichristian empire; and out of that of the false prophet, or the antichristian church and clergy. That is, emissaries, commissioned by them, and instigated by unclean spirits, being loathsome, and croaking, and intruding themselves into every place, to the mischief of all, Ex. viii. 1—3, will go forth to promote idolatry, pretending to work miracles in support of their doctrine; and to collect the kings of the earth, and of the whole world, even all in every place who favour that design, that they may make one united effort against the cause of God; and thus they will be gathered for battle, against the great day, in which the Almighty God intends to destroy them.—Some have imagined these three mystical frogs to be the Dominicans, Franciscans, and Jesuits; and the description given of them, would agree well enough with that of those Janizaries of the church of Rome. Ver. 17—21. Satan is called "the prince of the power of the 3 So [e]he carried me away in the spirit into the wilderness: and I saw [f]a woman sit upon a scarlet-coloured beast, full of names of blasphemy, having seven heads and ten horns.

4 And the woman was arrayed in purple and scarlet colour, and *decked[t] with gold, and precious stones, and pearls, having a golden cup in her hand full of abominations and filthiness of her fornication.

5 And [r]upon her forehead was a name written, [s]MYSTERY, [t]BABYLON THE GREAT, [u]THE MOTHER OF ‡HARLOTS AND ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH.

7 And the angel said unto me, Wherefore didst thou marvel? I will tell thee the mystery of the woman, and of the beast that carrieth her, which hath the seven heads and ten horns.

8 The beast that thou sawest was, and is not;[2] and shall ascend out of the bottomless pit, and [c]go into perdition: and they that dwell on the earth shall wonder, ([e]whose names were not written in the book of life [f]from the foundation of the world,) when they behold [x]the beast that was, and is not, and yet is.

AND after these things I saw another angel come down from heaven, having great power; and the earth was lightened with his glory.

air," and this last vial will be poured into the seat of his empire; for after it, his cause in every place without, as well as within, the dominions of the beast, will be ruined. A proclamation was therefore made, that it was done, or finished; as under the seventh trumpet the mystery of God was to be finished, chap. x. 7. Terrible calamities, awful displays of the Divine presence; intestine distractions, and the revolt or destruction of cities and nations, &c. will make way for great Babylon to drink of the wine of the fierceness of God's wrath; and the concurrent judgments are described in the strongest language; especially by hailstones of above a hundred pounds weight each; which must dash in pieces all persons and things whatsoever, on which they fall. But how is this to be understood, the event must show.—Scott.

CHAP. XVII. ROME.—Ver. 1—6. Observe, 1. The invitation given to the apostle to take a view of what was here to be represented. "Come hither, and I will show thee the judgment of the great whore," &c. This is a name of great infamy. A whore, in this passage, is one that is married, and has been false to her husband's bed, has forsaken the guide of her youth, and broken the covenant of God; she had been a prostitute to the kings of the earth, whom she had intoxicated "with the wine of her fornication." 2. The appearance she made; it was gay and gaudy, like such sort of creatures. 3. Her principal seat and residence—"upon the beast that had seven heads and ten horns;" that is to say, Rome, the city on seven hills, infamous for idolatry, tyranny, and blasphemy. 4. Her name, which "was written on her forehead." It was the custom of impudent harlots to hang out signs, with their names, that all might know what they were. Now in this observe, (1.) She is named from her place of residence—"Babylon the great." But that we might not take it for the old Babylon literally so called, we are told there is a mystery in the name; it is some other great city resembling the old Babylon. (2.) She is named from her infamous way and practice; not only a harlot, but a mother of harlots; breeding up harlots, and nursing and training them up to idolatry, and all sort of lewdness and wickedness; the parent and nurse of all false religion and filthy conversation. 5. Her diet; she satiated herself with "the blood of the saints and martyrs of Jesus." She drank their blood with such greediness, that she intoxicated herself with it.—Henry.

THE OVERTHROW.—Ver. 15—18. The angel next explained to the apostle, "the many waters, on which the woman sat" in regal dignity. So many words all in the plural number, aptly describe the extensive dominion of the church of Rome, not only over those within the territories belonging to the papacy, but over all the kingdoms of that communion: nay, the pope hath claimed the right over all nations, to dispose of crowns, and depose princes at his pleasure, as if he were lord of lords, and king of kings! and the very titles of universal bishop, and the Roman Catholic Church, fully accord to this description. This, however, will not always be the case; for the ten horns, or kingdoms, that once exalted and supported the ecclesiastical tyranny, will at length hate, desolate, strip, devour, and destroy it. Most of them will be the principal instruments in the destruction of popery, and the ruin of Rome itself; though some will lament over these events.—How far some late revolutions may lead to this crisis, we cannot tell; but present appearances render it not improbable, that the last victory of the beast over the witnesses of Christ, will be obtained in some other way, than by papal delusions. God had so influenced the hearts of these kings, by his power over them, and by the dispensations of his providence, that they fulfilled his will, or did those things without intending it, which he had purposed and predicted; so that they agreed together to give their power to the beast; to make him, as it were, their liege lord, and only to reign over others, in order to render them subservient to him. But they will at length better understand their own interest, and their duty to God and their subjects, than thus any longer to prostitute their power.—Scott.

CHAP. XVIII. OVERTHROW OF POPERY.—Ver. 9. Probably the destruction of Rome will be finished by some immediate judgment of God; and the nature of the soil in the vicinity, the frequent eruptions of subterraneous fires, and the terrible earthquakes which have occurred, seem to point out the method; the combustibles are provided, and the train is already laid; there only wants the "breath of the Almighty to kindle it." —But whilst others, whose hopes of further gains will be gone, shall lament the fall of Rome; the inhabitants of heaven, and especially the holy apostles and prophets, are called on to rejoice over it; as God had revenged them on that idolatrous persecuting city, as well as made way for the preaching of his gospel to all nations.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS ON THE DOWNFALL OF POPERY.—When collective bodies are ripe for vengeance, their sins will be punished in this world; but individuals are reserved unto the wrath to come.—Impunity and prosperity in wickedness, constitute the most fatal incentive to further crimes; and, as the day of punishment will come, they may be accounted the most dire calamities.—When the Lord shall come in his great power, to lighten the earth with his glory; he will cast down the proudest cities, which are filled with iniquity, and oppose his cause: the magnificence of wicked kings, or the riches of ungodly merchants will then avail nothing; except to augment, and render more intolerable, the vengeance to be inflicted; and surely the contempt and torment of hell will be more dreadful to those, who have glorified themselves, and lived deliciously, than works: in the cup which she hath filled, fill to her double.

7 How much she hath glorified herself, and lived deliciously, so much torment and sorrow give her: for she saith in her heart, I sit a queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow.

8 Therefore [t]shall her plagues come in one day, death, and mourning, and famine; [u]and she shall be utterly burned with fire:[2] [x]for strong is the Lord God who judgeth her.

9 And the kings of the earth who have committed fornication, and lived deliciously with her, shall bewail her, and lament for her, when they shall see the smoke of her burning,

10 Standing afar off for the fear of her torment, saying, Alas, alas! [d]that great city Babylon, that mighty city! [e]for in one hour is thy judgment come.

11 And the merchants of the earth shall weep and mourn over her; for no man buyeth their merchandise any more:

12 The merchandise of gold,[3] and silver, and precious stones, and of pearls, and fine linen, and purple, and silk, and scarlet, and all [†]thyine wood, and all manner vessels of ivory, and all manner vessels of most precious wood, and of brass, and iron, and marble.

13 And cinnamon, and odours, and ointments, and frankincense, and wine, and oil, and fine flour, and wheat, and beasts, and sheep, and horses, and chariots, and [‡]slaves, [l]and souls of men.

14 And the fruits that [m]thy soul lusted after are departed from thee, and all things which were dainty and goodly are departed from thee, and thou shalt find them no more at all.

15 The merchants of these things, which were made rich by her, shall stand afar off for the fear of her torment, weeping and wailing,

16 And saying, [q]Alas, alas! that great city, that was clothed in fine linen, and purple, and scarlet, and decked with gold, and precious stones, and pearls!

17 For [r]in one hour so great riches is come to nought. And every shipmaster, and all the company in ships, and sailors, and as many as trade by sea, stood afar off,

18 And cried, when they saw the smoke of her burning, saying, [u]What city is like unto this great city!

19 And they cast dust on their heads, and cried, weeping and wailing, saying, Alas, alas! that great city, wherein were made rich all that had ships in the sea by reason of her costliness! for in one hour is she made desolate.[4]

20 [z]Rejoice over her, thou heaven, [a]and ye holy apostles and prophets; for [b]God hath avenged you on her.

[5] Music was the entertainment of the rich and great; trade, the business of men of middle rank; preparing the necessaries of life, the employment of the lowest people; marriages, in which lamps and songs were employed, were required for peopling cities. Thus the desolation of Rome is described in such a manner, that neither rich nor poor, neither persons of the middle nor the lowest ranks, should be able to live there any more, nor should it be repeopled by new marriages, but remain desolate and uninhabited.—Lowman.

5 And a voice came out of the throne, saying, [o]Praise our God, all ye his servants, and ye that fear him, both small and great.

6 And I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying, Alleluia: [s]for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth.

7 Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honour to him: [u]for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready.[1]

to other sinners! No allies or helpers can deliver those, against whom the Lord God, as a strong judge and avenger, is pleased to contend: they can only lament the victims of his indignation, and tremble for themselves. The prosperous merchants and traders, in great commercial cities, should learn from these prophecies, to "buy the truth," to "get wisdom, and with all their getting to get (spiritual) understanding," to "sell all, and purchase the pearl of great price;" to ensure "the unsearchable riches of Christ;" and to be "faithful stewards in the unrighteous mammon:" otherwise, even in this life, they may lament, that "no man buyeth their merchandise any more;" and, that "all the fruits that their souls lusted after, are departed from them." Death, however, will soon terminate their commerce, and in that one hour all the riches of the ungodly will come to nought, and all "their purple and fine linen," will be exchanged, not only for the coffin and the worm, but for the fire that never shall be quenched. And, alas! too often, injustice, oppression, fraud, avarice, or excessive indulgence, are connected with extensive commerce; and to number "the persons of men" with beasts, sheep, and horses, as the stock of a farm, or with bales of goods, as the cargo of a ship, is no doubt a most detestable and antichristian practice, fit only for Babylon the Great. Yet even this, cruel, unrighteous, and hateful as it is, must not be considered as the worst traffic, even of this our land: for the souls of men are traded for by those, who take the cure of them for the sake of the emolument, and the abundance of the delicacies obtained by it; and then either leave them to perish in ignorance, or poison them by heresy, or lead them on the road to hell by a profligate example. How fervently should we then pray that God would raise up reformers, who may contend as firmly, perseveringly, and successfully, against this vile merchandise, as some honourable and philanthropical persons have against the accursed slave-trade! For when Christ shall again come to drive the buyers and sellers out of the temple, he will have much to do in other places besides Rome; many of these spiritual wickednesses, and this merchandise of souls, by feigned words, equivocating subscriptions and declarations, nay, worshipping God in expressions, which are avowedly deemed false by those who use them, and all this for filthy lucre's sake, will be found, under different forms, even in the Protestant churches; and perhaps no denomination is quite free from the guilt of rendering religious profession, and sacred functions, subservient to worldly interest, credit, ease, and indulgence. These are the remains of the antichristianity derived from Rome, which most need protesting against and removing; in these things we ought to come out and separate from Babylon, if we would not partake of her plagues. Compared with such evils, a posture, a garb, or a ceremony, though perhaps inconvenient in itself, and derived from Rome, are scarcely worth noticing; yet bigotry centers itself principally much the other way; and externals are decried against with great warmth, whilst the spiritual pride, avarice, worldly indulgence, and intolerance of Rome, are not so much disliked! But the vengeance of heaven is coming upon Rome, not for gestures, garbs, and ceremonies, though multiplied, ridiculous, and of bad consequence in themselves; but for idolatry, ambition, oppression, cruelty to the people of God, imposture, avarice, licentiousness, and spiritual tyranny. These are the sins which have reached to the heavens, the iniquities that God remembers, and the evils for which we must stand aloof from her communion, and that of all others, who resemble her; or we shall be involved in their destruction. But, we must needs go out of the world, and the church too, if we renounce every religious sect, because some of the members or leaders of it are criminal in such matters.—Scott.

CHAP. XIX. Joy at Deliverance from Popish Thraldom.—Ver. 1—4. Here we have, 1. The form of their thanksgiving, in that heavenly and most comprehensive word, "Alleluia, praise ye the Lord:" with this they begin, with this they go on, and with this they end; their prayers are now turned into praises, their hosannas end in hallelujas. 2. The matter of their thanksgiving; they praise him for the truth of his word, and the righteousness of his providential conduct, especially in this great event—the ruin of Babylon, who had been a mother, nurse, and nest of idolatry, lewdness, and cruelty; for which signal example of divine justice, they ascribe "salvation, and glory, and honour, and power, unto our God." 3. The effect of these their praises: when the angels and saints cried "Allelujah," her fire burned more fiercely, and "her smoke ascended for ever and ever." The surest way to have our deliverances continued and completed, is, to give God the glory of what he has done for us: praising God for what we have, is praying in the most effectual manner for what is yet further to be done for us; the praises of the saints blow up the fire of God's wrath against the common enemy. 4. The blessed harmony between the angels and the saints in this triumphant song.—Henry.

Spiritual Espousals.—Ver. 7, 8. The whole company, before-mentioned, next call on each other to rejoice, and give glory to the Lord; because "the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his bride hath made herself ready." Christ is the bridegroom of his ransomed church: this sacred union will be fully completed in heaven; but the beginning of the glorious millennium, may be considered as a most remarkable celebration of his espousals on earth: all that has hitherto been done seems to be mainly an introduction to that happy era; when innumerable [illegible] of the church on earth will greatly [illegible] Lamb will come, and his espoused [illegible]

11 And I saw heaven opened,[4] and behold a white horse; and he that sat upon him was called [i]Faithful and True; [m]and in righteousness he doth judge and make war.

12 His eyes were as a flame of fire, and on his head were many crowns; and he had a name written, that no man knew but he himself:

13 And he was [q]clothed with a vesture dipped in blood: and his name is called [r]The Word of God.

14 And the armies which were in heaven followed him upon white horses, clothed in fine linen, white and clean.

15 And [x]out of his mouth goeth a sharp sword, that with it he should smite the nations; [y]and he shall rule them with a rod of iron: [z]and he treadeth the wine-press of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God.

16 And he hath [a]on his vesture and on his thigh[5] a name written, [b]KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS.

17 And I saw an angel standing in the sun;[6] and he cried with a loud voice, saying to all the fowls that fly in the midst of heaven, Come and gather yourselves together unto the supper of the great God;

18 That ye may eat the flesh of kings, and the flesh of captains, and the flesh of mighty men, and the flesh of horses, and of them that sit on them, and the flesh of all men, both free and bond, both small and great.

19 And I saw the beast,[7] and the kings of the earth, and their armies, gathered together to make war against him that sat on the horse, and against his army.

20 And [i]the beast was taken, and with him [k]the false prophet that wrought miracles before him, with which he deceived them that had received the mark of the beast, and them that worshipped his image. [l]These both were cast alive into a lake of fire burning with brimstone.

21 And the remnant were slain with the sword of him that sat upon the horse, which sword proceeded out of his mouth: and all the fowls were filled with their flesh.

Satan bound, 1. The first resurrection, 5. Satan again loosed, 7. The general resurrection, 12.

AND [a]I saw an angel come down from heaven, [b]having the key of the bottomless pit and a great chain in his hand.

2 And he laid hold on the dragon, that old serpent, which is the Devil, and Satan, and bound him a thousand years,

3 And [f]cast him into the bottomless pit, and shut him up, and set a seal upon him, that he [h]should deceive the nations no more, till the thousand years should be fulfilled: and after that he must be loosed a little season.

4 And I saw thrones,[1] and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them: and I saw [m]the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, [p]and which had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands; and [q]they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years.

5 But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. [s]This is the first resurrection.

6 [t]Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power; but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years.

7 And when the thousand years are expired, Satan shall be loosed out of his prison,

8 And shall go out to deceive the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth,[2] [b]Gog and Magog,[3] [c]to gather them together to battle; the number of whom is as the sand of the sea.

9 And they went up on the breadth of the earth, and compassed the camp of the saints about, and the beloved city: [h]and fire came down from God out of heaven, and devoured them.

10 And [i]the devil that deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet are, and shall be tormented day and night, for ever and ever.

11 And [m]I saw a great white throne,[4] and him that sat on it, [n]from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away; and there was found no place for them.

12 And [p]I saw the dead, small and great, [r]stand before God: and [s]the books were opened; and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works.

13 And [x]the sea gave up the dead which were in it; [y]and death and *hell delivered up the dead which were in them: and they were judged every man according to their works.

14 And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death.

antichristian abuses, will be made ready, and meet to be publicly owned by him, as his delight and his beloved. Then to her it will be granted to be arrayed in fine linen, "clean and white, which is the righteousness of the saints." The word is plural, and some would render it, "the righteous acts of the saints;" but the word raiment in this meaning, seems generally to signify, either the righteousness of Christ imputed to them, or the image of Christ renewed in them by the sanctification of the Spirit, of which their righteous acts are effects and evidences.

JESUS THE WARRIOR.—Ver. 11—16. Having noted the rejoicings of the universal church, and of all the servants of God, over the destruction of Rome; the apostle saw heaven opened, as an indication of further visions: and he beheld a white horse, the emblem of justice and holiness; and one sat on it, who was "called faithful and true;" fulfilling his promises to his people, and executing threatened vengeance on his enemies. He was indeed about to judge and to wage war against those, who refused submission to him; yet he was unlike those warriors, whose ambition, rapacity, or malignant passions, have in every age made the earth a field of blood; for he conducted both his judicial proceedings, and his military expeditions, by the most perfect rules of righteousness. Yet none could deceive him, or elude his detection, for "his eyes were as a flame of fire," chap. i. 14. The many crowns worn by him, denoted the extent of his authority, as Creator of the world, and "head over all things to his church;" and the multitude of his victories. "He had a name written that no man knew but he himself;" for, as the eternal Son of God, his perfections and nature are incomprehensible. His vesture, dipped in blood, implied, either the atonement of his own blood, as the ground of his mediatorial authority; or rather, that he was come from the slaughter of his enemies, and had stained his garments with their blood. But though none could fully comprehend his perfections and counsels; yet he was known in his church by the name of "the Word of God," as declaring the mysterious perfections, and holy truth and will of God, to fallen men. He was also followed by the armies of heaven, even his redeemed and converted people, who rode on white horses, to denote their conformity to him, and their concurrence and agency in his victories; and they were clothed in fine linen, ver. 8, as accepted in him, and renewed by him. To illustrate the nature of his conquests still more fully, "out of his mouth went a sharp sword," chap. i. 16, implying that he powerfully executed the denunciations of his word, and smote the opposing nations. Thus he trode the wine-press of the wrath of God; crushing all other obstinate enemies, as he had done the mystical Babylon.* He had also inscribed "on his vesture, and on his thigh," (the part of his garments where the sword is worn,) another name or title, implying his universal and absolute dominion, as "King of kings, and Lord of lords," chap. xvii. 14; which carried in it a warning to the most powerful princes to submit to him, or they must fall before him.—Scott.

CHAP. XX. THE FIRST RESURRECTION.—Ver. 6. The expression itself intimates a figurative resurrection, and therefore it is carefully distinguished from the literal resurrection of the dead. It is moreover an instance of that wise and proper obscurity, which we always find in prophecies, previous to their accomplishment.—This is the first resurrection; a spiritual and mystical resurrection; and they who shall partake of it, living in those happy times, will be holy and blessed, chap. xix. 9, even more than Christians in other ages.—When it is added, that the second death shall have no power over them, it seems implied, that they must enter heaven by passing through the first death: nor is there any thing different in what follows from the language used concerning believers of other times, except that they shall "reign with Christ a thousand years;" which naturally signifies, that a succession of such triumphant Christians, made honourable and happy by the Lord's special presence with them, shall continue through the millennium.

GOG AND MAGOG.—Ver. 8. It is vain to inquire, who Gog and Magog will be, or whence they will come: for this also must be understood figuratively, to denote enemies fierce and numerous as Gog and Magog had been before the millennium; and it is expressly said, that they were the nations "in the four quarters of the earth."—When Satan and his angels shall be loosed, a few years will suffice, for the seducing of men into idolatry or infidelity; and then persecutions and massacres of Christians will be as natural as ever; and it will probably appear to the pious remnant, as if the cause of Christ was about to be altogether ruined. But whilst these enemies, with most formidable preparations, shall collect from all parts of the world, to compass the camp, or garrison of the saints, and to besiege the beloved city; (for the images are borrowed from the affairs of Israel, in the wilderness, and in Canaan;) they will be destroyed by fire from heaven. Then the Lord, having once more made manifest the depravity of human nature, and the malice and subtlety of the devil; will cast him finally into the lake of fire, never more to have liberty, or power to do mischief, but to be for ever punished with persecuting tyrants, idolatrous priests, and false teachers; who were his prime ministers, during his usurpation, as God and prince of this world.

THE GREAT WHITE THRONE.—Ver. 11—15. The apostle next "saw a great white throne," as emblematical of the majesty, dominion, power, and righteousness, with which Christ will then be manifested. On this sat One, from whose presence the earth and heavens fled away; which most sublimely denoted the effulgency of his glory; and the entire dissolution of the visible creation, and the present state of the world, by his power

4 And [1]God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away.

[1] The first five verses are a continuation of the former chapter. A pure river—"the river and tree of life" remind us of Paradise restored and improved. 15 And he that talked with me had a golden reed to measure the city, and the gates thereof, and the wall thereof.

16 And the city lieth four-square,[5] and the length is as large as the breadth. And he measured the city with the reed, [s]twelve thousand furlongs: the length, and the breadth, and the height of it are equal.

17 And he measured the wall thereof, [b]an hundred and forty and four cubits, according to the measure of a man, that is, of the angel.

18 And the building of the wall of it was of jasper: and the city was pure gold, like unto clear glass.

19 And the foundations of the wall of the city were garnished with all manner of precious stones. The first foundation was jasper; the second, sapphire; the third, a chalcedony; the fourth, an emerald;

20 The fifth, sardonyx; the sixth, sardius; the seventh, chrysolite; the eighth, beryl; the ninth, a topaz; the tenth, a chrysoprasus; the eleventh, a jacinth; the twelfth, an amethyst.

21 And [s]the twelve gates were twelve pearls; every several gate was of one pearl: and the street of the city was [b]pure gold, as it were transparent glass.

22 And [k]I saw no temple therein: for [l]the Lord God Almighty and [m]the Lamb are the temple of it.

23 And [n]the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it; [o]for the glory of God did lighten it, and [p]the Lamb is the light thereof.

24 And the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it; and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honour into it.

25 And the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day;[6] for there shall be no night there.

26 And they shall bring the glory and honour of the nations into it.

and at his coming.—Beyond doubt, it is the grandest idea, that ever was expressed in human language; unless some verses in the first of Genesis may be thought to rival it. The sublime conceptions and expressions of the most admired heathen poets, are mean and low, compared with it.—The apostle then beheld the dead, as raised again, "stand before God." We know that Christ shall sit on the throne of his glory, to judge the world; and he must, therefore, be here meant. Before him all nations, and all persons, of every rank, character, and description, were gathered. "And the books were opened:" this figuratively represents the discoveries which will be made of all the thoughts, words, actions, motives, intentions, dispositions, obligations, advantages, and talents of all men, by the Divine omniscience; the comparison of the whole with the holy law of God; and the recollection and consciousness, which every man will have of all his past actions; though he had long forgotten many of them, till thus brought to light and to remembrance: that so an exact estimate may be made of every person's character; of the evidence and degree of his grace, and of his fruitfulness in good works; or of the aggravations, or alleviations, of his sins. Thus the final award will be made in perfect justice and impartiality, connected with truth and mercy. For "another book was opened, even the book of life," otherwise all must be condemned.—Scott.

CHAP. XXI. GOD'S PRESENCE IN THE NEW JERUSALEM.—Ver. 3. "I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying, "Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men," &c. Observe, 1. The presence of God with his church is the glory of the church. 2. It is matter of wonder that a holy God should ever dwell with any of the children of men. 3. The presence of God with his people in heaven will not be interrupted as it is on earth, but he will dwell with them continually. 4. The covenant, interest, and relation, that there are now between God and his people, will be filled up and perfected in heaven. "They shall be his people;" their souls shall be assimilated to him, filled with all the love, honour, and delight in God, that their relation to him requires; this shall be their perfect holiness, and he will "be their God; God himself will be their God;" his immediate presence with them, his love fully manifested to them, and his glory put upon them, will be their perfect happiness.—Henry.

THE SECOND DEATH.—Ver. 8. "The fearful," who dared not profess, or who renounced the gospel, from the dread of reproach and suffering; the cowardly soldiers, who feared the enemy more than their Captain, and so "turned back in the day of battle;" and "infidels" or "unbelievers" of all descriptions; (not the weak in faith, but such as had no faith;) "the abominable," or those who were guilty of unnatural practices; murderers of themselves or others, in duels, wars, persecutions, perversion of justice, and oppression; "fornicators," adulterers, and lewd persons of every kind; "sorcerers;" the devil's prophets, real or pretended, to which company pretenders to new revelations belong; "idolaters and all liars," hypocrites, deceivers, false teachers; all who lie for gain, or from malice, who thus cheat or slander others; yea, all liars, though they only divert themselves or others by breaking God's commandments; all these shall have their portion in the lake of fire, with the devil and his angels.

THE NEW JERUSALEM.—Ver. 10—27. The light that shone on the city, was like the refulgency of the most admired jewels: the whole, as it appeared pendent in the air, shone with surprising lustre and beauty, and was transparent as crystal: which may intimate, that our knowledge in heaven will be intuitive, certain and productive of the most satisfying delight. The great wall of jasper, of one hundred and forty-four cubits in height, or thickness, (according to the measure of a man, from his elbow to the end of his middle finger, being the number of the twelve tribes multiplied by that of the twelve apostles,) may denote the entire security of that residence, which the Almighty God hath prepared for the whole increase of both the Old and the New Testament churches, when collected together in heaven; where no enemy can approach to annoy or alarm them for ever. Twelve gates, guarded by twelve angels, and inscribed with the names of the twelve tribes of Israel; implied, that this holy city was open on every side for the admission of the true Israel of God, even all his believing servants, and for none else; and that angels rejoiced in their security and felicity in heaven, as well as readily ministered to them during their progress thither. The twelve foundations, inscribed with the names of the twelve apostles, and formed of twelve precious stones, (which John in vision saw, in the same manner, as he did the rest,) might show that all, who belonged to that holy city, obtained their citizenship by receiving and obeying the doctrine of the apostles, respecting Christ and his salvation, as "the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world." The vast dimensions of the city, being an exact square, fifteen hundred miles on each side; might be emblematical of magnificence, and of room for any number of inhabitants, which should ever enter it. The city, and the street of it, being "of pure gold, like unto clear glass," may be an emblem of the union in heaven of those excellencies, which seem here to be incompatible. They will be splendid and durable as the purest gold; clear and transparent as the finest glass. In that happy world, the beauties and advantages, which here are divided and incompatible, will unite and agree. The temple was essential to the literal Jerusalem, as its great ornament and honour; and it made a prominent part in Ezekiel's vision of the church, during the millennium: the emblem of the holy city; but there was no temple in the mystical city which John saw; which is a demonstration, that the heavenly state [illegible] yielded her fruit every month: and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations.

3 And [h]there shall be no more curse: [i]but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it; [k]and his servants shall serve him:

4 And [l]they shall see his face; [m]and his name shall be in their foreheads.

5 And there shall be [n]no night there; and they need no candle, neither light of the sun; for the Lord God giveth them light: [o]and they shall reign for ever and ever.

6 And he said unto me,[2] [p]These sayings are faithful and true: and the Lord God of the holy prophets [r]sent his angel to shew unto his servants the things which must shortly be done.

7 Behold, I come quickly: [u]blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book.

8 And I John saw these things, and heard them. And when I had heard and seen, [x]I fell down to worship before the feet of the angel which shewed me these things.

9 Then saith he unto me, [y]See thou do it not: for I am thy fellow-servant, and of thy brethren the prophets, and of them which keep the sayings of this book: [z]worship God.

10 And he saith unto me, [b]Seal not the sayings of the prophecy of this book;[3] [c]for the time is at hand.

11 He [d]that is unjust, let him be unjust still: and he which is filthy, let him be filthy still: [e]and he that is righteous, let him be righteous still: and he that is holy, let him be holy still.

12 And, behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, [h]to give every man according as his work shall be.

13 I am [i]Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last.

14 [k]Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they [l]may have right to the tree of life, [n]and may enter in through the gates into the city.

15 For [o]without are dogs, and sorcerers, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie.

16 [t]I Jesus have sent mine angel[4] [u]to testify unto you these things in the churches. [x]I am the root and the offspring of David, [y]and the bright and morning star.

17 And [z]the Spirit and the bride say, Come.[5] And [b]let him that heareth say, Come. And [c]let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, [d]let him take the water of life freely.

18 For [f]I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, [h]If any man shall add unto these things, [i]God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book:

19 And if any man shall [k]take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, [l]God shall take away his part *out of the book of life, [m]and out of the holy city, [n]and from the things which are written in this book.

20 He [o]which testifieth these things saith, [p]Surely I come quickly: Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus.

21 [r]The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

heaven there will be no need of external symbols of the Lord's presence; when he shall be fully manifested in his essential glory, as far as creatures can perceive and know him. He will be evidently among them, to communicate unalloyed felicity, and to receive their adorations; and the eternal Son, in human nature, as the Lamb that was slain, will be a temple in which "all the fulness of the Godhead dwelling bodily," will be made manifest to the glorified bodies of the saints, whilst the perfections of Divine nature will be contemplated with open face, by the exercise of their intellectual powers.—The gates not shut by day, and there being no night there, emblematically show the liberty, peace, security, and uninterrupted enjoyment of that blessed state: and as believers are the excellent of the earth, and enter thither from every nation; so it may literally be said, that "they bring the glory and honour of the nations into it;" as well as figuratively, in respect of its incomparable splendour and excellency. Moreover, nothing sinful or unclean can at all find admission into it. All the inhabitants are absolutely perfected in holiness; and all increase, rejoice in, and participate each other's felicity; being all excellent, loving, and lovely, beyond expression or imagination.—Scott.

CHAP. XXII. The Glory and Happiness of Heaven.—The heavenly state which was before described as a "city," and called "the new Jerusalem," is here described as a "paradise;" alluding to the earthly paradise which was lost by the sin of the first Adam; here is another paradise restored by this second Adam. A paradise in a city, or a whole city in a paradise! In the first paradise there were only two persons to behold the beauty and taste the pleasures of it; but in this second paradise whole cities and nations shall find abundant delight and satisfaction. And here observe, 1. The "river" of paradise: the earthly paradise was well watered: no place can be pleasant or fruitful that is not so. This river is described, (1.) By its fountain-head—"the throne of God and the Lamb." All our springs of grace, comfort, and glory, are in God; and all our streams flow from him, through the mediation of the Lamb. (2.) By its quality—"pure and clear as crystal." All the streams of earthly comfort are muddy; but these are clear, salutary, and refreshing, giving life, and preserving life, to those who drink of it. 2. "The tree of life," in this paradise. Such a tree there was in the earthly paradise, Gen. ii. 9. This far excels it. And now as to this tree, observe, (1.) The situation of it—"in the midst of the street, and of either side the river;" or, as it might have been better rendered, "in the midst between the terrace-walk and the river." This tree of life is fed by the pure waters of the river that comes from the throne of God. The presence and perfections of God furnish out all the glory and blessedness of heaven. (2.) The fruitfulness of this tree, [1.] It brings forth many sorts of fruit, "twelve sorts," suited to the refined taste of all the saints. [2.] It brings forth fruit at all times; "yieldeth its fruit every month;" this tree is never empty, never barren; there is always fruit upon it. In heaven there is not only a variety of pure and satisfying pleasures, but a continuance of them, and always fresh. [3.] The fruit is not only pleasant, but wholesome. The presence of God in heaven is the health and happiness of the saints; there they find in him a remedy for all their former maladies, and are preserved by him in the most healthful and vigorous state. 3. The perfect freedom of this paradise from every thing that is evil, ver. 3. "There shall be no more curse;" no "accursed" one—no serpent there, as there was in the earthly paradise. Here is the great excellency of this paradise—the Devil has nothing to do there; he cannot draw the saints from serving God to be subject to himself, as he did our first parents, nor can he so much as disturb them in the service of God. 4. The supreme felicity of this paradisical state. (1.) There the saints shall see the face of God; there they shall enjoy the beatific vision. (2.) God will own them, as having his seal and name on their foreheads. (3.) "They shall reign with him for ever;" their service shall be not only freedom, but honour and dominion. (4.) All this shall be with perfect knowledge and joy. They shall be full of wisdom and comfort, continually walking in the light of the Lord; and this not for a time, "but for ever and ever."—Henry.

Divine Invitation.—Ver. 17. The Saviour in his divine nature was the root from whom David sprang, and his promised seed as man. He was also "the bright and morning star." "His rising up in his incarnation introduced the gospel-day: his rising in power introduceth the millenial day; his rising in the saving influences of his Spirit introduceth the spiritual day of grace and comfort; and his appearance to judge the world will introduce the eternal day of light, purity and joy." [Brown.] Some understand the former part of the next verse of the church's desire for Christ's second coming: but the context plainly directs us to another interpretation. "The Spirit," by the sacred word, and by his convictions and influence in the sinner's conscience, says, "Come" to Christ for salvation; "the bride," or the whole church militant and triumphant, says, "Come" and share our felicity. It therefore behoves every man that hears the invitation, to call on others to "come;" and, in fine, "let every man" throughout the earth who "thirsts" for salvation, come to Christ. Nay, lest any should hesitate, as not able to determine whether their thirst be spiritual or not, "let whosoever is willing come, and take of the waters of life freely," as he would take water from a well, which belonged in common to him and to all his neighbours; nor ought he to think of paying for these blessings, except as he throws away his poison to receive food, or his dross to receive gold.

Sacred Authority of this Book and of the whole of Scripture.—This seems primarily meant of the book of Revelation; with which as much liberty has been taken as with any part of Scripture: but as the Lord doubtless intended this for the conclusion of the sacred canon, so it may be applied to the whole of the written word: and it warns every man, in the most awful manner, to add nothing to, and take nothing from, what God hath revealed of doctrine, ordinance, or commandment; the standard of truth, the way of acceptance, the evidence of conversion, or the rule of duty. Enthusiasts, pretenders to new revelations, bigoted sectaries, and imposing churchmen on the one hand, with infidels and sceptics on the other, who reject the whole or part of Scripture, or aver that it is of no consequence what men believe, (which takes away all doctrinal truth at once,) have abundant cause to tremble at this warning. Critics, who are continually proposing conjectural alterations, or expunging from, and adding to the text of Scripture, are in no small danger: and expositors have abundant cause to be cautious and humble. Indeed, I am ready to tremble when I write upon this testimony of Christ, and think of the work in which I have been during so many years engaged. But the merciful Saviour will no more condemn unintentional mistakes in the honest writer, who desires to help men to understand his word, and proceeds in simple, humble dependence on his teaching, than he will the honest preacher; and I trust this effort to explain his holy Scriptures, though feeble and defective, has been conducted from proper motives, and in dependence on the Lord. I can confidently appeal to my heart-searching Judge, that I have, as far as I know, written word for word what I supposed he would have me write, without adding, altering, or keeping back the sense of any passage willingly, to serve any personal end or party interest; and that whatever mistakes have been made, were involuntary, the effects of ignorance, and not design.—Scott.

Solemn Conclusion.—Ver. 20, 21. We are now come to the conclusion of the whole, and that in three things: 1. Christ's farewell to his church. He seems now, after he had been discovering these things to his people on earth, to take leave of them, and return to heaven; but he parts with them in great kindness, and assures them it shall not be long before he comes again to them; "Behold I come quickly;" as when he ascended into heaven after his resurrection, he parted with a promise of his gracious presence, so here he parts with a promise of a speedy return. If any say, "Where is the promise of his coming, when so many ages are now past since this was written?" Let them know he is not slack to his people, but long-suffering to his enemies; his coming will be sooner than they are aware, sooner than they are prepared, sooner than they desire; and to his people it will be seasonable; the vision is for an appointed time, and will not tarry; "he will come quickly;" let this word be always sounding in our ear, and let us give all diligence, that we may be found of him in peace, "without spot and blameless." 2. The church's hearty echo to Christ's promise: (1.) Declaring her firm belief of it; "Amen," so it is, so it shall be. (2.) Expressing her earnest desire of it; "Even so, come, Lord Jesus; make haste, my Beloved, and be thou like a roe, or like a young hart on the mountains of spices." Thus beats the pulse of the church, thus breathes that gracious Spirit which actuates and informs the mystical body of Christ; and we should never be satisfied till we find such a Spirit breathing in us, and cause us to "look for the blessed hope and glorious appearance of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ;" this is the language of the church of the first-born, and we should join with them, often putting them in mind of his promise. What comes from heaven in a promise should be sent back to heaven in a prayer. "Come, Lord Jesus," put an end to this state of sin, sorrow, and temptation; gather thy people out of this present evil world, and take them up to heaven, that state of perfect purity, peace, and joy, and so finish thy great design, and fulfil all that word in which thou hast caused thy people to hope." 3. The apostolical benediction which closes the whole; "The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all, Amen." Here observe, (1.) The Bible ends with a clear proof of the Godhead of Christ, since the Spirit of God teaches the apostle to bless his people in the name of Christ, and to beg from Christ a blessing for them; this is a proper act of adoration. (2.) Nothing should be more desired by us than that the grace of Christ may be with us in this world, to prepare us for the glory of Christ in the other world.—Henry.

| 7, 8. | Seth dies, aged 912, | 1042 | 2962 |
| 28, 29. | Noah is born, Lamech being 182, | 1056 | 2948 |
| 13, 14. | Cainan dies, aged 910, | 1235 | 2769 |
| 16, 17. | Mahalaleel dies, aged 895, | 1290 | 2714 |
| 19, 20. | Jared dies, aged 962, | 1422 | 2582 |
| vi. 3-22. | God denounces the flood, and commands Noah to build the ark, | 1536 | 2568 |
| v. 32. | Noah being 500 years old, his eldest son is born, | 1556 | 2448 |
| v. 30, 31. | Lamech dies, aged 777, being the first who is recorded to have died a natural death before his father, | 1651 | 2353 |
| 26, 27. | Methuselah dies, aged 969, | 1656 | 2348 |
| vi., vii. | The deluge, | 1656 | 2348 |
| | Thus Adam lived till Lamech, the father of Noah, was 56 years of age; Noah was 595 years of age, when Lamech died; and Shem was above 90 at the same time; for it is not clear which of Noah's sons was the first-born. | | |
| | From the Deluge to the Calling of Abram. | | |
| viii., ix. | Noah, after the deluge, leaves the ark, | 1657 | 2347 |
| xi. 10. | Arphaxad, the son of Shem, is born, | 1658 | 2346 |
| 12. | Salah, the son of Arphaxad, is born, | 1693 | 2311 |
| 14. | Eber, the son of Salah, is born, | 1723 | 2281 |
| 16. | Peleg, the son of Eber, is born, | 1757 | 2247 |
| x. 8-11. | Nineveh is built, probably by Nimrod, | 1771 | 2233 |
| xi. 18. | Reu, the son of Peleg, is born, | 1787 | 2217 |
| 20. | Serug, the son of Reu, is born, | 1819 | 2185 |
| 22. | Nahor, the son of Serug, is born, | 1849 | 2155 |
| 24. | Terah, the son of Nahor, is born, | 1878 | 2126 |
| ix. 28, 29. | Noah dies, | 2006 | 1998 |
| xi. 31, 32. | Terah, Abram's father, leaves Ur in Chaldea, and with Abram comes to Haran, | 2082 | 1922 |
| xii. | Abram, at God's command, leaves Haran, and comes to sojourn in Canaan, | 2083 | 1921 |
| | Hence it appears that Noah lived till within two years of the birth of Abram; and it will be seen that Isaac was 50 years old when Shem died. | | |
| | From the Calling of Abram to the Death of Moses. | | |
| xiii. | Lot leaves Abram, and goes to dwell at or near Sodom, | 2087 | 1917 |
| xiv. | The kings of the east wage successful war against the king of Sodom and his confederates; and takes Lot captive; but Abram pursues and vanquishes them, and rescues Lot; meets, and is blessed by Melchizedek, to whom he gives a tenth of the spoils, | 2091 | 1913 |
| xvi. | Ishmael, Abram's son by Hagar, is born, | 2083 | 1911 |
| xvii. | God covenants with Abram, changes his name to Abraham, institutes circumcision; and promises Isaac by Sarai, whom he calls Sarah, | 2006 | 1898 |
| xviii., xix. | In the same year, Sodom and Gomorrah, &c., are destroyed by fire from heaven; but Lot is rescued in answer to Abraham's intercession, | —— | —— |
| xxi. 1-7. | Isaac, the child of promise, is born, | 2107 | 1897 |
| 8-21. | Isaac is weaned, and Ishmael, with Hagar his mother, is sent away by Abraham, | 2110 | 1894 |
| xxii. | To prove Abraham's faith, God commands him to sacrifice Isaac, | 2132 | 1872 |
| xxiii. | Sarah dies, aged 127 years, | 2144 | 1860 |
| xxiv. | Isaac marries Rebekah, | 2147 | 1857 |
| xi. 10, 11. | Shem, the son of Noah, dies, | 2158 | 1846 |
| xxv. 20-26. | Esau and Jacob, twin sons of Isaac and Rebekah, are born, | 2168 | 1836 |
| xxv. 7, 8. | Abraham dies, aged 175, | 2182 | 1822 |
| xi. 17. | Heber, the fifth from Noah, dies, | 2177 | 1817 |
| xxvii., xxviii. | Jacob fraudulently obtains the blessing from Isaac; | | |
| xxix. 1-14. | and fleeing from the murderous rage of Esau, being encouraged by a vision at Bethel, he goes into Mesopotamia, to Laban, his mother's brother, | 2244 | 1760 |
| xxix. 14-30. | After seven years' service he marries Leah and Rachel, Laban's daughters, when he was 74 years of age, | 2251 | 1753 |
| xxxi.—xxxiii. | Having served Laban 13 years more, and having many sons, and one daughter, he leaves Mesopotamia, and returns to Canaan; in which he was protected against Laban, who pursued him, and encouraged by a Divine vision at Peniel, against the fear of Esau, who came to meet him with 400 men; but was reconciled to him, | 2265 | 1739 |
| xxxiv. | Dinah, Jacob's daughter, is defiled by Shechem, son of Hamor, who, with the men of Shechem, are cruelly and treacherously murdered by Simeon and Levi, Jacob's sons, | 2272 | 1732 |
| xxxv. | Benjamin is born, and Rachel dies, near Bethlehem, when Jacob went to pay his vows at Bethel, | 2272 | 1732 |
| xxxvii. | Joseph, Jacob's elder son by Rachel, is sold by his brethren to the Midianites, who carry him down into Egypt, | 2275 | 1729 |
| xxxix. | Joseph, falsely accused by the wife of Potiphar his master, is committed to prison, | 2282 | 1722 |
| xxxv. 28, 29. | Isaac dies, aged 180 | 2288 | 1716 |

| Deut. i.—xxxiv. | The whole book of Deuteronomy, ending with the death of Moses, bears date, | 2553 | 1451 |
| | The books of Moses contain the history of 2552 years complete. | | |
| | From the Death of Moses to the Building of Solomon's Temple. | | |
| Josh. i.—v. | Israel, under Joshua, passes over Jordan, keeps the passover in Canaan, and the manna ceases, | 2554 | 1450 |
| vi.—x. | The first victories of Joshua occurred in the same year, | —— | —— |
| xi. | The conquest of Canaan is completed, | 2558 | 1446 |
| xiii.—xvii. | Joshua, at God's command, begins to divide the land by lot, | 2559 | 1445 |
| xviii.—xxii. | The tabernacle is set up at Shiloh, the rest of the land is divided, and the Reubenites, &c., are dismissed to their possessions eastward of Jordan, | 2560 | 1444 |
| xxiii. | Joshua, now drawing near to the end of his course, assembles the elders and principal persons, and exhorts them to obedience, with earnest encouragements and warnings, | 2577 | 1427 |
| xxiv. | Having again assembled them, and engaged them to covenant with God, in the most solemn manner, he dies, aged 110, | 2578 | 1426 |
| | After the death of Joshua, and of the elders who with him had seen the works of God for Israel, the people turn away from His worship, and join themselves to idols and idolaters, and are sold into the hands of their enemies. The chronology, however, of the book of Judges, and from the death of Joshua to the advancement of David to the throne, is so extremely intricate as to particulars, that little certainty can be attained; but, as the years from Israel's departure out of Egypt to the building of Solomon's temple are exactly determined (1 Kings vi. 1), the general chronology, from the beginning of the world till the coming of Christ, is established on the firmest ground; and the uncertainty relates merely to the date of the incidents which are recorded in Judges, Ruth, and the first book of Samuel. | | |
| Judg. xix.—xxi. | The Levite's concubine is abused and killed by the men of Gibeah; in consequence of which the other tribes make war against the Benjamites, almost to the destruction of the whole tribe, | 2594 | 1410 |
| xvii., xviii. | Micah makes an image, which the Danites seize on, and so establish idolatry in Dan, in the northern extremity of the land, which continues for a long time, | 2598 | 1406 |
| iii. 1-10. | Israel is sold into the hand of the king of Mesopotamia, but delivered by Othniel, the son of Kenaz, Caleb's brother, | 2610 | 1394 |
| 11. | After this the land rests during 40 years, | 2650 | 1354 |
| 12-29. | Eglon, king of Moab, begins to oppress Israel, | 2650 | 1354 |
| | After 18 years, Ehud slays Eglon, and delivers Israel, | 2668 | 1336 |
| 31. | Shamgar slays 600 Philistines with an ox-goad, (about) | 2690 | 1324 |
| iv. 1-3. | Jabin king of Canaan oppresses Israel, | 2690 | 1314 |
| 4-24; v. | They are delivered by Deborah and Barak; and the land has rest for 40 years, | 2710 | 1294 |
| vi. 1-10. | The Midianites begin to oppress Israel, | 2750 | 1254 |
| 11-40. vii., viii. 1-27. | Gideon is raised up to deliver them, and to judge Israel, | 2757 | 1247 |
| viii. 28-32. ix. 1-6. | Gideon dies; and Abimelech, his son by a concubine, murders 69 sons of Gideon (Jotham alone escaping), and usurps the kingdom over Israel, | 2790 | 1214 |
| 7-57. | He and his adherents quarrel, and destroy one another. | | |

| | N.B.—Every one who has in the least degree turned his thoughts to the subject, will perceive that this division of the years, from the death of Joshua to the accession of David, is materially different from that of the most of learned chronologers. It is not, therefore, here inserted, in opposition to them; but because the author, feeling dissatisfied with their arrangement, which must be allowed to be very perplexed, endeavoured to lay together the outlines of another plan, in which these years may be arranged. He is very far indeed from being satisfied with his own plan; but he is of opinion, that it may possibly suggest a hint to some other person engaged in these inquiries, which may eventually lead to some more satisfactory statement than he has yet seen. It is generally agreed, that Samson and Eli, and Ibzan, Elon, and Abdon, were, in some part of the time allotted to each of them, contemporaries, judging Israel in different districts of the land; and it does not seem improbable that Elon and Abdon should continue unmolested, at a distance from the Philistines, even during part of the years which intervened between the death of Eli and the great reformation under Samuel. | | |

| 2 Chr. xxiv. 4-14. | orders for repairing the temple, which is performed under the direction of Jehoiada, | 3148 | 856 |
| 2 Kings x. 31-36; xiii. 1. | Jehu, of Israel, dies, having reigned twenty-eight years, and is succeeded by his son Jehoahaz, | 3143 | 856 |
| 2 Chr. xxiv. 15, 16. | Jehoiada, the high priest, dies, being 130 years of age; and for his eminent services is honoured by a burial among the kings of Judah, | 3159 | 845 |
| 17-22. | Jehoash and Judah, after the death of Jehoiada, revolt to idolatry; and the people stone Zechariah the prophet, the son of Jehoiada, by the king's command, in the court of the temple, for his faithful reproofs, | 3164 | 840 |
| 2 Kings xii. 19-21. | Jehoash, after great calamities and dire diseases, is | | |

| 2 Kings xvi. 5; 2 Chr. xxviii. 5, 6; Is. vii. 1-9. | Rezin, king of Syria, and Pekah, of Israel, confederate against Ahaz, to dethrone him, to set aside the family of David, and to appoint a king over Judah of another race; but God, by Isaiah, assures Ahaz that this design shall not succeed, because Immanuel, the Son of a virgin, should yet spring from the stock of David, | 3263 | 741 |
| 2 Chr. xxviii. 1-8. | Nevertheless, for the wickedness of Ahaz and Judah, God gives Pekah a great victory, in which 120,000 men of Judah were slain, | 3264 | 740 |
| 2 Kings xv. 30. xv. 29; 1 Chr. v. 26. | Pekah, of Israel, is murdered by Hoshea, | 3265 | 739 |
| | In the days of Pekah, probably towards the close of his reign, Tiglath-pilezer, king of Assyria, carried captive the inhabitants of the western and northern regions of the land. | | |
| 2 Kings xvi. 10-16. | Ahaz seeks help from Tiglath-pilezer, king of Assyria; who adds to his distresses; and Ahaz acts more and more impiously, | 3268 | 736 |
| xvii. 1. | Hoshea, probably about nine years after he had murdered Pekah, is established as king of Israel, | 3274 | 730 |
| xvii. 3. | Shalmaneser, of Assyria, invades Israel, and renders Hoshea tributary to him, | 3276 | 723 |
| xvi. 20; xviii. 1-6; 2 Chr. xxviii. 27; xxix. — xxxi; Is. xiv. 28. | Ahaz dies, and is succeeded in Judah by his son Hezekiah; who immediately exerts himself to destroy idolatry, and to re-establish the worship of Jehovah; and celebrates a most remarkable passover, inviting the Israelites to join in it, | 3278 | 726 |
| 2 Kings xvii. 4, 5; xviii. 9. | Hoshea, of Israel, relying on the king of Egypt, refuses to pay tribute to Shalmaneser, and is taken captive; and Shalmaneser lays siege to Samaria, | 3279 | 725 |
| xvii. 6-41; xviii. 10-12. | Samaria is taken by Shalmaneser; and the ten tribes, for their sins, are carried captive, and dispersed in distant countries; and their land is peopled by colonies of other nations, from whom, and from some Israelites, incorporated with them, sprang the Samaritans, | 3287 | 721 |
| xviii. 13-16. | Sennacherib, king of Assyria, invades Judah, but, appeased by a tribute, recedes, | 3291 | 713 |

| 2 Kings xx. 12-20; Is. xxxix. | Hezekiah having offended in his conduct towards the ambassadors of the king of Babylon, the Babylonish captivity is predicted, | 3290 | 712 |
| 2 Kings xviii. 17-37; xix.; 2 Chr. xxxii. 1-23; Is. xxxvi., xxxvii. | Sennacherib again invades Judah; takes many cities, prepares to besiege Jerusalem; and sends menacing and blasphemous messages and letters to Hezekiah; but, in answer to the prayers of Hezekiah and Isaiah, and the remnant of pious Jews, his army is cut off by an angel; and soon after he is murdered at Nineveh, in the temple of his idol, by his own sons, | 3294 | 710 |
| 2 Kings xx. 20, 21; xxi. 1; 2 Chr. xxxii. 33; xxxiii. 1. | Hezekiah dies, and is succeeded by his son Manasseh, aged only 12 years, | 3306 | 698 |
| 2 Kings xxi. 2, &c. | Manasseh reigns most wickedly, beyond all who preceded him, till he is carried captive to Babylon, | 3328 | 676 |
| 2 Chr. xxxiii. 2-11. | Or rather, perhaps, about, | 3344 | 660 |
| 12-20. | Having deeply repented, and being restored to his kingdom, he supports the worship of God, till his death, having reigned in all 52 years, | 3361 | 643 |
| 2 Kings xxi. 19-26; xxii. 1: 2 Chr. xxxiii. 21-25; xxxiv. 1. | His son Amon, who succeeds him, aged 22 years, persisting in wickedness, is slain (after reigning two years) by his servants, and succeeded by his son Josiah, being only 8 years old, | 3363 | 641 |
| xxxiv. 3-7. | Josiah begins to reform Judah and Israel, | 3374 | 630 |
| Jer. i. 2. | Jeremiah enters on his prophetical office, being then a young man, | 3375 | 629 |
| 2 Kings xxii. 3-20; 2 Chr. xxxiv. 8-22. | Josiah gives orders for repairing the temple; when Hilkiah, the high priest, finding the book of the law in the most holy place, brings it to Josiah, and reads it to him; by which he, being greatly alarmed, sends to Huldah the prophetess, who denounces the desolations of Jerusalem and Judah; but not in Josiah's time, | 3381 | 623 |
| 2 Kings xxiii. 1-20; 2 Chr. xxxiv. 23-28. | In the same year he proceeds with and completes his reformation; and fulfils the predictions delivered concerning him, above 300 years before (1 Kings xiii. 2-32), | — | — |
| 2 Kings xxiii. 21-24; 2 Chr. xxxv. 1-19. | He celebrates the passover with extraordinary zeal and solemnity, | 3382 | 622 |
| Nah. i.—iii. | Nineveh is taken and desolated by the Medes and Chaldeans, according to the predictions of Nahum, | 3392 | 612 |
| 2 Kings xxiii. 29, 30; 2 Chr. xxxv. 20-27; xxxvi. 2. | Josiah being 37 years of age, and having reigned 31 years, is slain in battle against Pharaoh-necho, king of Egypt; and greatly lamented by Judah and Jeremiah.—The people of the land make Jehoahaz, Josiah's second son, king in his stead.—Zephaniah prophesied during the reign of Josiah (Zeph. i. 1), | 3394 | 610 |
| 2 Kings xxiii. 31-35. | After three months Pharaoh-necho carries Jehoahaz captive into Egypt, and makes Jehoiakim, Josiah's eldest son, king over Judah, | — | — |
| 2 Chr. xxxvi. 2-4. | During the reign of Jehoiakim, Jeremiah continues to prophesy; and Urijah also prophesies, who is slain by Jehoiakim (Jer. xxvi. 23). Probably Habakkuk prophesied at the same time. | | |
| | Nebuchadnezzar is associated with Nabopolassar, his father, king of Babylon, in the kingdom, | 3397 | 607 |
| 2 Kings xxiv. 1; 2 Chr. xxxvi. 6, 7; Dan. i. 1-3. | Nebuchadnezzar makes war on Jehoiakim, and renders him tributary. At this time Daniel and his friends were led captive; and many of the sacred vessels of the temple were carried to Babylon; and from this year the principal computation of the 70 years' captivity begins. | 3398 | 606 |
| | Nabopolassar dies, and Nebuchadnezzar succeeds to the whole authority. | 3399 | 605 |
| 2 Kings xxiv. 1. Dan. ii. | Jehoiakim revolts from Nebuchadnezzar, | 3401 | 603 |
| | In the same year Daniel reveals and interprets Nebuchadnezzar's dream of the image, as predicting the four great monarchies, the Chaldean, Medo-Persian, Grecian, and Roman, and the stone cut out of the mountain without hands, which destroyed and dissipated the image; denoting the kingdom of Christ, and its final universal prevalence. In consequence, Daniel and his friends are greatly preferred, | — | — |
| v. 31. | Cambyses, called also Darius the Median, is born, | 3403 | 601 |
| 2 Kings xxiv. 2-6; 2 Chr. xxxvi. 8; Jer. xxii. 18, 19; xxxvi. 30. | Jehoiakim is slain, and succeeded by his son Jehoiachin, or Jeconiah, or Jeconias, or Coniah, | 3404 | 600 |
| 2 Kings xxiv. 8-16. | In the same year Cyrus, the Persian, is born, | — | — |
| 2 Chr. xxxvi. 9, 10; Jer. xxiv. 1. | Jeconiah, with a great number of the Jews, is carried captive to Babylon; and Zedekiah, his uncle, the youngest son of Josiah, is made king in his stead, | 3406 | 598 |
| | This may be considered as another date of the 70 years' captivity. Ezekiel, who was at this time carried captive, dates the years of the captivity from it. | | |
| Ez. i. 1. | Ezekiel is called to the prophetical office, | 3409 | 595 |
| 2 Kings xxiv. 20; 2 Chr. xxxvi. 13; Jer. lii. 3; Ez. xvii. 12-20; xxi. 22-27. | Zedekiah, rebelling against Nebuchadnezzar, to whom he had sworn fidelity, confederates with Pharaoh-hophra, king of Egypt, | 3412 | 592 |
| 2 Kings xxv. 1; Jer. xxxix. 1; lii. 4; Ez. xxiv. 2. | Nebuchadnezzar lays siege to Jerusalem, | 3414 | 590 |
| Jer. xxxvii. 4-11. | He drives back Pharaoh-hophra, who comes to help Zedekiah, | 3415 | 589 |
| 2 Kings xxv. 2-20; 2 Chr. xxxvi. 17-21; Jer. xxxix.—xlii., lii. | Nebuchadnezzar takes Jerusalem, utterly destroys it, with the temple; slays Zedekiah's sons before his eyes, puts out his eyes, and carries him captive to Babylon, | 3416 | 553 |
| | This occurred 468 years after David's accession to the throne: 388 years after the revolt of the ten tribes from Rehoboam; and 134 years after the ruin of the kingdom of Israel. About this time Obadiah prophesied against the insulting Edomites. The 137th Psalm was probably written about the same time. | | |
| | From the Beginning of the Captivity till the Close of the Scriptural History and Canon. | | |
| Jer. lii. 30. | Nebuzar-adan carries captive the scattered remnant of the Jews, | 3420 | 584 |
| Dan. iii. | Nebuchadnezzar requires all his officers, &c., to worship a golden image, which he had set up; but Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego magnanimously refuse; they are cast into the fiery furnace, and are miraculously preserved, | 3421 | 583 |
| Ez. xxix. 17-20. | Nebuchadnezzar takes Tyre, after a siege of 13 years: and the spoil of Egypt, which he next invaded, is promised to him as his wages, | 3432 | 572 |
| Dan. iv. 1-27. | Being rendered insolent by prosperity, he is warned by a dream of a dire calamity which was coming upon him; which dream Daniel interprets, | 3435 | 569 |
| 28-32 | The dream is fulfilled in his most extraordinary insanity, | 3436 | 568 |
| 33-37. | At the end of seven years, he recovers his senses, is restored to his authority, and adores and honours the God of heaven, | 3443 | 561 |
| 2 Kgs. xxv. 27-30; Jer. lii. 31-34. | He dies, and is succeeded by Evil-merodach, who releases Jehoiachin, in the 37th year of his captivity, and treats him with kindness, | 3444 | 560 |
| | Evil-merodach is slain, and succeeded by Neriglissar, his brother-in-law, | 3446 | 558 |
| | In the same year, Cyrus the Persian joins Cyaxares the Mede, against Babylon, being about 41 years of age, | — | — |
| | Cyrus, as commander of the Medes and Persians, slays in battle Neriglissar, and soon after, his successor, Laborosarchad, | 3448 | 556 |
| Dan. vii. | Belshazzar, the son of Evil-merodach, succeeds to the throne of Babylon; and in the same year Daniel has his vision of the four beasts, as emblematic of the four great empires, subverted and succeeded by the kingdom of Christ, according to Nebuchadnezzar's dream of the image, &c. (Dan. ii.), | 3449 | 555 |
| viii. | Daniel has the vision of the ram and the he-goat, &c.; as emblematic of the Medo-Persian empire, subverted by Alexander the Great, and the Grecian empire, under his successors, and many subsequent events, | 3451 | 553 |
| | Cyrus, having conquered a great part of Asia, besieges Belshazzar in Babylon, | 3463 | 541 |
| v | While Belshazzar celebrates a licentious feast, and blasphemes the God of heaven, by profaning the sacred vessels in honour of his idols, a handwriting on the wall terrifies him, which Daniel interprets to denounce his immediate ruin, and the subversion of his kingdom by the Medes and Persians; and in that night Cyrus takes Babylon, slays Belshazzar, and transfers the kingdom to Cyaxares, his uncle, called in Scripture Darius the Mede. Thus the Medo-Persian empire is established; being the breast and arms of silver, in Nebuchadnezzar's image; and the bear in Daniel's vision (Dan. ii., vii.), | 3466 | 538 |
| vi. | Daniel, being greatly preferred by Darius, is envied and hated by his nobles, and by their artful devices is cast into the den of lions, whence he is miraculously delivered, | 3467 | 537 |
| ix. | About this time he had the vision of the 70 weeks. | | |
| 2 Chr. xxxvi. 22, 23; Ezra i. 1; v. 13-15; vii. 6; Is. xlv. 1-6. | Darius dies, and is succeeded by Cyrus, who, in the same year, proclaims liberty to the captive Jews; permits and encourages them to rebuild the temple and city, and restores the sacred vessels. In consequence of this proclamation, a remnant of Jews go to Jerusalem, being assisted by their brethren and by others. This terminates the 70 years' captivity, from the third of Jehoiakim, when Daniel was carried captive to Babylon, | 3468 | 536 |
| Ezra iii. 1-7. | The remnant of the Jews, having arrived at Jerusalem, set up an altar, begin to observe their solemn feasts, and prepare to rebuild the temple, | 3469 | 535 |
| 8-13. | They lay the foundation of the temple, with mingled tears and acclamations of praise, | 3470 | 534 |
| Dan. x.—xii. | About this time Daniel had his last vision. | | |
| | The Samaritans, bribing the courtiers of Cyrus, obstruct the work, | 3471 | 533 |
| | Cyrus dies, aged 70, and is succeeded by his son, Cambyses, or Ahasuerus, | 3474 | 530 |
| | Cambyses, after subjecting Egypt, dies, and Smerdis the Magian, called in Scripture Artaxerxes, usurps the throne of Persia, | 3482 | 522 |
| Ezra iv. 7-24. | The Samaritans write to him against the Jews rebuilding the temple, and obtain a decree forbidding them to proceed, | 3483 | 521 |
| | In the same year Smerdis, or Artaxerxes, is slain, and Darius Hystaspes ascends the throne. About this time the Persian kings, making Susa their capital, neglect Babylon, which begins to decay, | — | — |
| Ezra v. 1, 2; vi. 14; Hag. i., ii.; Zech. iii. | Zerubbabel and Jeshua, excited by the prophets Haggai and Zechariah, set forth the building of the former temple, | 3484 | 520 |
| Ezra v. 2-17. | The Samaritans and their associates again attempt to hinder the work, but are made to desist by a decree of Darius.—About this time Haggai prophesies that the glory of this temple shall exceed that of the former temple, | 3486 | 518 |
| | The Babylonians, having revolted from Darius, are reduced, and the high walls of Babylon are demolished, | 3487 | 517 |
| vi. 14-22. | The temple is finished and dedicated, | 3489 | 515 |
| | Darius Hystaspes, after a prosperous reign, dies, and is succeeded by his son Xerxes, | 3518 | 486 |
| | Xerxes destroys the celebrated temple of Bel, at Babylon, which further tends to the decay of that city, | 3526 | 478 |
| | After an inglorious reign, especially in an unsuccessful | | |

| | Artaxerxes, the youngest son of Xerxes, having been led by the calumnies of Artabanus to slay his eldest brother Darius, ascends the throne, though he had another elder brother (Hystaspes) at a distance; and, to secure himself, slays Artabanus, | 3540 | 464 |
| Esth. i. 1. | This Artaxerxes is supposed to be the Ahasuerus mentioned in Esther. | | |
| i. | Being fully established in the throne, he makes a great feast for his nobles; and divorces Vashti, his queen, for disobeying his orders, | 3542 | 462 |
| ii. | Esther the Jewess pleases the king, and is made queen instead of Vashti, | 3546 | 458 |
| Ezra vii. | Ezra the priest, a learned scribe, obtains a commission from Artaxerxes, to go as governor to Jerusalem, to reform and settle the state of the nation.—From this decree the date of Daniel's 70 weeks is supposed to begin (Dan. ix. 24-27), | 3547 | 457 |
| Esth. ii. 21-23. | About the same time Mordecai discovers the treason of Bigtha and Teresh, | | |
| Ezra viii.—x. | Ezra, arriving at Jerusalem, with priests, Levites, and a large company, and a considerable treasure, separates the Jews from their heathen wives, which they had married contrary to the law of Moses, | 3548 | 456 |
| | After this, he continued in authority during several years, of which there is no history extant. | | |
| Esth. iii. | Mordecai, refusing to bow in adoration to Haman the Agagite, Haman, in revenge, plots the destruction of all the Jews throughout the whole kingdom of Persia, | 3550 | 454 |
| | And obtains from Ahasuerus a decree for that purpose, | 3551 | 453 |
| iv.—x. | This project is defeated, by means of Esther, and ends in the destruction of Haman and his family, and the enemies of the Jews; in Mordecai's advancement to the highest authority under the king, and in the great prosperity of the Jews; in remembrance of which, the feast of Purim is instituted, which is observed by the Jews to this day, | 3552 | 452 |
| Neh. i.—iv. | Nehemiah is sent governor to Jerusalem, with extensive powers, and a commission to build the walls of the city, which he immediately attempts and effects, notwithstanding great opposition, | 3559 | 445 |
| v.—xi. | He proceeds, prosperously, to execute his commission, to re-people Jerusalem, and to reform both the civil and ecclesiastical state of the nation, | 3560 | 444 |
| xii. 6. | He goes to the Persian court, | 3571 | 433 |
| | But returning, as it is supposed, with a renewed commission, he finds that many corruptions had crept in during his absence, and proceeds zealously to enforce reformation; in effecting which he banished the grandson of Eliashib the high priest, who had married the daughter of Sanballat the Horonite; who, in consequence, excited Sanballat and the Samaritans to build a temple on Mount Gerizim, in opposition to that of Jerusalem, which augmented and perpetuated the enmity between the Jews and Samaritans, | 3572 | 432 |
| | Some, however, place this last act of Nehemiah much later.—In the time of Nehemiah, it is recorded, that Ezra prepared, and set forth, a correct edition of the Scriptures, as extant at that time. Being himself an inspired writer, he no doubt did this under a special superintendency of the Holy Spirit; and it is evident, that our Lord and his apostles sanctioned the sacred volume, which was edited at this time, as "the oracles of God," with no other variation, as far as it can now be found, than the insertion of the book of Nehemiah, and the prophecy of Malachi, after Ezra's decease. Some think that Malachi prophesied towards the end of the time during which Nehemiah was governor; others think that he was raised up soon after his removal. | | |

| | He takes Tyre and Gaza, and visits Jerusalem peaceably (Note, Dan. viii. 5-7), | 3672 | 332 |
| | With inexpressible celerity, he passes the Euphrates and the Tigris, and obtains a decisive victory over Darius, at Arbela, | 3673 | 331 |
| | Soon after, Darius is slain, and the Medo-Persian empire is terminated, and succeeded by the Grecian or Macedonian, as denoted by the belly and thighs of brass, in Nebuchadnezzar's dream (Dan. ii. 32-39), the leopard in Daniel's first vision (Dan. vii. 6), and the he-goat in his second (Dan. viii. 5-8), | 3674 | 330 |
| | Alexander the Great dies at Babylon; whose vast dominions and conquests, after many dreadful conflicts between his captains, form four kingdoms, Macedonia, Thrace, Syria, and Egypt, | 3681 | 323 |
| | Ptolemy, afterwards called Soter, gains possession of Jerusalem, and carries a great number of Jews into Egypt, where they form a colony at Alexandria, | 3684 | 320 |
| | This year Jaddua the high priest dies (Neh. xii. 22), and is succeeded by Onias, | 3704 | 300 |
| | Onias dies, and is succeeded by Simon the Just, | 3694 | 310 |
| | About the same time Seleucus builds Antioch in Syria (Acts xi. 19-26; xiii. 1), | | |
| | Epicurus begins to teach his profligate philosophy, | | |
| | The dominions of Alexander are formed into four kingdoms—Egypt, under Ptolemy Soter; Macedonia, under Cassander; Thrace, under Lysimachus; and Syria, with all the east, under Seleucus. Thus Daniel's visions were exactly fulfilled (Note, Dan. vii. 6; viii. 8).—The Jews, however, had little concern except with the kingdoms of Egypt and Syria, between which their country was situated. At this time they formed a [illegible] | 3703 | 301 |

| | Seleucus, king of Syria, builds Seleucia, on the Tigris, which tended greatly to depopulate Babylon, | 3711 | 293 |
| | Simon the Just dies, and is succeeded in the high priesthood by his brother Eleazar, | 3713 | 291 |
| | The light-house or watch-tower of Pharos, near Alexandria, one of the wonders of the world, is finished by Ptolemy Soter, | 3720 | 284 |
| | In the same year Ptolemy Soter dies, and is succeeded by his son, Ptolemy Philadelphus, | | |
| | Seleucus, king of Syria, is slain, and succeeded by his son, Antiochus Soter, | 3725 | 279 |
| | A multitude of emigrated Gauls, after many defeats and disasters, pass over out of Greece into Asia Minor, and there obtain a settlement in the country afterwards called Galatia, | 3727 | 277 |
| | About this time the Hebrew Scriptures began to be translated into Greek, for the benefit of the dispersed Jews, who spoke that language, which opened the way for learned heathens to become acquainted with them, | | |
| | Antiochus Soter, of Syria, dies, and is succeeded by his son, Antiochus Theus, | 3743 | 261 |
| | Manasseh the high priest, who had succeeded Simon the Just, dies, and is succeeded by Onias, the son of Simon, | 3753 | 251 |
| | Ptolemy Philadelphus, king of Egypt, dies, and is succeeded by his son, Ptolemy Euergetes, | 3757 | 247 |
| | Antiochus Theus, king of Syria, is poisoned by his wife Laodice, and succeeded by his son, Seleucus Ceraunicus, | 3758 | 246 |
| | Seleucus Callinicus is vanquished, and taken prisoner by the Parthians, | 3774 | 230 |
| | He dies in Parthia, and is succeeded by his son, Seleucus Ceraunus, | 3779 | 225 |
| | Who is poisoned by his attendants, | 3781 | 223 |
| | And is succeeded by his brother Antiochus, afterwards surnamed the Great, | | |
| | Ptolemy Euergetes, king of Egypt, dies, and is succeeded by his son, Ptolemy Philopater, | 3783 | 221 |
| | Who, having obtained a great victory over Antiochus, king of Syria, obtains possession of Judea; and coming to Jerusalem, attempts to enter the holy of holies, in the temple; but is opposed by the high priest, and retires with horror of mind, but with implacable hatred of the Jews, | 3787 | 217 |
| | Having made peace with Antiochus, he attempts to destroy all the Jews at Alexandria; but fails of his purpose, | 3788 | 216 |
| | Ptolemy Philopater, king of Egypt, dies, and is succeeded by his son, Ptolemy Epiphanes, being only five years of age, | 3800 | 205 |
| | Antiochus of Syria, combining with Philip of Macedonia to divide Ptolemy Epiphanes' dominions between them; the Egyptians crave the assistance of the Romans for their infant king, who take him under their protection, | 3802 | 202 |
| | This seems to have been the first entrance of the Romans (the fourth kingdom in Daniel's prophecies) into the dominion of the Macedonian or Grecian empire, which was the third kingdom. | | |
| | The Romans send M. Emilius Lepidus into Egypt, to protect Ptolemy, | 3803 | 201 |
| | Simon the high priest dies, and is succeeded by his son, Onias III., | 3809 | 195 |
| | Antiochus the Great passes over into Europe, to join Philip, king of Macedon, against the Romans, | 3812 | 192 |
| | He is driven back, with disgrace, into Asia, by the Romans, | 3813 | 191 |
| | Lucius Scipio, the Roman consul, follows him, and by a complete victory compels him to make peace, on most ignominious and ruinous conditions.—Thus the fourth kingdom, in Daniel's prophecies, gradually subverts the third (Dan. ii. 33-40; vii. 7-19), | 3814 | 190 |
| | Antiochus the Great is slain, and succeeded by his son, Seleucus Philopater, | 3816 | 186 |
| | Ptolemy Epiphanes, king of Egypt, is slain, and succeeded by his son, Ptolemy Philometer, aged only six years, | 3824 | 180 |
| | Seleucus Philopater dies, and is succeeded by his brother, Antiochus Epiphanes, | 3828 | 176 |
| | Jason buys of him the high priesthood, and supplants his brother Onias, | 3829 | 175 |
| | Jason introduces idolatrous observances into the worship at the temple, | 3830 | 174 |
| | Menelaus, Jason's brother, supplants him, by buying the high priesthood of Antiochus, | 3832 | 172 |
| | Onias, the elder brother of Jason and Menelaus, is put to death at Antioch; and Lysimachus, Menelaus's deputy, is slain in a tumult at Jerusalem, | 3833 | 171 |
| | Antiochus Epiphanes begins to persecute the Jews; putting a stop to the daily sacrifice, and the worship at the temple; and building a fortress on Mount Acra, to curb the inhabitants of Jerusalem, | 3836 | 168 |
| | But Mattathias and his sons take arms against him, | | |
| | The Romans, having conquered Perseus, the king, terminate the kingdom of Macedon, | 3837 | 167 |
| | Seven brethren, and their mother after them, are most cruelly martyred, because they refused to commit idolatry, or violate the law of Moses, at the command of Antiochus; and the persecution is carried on with great vehemence, | | |
| | Mattathias being dead, his son Judas succeeds him in command, and obtains most signal victories over the lieutenants of Antiochus Epiphanes, | 3838 | 166 |
| | Judas vanquishes Lysias, Antiochus's deputy, recovers Jerusalem, and restores the daily sacrifice, and the worship at the temple, | 3839 | 165 |
| | Antiochus Epiphanes dies, and is succeeded by his son, Antiochus Eupator, | 3840 | 164 |
| | Judas, after several other successes against the surrounding enemies of the Jews, vanquishes Lysias a second time, and compels him to terms of peace, | 3841 | 163 |
| | Menelaus, the usurping high priest, is slain, and succeeded by Alcimus, | | |
| | Demetrius, the son of Seleucus Philopater, slays Antiochus Eupator, and succeeds to the throne of Syria, | 3842 | 162 |
| | Nicanor, sent by Demetrius against the Jews, is slain with all his army. | | |
| | Bacchides, sent to avenge this blow, slays Judas, and grievously oppresses the Jews. Judas is succeeded by his brother Jonathan, | 3843 | 161 |
| | Alcimus the high priest dies, and Bacchides, leaving Jerusalem, the Jews enjoy peace, | 3845 | 159 |
| | Bacchides, returning into Judea, is routed by Jonathan, and Simon his brother; and makes peace with the Jews, | 3846 | 158 |
| | Jonathan, the brother of Judas Maccabeus, is made high priest by Alexander Balas, who claimed the kingdom of Syria against Demetrius, and whom Jonathan greatly assisted, | 3851 | 153 |
| | From this period, the high priesthood continued in the Asmodean or Maccabean family, till the time of Herod the Great. | | |
| | Demetrius is vanquished and slain by Alexander Balas, who succeeds him, | 3854 | 150 |
| | Onias, the son of Onias, who had been high priest, builds a temple in Egypt, like that at Jerusalem, | 3855 | 149 |
| | Jonathan, after various successes, in support of the son of Alexander Balas, against his competitor Demetrius, the son of him who was slain by Alexander Balas, is treacherously murdered by Tryphon; and is succeeded in the high priesthood by his brother, Simon; who, declaring for Demetrius, is made also sovereign ruler of Judea, | 3861 | 143 |
| | He takes the fortress, which Antiochus Epiphanes had erected to curb Jerusalem, demolishes it, and levels the hill on which it stood, | 3862 | 142 |
| | The sovereignty of Judea is confirmed to Simon and to his posterity, by the unanimous consent of the Jews, in a general assembly at Jerusalem; and he frees them from all tribute to any foreign prince, and effects, in many things, a reformation among them, | 3863 | 141 |
| | Simon is murdered, with two of his sons, by Ptolemy, his son-in-law; and is succeeded by his son John, surnamed Hyrcanus, | 3869 | 135 |
| | John Hyrcanus asserts his independency against the Syrians; and destroys the temple on Mount Gerizim, | 3874 | 130 |
| | He conquers the Idumæans, or Edomites, and, compelling them to be circumcised, incorporates them among the Jews. From this time the name of Idumæans is scarcely mentioned in history, | 3875 | 129 |
| | Aristobulus and Antigonus, sons of John Hyrcanus, lay siege to Samaria, | 3894 | 110 |
| | Antiochus Cyricenus, at that time king of Syria (that kingdom being enfeebled, by perpetual conflicts with the Ptolemies, kings of Egypt, by incessant internal contests and revolutions, and by the overwhelming power of the Romans), in vain attempts to relieve Samaria, which falls into the hands of Hyrcanus, with all Galilee, | 3896 | 108 |
| | Hyrcanus, hitherto supported by the sect of the Pharisees, recently formed among the Jews, forsakes them, and joins the Sadducees, their opponents, | 3899 | 105 |
| | He dies, and is succeeded by Aristobulus, his eldest son, who first took the insignia and name of king, | 3897 | 107 |

| Aristobulus, having conquered Iturea, and killed his brother Antigonus, dies, and is succeeded by Alexander Jannæus, his brother, | 3898 | 106 |
| Pompey and Cicero, celebrated Romans, are born in the same year, | — | — |
| Alexander Jannæus, after various transactions, some successful and others unsuccessful, is opposed by a mutiny of the Jews at the temple, during the feast of tabernacles; of whom he slays 600 men, | 3909 | 95 |
| He subdues the inhabitants of Gilead and the Moabites, | 3910 | 94 |
| Having very ill success, in a war carried on against Obodas, an Arabian king, the Jews make war against him. This war continued six years, | 3913 | 91 |
| Alexander Jannæus dies, after many successes and cruelties, and is succeeded in the regal authority by his wife Alexandra, who, conciliating the Pharisees, reigns peaceably to the end of her life, | 3925 | 79 |
| She makes her eldest son, Hyrcanus, high priest, | 3926 | 78 |
| The Pharisees, managing the affairs of Alexandra, grievously oppress their opponents, | 3927 | 77 |
| The Romans greatly extend their conquests, both in Asia and Africa, and reduce many regions into the form of provinces, | 3928 | 76 |
| Herod the Great is born, | 3932 | 72 |
| Alexandra dies; Hyrcanus seizes the kingdom; but is soon deprived of it by Aristobulus, his younger brother, | 3934 | 70 |
| Pompey the Great, an eminent Roman commander, after many conquests, reduces Syria into the form of a province; thus terminating the Macedonian, or Grecian kingdom, and establishing that of the Romans—the fourth great monarchy in Daniel's prophecies, | 3939 | 65 |
| Pompey, appealed to by Hyrcanus and Aristobulus, and promising to arbitrate between them, discovers that Aristobulus is preparing for war; and in consequence marches against Jerusalem, and takes it, after a siege of three months, and restores Hyrcanus.—At this time he enters into the temple, and into the holy of holies, and many have remarked that he never after prospered in any undertaking. From this period, the Jews became dependent on the Romans, after having been for a long time independent, by reason of the weakness of the Syrian and Egyptian kings.—In the same year Augustus Cæsar is born, | 3941 | 63 |
| Aristobulus, and Alexander his son, raise disturbances in Judea, but are vanquished by Gabinius, a Roman commander, | 3947 | 57 |
| Crassus, the Roman general, plunders the temple at Jerusalem, | 3950 | 54 |
| He is vanquished and slain by the Parthians, | 3951 | 53 |
| Julius Cæsar prevails against Pompey, at Pharsalia; Pompey flees to Egypt, and is there treacherously murdered, | 3956 | 48 |
| Antipater, an Edomite, by the favour of Cæsar, whom he had assisted in Egypt, is placed ruler over Judea, nominally under Hyrcanus, but in fact as superseding him. He constitutes his son Herod governor of Galilee, | 3957 | 47 |
| Julius Cæsar at this time being made perpetual dictator, the empire of the Cæsars commences. | | |
| Antipater, by permission from the Romans, rebuilds the walls of Jerusalem, | 3960 | 44 |
| Julius Cæsar is assassinated in the senate, | — | — |
| Antipater is poisoned; but his sons, Phasael and Herod, revenge his death by that of the murderer, | 3961 | 43 |
| Antigonus, the son of Aristobulus, excites disturbances in Judea; but is vanquished by Herod, | 3962 | 42 |
| The Parthians, having obtained many advantages against the Romans, slay Phasael, make Hyrcanus prisoner, and appoint Antigonus king of Judea; but Herod, fleeing to Rome, is there constituted king by the ruling party, | 3964 | 40 |
| Herod besieges Jerusalem, | 3965 | 39 |
| After many losses and successes, he takes the city, and is established in the royal authority, being by birth an Edomite, and a Jew only as proselyted, | 3967 | 37 |
| Herod makes Anamelus, an obscure person, high priest, instead of Antigonus, which occasions disturbances, | 3968 | 36 |
| Deposing him, he appoints Aristobulus, brother of Mariamne, his wife, to the high priesthood. The succession belonged to him, but he was no more than seventeen years of age. Herod not long after murdered him, | 3969 | 35 |
| Being in danger of a capital punishment for this murder, he appeases Mark Anthony, or rather Cleopatra, his infamous paramour, with large presents, | 3970 | 34 |
| At the instance of Mark Anthony, he attacks and subdues Malchus, king of Arabia Petrea, | 3973 | 31 |
| Octavianus (afterwards Augustus Cæsar), having vanquished Mark Anthony, Herod with much difficulty makes his peace with him, | 3974 | 30 |
| Herod, in a furious rage and jealousy, puts to death Mariamne, his beloved wife, who was descended from the Maccabees, | 3975 | 29 |
| And, the next year, Alexandra, her mother, | 3976 | 28 |
| To conciliate the Romans, he occasionally conforms to heathen observances, which greatly disgusts the Jews, | 3978 | 26 |
| He rebuilds Samaria, and calls it Sebaste, from the Greek word Sebastos, or august; which was the title given to the Roman emperor, or assumed by him, | 3979 | 25 |
| In the same year, he takes great care to relieve the Jews, under the pressure of a grievous famine, which conciliated their minds toward him, | — | — |
| Augustus Cæsar acquires absolute dominion over the whole Roman empire, | 3980 | 24 |
| In the same year, Herod completes for himself a stately palace on Mount Zion, | — | — |
| He builds Herodium, | 3981 | 23 |
| He begins to build Cæsarea, which was not finished till the end of twelve years, | 3982 | 22 |
| Being more and more favoured by Augustus, he prepares to rebuild, or thoroughly to repair and beautify, the temple, | 3985 | 19 |
| After two years' preparation, he enters on the work, | 3987 | 17 |
| Having finished Cæsarea (before called Straton's tower), he names it in honour of his patron, Cæsar Augustus, | 3994 | 10 |
| He puts to death the two sons whom he had by Mariamne, on a frivolous accusation of treason, | 3998 | 6 |
| In this year, the angel Gabriel promised to Zacharias a son, by his wife Elisabeth, whom he must call John, | — | — |
| The same angel shews the Virgin Mary that the Messiah should be born of her, | 3999 | 5 |
| The census, or register of estates and families throughout Judea, was made at this time; but the taxes were not imposed or collected till some years after (Note, Luke ii. 2). | | |
| JESUS CHRIST is born at Bethlehem, | 4000 | 4 |
| In the same year, Herod in vain attempts to murder the infant Saviour, but cruelly massacred the male children near Bethlehem. He puts his son Antipater to death, on an accusation of treason and parricide, and five days after dies himself in the most dreadful manner, | — | — |
| Archelaus succeeds Herod his father, in Judea, Idumæa, and Samaria; Herod Antipas, in Galilee and Petræa; and Philip, in Auronitis, Trachonitis, Paneas, and Balansea.—Joseph and Mary, with the child Jesus, returning out of Egypt, settle at Nazareth in Galilee, | 4002 | 2 |
| The Christian Era begins, four years after the real time at which our Lord was born, | 4004 | |
| Archelaus, the son of Herod, having been convicted of mal-administration in his government, is deposed, and banished into Gaul; and Judea is made a province of the Roman empire, by Quirinius, or Cyrenius, governor of Syria, who first levied the taxes, according to the census or register before made; and Coponius is placed over it. Thus the sceptre was departing from Judah, for Shiloh was come, though not manifested, | 4012 | A. D. 8 |
| In this year Jesus went up to Jerusalem, and at the temple sat in the midst of the teachers of the law, both hearing them and asking them questions, | — | — |
| Marcus Ambivius succeeds Coponius, as procurator of Judea, | 4014 | 10 |
| Tiberius is admitted to share the authority with Augustus, whence his fifteen years is dated (Luke iii. 1), | 4016 | 12 |
| Annius Rufus succeeds Marcus Ambivius, | 4017 | 13 |
| Augustus Cæsar dies, and is succeeded by Tiberius, his adopted son, | 4018 | 14 |
| Who appoints Valerius Gratus procurator of Judea, | 4019 | 15 |
| Valerius Gratus removes Annas the high priest, and substitutes Ishmael, the son of Fabus, | 4027 | 23 |
| Eleazar, the son of Annas, is made high priest instead of Ishmael, | 4028 | 24 |
| Simon, the son of Camith, is made high priest in the place of Eleazar, | 4029 | 25 |
| Joseph, surnamed Caiaphas, the son of Annas, is made high priest instead of Simon, | 4030 | 26 |
| Pontius Pilate is made procurator of Judea; and in the same year John begins his ministry, | 4031 | 27 |
| Not long after, our Lord is baptized by John, and, after his temptation in the wilderness, begins to exercise his public ministry, being thirty years of age (Luke iii. 23; John i. 29–51), | | |
| Christ is crucified under Pontius Pilate, when Tiberius was the Roman emperor, | 4037 | 38 |
| Tiberius dies, and is succeeded by Caligula, | 4041 | 37 |
| Caligula makes Herod Agrippa, grandson of king Herod by his son Aristobulus, and nephew to Herod Antipas, who beheaded John Baptist, and brother to Herodias, and father to king Agrippa, tetrarch, or king, of Galilee, | 4042 | 38 |
| Caligula dies, and is succeeded by Claudius, | 4045 | 41 |
| Claudius makes Herod Agrippa king of Judea, in addition to his former territories, | 4046 | 42 |
| Herod puts James the brother of John to death, and purposes to kill Peter also, who is miraculously preserved; and soon after, Herod, smitten by an angel, is eaten with worms, and dies, | 4048 | 44 |
| Claudius dies, and is succeeded by Nero, | 4058 | 54 |
| Felix is appointed governor of Judea, about | 4059 | 55 |
| He is superseded by Festus, | 4067 | 63 |
| Nero, the Roman emperor, dies, and is succeeded by Galba, | 4073 | 69 |
| Who, in the same year, is murdered, and succeeded by Otho, | — | — |
| Otho murders himself, and is succeeded by Vitellius, | 4074 | 70 |
| Who is speedily cut off, and succeeded by Vespasian, | — | — |
| In the beginning of whose reign Jerusalem is taken by the Romans, under Titus, the son of Vespasian, and all the awful predictions of our Lord, as well as those of the ancient prophets, are exactly accomplished.—The city is desolated; the temple destroyed, so that not one stone was left on another; 1,100,000 persons perished miserably in the siege; and the remnant of the Jews are scattered into all nations, and dispersed among them. | | |
| Vespasian dies, and is succeeded by his son Titus, | 4083 | 79 |
| Titus dies, and is succeeded by Domitian, his brother, | 4185 | 81 |
| Domitian is slain, and succeeded by Nerva, | 4100 | 96 |
| Nerva dies, and is succeeded by Trajan, | 4102 | 98 |
| Trajan dies, and is succeeded by Adrian, | 4121 | 117 |

ISAIAH, the salvation of the Lord. As the Priests and Levites were the ordinary teachers of the Jewish church, so God sometimes raised up and sent extraordinary messengers, the prophets. Among these, Isaiah is justly accounted the most eminent, both for the majesty of his style and the excellency of his matter, wherein he so fully and clearly describes the person, offices, the sufferings and kingdom, of Christ, that he is commonly called the Evangelical Prophet.

ISCARIOT, is thought to signify a native of the town of Iscarioth. A man of murder; he that cuts off or exterminates. Others maintain, that the surname given to Judas signifies that he was of the tribe of Issachar, a word signifying recompence, restitution. This traitor verified the place of his nativity, by receiving the price of the blood of his Master Jesus Christ; from the word shachar, to receive a recompence.

ISHMAEL, God that hears. The name of Abram's first son, by Hagar the Egyptian.

ISRAEL, a prince of God; or, prevailing with God; or, one that wrestleth with God; as if it had been written Ish-ra-el. The name given by God to Jacob (Gen. xxxii. 28; xxxv. 10). Israel is often in Scripture taken for the people of God (Ex. vi. 6, 7).

ISSACHAR, price, reward, or recompence.

ITALY, a Latin word that has its original from vitulus, or vitula, because this country abounded in calves and heifers. According to others, it is taken from a king called Italus.

JUBILEE, a feast of the Jews, in Hebrew, Jobel, which, according to some, signifies a ram's horn, with which the Jubilee year was proclaimed. Others derive the etymology of Jobel from the Hebrew, Jubal, which formerly signified, as they say, to play upon instruments; and this year was celebrated with music and all expressions of joy. Others are of opinion, that it comes from the verb Hobil, to bring or call back; because then everything was restored to its first possessor.

JUDAH, the praise of the Lord.

K

KEDAR, blackness, or sorrow.

KIBROTH-HATTAAVAH, the graves of lust (Num. xi. 34).

KIDRON, obscurity, obscure (2 Sam. xv. 23).

L

LEBANON, white, or incense.

LO-AMMI, not my people.

LO-RUHAMAH, not having obtained mercy; not pitied.

M

MAHANAIM, the two fields, or two armies.

MAHAR-SHALAL-HASH-BAZ, making speed to the spoil, he hasteneth the prey. Marg.

MAMRE, rebellious; or, bitter; or, that changes, that barters; or, fat, or elevated.

MANASSEH, forgetfulness, or he that is forgotten.

MARA, bitter, or bitterness.

MARS' HILL, the place where the celebrated judges of Athens held their supreme council.

MASSAH, temptation. The name of a place (Ex. xvii. 7).

MAZZAROTH, the twelve signs. Marg.

MEDES, a people of the province of Media.

MELCHIZEDEK, king of justice.

MELITA, affording honey, from whence honey distils; an island now called Malta (Acts xxviii. 1).

MERIBAH, dispute, quarrel.

MESOPOTAMIA, in Hebrew, Aramnaharaim, that is, Syria of the two rivers. The Greek word Mesopotamia also signifies between two rivers.

MESSIAH, anointed.

MOSES, taken out of the water. "The law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ" (John i. 17).

N

NABAL, fool, or senseless.

NAPHTALI, comparison, likeness; or, that struggles or fights.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR, tears and groans of judgment; or, trouble or sorrow of judgment.

NEAPOLIS, new city.

O

OBADIAH, servant of the Lord.

OBED, a servant.

OBED-EDOM, the slave of Edom, or the Idumean; or, labourer of the man, of red, or earthly.

OMEGA, the last letter of the Greek alphabet.

ORION, a constellation.

P

PAMPHYLIA, a nation made up of every tribe.

PARBAR, a gate or building belonging to the temple.

PAUL, a worker. His former name was Saul; a sepulchre, a destroyer.

PELETHITES, judges, or destroyers. These were troops or guards of king David (2 Sam. viii. 18).

PERIZITES, the name of a people; who dwell in villages, or places not enclosed with walls.

PETER, a rock, or stone.

PHARAOH, that disperses, that spoils, that discovers; or, according to the Syrine, the revenger, the destroyer, the king, the crocodile.

PHAREZ, division, rupture; or, that breaks forth violently.

PHILADELPHIA, love of a brother, or of fraternity.

PHILISTINES, those that dwell in villages.

PUR, lot.

R

RACHEL, sheep.

RAMATHAIM-ZOPHIM, a city (1 Sam. i. 1). The same as Ramah. Literally, Ramathaim signifies the two Ramathas, probably because the city was divided into two parts. The city of Ramah, Samuel's birthplace, was also called Zophim, which signifies watch-tower, or watchmen, because the prophets, who are called watchmen, had a school, or college, there.

REMPHAN, the name of an idol, which some think to be Saturn.

ROME, strength, power.

S

SALEM, complete, perfect, or peace.

SAMOTHRACIA, so called because it was peopled by Samians and Thracians.

SAMUEL, heard of God, or asked of God

SAREPTA, a goldsmith's shop, where metals used to be melted and tried.

SIGIONOTH, according to variable songs or tunes. Marg.

SILOAS, or SILOAM, sent, or who sends; or, dart, branch, or whatever is sent.

SIMEON, that hears, that obeys, or is heard.

SOLOMON, peaceable, perfect, or that recompenses. It is thought that the three books he wrote, namely, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, and the Canticles, are an evidence of his repentance.

T

TALITHA-CUMI, young woman, arise. A Syriac and Hebrew expression (Mark v. 41).

TERTULLUS, a liar, an impostor.

TETRARCH, governor of a fourth part.

THEOPHILUS, friend of God.

U

UPHAZ, gold of Phasis, or Pison, the finest gold.

URIM and THUMMIM, lights and perfections.

Z

ZACCHEUS, pure, clean; just, or justified.

ZAPHNATH-PAANEAH, one that discovers hidden things; otherwise, a saviour of the world. The name that Pharaoh gave to Joseph (Gen. xli. 45).

ZECHARIAH, memory of the Lord, or male of the Lord.

ZION, monument raised up, heap of stones set up, sepulchre, turret, dryness.

TABLES OF SCRIPTURE MEASURES, WEIGHTS, AND COINS:

WITH AN APPENDIX, CONTAINING THE METHOD OF CALCULATING THE MEASURES OF SURFACE REFERRED TO IN THE SACRED WRITINGS.

A MEASURE is a known quantity applied to another of the same kind that is less known, to make its dimensions better known, by help of numbers expressing the proportion that the known quantity bears to the unknown. The dimensions to be measured are three: 1. Mere length, which hath but one dimension. 2. Surface, which consists of length multiplied into breadth; so it hath two dimensions, as it were interwoven; and this is always measured by some square surface already known, as by a square foot, or a square cubit, or any other square already known, by help of its side. Moses generally useth the square cubit. 3. Solidity, or Capacity, which had three dimensions multiplied into each other: length, breadth, and height or depth. This is measured by a known cube. From solidity ariseth weight in all sublunary bodies; and by weight we measure the value of coins. Therefore I shall join weights and coins together in the fourth table.

TABLE I.—Measures of length.

I express the Cubit, and its parts, both by Inch Measure and by Foot Measure; which I deduce from Inches by this proportion.

| | Inch Meas. | Foot Meas. |
|---|---|---|
| As 12 : 1 : : | 21·888 | = 1·824 |
| A Cubit is = to | 21·888 | = 1·824 |

Herodotus mentions a Schœnus just 300 times as long: I judge that all the greater were made in proportion to the least.

| The mile | = 4000 = | 7296·000 |
| Stadium, ⅛ of their mile | = 400 = | 729·600 |
| Parasang, 3 of their miles | = 12,000 = | 4 English miles, and 580 feet. |

TABLE II.—Measures of Surface.

Moses hath described these by square cubits. I here express them reduced to our square feet. The method of this reduction is taught in an Appendix. I first propose three clear examples given by Moses: Secondly, I place six instances of greater difficulty.

The clearest examples are—

I. The Altar of Incense. Only two sides of it, viz., its length and breadth, are expressed by Moses: each of them is affirmed to be one cubit. Yet he declares that it was square: whence we collect, that it was just one square cubit (see Exod. xxx. 2). Now it is demonstrated in the Appendix, that one Jewish square cubit amounts to, in surface, three English square feet, and about 47 square inches.

II. The Table of Shewbread (Exod. xxv. 23). It is affirmed to be two cubits in length and one in breadth. None doubt that it was rectangular, containing two Jewish square cubits. These amount to above six English square feet, and above half, viz., 94 square inches.

III. The Boards of the Tabernacle, each 10 cubits in length, and one and a half in breadth (Exod. xxvi. 16), being rectangular, must contain 15 square cubits, Jewish. These are proved to contain very near 50 square feet of English measure.

The more difficult cases reserved to the Appendix are—

I. The Mercy-seat, whose surface is = 12½ square feet.

II. A general method is taught of reducing any given number of Jewish cubits to English square feet.

III. The example of the 15 square cubits in the Boards of the Tabernacle is made clearer.

IV. The Court of the Tabernacle (described Exod. xxvii. 18), is found to be just half the Egyptian Aroura, and to contain 1 rood, 21 perches, 27 square feet, &c.

V. The whole Aroura is determined, and reduced to our English measures, 3 roods, 2 perches, 55 square feet.

VI. The suburbs, or Glebe Land, given to each city of the Levites (Num. xxxv. 3-5), is shewed to be a square, on each of the four sides of every city, containing a million of Jewish square cubits, or 100 Arourœ; which amount to, in each square, 76 acres, 1 rood, 20 perches, 80 square feet. Whence we collect, that all the four squares amounted to 305 acres, 2 roods, 1 perch, beside 51 feet square.

TABLE III.—Measures of Capacity.

| | Wine Gall. | Pints. | Inch Sol. |

| Chomer, Homer in our translation | 75 | 5 | 7 |
| Seah, ⅓ of Epha | 2 | 4 | 8 |
| Hin, ⅙ of Epha | 1 | 2 | 1 |
| Omer, $\frac{1}{10}$ of Epha | 0 | 6 | 0·5 |
| Cab, $\frac{1}{18}$ of Epha | 0 | 3 | 10 |
| Log, $\frac{1}{72}$ of Epha | 0 | 0½ | 10 |
| Metretes of Syria (John ii. 6) = Cong. Rom. | 0 | 7½ | 0 |
| Cotyla, Eastern, $\frac{1}{864}$ of Epha | 0 | 0½ | 3 |

This Cotyla contains just 10 ounces Avoirdupois of rain water; Omer, 100; Epha, 1000; Chomer, 10,000. So by these weights all these measures of capacity may be expeditiously recovered very near exactness.

TABLE IV.—Of Weights and Coins.

The Jewish weights are reduced to the standard grains of our Troy weight; whereof 438 are equal to the Roman ounce, and to our ancient English Avoirdupois ounce.

AN APPENDIX to the Second Table of Measures of Surface described by Moses, shewing the method of reducing them by calculation to the Measures used in England, for the benefit of those that understand Decimal Arithmetic, and desire to try the reduction given in the Table, or to make further improvements in this kind of measures.

1. THE MERCY-SEAT.

I shall begin with Reduction of the Measures of the Mercy-seat, which was God's Throne of Grace among the Jews. Moses, in Exod. xxv. 17, affirms, that its length was two cubits and a half; its breadth one cubit and a half. The fractions adhering to its length and breadth make some difficulty to beginners in arithmetic, which the decimal way doth much abate. Supposing, therefore, what I have elsewhere proved, that the Jewish cubit was in foot measure 1·824, the length must be expressed in foot measure, and decimals thereof, 4·560. The breadth in like measure will be 2·736. Wherefore the product of these numbers, multiplied into each other, gives its surface, 12·47616; in number of its square feet, and decimals thereof, 12 square feet, and very near half a square foot; if the decimals had been ·50, it had been just half a foot. If we desire to express those decimals of a foot in square inches, as is usual in England, we must multiply ·47616 by 144, the square inches of a foot, and the product will be 68·56704, which shews that the decimals we found amount to 68 square inches, and about half an inch more; we need not be nicer.

2. A SQUARE CUBIT REDUCED TO OUR MEASURE.

In the Altar of Incense Moses describes the Jewish square cubit, which must be reduced to our foot measure, thus, $\frac{1824}{1824}$. The product of these numbers multiplied will be the upper surface of this altar, 3·326976, that is, three square feet, and ·326976 decimals of a square foot, which we may express by 47 square inches, and a few decimals of an inch square inconsiderable.

3. THE BOARDS OF THE TABERNACLE.

Moses' description of the Boards of the Tabernacle (Exod. xxvi. 16), by ten cubits in length, and one and a half in breadth, naturally leads a man to discern in each Board's surface 15 Jewish square cubits; because, if we conceive a line drawn from the end of one cubit at the bottom of the Board to the end of one cubit at the top of the Board, this must needs be ten whole square cubits on one side of that line, and ten half square cubits (= 5 whole) on the other side of that line; here, therefore, are 15 square cubits. The reduction of these into English square feet is performed by multiplying 15, viz., the number of cubits given, into 3·326976, the feet and decimals of one square cubit, and the product will be 49·90464, and that is very near to 50 square feet; for those decimals amount to above 180 square inches; and little more than 18 square inches would make it just 50 feet, which abatement we need not here regard.

4. THE COURT OF THE TABERNACLE.

Let us now go to the measure of the surface of land. But we will begin with the Court of the Tabernacle, the ground on which the Priests performed all the solemn public worship of Israel in Moses' time. The area of this Court is described by Moses (Exod. xxvii. 18), by its length 100 cubits, and its breadth everywhere 50 cubits. Wherefore this area must be in Jewish measure 5000 square cubits, for that is the product of 100 multiplied into 50. To reduce these 5000 Jewish cubits into English square feet, I must multiply 5000 into 3·326976, the product is 16,634·88 English square feet.

But in cases of such long numbers of feet, we use, for brevity's sake, and to help our memories, to reduce them into perches, or roods, or acres, which contain known numbers of square feet. A perch contains 272¼ square feet. A rood is = to 10,890 square feet. An acre is = to 43,560 square feet. It is plain that the number 16,634·88 hath not integers equal to those of an acre, but it hath enough to answer those in a rood, and some overplus; therefore I must divide 16,634·88 by 10,890, which is a rood. By such division, continued in the decimal way, until I have a fraction of five or six places, which is exact enough, I find the quote to be 1·527537, which assures me that my number 16,634·88 hath but once entirely in it a whole rood; but it hath moreover in it many decimal parts of a rood. These, therefore, I reduce to the perches contained in them, by multiplying them into 40, which is the number of perches that make up a rood; and cutting off six places from the product, which is 21·101480, so I find there are 21 perches entire, and the figures after the Separatrix are decimals of a perch. These also I multiply by 272·25, which are the square feet and decimals of a perch. The product of this last multiplication, after eight places cut off from it by the Separatrix, because there were six places of decimals in one of the multipliers, and two in the other, is 27·62798000. Hence I learn that there are therein but 27 entire feet; all the eight decimal places amount to little above half a foot, and therefore I cast them away as inconsiderable in the measure of land. This method of reduction by multiplication of decimals I find to be easier than the common way of reduction by division, and therefore I propose it to be used by beginners in this practice of surveying. So I find this court to contain in English measure 1 rood, 21 perches, 27 feet, and little more than half a foot squared.

But reflecting upon Moses' measure by cubits, and finding them to be precisely 5000 square cubits, I observed that they were just half 10,000, which I had observed from Herodotus' Euterpe to be the area of the Egyptian Aroura, by which their land was as generally measured, as ours is by acres and roods (see Herodot. 1, 2, c. 168). I called also to mind a passage in Manetho, an Egyptian priest, cited by Josephus in his first book against Apion, where he affirms, that Manetho, in his history of the reign, wars, and expulsion of the Pastors (whom Africanus affirms to be Phœnicians, or Canaanites, and Josephus vainly believed to be Jews), wrote out of the public records of Egypt, that these pastors made at Abaris a very large and strong encampment, that encompassed 10,000 Arourœ, sufficient to contain 240,000 men, and long to maintain their cattle. Hence it appears, that not only the Egyptians, but the Phœnicians or Canaanites also, that had dwelt among them, and had reigned there during the time of six kings successively, used this measure of land called Aroura. Now this was long before Moses' time; for the beginning of Amosis or Tethmosis, who expelled them out of Egypt, was very near the time of Abraham's death, as appears by the Annals of the learned Primate of Ireland. Wherefore I believe that Moses, who was skilled in all Egyptian learning, especially surveying, did of choice make the Court of the Tabernacle to be just half an Aroura, which was a known measure to him and his people, who had long dwelt in Egypt, and Divine authority directed him so to do.

5. THE REDUCTION OF AN AROURA IN ENGLISH MEASURES.

Because we have shown from Herodotus, that an Aroura is the square of 100 Jewish or Egyptian cubits, and 100 such cubits may in English foot measure be expressed by 182·4 English feet, it follows, that the square of this number will express exactly the number of the English square feet that are contained in an Aroura. Now, by multiplication of 182·4 into itself, I find the product to be 33,269·76: therefore I conclude that there are 33,269 square feet entire, and ·76 decimals of a square foot, in an Aroura. Now, to reduce these English square feet into roods, perches, and the remainder of square feet, I use the method used in the last paragraph: First, I divide them by 10,890, the square feet in a rood; and the quote I find 3·055074, that is, 3 roods, and ·055074 decimals of a rood. Secondly, I multiply those decimals by 40, which is the number of perches in a rood; the product is 2·202960. Hence I conclude there are therein two perches, and ·202960 decimals of a perch. Thirdly, I multiply these last decimals by 272·25, which are the square feet of a perch. The product is 55·25586000, that is, 55 entire square feet: the eight places of decimals amount to little above ¼ of a square foot, therefore I reject them as inconsiderable in measure of land. By all these reductions it is found, that an Aroura is in English measure 3 roods, 2 perches, 55¼ square feet. Hence it follows also that it is not well translated by Jugerum, for it is much larger; nor is it well in English called an acre, for it is considerably less. To this place I refer the use of the lesser sort of σχοῖνος, which yet is most convenient for the use of the Egyptians, and of the Jews, to measure out private men's inheritances by a line which was 80 cubits long. For the length of this line will measure one side of an Aroura, if the other side be 125 cubits long, which is the length of this line, and its half, and 5 cubits above half of it, which they might easily mark in it by a knot or a ring. And by this means they might easily lay any number of Arourœ together, all of them rectangular and parallel to each other. Such lines I suppose for measure of inheritances are intimated, Ps. lxxviii. 55; xvi. 6, &c.

6. THE LEVITE'S GLEBE.

I shall conclude with an example amounting after reduction to a number of English acres, which measure we have not yet reached to. This I take from Num. xxxv. 3-5. There Moses describes what measure of land the Levites were to be allowed for their cattle, their goods, and all their beasts, on the north, east, south, and west sides of each of their cities. So that the city was to be in the midst of the land belonging to it. This land in our translation is called suburbs, because of its nearness to all their cities. But we must not thence imagine that it means houses and streets adjoining to their cities, in which sense we sometimes use the word suburbs. For Moses plainly tells us they were places for their several sorts of cattle to feed in, such as might also be orchards or gardens for fruit, or perhaps for a little corn, comprehended in the words—their goods. These fields he limits by 1000 cubits, which was just a quarter of an eastern mile, but amounts in mere length to 608 yards English measure, and therefore exceeds a quarter of an English mile by 168 yards in length. But it is certain that cattle cannot feed upon mere length, but this must signify the sides of some surface of land bounded thereby, and we must have two sides of that surface given before we can find the area, or surface contained. Therefore Moses (ver. 5) tells us, that on each side of each city they must measure 2000 cubits, which will determine no surface, unless we understand it to mean the two sides of a square, bounded on every side by a 1000 cubits; these two sides multiplied into each other will produce a square that contains just a million of square cubits, and that is a known and exact measure of just 100 Arourœ: and this shews that the 2000 cubits mentioned (ver. 5) are the two sides of that square, whereof the 1000 mentioned (ver. 4) is one, and may be called the root of the square. This shews the agreement of the two different numbers. The reduction of this million of square cubits will be performed by the same method that I have used before. Therefore, first, I express 1000 Jewish by 1824 English feet, without any Separatrix, according to the principles owned in decimal arithmetic; and the square of that number will be 3,326,976, without a Separatrix. Secondly, I divide this number by 43,560, which are the square feet of an acre, and find the quote to be 76·376859, which signify 76 entire acres, and ·376859 decimals of an acre. Thirdly, to find what roods are contained in these decimals, I multiply them by four, the number of roods in an acre, and find the quote to be 1·507436, which proves that there is but one rood in them, and the six figures cut off by the Separatrix (because there were six decimals in one of the multipliers) are all decimals of a rood. Fourthly, therefore, to find what perches are in these last decimals, I multiply them by 40, which is the number of perches contained in a rood. The product is 20·297440; hereby I find there are 20 entire perches, besides the decimals of a perch placed after the Separatrix. Fifthly, to find what square feet are in those last decimals, I multiply them by 272·25, which are the square feet and decimals in a perch, the product is 80·97804, which is 80 square feet, and all the decimals not amounting to a square foot I reject as inconsiderable in measure of land. Thus we have found that this and every other square on each side of every Levitical city was prescribed to be 76 acres, 1 rood, 20 perches, 80 square feet in our measure, but was just a million of square cubits in their measure.

To add the four squares belonging to one Levitical city together, the best way will be to take the first quote that we found in acre measure, viz., 76·376859, and we must multiply it by four, and we shall find, by the method I have used, all the four squares together to amount to 305 acres, 2 roods, 1 perch: we need not take notice of any lesser quantities in this case. We may also by this method find the sum of the acres belonging to all the forty-eight cities of the Levites, and many other improvements in this kind of measuring surfaces. But I leave them to the industry of others.

PSALMS OF DAVID

IN METRE.

PSALM I.

1 THAT man hath perfect blessedness who walketh not astray
In counsel of ungodly men,
nor stands in sinners' way,
Nor sitteth in the scorner's chair:
2 But placeth his delight
Upon God's law, and meditates on his law day and night.

3 He shall be like a tree that grows near planted by a river,
Which in his season yields his fruit,
and his leaf fadeth never:
And all he doth shall prosper well.
4 The wicked are not so;
But like they are unto the chaff,
which wind drives to and fro.

5 In judgment therefore shall not stand such as ungodly are;
Nor in th' assembly of the just shall wicked men appear.
6 For why? the way of godly men unto the Lord is known:
Whereas the way of wicked men shall quite be overthrown.

PSALM II.

1 WHY rage the heathen? and vain
why do the people mind? [things 2 Kings of the earth do set themselves, and princes are combin'd,
To plot against the Lord, and his Anointed, saying thus,
3 Let us asunder break their bands,
and cast their cords from us.

4 He that in heaven sits shall laugh;
the Lord shall scorn them all.
5 Then shall he speak to them in wrath,
in rage he vex them shall.
6 Yet notwithstanding I have him to be my King appointed;
And over Sion, my holy hill,
I have him King anointed.

7 The sure decree I will declare;
the Lord hath said to me,
Thou art mine only Son; this day
I have begotten thee.
8 Ask of me, and for heritage
the heathen I'll make thine;
And, for possession, I to thee will give earth's utmost line.

9 Thou shalt, as with a weighty rod of iron, break them all;
And, as a potter's sherd, thou shalt them dash in pieces small.
10 Now therefore, kings, be wise; be taught,
ye judges of the earth:
11 Serve God in fear, and see that ye join trembling with your mirth.

12 Kiss ye the Son, lest in his ire
ye perish from the way,
If once his wrath begin to burn:
bless'd all that on him stay.

PSALM III.

1 O LORD, how are my foes increas'd?
against me many rise.
2 Many say of my soul, For him in God no succour lies.

3 Yet thou my shield and glory art,
th' uplifter of mine head.
4 I cry'd, and, from his holy hill,
the Lord me answer made.

5 I laid me down and slept, I wak'd, for God sustained me.
6 I will not fear though thousands ten set round against me be.
7 Arise, O Lord; save me, my God;
for thou my foes hast stroke
All on the cheek-bone, and the teeth of wicked men hast broke.

8 Salvation doth appertain unto the Lord alone:
Thy blessing, Lord, for evermore thy people is upon.

PSALM IV.

1 GIVE ear unto me when I call,
God of my righteousness;
Have mercy, hear my pray'r; thou hast
enlarg'd me in distress.
2 O ye the sons of men! how long will ye love vanities?
How long my glory turn to shame,
and will ye follow lies?

3 But know, that for himself the Lord
the godly man doth chuse:
The Lord, when I on him do call,
to hear will not refuse.
4 Fear, and sin not; talk with your heart on bed, and silent be.
5 Offrings present of righteousness,
and in the Lord trust ye.

6 O who will shew us any good?
is that which many say:
But of thy countenance the light,
Lord, lift on us alway.
7 Upon my heart, bestow'd by thee, more gladness I have found Than they, ev'n then, when corn and wine did most with them abound.

8 I will both lay me down in peace,
and quiet sleep will take;
Because thou only me to dwell in safety, Lord, dost make.

PSALM V.

1 GIVE ear unto my words, O Lord,
my meditation weigh.
2 Hear my loud cry, my King, my God;
for I to thee will pray.
3 Lord, thou shalt early hear my voice:
I early will direct
My pray'r to thee; and, looking up, an answer will expect.

4 For thou art not a God that doth in wickedness delight;
Neither shall evil dwell with thee,
5 nor fools stand in thy sight.
All that ill-doers are thou hat'st;
6 cutt'st off that liars be:
The bloody and deceitful man abhorred is by thee.

7 But I into thy house will come in thine abundant grace;
And I will worship in thy fear toward thy holy place.

8 Because of those mine enemies,
Lord, in thy righteousness
Do thou me lead; do thou thy way make straight before my face.

9 For in their mouth there is no truth,
their inward part is ill;
Their throat's an open sepulchre, their tongue doth flatter still.
10 O God, destroy them; let them be by their own counsel quell'd:
Them for their many sins cast out,
for they 'gainst thee rebell'd.

11 But let all joy that trust in thee,
and still make shouting noise;
For them thou sav'st: let all that love thy name in thee rejoice.
12 For, Lord, unto the righteous man thou wilt thy blessing yield:
With favour thou wilt compass him about, as with a shield.

PSALM VI.

1 LORD, in thy wrath rebuke me not;
Nor in thy hot rage chasten me.
2 Lord, pity me, for I am weak:
Heal me, for my bones vexed be.
3 My soul is also vexed sore;
But, Lord, how long stay wilt thou make?
4 Return, O Lord, my soul set free;
O save me, for thy mercies' sake.

5 Because those that deceased are
Of thee shall no remembrance have;
And who is he that will to thee
Give praises lying in the grave?
6 I with my groaning weary am,
I also all the night my bed
Have caused for to swim; and I
With tears my couch have watered.

7 Mine eye, consum'd with grief, grows
Because of all mine enemies. [old,
8 Hence from me, wicked workers all;
For God hath heard my weeping cries.
9 God hath my supplication heard,
My pray'r received graciously.
10 Sham'd and sore vex'd be all my foes,
Sham'd and back turned suddenly.

ANOTHER OF THE SAME.

1 IN thy great indignation,
O Lord, rebuke me not;
Nor on me lay thy chast'ning hand,
in thy displeasure hot.
2 Lord, I am weak, therefore on me have mercy, and me spare:
Heal me, O Lord, because thou know'st my bones much vexed are.

3 My soul is vexed sore: but, Lord, how long stay wilt thou make?
4 Return, Lord, free my soul; and save me, for thy mercies' sake.
5 Because of thee in death there shall no more remembrance be:
Of those that in the grave do lie,
who shall give thanks to thee?

6 I with my groaning weary am,
and all the night my bed
I caused for to swim; with tears
my couch I watered.

7 By reason of my vexing grief mine eye consumed is;
It waxeth old, because of all that be mine enemies.

8 But now, depart from me all ye
that work iniquity:
For why? the Lord hath heard my voice,
when I did mourn and cry.
9 Unto my supplication
the Lord did hearing give:
When I to him my prayer make,
the Lord will it receive.

10 Let all be sham'd and troubled sore,
that en'mies are to me;
Let them turn back, and suddenly ashamed let them be.

PSALM VII.

1 O LORD my God, in thee do I
my confidence repose:
Save and deliver me from all my persecuting foes;
2 Lest that the enemy my soul should, like a lion, tear,
In pieces rending it, while there is no deliverer.

3 O Lord my God, if it be so that I committed this;
If it be so that in my hands
iniquity there is:
4 If I rewarded ill to him
that was at peace with me; (Yea, ev'n the man that without cause my foe was I did free;)

5 Then let the foe pursue and take my soul, and my life thrust Down to the earth, and let him lay mine honour in the dust.
6 Rise in thy wrath, Lord, raise thyself, for my foes raging be;
And, to the judgment which thou hast commanded, wake for me.

7 So shall th' assembly of thy folk about encompass thee:
Thou, therefore, for their sakes, return unto thy place on high.
8 The Lord he shall the people judge;
my judge, JEHOVAH, be,
After my righteousness, and mine
integrity in me.

9 O let the wicked's malice end;
but stablish stedfastly
The righteous: for the righteous God
the hearts and reins doth try.
10 In God, who saves th' upright in heart, is my defence and stay.
11 God just men judgeth, God is wroth with ill men ev'ry day.

12 If he do not return again,
then he his sword will whet;
His bow he hath already bent,
and hath it ready set:
13 He also hath for him prepar'd
the instruments of death; Against the persecutors he his shafts ordained hath.

14 Behold, he with iniquity doth travail, as in birth;
A mischief he conceived hath,
and falsehood shall bring forth.
15 He made a pit, and digg'd it deep, another there to take;
But he is fall'n into the ditch which he himself did make.

16 Upon his own head his mischief shall be returned home;
His vi'lent dealing also down on his own pate shall come.
17 According to his righteousness
the Lord I'll magnify;
And will sing praise unto the name of God that is most high.

PSALM VIII.

1 HOW excellent in all the earth,
Lord, our Lord, is thy name!
Who hast thy glory far advanc'd above the starry frame.
2 From infants' and from sucklings' thou didest strength ordain, [mouth
For thy foes' cause, that so thou might'st
th' avenging foe restrain.

3 When I look up unto the heav'ns, which thine own fingers fram'd, Unto the moon, and to the stars,
which were by thee ordain'd;
4 Then say I, What is man, that he remember'd is by thee?
Or what the son of man, that thou so kind to him should'st be?

5 For thou a little lower hast him than the angels made;
With glory and with dignity
thou crowned hast his head.
6 Of thy hands' works thou mad'st him all under's feet didst lay; [lord, 7 All sheep and oxen, yea, and beasts that in the field do stray;

8 Fowls of the air, fish of the sea,
all that pass through the same.
9 How excellent in all the earth,
Lord, our Lord, is thy name!

PSALM IX.

1 LORD, thee I'll praise with all my thy wonders all proclaim. [heart, 2 In thee, most High, I'll greatly joy, and sing unto thy name.
3 When back my foes were turn'd, they and perish'd at thy sight: [fell, 4 For thou maintain'dst my right and on throne sat'st judging right. [cause;

5 The heathen thou rebuked hast,
the wicked overthrown;
Thou hast put out their names, that they may never more be known.
6 O en'my! now destructions have an end perpetual:
Thou cities raz'd, perish'd with them is their memorial.

7 God shall endure for aye; he doth for judgment set his throne;
8 In righteousness to judge the world,
justice to give each one.
9 God also will a refuge be for those that are oppress'd;
A refuge will he be in times of trouble to distress'd.

10 And they that know thy name, in thee their confidence will place:
For thou hast not forsaken them that truly seek thy face.
11 O sing ye praises to the Lord that dwells in Sion hill;
And all the nations among his deeds record ye still.

12 When he enquireth after blood,
he then rememb'reth them:
The humble folk he not forgets that call upon his name.
13 Lord, pity me; behold the grief which I from foes sustain; Ev'n thou, who from the gates of death
dost raise me up again:

14 That I, in Sion's daughters' gates, may all thy praise advance;
And that I may rejoice always in thy deliverance.
15 The heathen are sunk in the pit which they themselves prepar'd;
And in the net which they have hid their own feet fast are snar'd.

16 The Lord is by the judgment known which he himself hath wrought:
The sinners' hands do make the snares wherewith themselves are caught.
17 They who are wicked into hell
each one shall turned be;
And all the nations that forget to seek the Lord most high.

18 For they that needy are shall not forgotten be alway;
The expectation of the poor shall not be lost for aye.

19 Arise, Lord, let not man prevail;
judge heathen in thy sight:
20 That they may know themselves but the nations, Lord, affright. [men,

PSALM X.

1 WHEREFORE is it that thou, O
dost stand from us afar? [Lord,
And wherefore hidest thou thyself when times so troublous are?
2 The wicked in his loftiness
doth persecute the poor:
In these devices they have fram'd
let them be taken sure.

3 The wicked of his heart's desire doth talk with boasting great;
He blesseth him that's covetous, whom yet the Lord doth hate.
4 The wicked, through his pride of face,
on God he doth not call;
And in the counsels of his heart
the Lord is not at all.

5 His ways they always grievous are;
thy judgments from his sight Removed are: at all his foes
he puffeth with despight.
6 Within his heart he thus hath said,
I shall not moved be;
And no adversity at all shall ever come to me.

7 His mouth with cursing, fraud, deceit,
is fill'd abundantly;
And underneath his tongue there is mischief and vanity.
8 He closely sits in villages;
he slays the innocent:
Against the poor that pass him by his cruel eyes are bent.

9 He, lion-like, lurks in his den;
he waits the poor to take;
And when he draws him in his net,
his prey he doth him make.
10 Himself he humbleth very low,
he croucheth down withal,
That so a multitude of poor
may by his strong ones fall.

11 He thus hath said within his heart,
The Lord hath quite forgot;
He hides his countenance, and he
for ever sees it not.
12 O Lord, do thou arise; O God, lift up thine hand on high:
Put not the meek afflicted ones out of thy memory.

13 Why is it that the wicked man
thus doth the Lord despise?
Because that God will it require he in his heart denies.
14 Thou hast it seen; for their mischief and spite thou wilt repay:
The poor commits himself to thee;
thou art the orphan's stay.

15 The arm break of the wicked man,
and of the evil one;
Do thou seek out his wickedness,
until thou findest none.
16 The Lord is king through ages all,
ev'n to eternity;
The heathen people from his land are perish'd utterly.

17 O Lord, of those that humble are thou the desire didst hear;
Thou wilt prepare their heart, and thou to hear wilt bend thine ear; 18 To judge the fatherless, and those that are oppressed sore;
That man, that is but sprung of earth,
may them oppress no more.

PSALM XI.

1 IN the Lord do put my trust;
how is it then that ye Say to my soul, Flee, as a bird, unto your mountain high?
2 For, lo, the wicked bend their bow, their shafts on string they fit,
That those who upright are in heart
they privily may hit.

3 If the foundations be destroy'd, what hath the righteous done?
4 God in his holy temple is,
in heaven is his throne:
His eyes do see, his eyelids try 5 men's sons. The just he proves;
But his soul hates the wicked man,
and him that vi'lence loves.

6 Snares, fire and brimstone, furious on sinners he shall rain: [storms,
This, as the portion of their cup,
doth unto them pertain.
7 Because the Lord most righteous doth in righteousness delight;
And with a pleasant countenance beholdeth the upright.

PSALM XII.

1 HELP, Lord, because the godly man
doth daily fade away;
And from among the sons of men
the faithful do decay.
2 Unto his neighbour ev'ry one doth utter vanity:
They with a double heart do speak,
and lips of flattery.

3 God shall cut off all flatt'ring lips, tongues that speak proudly thus,
4 We'll with our tongue prevail, our lips are ours: who's lord o'er us?
5 For poor oppress'd, and for the sighs of needy, rise will I, Saith God, and him in safety set from such as him defy.

6 The words of God are words most pure;
they be like silver try'd
In earthen furnace, seven times that hath been purify'd.
7 Lord, thou shalt them preserve and for ever from this race. [keep 8 On each side walk the wicked, when vile men are high in place.

PSALM XIII.

1 HOW long wilt thou forget me, Lord?
shall it for ever be?
O how long shall it be that thou wilt hide thy face from me?
2 How long take counsel in my soul,
still sad in heart, shall I?
How long exalted over me shall be mine enemy?

3 O Lord my God, consider well, and answer to me make:
Mine eyes enlighten, lest the sleep
of death me overtake:
4 Lest that mine enemy should say,
Against him I prevail'd;
And those that trouble me rejoice,
when I am mov'd and fail'd.

5 But I have all my confidence thy mercy set upon;
My heart within me shall rejoice in thy salvation.
6 I will unto the Lord my God
sing praises cheerfully, Because he hath his bounty shewn to me abundantly.

PSALM XIV.

1 THAT there is not a God, the fool
doth in his heart conclude:
They are corrupt, their works are vile;
not one of them doth good.
2 Upon men's sons the Lord from heav'n did cast his eyes abroad,
To see if any understood,
and did seek after God.

3 They altogether filthy are,
they all aside are gone;
And there is none that doeth good,
yea, sure there is not one.
4 These workers of iniquity
do they not know at all,
That they my people eat as bread,
and on God do not call?

5 There fear'd they much; for God is with the whole race of the just.
6 You shame the counsel of the poor,
because God is his trust.
7 Let Isr'el's help from Sion come;
when back the Lord shall bring
His captives, Jacob shall rejoice,
and Israel shall sing.

PSALM XV.

1 WITHIN thy tabernacle, Lord,
who shall abide with thee?
And in thy high and holy hill who shall a dweller be?
2 The man that walketh uprightly, and worketh righteousness,
And as he thinketh in his heart,
so doth he truth express.

3 Who doth not slander with his tongue,
nor to his friend doth hurt;
Nor yet against his neighbour doth take up an ill report.
4 In whose eyes vile men are despis'd;
but those that God do fear
He honoureth; and changeth not, though to his hurt he swear.

5 His coin puts not to usury, nor take reward will he Against the guiltless. Who doth thus shall never moved be.

PSALM XVI.

1 LORD, keep me; for I trust in thee.
2 To God thus was my speech,
Thou art my Lord; and unto thee
my goodness doth not reach:
3 To saints on earth, to th' excellent,
where my delight's all plac'd.
4 Their sorrows shall be multiply'd to other gods that haste:

Of their drink-offerings of blood
I will no off'ring make;
Yea, neither I their very names up in my lips will take.
5 God is of mine inheritance and cup the portion;
The lot that fallen is to me
thou dost maintain alone.

6 Unto me happily the lines in pleasant places fell;
Yea, the inheritance I got in beauty doth excel.
7 I bless the Lord, because he doth by counsel me conduct;
And in the seasons of the night
my reins do me instruct.

8 Before me still the Lord I set:
sith it is so that he Doth ever stand at my right hand,
I shall not moved be.
9 Because of this my heart is glad,
and joy shall be exprest Ev'n by my glory; and my flesh in confidence shall rest.

10 Because my soul in grave to dwell shall not be left by thee:
Nor wilt thou give thine Holy One corruption to see.
11 Thou wilt me shew the path of life:
of joys there is full store Before thy face; at thy right hand are pleasures evermore.

PSALM XVII.

1 LORD, hear the right, attend my cry,
unto my pray'r give heed,
That doth not in hypocrisy from feigned lips proceed.
2 And from before thy presence forth my sentence do thou send:
Toward these things that equal are do thou thine eyes intend.

3 Thou prov'dst mine heart, thou visit'dst by night, thou didst me try, [me Yet nothing found'st; for that my mouth shall not sin, purpos'd I.
4 As for men's works, I, by the word that from thy lips doth flow, Did me preserve out of the paths wherein destroyers go.

5 Hold up my goings, Lord, me guide
in those thy paths divine,
So that my footsteps may not slide out of those ways of thine.
6 I called have on thee, O God, because thou wilt me hear:
That thou may'st hearken to my speech,
to me incline thine ear.

7 Thy wondrous loving-kindness shew,
thou that, by thy right hand, Sav'st them that trust in thee from those that up against them stand.
8 As th' apple of the eye me keep;
in thy wings shade me close 9 From lewd oppressors, compassing me round, as deadly foes.

10 In their own fat they are inclos'd;
their mouth speaks loftily.
11 Our steps they compass'd; and to down bowing set their eye. [ground 12 He like unto a lion is that's greedy of his prey,
Or lion young, which lurking doth in secret places stay.

13 Arise, and disappoint my foe,
and cast him down, O Lord:
My soul save from the wicked man,
the man which is thy sword.
14 From men, which are thy hand, O from worldly men me save, [Lord,
Which only in this present life
Their part and portion have.

Whose belly with thy treasure hid thou fill'st: they children have In plenty; of their goods the rest they to their children leave.
15 But as for me, I thine own face in righteousness will see;
And with thy likeness, when I wake,
I satisfy'd shall be.

PSALM XVIII.

1 THEE will I love, O Lord, my strength.
2 My fortress is the Lord,
My rock, and he that doth to me deliverance afford:
My God, my strength, whom I will trust,
a buckler unto me,
The horn of my salvation,
and my high tow'r, is he.

3 Upon the Lord, who worthy is of praises, will I cry;
And then shall I preserved be safe from mine enemy.
4 Floods of ill men affrighted me, death's pangs about me went;
5 Hell's sorrows me environed;
death's snares did me prevent.

6 In my distress I call'd on God, cry to my God did I;
He from his temple heard my voice,
to his ears came my cry.
7 Th' earth, as affrighted, then did shake, trembling upon it seiz'd:
The hills' foundations moved were,
because he was displeas'd.

8 Up from his nostrils came a smoke, and from his mouth there came Devouring fire, and coals by it were turned into flame.
9 He also bowed down the heav'ns, and thence he did descend;
And thickest clouds of darkness did under his feet attend.

10 And he upon a cherub rode,
and thereon he did fly;
Yea, on the swift wings of the wind his flight was from on high.
11 He darkness made his secret place:
about him, for his tent,
Dark waters were, and thickest clouds of th' airy firmament.

12 And at the brightness of that light,
which was before his eye,
His thick clouds pass'd away, hailstones and coals of fire did fly.
13 The Lord God also in the heav'ns did thunder in his ire;
And there the Highest gave his voice, hailstones and coals of fire.

14 Yea, he his arrows sent abroad,
and them he scattered;
His lightnings also he shot out,
and them discomfited.
15 The waters' channels then were seen, the world's foundations vast At thy rebuke discover'd were,
and at thy nostrils' blast.

16 And from above the Lord sent down,
and took me from below;
From many waters he me drew,
which would me overflow.
17 He me reliev'd from my strong foes,
and such as did me hate;
Because he saw that they for me too strong were, and too great.

18 They me prevented in the day of my calamity;
But even then the Lord himself
a stay was unto me.
19 He to a place where liberty and room was hath me brought;
Because he took delight in me,
he my deliv'rance wrought.

20 According to my righteousness
he did me recompense,
He me repaid according to my hands' pure innocence.
21 For I God's ways kept, from my God did not turn wickedly.
22 His judgments were before me, I his laws put not from me.

23 Sincere before him was my heart,
with him upright was I;
And watchfully I kept myself
from mine iniquity.
24 After my righteousness the Lord hath recompensed me,
After the cleanness of my hands appearing in his eye.

25 Thou gracious to the gracious art,
to upright men upright:
26 Pure to the pure, froward thou kyth'st unto the froward wight.
27 For thou wilt the afflicted save in grief that low do lie:
But wilt bring down the countenance of them whose looks are high.

28 The Lord will light my candle so,
that it shall shine full bright:
The Lord my God will also make my darkness to be light.
29 By thee through troops of men I break, and them discomfit all;
And, by my God assisting me,
I overleap a wall.

30 As for God, perfect is his way:
the Lord his word is try'd;
He is a buckler to all those who do in him confide.
31 Who but the Lord is God? but he who is a rock and stay?
32 'Tis God that girdeth me with strength, and perfect makes my way.

33 He made my feet swift as the hinds, set me on my high places.
34 Mine hands to war he taught, mine arms brake bows of steel in pieces.
35 The shield of thy salvation
thou didst on me bestow:
Thy right hand held me up, and great thy kindness made me grow.

36 And in my way my steps thou hast enlarged under me,
That I go safely, and my feet
are kept from sliding free.
37 Mine en'mies I pursued have,
and did them overtake;
Nor did I turn again till I an end of them did make.

38 I wounded them, they could not rise;
they at my feet did fall.
39 Thou girdedst me with strength for war;
my foes thou brought'st down all:
40 And thou hast giv'n to me the necks of all mine enemies;
That I might them destroy and slay,
who did against me rise.

41 They cried out, but there was none that would or could them save;
Yea, they did cry unto the Lord,
but he no answer gave.
42 Then did I beat them small as dust before the wind that flies;
And I did cast them out like dirt upon the street that lies.

43 Thou mad'st me free from people's strife, and heathen's head to be:
A people whom I have not known shall service do to me.
44 At hearing they shall me obey, to me they shall submit.
45 Strangers for fear shall fade away, who in close places sit.

46 God lives, bless'd be my Rock; the God of my health praised be.
47 God doth avenge me, and subdues
the people under me.
48 He saves me from mine enemies;
yea, thou hast lifted me Above my foes; and from the man of vi'lence set me free.

49 Therefore to thee will I give thanks
the heathen folk among;
And to thy name, O Lord, I will sing praises in a song.
50 He great deliv'rance gives his king:
he mercy doth extend
To David, his anointed one,
and his seed without end.

PSALM XIX.

1 THE heav'ns God's glory do declare,
the skies his hand-works preach:
2 Day utters speech to day, and night to night doth knowledge teach.
3 There is no speech nor tongue to which their voice doth not extend:
4 Their line is gone through all the earth, their words to the world's end.

In them he set the sun a tent;
5 who, bridegroom-like, forth goes From's chamber, as a strong man doth to run his race rejoice.
6 From heav'n's end is his going forth, circling to th' end again;
And there is nothing from his heat that hidden doth remain.

7 God's law is perfect, and converts
the soul in sin that lies:
God's testimony is most sure,
and makes the simple wise.
8 The statutes of the Lord are right,
and do rejoice the heart:
The Lord's command is pure, and doth light to the eyes impart.

9 Unspotted is the fear of God,
and doth endure for ever:
The judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether.
10 They more than gold, yea, much fine
to be desired are: [gold,
Than honey, honey from the comb that droppeth, sweeter far.

11 Moreover, they thy servant warn how he his life should frame:
A great reward provided is for them that keep the same.
12 Who can his errors understand?
O cleanse thou me within 13 From secret faults. Thy servant keep from all presumptuous sin:

And do not suffer them to have dominion over me:
Then, righteous and innocent,
I from much sin shall be. [ceed,
14 The words which from my mouth pro-
the thoughts sent from my heart, Accept, O Lord, for thou my strength and my Redeemer art.

PSALM XX.

1 JEHOVAH hear thee in the day
when trouble he doth send:
And let the name of Jacob's God thee from all ill defend.

2 O let him help send from above,
out of his sanctuary:
From Sion, his own holy hill,
let him give strength to thee.

3 Let him remember all thy gifts, accept thy sacrifice:
4 Grant thee thine heart's wish, and fulfil thy thoughts and counsel wise.
5 In thy salvation we will joy;
in our God's name we will Display our banners: and the Lord thy prayers all fulfil.

6 Now know I God his king doth save:
he from his holy heav'n
Will hear him, with the saving strength by his own right hand giv'n.
7 In chariots some put confidence, some horses trust upon:
But we remember will the name of our Lord God alone.

8 We rise, and upright stand, when they are bowed down, and fall.
9 Deliver, Lord; and let the King us hear, when we do call.

PSALM XXI.

1 THE king in thy great strength, O Lord,
shall very joyful be: [Lord,
In thy salvation rejoice
how veh'mently shall he!
2 Thou hast bestowed upon him all that his heart would have;
And thou from him didst not withhold whate'er his lips did crave.

3 For thou with blessings him prevent'st of goodness manifold;
And thou hast set upon his head
a crown of purest gold.
4 When he desired life of thee, thou life to him didst give;
Ev'n such a length of days, that he for evermore should live.

5 In that salvation wrought by thee his glory is made great; Honour and comely majesty
thou hast upon him set.
6 Because that thou for evermore
most blessed hast him made;
And thou hast with thy countenance made him exceeding glad.

7 Because the king upon the Lord
his confidence doth lay;
And through the grace of the most High shall not be mov'd away.
8 Thine hand shall all those men find out that en'mies are to thee; Ev'n thy right hand shall find out those of thee that haters be.

9 Like fiery ov'n thou shalt them make,
when kindled is thine ire;
God shall them swallow in his wrath,
devour them shall the fire.
10 Their fruit from earth thou shalt destroy, their seed men from among:
11 For they beyond their might 'gainst thee did plot mischief and wrong.

12 Thou therefore shalt make them turn when thou thy shafts shalt place [back, Upon thy strings, made ready all to fly against their face.
13 In thy great pow'r and strength, O Lord,
be thou exalted high; [Lord,
So shall we sing with joyful hearts,
thy power praise shall we.

PSALM XXII.

1 MY God, my God, why hast thou me forsaken? why so far Art thou from helping me, and from my words that roaring are?
2 All day, my God, to thee I cry,
yet am not heard by thee;
And in the season of the night
I cannot silent be.

3 But thou art holy, thou that dost inhabit Isr'el's praise.
4 Our fathers hop'd in thee, they hop'd, and thou didst them release.

5 When unto thee they sent their cry,
to them deliv'rance came:
Because they put their trust in thee,
they were not put to shame.

6 But as for me, a worm I am,
and as no man am priz'd:
Reproach of men I am, and by the people am despis'd.
7 All that me see laugh me to scorn;
shoot out the lip do they;
They nod and shake their heads at me,
and, mocking, thus do say,

8 This man did trust in God, that he would free him by his might:
Let him deliver him, sith he had in him such delight.
9 But thou art he out of the womb that didst me safely take;
When I was on my mother's breasts thou me to hope didst make.

10 And I was cast upon thy care,
ev'n from the womb till now;
And from my mother's belly, Lord,
my God and guide art thou.
11 Be not far off, for grief is near,
and none to help is found.
12 Bulls many compass me, strong bulls of Bashan me surround.

13 Their mouths they open'd wide on me, upon me gape did they,
Like to a lion ravening
and roaring for his prey.
14 Like water I'm pour'd out, my bones
all out of joint do part:
Amidst my bowels, as the wax,
so melted is my heart.

15 My strength is like a potsherd dry'd;
my tongue it cleaveth fast Unto my jaws; and to the dust of death thou brought me hast.
16 For dogs have compass'd me about:
the wicked, that did meet
In their assembly, me inclos'd;
they pierc'd my hands and feet.

17 I all my bones may tell; they do upon me look and stare.
18 Upon my vesture lots they cast, and clothes among them share.
19 But be not far, O Lord, my strength;
haste to give help to me.
20 From sword my soul, from pow'r of dogs
my darling set thou free.

21 Out of the roaring lion's mouth do thou me shield and save:
For from the horns of unicorns an ear to me thou gave.
22 I will shew forth thy name unto those that my brethren are;
Amidst the congregation
thy praise I will declare.

23 Praise ye the Lord, who do him fear; him glorify all ye
The seed of Jacob; fear him all that Isr'el's children be.
24 For he despis'd not nor abhorr'd
th' afflicted's misery;
Nor from him hid his face, but heard when he to him did cry.

25 Within the congregation great
my praise shall be of thee;
My vows before them that him fear shall be perform'd by me.
26 The meek shall eat, and shall be fill'd;
they also praise shall give Unto the Lord that do him seek:
your heart shall ever live.

27 All ends of th' earth remember shall,
and turn the Lord unto;
All kindreds of the nations
to him shall homage do:
28 Because the kingdom to the Lord doth appertain as his;
Likewise among the nations
the Governor he is.

29 Earth's fat ones eat, and worship shall:
all who to dust descend Shall bow to him; none of them can his soul from death defend.

30 A seed shall service do to him:
unto the Lord it shall Be for a generation
reckon'd in ages all.

31 They shall come, and they shall declare his truth and righteousness Unto a people yet unborn, and that he hath done this.

PSALM XXIII.

1 THE Lord's my shepherd, I'll not want.
2 He makes me down to lie
In pastures green: he leadeth me
the quiet waters by.
3 My soul he doth restore again;
and me to walk doth make Within the paths of righteousness,
ev'n for his own name's sake.

4 Yea, though I walk in death's dark vale,
yet will I fear none ill:
For thou art with me; and thy rod and staff me comfort still.
5 My table thou hast furnished
in presence of my foes;
My head thou dost with oil anoint,
and my cup overflows.

6 Goodness and mercy all my life shall surely follow me:
And in God's house for evermore my dwelling-place shall be.

PSALM XXIV.

1 THE earth belongs unto the Lord,
and all that it contains;
The world that is inhabited,
and all that there remains.
2 For the foundations thereof
he on the seas did lay,
And he hath it established upon the floods to stay.

3 Who is the man that shall ascend into the hill of God?
Or who within his holy place shall have a nrm abode?
4 Whose hands are clean, whose heart is pure, and unto vanity
Who hath not lifted up his soul,
nor sworn deceitfully.

5 He from th' Eternal shall receive the blessing him upon,
And righteousness, ev'n from the God of his salvation.
6 This is the generation that after him enquire,
O Jacob, who do seek thy face with their whole heart's desire.

7 Ye gates, lift up your heads on high;
ye doors that last for aye,
Be lifted up, that so the King
of glory enter may.
8 But who of glory is the King?
The mighty Lord is this;
Ev'n that same Lord, that great in might and strong in battle is.

9 Ye gates, lift up your heads; ye doors, doors that do last for aye,
Be lifted up, that so the King
of glory enter may.
10 But who is he that is the King of glory? who is this?
The Lord of hosts, and none but he,
the King of glory is.

PSALM XXV.

1 TO thee I lift my soul:
2 O Lord, I trust in thee:
My God, let me not be asham'd,
nor foes triumph o'er me.
3 Let none that wait on thee be put to shame at all;
But those that without cause transgress,
let shame upon them fall.

4 Shew me thy ways, O Lord;
thy paths, O teach thou me:
5 And do thou lead me in thy truth, therein my teacher be:
For thou art God that dost to me salvation send,
And I upon thee all the day expecting do attend.

6 Thy tender mercies, Lord,
I pray thee to remember,
And loving-kindnesses; for they have been of old for ever.
7 My sins and faults of youth
do thou, O Lord, forget:
After thy mercy think on me,
and for thy goodness great.

8 God good and upright is:
the way he'll sinners shew.
9 The meek in judgment he will guide,
and make his path to know.
10 The whole paths of the Lord
are truth and mercy sure,
To those that do his cov'nant keep,
and testimonies pure.

11 Now, for thine own name's sake,
O Lord, I thee entreat
To pardon mine iniquity;
for it is very great.
12 What man is he that fears the Lord, and doth him serve?
Him shall he teach the way that he shall chuse, and still observe.

13 His soul shall dwell at ease;
and his posterity Shall flourish still, and of the earth inheritors shall be.
14 With those that fear him is the secret of the Lord;
The knowledge of his covenant
he will to them afford.

15 Mine eyes upon the Lord continually are set;
For he it is that shall bring forth
my feet out of the net.
16 Turn unto me thy face,
and to me mercy shew;
Because that I am desolate,
and am brought very low.

17 My heart's griefs are increas'd:
me from distress relieve.
18 See mine affliction and my pain,
and all my sins forgive.
19 Consider thou my foes,
because they many are;
And it a cruel hatred is
which they against me bear.

20 O do thou keep my soul,
do thou deliver me:
And let me never be asham'd,
because I trust in thee.
21 Let uprightness and truth
keep me, who thee attend.
22 Redemption, Lord, to Israel
from all his troubles send.

ANOTHER OF THE SAME.

1 TO thee I lift my soul, O Lord:
2 My God, I trust in thee:
Let me not be asham'd; let not my foes triumph o'er me.
3 Yea, let thou none ashamed be that do on thee attend:
Ashamed let them be, O Lord,
who without cause offend.

4 Thy ways, Lord, shew; teach me thy paths:
5 Lead me in truth, teach me:
For of my safety thou art God;
all day I wait on thee.
6 Thy mercies, that most tender are,
do thou, O Lord, remember,
And loving-kindnesses; for they
have been of old for ever.

7 Let not the errors of my youth,
nor sins, remember'd be:
In mercy, for thy goodness' sake,
O Lord, remember me.
8 The Lord is good and gracious,
he upright is also:
He therefore sinners will instruct in ways that they should go.

9 The meek and lowly he will guide
in judgment just alway:
To meek and poor afflicted ones
he'll clearly teach his way.
10 The whole paths of the Lord our God
are truth and mercy sure,
To such as keep his covenant,
and testimonies pure.

11 Now, for thine own name's sake, O Lord,
I humbly thee entreat
To pardon mine iniquity;
for it is very great.
12 What man fears God? him shall he teach the way that he shall chuse.
13 His soul shall dwell at ease; his seed
the earth, as heirs, shall use.

14 The secret of the Lord is with such as do fear his name;
And he his holy covenant will manifest to them.
15 Towards the Lord my waiting eyes
continually are set;
For he it is that shall bring forth
my feet out of the net.

16 O turn thee unto me, O God, have mercy me upon;
Because I solitary am,
and in affliction.
17 Enlarg'd the griefs are of mine heart;
me from distress relieve.
18 See mine affliction and my pain,
and all my sins forgive.

19 Consider thou mine enemies,
because they many are;
And it a cruel hatred is
which they against me bear.
20 O do thou keep my soul; O God,
do thou deliver me:
Let me not be asham'd; for I do put my trust in thee.

21 O let integrity and truth
keep me, who thee attend.
22 Redemption, Lord, to Israel
from all his troubles send.

PSALM XXVI.

1 JUDGE me, O Lord, for I have in mine integrity: [walk'd
I trusted also in the Lord;
slide therefore shall not I.
2 Examine me, and do me prove;
try heart and reins, O God:
3 For thy love is before mine eyes,
thy truth's paths I have trode.

4 With persons vain I have not sat,
Nor with dissemblers gone:
5 Th' assembly of ill men I hate;
to sit with such I shun.
6 Mine hands in innocence, O Lord,
I'll wash and purify;
So to thine holy altar go,
and compass it will I:

7 That I, with voice of thanksgiving,
may publish and declare,
And tell of all thy mighty works, that great and wondrous are.
8 The habitation of thy house,
Lord, I have loved well;
Yea, in that place I do delight where doth thine honour dwell.

9 With sinners gather not my soul,
and such as blood would spill:
10 Whose hands mischievous plots, right corrupting bribes do fill. [hand 11 But as for me, I will walk on
in mine integrity:
Do thou redeem me, and, O Lord,
be merciful to me.

12 My foot upon an even place doth stand with stedfastness:
Within the congregations
th' Eternal I will bless.

PSALM XXVII.

1 THE Lord's my light and saving health,
who shall make me dismay'd?
My life's strength is the Lord, of whom then shall I be afraid?

2 When as mine enemies and foes,
most wicked persons all,
To eat my flesh against me rose,
they stumbled and did fall.

3 Against me though an host encamp,
my heart yet fearless is:
Though war against me rise, I will be confident in this.
4 One thing I of the Lord desir'd, and will seek to obtain,
That all days of my life I may within God's house remain;

That I the beauty of the Lord behold may and admire,
And that I in his holy place
may rev'rently enquire.
5 For he in his pavilion shall me hide in evil days;
In secret of his tent me hide,
and on a rock me raise.

6 And now, ev'n at this present time, mine head shall lifted be Above all those that are my foes,
and round encompass me:
Therefore unto his tabernacle
I'll sacrifices bring Of joyfulness; I'll sing, yea, I to God will praises sing.

7 O Lord, give ear unto my voice,
when I do cry to thee;
Upon me also mercy have,
and do thou answer me.
8 When thou didst say, Seek ye my face,
then unto thee reply
Thus did my heart, Above all things thy face, Lord, seek will I.

9 Far from me hide not thou thy face;
put not away from thee Thy servant in thy wrath: thou hast an helper been to me.
O God of my salvation,
leave me not, nor forsake:
10 Though me my parents both should leave,
the Lord will me up take.

11 O Lord, instruct me in thy way,
to me a leader be
In a plain path, because of those that hatred bear to me.
12 Give me not to mine en'mies' will;
for witnesses that lie Against me risen are, and such as breathe out cruelty.

13 I fainted had, unless that I believed had to see The Lord's own goodness in the land of them that living be.
14 Wait on the Lord, and be thou strong, and he shall strength afford Unto thine heart; yea, do thou wait,
I say, upon the Lord.

PSALM XXVIII.

1 TO thee I'll cry, O Lord, my rock;
hold not thy peace to me;
Lest like those that to pit descend
I by thy silence be.
2 The voice hear of my humble pray'rs, when unto thee I cry;
When to thine holy oracle
I lift mine hands on high.

3 With ill men draw me not away
that work iniquity;
That speak peace to their friends, while their hearts doth mischief lie. [in 4 Give them according to their deeds and ills endeavoured:
And as their handy-works deserve,
to them be rendered.

5 God shall not build, but them destroy, who would not understand The Lord's own works, nor did regard the doing of his hand.
6 For ever blessed be the Lord,
for graciously he heard
The voice of my petitions, and prayers did regard.

7 The Lord's my strength and shield; my upon him did rely; [heart
And I am helped: hence my heart doth joy exceedingly.
And with my song I will him praise.
8 Their strength is God alone:
He also is the saving strength of his anointed one.

9 O thine own people do thou save,
bless thine inheritance;
Them also do thou feed, and them for evermore advance.

PSALM XXIX.

1 GIVE ye unto the Lord, ye sons of the mighty be,
All strength and glory to the Lord
with cheerfulness give ye.
2 Unto the Lord the glory give that to his name is due;
And in the beauty of holiness unto JEHOVAH bow.

3 The Lord's voice on the waters is;
the God of majesty
Doth thunder, and on multitudes of waters sitteth he.
4 A pow'rful voice it is that comes out from the Lord most high;
The voice of that great Lord is full of glorious majesty.

5 The voice of the Eternal doth asunder cedars tear;
Yea, God the Lord doth cedars break that Lebanon doth bear.
6 He makes them like a calf to skip,
ev'n that great Lebanon,
And, like to a young unicorn,
the mountain Sirion.

7 God's voice divides the flames of fire;
8 The desert it doth shake:
The Lord doth make the wilderness of Kadesh all to quake.
9 God's voice doth make the hinds to it makes the forest bare: [calve,
And in his temple ev'ry one his glory doth declare.

10 The Lord sits on the floods; the Lord sits King, and ever shall.
11 The Lord will give his people strength, and with peace bless them all.

PSALM XXX.

1 LORD, I will thee extol, for thou hast lifted me on high,
And over me thou to rejoice
mad'st not mine enemy.
2 O thou who art the Lord my God,
I in distress to thee,
With loud cries lifted up my voice,
and thou hast healed me.

3 O Lord, my soul thou hast brought up,
and rescu'd from the grave:
That I to pit should not go down,
alive thou didst me save.
4 O ye that are his holy ones,
sing praise unto the Lord;
And give unto him thanks, when ye his holiness record.

5 For but a moment lasts his wrath;
life in his favour lies:
Weeping may for a night endure,
at morn doth joy arise.
6 In my prosperity I said,
that nothing shall me move.
7 O Lord, thou hast my mountain made to stand strong by thy love:

But when that thou, O gracious God, didst hide thy face from me,
Then quickly was my prosp'rous state
turn'd into misery.
8 Wherefore unto the Lord my cry
I caused to ascend:
My humble supplication
I to the Lord did send.

9 What profit is there in my blood,
when I go down to pit?
Shall unto thee the dust give praise?
thy truth declare shall it?

10 Hear, Lord, have mercy; help me,
11 Thou turned hast my sadness [Lord:
To dancing; yea, my sackcloth loos'd and girded me with gladness;

12 That sing thy praise my glory may,
and never silent be.
O Lord my God, for evermore
I will give thanks to thee.

PSALM XXXI.

1 IN thee, O Lord, I put my trust,
sham'd let me never be;
According to thy righteousness
do thou deliver me.
2 Bow down thine ear to me, with speed
send me deliverance:
To save me, my strong rock be thou,
And my house of defence.

3 Because thou art my rock, and thee
I for my fortress take;
Therefore do thou me lead and guide,
ev'n for thine own name's sake.
4 And sith thou art my strength, therefore pull me out of the net,
Which they in subtilty for me
so privily have set.

5 Into thine hands I do commit my sp'rit: for thou art he,
O thou, JEHOVAH, God of truth, that hast redeemed me.
6 Those that do lying vanities regard, I have abhorr'd:
But as for me, my confidence is fixed on the Lord.

7 I'll in thy mercy gladly joy:
for thou my miseries Consider'd hast; thou hast my soul known in adversities:
8 And thou hast not inclosed me
within the en'my's hand;
And by thee have my feet been made in a large room to stand.

9 O Lord, upon me mercy have,
for trouble is on me:
Mine eye, my belly, and my soul,
with grief consumed be.
10 Because my life with grief is spent,
my years with sighs and groans:
My strength doth fail; and for my sin consumed are my bones.

11 I was a scorn to all my foes,
and to my friends a fear;
And specially reproach'd of those that were my neighbours near:
When they me saw they from me fled.
12 Ev'n so I am forgot,
As men are out of mind when dead:
I'm like a broken pot.

13 For slanders I of many heard;
fear compass'd me, while they Against me did consult, and plot to take my life away.
14 But as for me, O Lord, my trust upon thee I did lay;
And I to thee, Thou art my God,
did confidently say.

15 My times are wholly in thine hand:
do thou deliver me
From their hands that mine enemies and persecutors be.
16 Thy countenance to shine do thou upon thy servant make:
Unto me give salvation,
for thy great mercies' sake.

17 Let me not be asham'd, O Lord, for on thee call'd I have:
Let wicked men be sham'd, let them be silent in the grave.
18 To silence put the lying lips, that grievous things do say,
And hard reports, in pride and scorn,
on righteous men do lay.

19 How great's the goodness thou for them that fear thee keep'st in store,
And wrought'st for them that trust in thee
the sons of men before!
20 In secret of thy presence thou shalt hide them from man's pride:
From strife of tongues thou closely shalt,
as in a tent, them hide.

21 All praise and thanks be to the Lord:
for he hath magnify'd
His wondrous love to me within a city fortify'd.
22 For from thine eyes cut off I am,
I in my haste had said;
My voice yet heard'st thou, when to thee with cries my moan I made.

23 O love the Lord, all ye his saints;
because the Lord doth guard
The faithful, and he plenteously proud doers doth reward.
24 Be of good courage, and he strength unto your heart shall send,
All ye whose hope and confidence
doth on the Lord depend.

PSALM XXXII.

1 O BLESSED is the man to whom is freely pardoned
All the transgressions he hath done, whose sin is covered.
2 Bless'd is the man to whom the Lord
imputeth not his sin,
And in whose sp'rit there is no guile,
nor fraud is found therein.

3 When as I did refrain my speech,
and silent was my tongue,
My bones then waxed old, because I roared all day long.
4 For upon me both day and night
thine hand did heavy lie,
So that my moisture turned is in summer's drought thereby.

5 I thereupon have unto thee
my sin acknowledged,
And likewise mine iniquity
I have not covered:
I will confess unto the Lord
my trespasses, said I;
And of my sin thou freely didst forgive th' iniquity.

6 For this shall ev'ry godly one his prayer make to thee;
In such a time he shall thee seek,
as found thou mayest be.
Surely, when floods of waters great do swell up to the brim,
They shall not overwhelm his soul,
nor once come near to him.

7 Thou art my hiding-place, thou shalt from trouble keep me free:
Thou with songs of deliverance about shalt compass me.
8 I will instruct thee, and thee teach the way that thou shalt go;
And, with mine eye upon thee set,
I will direction shew.

9 Then be not like the horse or mule,
which do not understand;
Whose mouth, lest they come near to a bridle must command. [thee, 10 Unto the man that wicked is his sorrows shall abound;
But him that trusteth in the Lord mercy shall compass round.

11 Ye righteous, in the Lord be glad,
in him do ye rejoice:
All ye that upright are in heart,
for joy lift up your voice.

PSALM XXXIII.

1 YE righteous, in the Lord rejoice;
it comely is and right,
That upright men, with thankful voice, should praise the Lord of might.
2 Praise God with harp, and unto him
sing with the psaltery;
Upon a ten-string'd instrument make ye sweet melody.

3 A new song to him sing, and play with loud noise skilfully;
4 For right is God's word, all his works are done in verity.
5 To judgment and to righteousness a love he beareth still;
The loving-kindness of the Lord,
the earth throughout doth fill.

6 The heavens by the word of God did their beginning take;
And by the breathing of his mouth
he all their hosts did make.
7 The waters of the seas he brings together as an heap;
And in storehouses, as it were,
he layeth up the deep.

8 Let earth, and all that live therein,
with rev'rence fear the Lord;
Let all the world's inhabitants dread him with one accord.
9 For he did speak the word, and done
it was without delay;
Established it firmly stood,
whatever he did say.

10 God doth the counsel bring to nought which heathen folk do take;
And what the people do devise of none effect doth make.
11 O but the counsel of the Lord
doth stand for ever sure;
And of his heart the purposes from age to age endure.

12 That nation blessed is, whose God JEHOVAH is, and those
A blessed people are, whom for his heritage he chose.
13 The Lord from heav'n sees and beholds
all sons of men full well:
14 He views all from his dwelling-place that in the earth do dwell.

15 He forms their hearts alike, and all their doings he observes.
16 Great hosts save not a king, much strength
no mighty man preserves.
17 An horse for preservation is a deceitful thing;
And by the greatness of his strength can no deliv'rance bring.

18 Behold, on those that do him fear
the Lord doth set his eye; Ev'n those who on his mercy do with confidence rely.
19 From death to free their soul, in dearth life unto them to yield.
20 Our soul doth wait upon the Lord;
he is our help and shield.

21 Sith in his holy name we trust,
our heart shall joyful be.
22 Lord, let thy mercy be on us,
as we do hope in thee.

PSALM XXXIV.

1 GOD will I bless all times; his praise
my mouth shall still express.
2 My soul shall boast in God: the meek shall hear with joyfulness.
3 Extol the Lord with me, let us exalt his name together.
4 I sought the Lord, he heard, and did me from all fears deliver.

5 They look'd to him, and lighten'd were:
not shamed were their faces.
6 This poor man cry'd, God heard, and him from all his distresses. [sav'd 7 The angel of the Lord encamps, and round encompasseth
All those about that do him fear, and them delivereth.

8 O taste and see that God is good:
who trusts in him is bless'd.
9 Fear God his saints: none that him fear shall be with want oppress'd.
10 The lions young may hungry be,
and they may lack their food:
But they that truly seek the Lord shall not lack any good.

11 O children, hither do ye come,
and unto me give ear;
I shall you teach to understand how ye the Lord should fear.
12 What man is he that life desires, to see good would live long?
13 Thy lips refrain from speaking guile, and from ill words thy tongue.

14 Depart from ill, do good, seek peace, pursue it earnestly.
15 God's eyes are on the just; his ears are open to their cry.
16 The face of God is set against those that do wickedly,
That he may quite out from the earth
cut off their memory.

17 The righteous cry unto the Lord,
he unto them gives ear;
And they out of their troubles all by him deliver'd are.
18 The Lord is ever nigh to them
that be of broken sp'rit;
To them he safety doth afford that are in heart contrite.

19 The troubles that afflict the just in number many be;
But yet at length out of them all the Lord doth set him free.
20 He carefully his bones doth keep,
whatever can befall;
That not so much as one of them can broken be at all.

21 Ill shall the wicked slay; laid waste shall be who hate the just.
22 The Lord redeems his servants' souls;
none perish that him trust.

PSALM XXXV.

1 PLEAD, Lord, with those that plead; and fight with those that fight with me.
2 Of shield and buckler take thou hold,
stand up mine help to be.
3 Draw also out the spear, and do against them stop the way
That me pursue: unto my soul,
I'm thy salvation, say.

4 Let them confounded be and sham'd that for my soul have sought:
Who plot my hurt turn'd back be they,
and to confusion brought.
5 Let them be like unto the chaff that flies before the wind;
And let the angel of the Lord
pursue them hard behind.

6 With darkness cover thou their way,
and let it slipp'ry prove;
And let the angel of the Lord
pursue them from above.
7 For without cause have they for me their net hid in a pit,
They also have without a cause for my soul digged it.

8 Let ruin seize him unawares;
his net he hid withal Himself let catch; and in the same destruction let him fall.
9 My soul in God shall joy; and glad in his salvation be:
10 And all my bones shall say, O Lord,
who is like unto thee,

Which dost the poor set free from him
that is for him too strong;
The poor and needy from the man that spoils and does him wrong?
11 False witnesses rose; to my charge things I not knew they laid.
12 They, to the spoiling of my soul,
me ill for good repaid.

13 But as for me, when they were sick,
in sackcloth sad I mourn'd:
My humbled soul did fast, my pray'r into my bosom turn'd.
14 Myself I did behave as he had been my friend or brother;
I heavily bow'd down, as one that mourneth for his mother.

15 But in my trouble they rejoic'd, gath'ring themselves together;
Yea, abjects vile together did themselves against me gather:
I knew it not; they did me tear,
and quiet would not be.
16 With mocking hypocrites, at feasts
they gnash'd their teeth at me.

17 How long, Lord, look'st thou on? from destructions they intend [those Rescue my soul, from lions young my darling do defend.
18 I will give thanks to thee, O Lord, within th' assembly great;
And where much people gather'd are thy praises forth will set.

19 Let not my wrongful enemies
proudly rejoice o'er me;
Nor who me hate without a cause,
let them wink with the eye.
20 For peace they do not speak at all:
but crafty plots prepare Against all those within the land that meek and quiet are.

21 With mouths set wide, they 'gainst me
Ha, ha! our eye doth see. [said,
22 Lord, thou hast seen, hold not thy peace;
Lord, be not far from me.
23 Stir up thyself; wake, that thou may'st judgment to me afford, Ev'n to my cause, O thou that art
my only God and Lord.

24 O Lord my God, do thou me judge
after thy righteousness;
And let them not their joy 'gainst me triumphantly express:
25 Nor let them say within their hearts,
Ah, we would have it thus;
Nor suffer them to say, that he is swallow'd up by us.

26 Sham'd and confounded be they all
that at my hurt are glad;
Let those against me that do boast with shame and scorn be clad.
27 Let them that love my righteous cause be glad, shout, and not cease
To say, The Lord be magnify'd, who loves his servants' peace.

28 Thy righteousness shall also be declared by my tongue;
The praises that belong to thee speak shall it all day long.

PSALM XXXVI.

1 THE wicked man's transgression
within my heart thus says, Undoubtedly the fear of God is not before his eyes.
2 Because himself he flattereth
in his own blinded eye, Until the hatefulness be found of his iniquity.

3 Words from his mouth proceeding are,
fraud and iniquity:
He to be wise, and to do good,
hath left off utterly.
4 He mischief, lying on his bed,
most cunningly doth plot:
He sets himself in ways not good,
ill he abhorreth not.

5 Thy mercy, Lord, is in the heav'ns;
thy truth doth reach the clouds:
6 Thy justice is like mountains great;
thy judgments deep as floods:
Lord, thou preservest man and beast.
7 How precious is thy grace!
Therefore in shadow of thy wings
men's sons their trust shall place.

8 They with the fatness of thy house shall be well satisfy'd;
From rivers of thy pleasures thou wilt drink to them provide.
9 Because of life the fountain pure remains alone with thee;
And in that purest light of thine
we clearly light shall see.

10 Thy loving-kindness unto them continue that thee know;
And still on men upright in heart
thy righteousness bestow.
11 Let not the foot of cruel pride come, and against me stand;
And let me not removed be,
Lord, by the wicked's hand.

12 There fallen are they, and ruined,
that work iniquities:
Cast down they are, and never shall be able to arise.

PSALM XXXVII.

1 FOR evil-doers fret thou not thyself unquietly;
Nor do thou envy bear to those
that work iniquity.
2 For, even like unto the grass,
soon be cut down shall they;
And, like the green and tender herb,
they wither shall away.

3 Set thou thy trust upon the Lord,
and be thou doing good;
And so thou in the land shalt dwell,
and verily have food.
4 Delight thyself in God; he'll give thine heart's desire to thee.
5 Thy way to God commit, him trust, it bring to pass shall he.

6 And, like unto the light, he shall thy righteousness display;
And he thy judgment shall bring forth like noon-tide of the day.
7 Rest in the Lord, and patiently wait for him: do not fret
For him who, prosp'ring in his way, success in sin doth get.

8 Do thou from anger cease, and wrath see thou forsake also:
Fret not thyself in any wise,
that evil thou should'st do.
9 For those that evil-doers are shall be cut off and fall:
But those that wait upon the Lord
the earth inherit shall.

10 For yet a little while, and then the wicked shall not be;
His place thou shalt consider well,
but it thou shalt not see.
11 But by inheritance the earth
the meek ones shall possess:
They also shall delight themselves in an abundant peace.

12 The wicked plots against the just,
and at him whets his teeth:
13 The Lord shall laugh at him, because his day he coming seeth.
14 The wicked have drawn out the sword, and bent their bow, to slay
The poor and needy, and to kill men of an upright way.

15 But their own sword, which they have shall enter their own heart: [drawn, Their bows which they have bent shall and into pieces part. [break, 16 A little that a just man hath is more and better far Than is the wealth of many such as lewd and wicked are.

17 For sinners' arms shall broken be;
but God the just sustains.
18 God knows the just man's days, and still their heritage remains.
19 They shall not be asham'd when they
the evil time do see;
And when the days of famine are they satisfy'd shall be.

20 But wicked men, and foes of God,
as fat of lambs, decay;
They shall consume, yea, into smoke
they shall consume away.
21 The wicked borrows, but the same again he doth not pay:
Whereas the righteous mercy shews,
and gives his own away.

22 For such as blessed be of him
the earth inherit shall;
And they that cursed are of him shall be destroyed all.
23 A good man's footsteps by the Lord
are ordered aright;
And in the way wherein he walks
he greatly doth delight.

24 Although he fall, yet shall he not be cast down utterly;
Because the Lord with his own hand upholds him mightily.
25 I have been young, and now am old,
yet have I never seen
The just man left, nor that his seed for bread have beggars been.

26 He's ever merciful, and lends:
his seed is bless'd therefore.
27 Depart from evil, and do good,
and dwell for evermore.
28 For God loves judgment, and his saints leaves not in any case;
They are kept ever: but cut off shall be the sinner's race.

29 The just inherit shall the land,
and ever in it dwell:
30 The just man's mouth doth wisdom speak;
his tongue doth judgment tell.
31 In's heart the law is of his God, his steps slide not away.
32 The wicked man doth watch the just,
and seeketh him to slay.

33 Yet him the Lord will not forsake, nor leave him in his hands:
The righteous will he not condemn,
when he in judgment stands.
34 Wait on the Lord, and keep his way, and thee exalt shall he Th' earth to inherit; when cut off the wicked thou shalt see.

35 I saw the wicked great in pow'r, spread like a green bay-tree:
36 He pass'd, yea, was not; him I sought,
but found he could not be.
37 Mark thou the perfect, and behold
the man of uprightness;
Because that surely of this man
the latter end is peace.

38 But those men that transgressors are shall be destroy'd together;
The latter end of wicked men shall be cut off for ever.
39 But the salvation of the just is from the Lord above;
He in the time of their distress their stay and strength doth prove.

40 The Lord shall help, and them deliver:
he shall them free and save
From wicked men; because in him their confidence they have.

PSALM XXXVIII.

1 IN thy great indignation,
O Lord, rebuke me not;
Nor on me lay thy chast'ning hand,
in thy displeasure hot.
2 For in me fast thine arrows stick, thine hand doth press me sore:
3 And in my flesh there is no health,
nor soundness any more.

This grief I have, because thy wrath is forth against me gone;
And in my bones there is no rest,
for sin that I have done.
4 Because gone up above mine head my great transgressions be;
And, as a weighty burden, they too heavy are for me.

5 My wounds do stink, and are corrupt;
my folly makes it so.
6 I troubled am, and much bow'd down;
all day I mourning go.
7 For a disease that loathsome is so fills my loins with pain,
That in my weak and weary flesh
no soundness doth remain.

8 So feeble and infirm am I,
and broken am so sore,
That, through disquiet of my heart,
I have been made to roar.
9 O Lord, all that I do desire is still before thine eye;
And of my heart the secret groans not hidden are from thee.

10 My heart doth pant incessantly,
my strength doth quite decay;
As for mine eyes, their wonted light is from me gone away.
11 My lovers and my friends do stand at distance from my sore;
And those do stand aloof that were kinsmen and kind before.

12 Yea, they that seek my life lay snares:
who seek to do me wrong Speak things mischievous, and deceits imagine all day long.
13 But, as one deaf, that heareth not,
I suffer'd all to pass;
I as a dumb man did become,
whose mouth not open'd was:

14 As one that hears not, in whose mouth are no reproofs at all.
15 For, Lord, I hope in thee; my God, thou'lt hear me when I call.
16 For I said, Hear me, lest they should rejoice o'er me with pride;
And o'er me magnify themselves,
when as my foot doth slide.

17 For I am near to halt, my grief is still before mine eye:
18 For I'll declare my sin, and grieve for mine iniquity.
19 But yet mine en'mies lively are,
and strong are they beside;
And they that hate me wrongfully are greatly multiply'd.

20 And they for good that render ill,
as en'mies me withstood;
Yea, ev'n for this, because that I do follow what is good.
21 Forsake me not, O Lord; my God, far from me never be.
22 O Lord, thou my salvation art,
haste to give help to me.

PSALM XXXIX.

1 I SAID, I will look to my ways,
lest with my tongue I sin:
In sight of wicked men my mouth with bridle I'll keep in.
2 With silence I as dumb became,
I did myself restrain
From speaking good; but then the more increased was my pain.

3 My heart within me waxed hot;
and, while I musing was,
The fire did burn; and from my tongue
these words I did let pass:
4 Mine end, and measure of my days,
O Lord, unto me shew
What is the same; that I thereby my frailty well may know.

5 Lo, thou my days an handbreadth mad'st;
mine age is in thine eye
As nothing: sure each man at best is wholly vanity.
6 Sure each man walks in a vain show;
they vex themselves in vain:
He heaps up wealth, and doth not know to whom it shall pertain.

7 And now, O Lord, what wait I for?
my hope is fix'd on thee.
8 Free me from all my trespasses,
the fool's scorn make not me.
9 Dumb was I, op'ning not my mouth, because this work was thine.
10 Thy stroke take from me; by the blow of thine hand I do pine.

11 When with rebukes thou dost correct man for iniquity,
Thou wastes his beauty like a moth:
sure each man's vanity.
12 Attend my cry, Lord, at my tears and pray'rs not silent be:
I sojourn as my fathers all,
and stranger am with thee.

13 O spare thou me, that I my strength recover may again,
Before from hence I do depart, and here no more remain.

PSALM XL.

1 I WAITED for the Lord my God,
and patiently did bear;
At length to me he did incline
my voice and cry to hear.
2 He took me from a fearful pit,
and from the miry clay,
And on a rock he set my feet,
establishing my way.

3 He put a new song in my mouth,
our God to magnify:
Many shall see it, and shall fear,
and on the Lord rely.
4 O blessed is the man whose trust
upon the Lord relies; Respecting not the proud, nor such as turn aside to lies.

5 O Lord my God, full many are the wonders thou hast done;
Thy gracious thoughts to us-ward far above all thoughts are gone:
In order none can reckon them
to thee: if them declare,
And speak of them I would, they more than can be number'd are.

6 No sacrifice nor offering didst thou at all desire;
Mine ears thou bor'd: sin-off'ring thou and burnt didst not require:
7 Then to the Lord these were my words,
I come, behold and see;
Within the volume of the book
it written is of me:

8 To do thy will I take delight,
O thou my God that art;
Yea, that most holy law of thine
I have within my heart.
9 Within the congregation great
I righteousness did preach:
Lo, thou dost know, O Lord, that I refrained not my speech.

10 I never did within my heart conceal thy righteousness;
I thy salvation have declar'd,
and shewn thy faithfulness:
Thy kindness, which most loving is,
concealed have not I,
Nor from the congregation great have hid thy verity.

11 Thy tender mercies, Lord, from me
O do thou not restrain;
Thy loving-kindness, and thy truth,
let them me still maintain.
12 For ills past reck'ning compass me,
and mine iniquities
Such hold upon me taken have,
I cannot lift mine eyes:

They more than hairs are on my head, thence is my heart dismay'd.
13 Be pleased, Lord, to rescue me;
Lord, hasten to mine aid.
14 Sham'd and confounded be they all
that seek my soul to kill; Yea, let them backward driven be,
and sham'd, that wish me ill.

15 For a reward of this their shame confounded let them be,
That in this manner scoffing say,
Aha, aha! to me.
16 In thee let all be glad, and joy,
who seeking thee abide;
Who thy salvation love, say still,
The Lord be magnify'd.

17 I'm poor and needy, yet the Lord of me a care doth take:
Thou art my help and saviour,
my God, no tarrying make.

PSALM XLI.

1 BLESSED is he that wisely doth
the poor man's case consider;
For when the time of trouble is,
the Lord will him deliver.
2 God will him keep, yea, save alive;
on earth he bless'd shall live;
And to his enemies' desire thou wilt him not up give.

3 God will give strength when he on bed of languishing doth mourn;
And in his sickness sore, O Lord, thou all his bed wilt turn.

Digitized by Google

4 I said, O Lord, do thou extend thy mercy unto me;
O do thou heal my soul; for why?
I have offended thee.
5 Those that to me are enemies,
of me do evil say,
When shall he die, that so his name
may perish quite away?

6 To see me if he comes, he speaks vain words: but then his heart Heaps mischief to it, which he tells, when forth he doth depart.
7 My haters jointly whispering, 'gainst me my hurt devise.
8 Mischief, say they, cleaves fast to him;
he li'th, and shall not rise.

9 Yea, ev'n mine own familiar friend,
on whom I did rely,
Who ate my bread, ev'n he his heel against me lifted high.
10 But, Lord, be merciful to me,
and up again me raise,
That I may justly them requite
according to their ways.

11 By this I know that certainly
I favour'd am by thee;
Because my hateful enemy
triumphs not over me.
12 But as for me, thou me uphold'st
in mine integrity;
And me before thy countenance
thou sett'st continually.

13 The Lord, the God of Israel, be bless'd for ever then,
From age to age eternally.
Amen, yea, and amen.

PSALM XLII.

1 LIKE as the hart for water-brooks
in thirst doth pant and bray;
So pants my longing soul, O God,
that come to thee I may.
2 My soul for God, the living God, doth thirst: when shall I near Unto thy countenance approach, and in God's sight appear?

3 My tears have unto me been meat,
both in the night and day,
While unto me continually,
Where is thy God? they say.
4 My soul is poured out in me,
when this I think upon;
Because that with the multitude
I heretofore had gone;

With them into God's house I went,
with voice of joy and praise;
Yea, with the multitude that kept the solemn holy days.
5 O why art thou cast down, my soul?
why in me so dismay'd?
Trust God, for I shall praise him yet,
his count'nance is mine aid.

6 My God, my soul's cast down in me;
thee therefore mind I will
From Jordan's land, the Hermonites, and ev'n from Mizar hill.
7 At the noise of thy water-spouts deep unto deep doth call;
Thy breaking waves pass over me,
yea, and thy billows all.

8 His loving-kindness yet the Lord command will in the day,
His song's with me by night; to God,
by whom I live, I'll pray:
9 And I will say to God my rock,
Why me forget'st thou so?
Why, for my foes' oppression,
thus mourning do I go?

10 'Tis as a sword within my bones,
when my foes me upbraid;
Ev'n when by them, Where is thy God?
'tis daily to me said.
11 O why art thou cast down, my soul?
why, thus with grief opprest,
Art thou disquieted in me?
in God still hope and rest:
For yet I know I shall him praise, who graciously to me
The health is of my countenance, yea, mine own God is he.

PSALM XLIII.

1 JUDGE me, O God, and plead my against th' ungodly nation; [cause
From the unjust and crafty man,
O be thou my salvation.
2 For thou the God art of my strength;
why thrusts thou me thee fro'?
For th' enemy's oppression
why do I mourning go?

3 O send thy light forth and thy truth;
let them be guides to me,
And bring me to thine holy hill,
ev'n where thy dwellings be.
4 Then will I to God's altar go to God my chiefest joy:
Yea, God, my God, thy name to praise
my harp I will employ.

5 Why art thou then cast down, my soul?
what should discourage thee?
And why with vexing thoughts art thou disquieted in me?
Still trust in God; for him to praise good cause I yet shall have:
He of my count'nance is the health,
my God that doth me save.

PSALM XLIV.

1 O GOD, we with our ears have heard,
our fathers have us told,
What works thou in their days hadst
ev'n in the days of old. [done, 2 Thy hand did drive the heathen out,
and plant them in their place;
Thou didst afflict the nations,
but them thou didst increase.

3 For neither got their sword the land, nor did their arm them save;
But thy right hand, arm, countenance;
for thou them favour gave.
4 Thou art my King: for Jacob, Lord, deliv'rances command.
5 Through thee we shall push down our that do against us stand: [foes,

We, through thy name, shall tread down that ris'n against us have. [those 6 For in my bow I shall not trust, nor shall my sword me save.
7 But from our foes thou hast us sav'd,
our haters put to shame.
8 In God we all the day do boast, and ever praise thy name.

9 But now we are cast off by thee,
and us thou putt'st to shame;
And when our armies do go forth,
thou go'st not with the same.
10 Thou mak'st us from the enemy,
faint-hearted, to turn back;
And they who hate us for themselves
our spoils away do take.

11 Like sheep for meat thou gavest us;
'mong heathen cast we be.
12 Thou didst for nought thy people sell;
their price enrich'd not thee.
13 Thou mak'st us a reproach to be unto our neighbours near;
Derision and a scorn to them that round about us are.

14 A by-word also thou dost us among the heathen make;
The people, in contempt and spite,
at us their heads do shake.
15 Before me my confusion continually abides;
And of my bashful countenance
the shame me ever hides:

16 For voice of him that doth reproach,
and speaketh blasphemy;
By reason of th' avenging foe,
and cruel enemy.
17 All this is come on us, yet we have not forgotten thee;
Nor falsely in thy covenant
behav'd ourselves have we.
18 Back from thy way our heart not turn'd;
our steps no straying made;
19 Though us thou brak'st in dragons' place,
and cover'dst with death's shade.
20 If we God's name forgot, or stretch'd to a strange god our hands, 21 Shall not God search this out? for he heart's secrets understands.

22 Yea, for thy sake we're kill'd all day, counted as slaughter-sheep.
23 Rise, Lord, cast us not ever off;
awake, why dost thou sleep?
24 O wherefore hidest thou thy face?
forgett'st our cause distress'd, 25 And our oppression? For our soul is to the dust down press'd:

Our belly also on the earth fast cleaving, hold doth take.
26 Rise for our help, and us redeem, ev'n for thy mercies' sake.

PSALM XLV.

1 MY heart brings forth a goodly thing;
my words that I indite Concern the King: my tongue's a pen of one that swift doth write.
2 Thou fairer art than sons of men:
into thy lips is store
Of grace infus'd; God therefore thee hath bless'd for evermore.

3 O thou that art the mighty One,
thy sword gird on thy thigh;
Ev'n with thy glory excellent,
and with thy majesty.
4 For meekness, truth, and righteousness,
in state ride prosp'rously;
And thy right hand shall thee instruct in things that fearful be.

5 Thine arrows sharply pierce the heart of th' en'mies of the King;
And under thy subjection
the people down do bring.
6 For ever and for ever is,
O God, thy throne of might;
The sceptre of thy kingdom is a sceptre that is right.

7 Thou lovest right, and hatest ill;
for God, thy God, most high,
Above thy fellows hath with th' oil
of joy anointed thee.
8 Of aloes, myrrh, and cassia,
a smell thy garments had,
Out of the iv'ry palaces,
whereby they made thee glad.

9 Among thy women honourable kings' daughters were at hand:
Upon thy right hand did the queen in gold of Ophir stand.
10 O daughter, hearken and regard,
and do thine ear incline;
Likewise forget thy father's house,
and people that are thine.

11 Then of the King desir'd shall be thy beauty veh'mently:
Because he is thy Lord, do thou him worship rev'rently.
12 The daughter there of Tyre shall be with gifts and off'rings great:
Those of the people that are rich thy favour shall entreat.

13 Behold, the daughter of the King
all glorious is within;
And with embroideries of gold
her garments wrought have been.
14 She shall be brought unto the King
in robes with needle wrought;
Her fellow-virgins following shall unto thee be brought.

15 They shall be brought with gladness and mirth on ev'ry side, [great,
Into the palace of the King,
and there they shall abide.
16 Instead of those thy fathers dear,
thy children thou may'st take,
And in all places of the earth
them noble princes make.

17 Thy name remember'd I will make through ages all to be:
The people therefore evermore shall praises give to thee.

ANOTHER OF THE SAME.

1 MY heart inditing is good matter in a song:
I speak the things that I have made,
which to the King belong:
My tongue shall be as quick,
his honour to indite,
As is the pen of any scribe that useth fast to write.

2 Thou'rt fairest of all men;
grace in thy lips doth flow:
And therefore blessings evermore on thee doth God bestow.
3 Thy sword gird on thy thigh,
thou that art most of might:
Appear in dreadful majesty,
and in thy glory bright.

4 For meekness, truth, and right, ride prosp'rously in state;
And thy right hand shall teach to thee things terrible and great.
5 Thy shafts shall pierce their hearts that foes are to the King; Whereby into subjection
the people thou shalt bring.

6 Thy royal seat, O Lord,
for ever shall remain:
The sceptre of thy kingdom doth all righteousness maintain.
7 Thou lov'st right, and hat'st ill;
for God, thy God, most high,
Above thy fellows hath with th' oil
of joy anointed thee.

8 Of myrrh and spices sweet
a smell thy garments had.
Out of the iv'ry palaces,
whereby they made thee glad.
9 And in thy glorious train king's daughters waiting stand;
And thy fair queen, in Ophir gold, doth stand at thy right hand.

10 O daughter, take good heed, incline, and give good ear;
Thou must forget thy kindred all,
and father's house most dear.
11 Thy beauty to the King shall then delightful be:
And do thou humbly worship him,
because thy Lord is he.

12 The daughter then of Tyre
there with a gift shall be,
And all the wealthy of the land shall make their suit to thee.
13 The daughter of the King
all glorious is within;
And with embroideries of gold
her garments wrought have been.

14 She cometh to the King
in robes with needle wrought;
The virgins that do follow her shall unto thee be brought.
15 They shall be brought with joy,
and mirth on ev'ry side,
Into the palace of the King,
and there they shall abide.

16 And in thy fathers' stead,
thy children thou may'st take,
And in all places of the earth
them noble princes make.
17 I will shew forth thy name
to generations all:
Therefore the people evermore to thee give praises shall.

PSALM XLVI.

1 GOD is our refuge and our strength,
in straits a present aid;
2 Therefore, although the earth remove,
we will not be afraid:
Though hills amidst the seas be cast;
3 Though waters roaring make,
And troubled be; yea, though the hills
by swelling seas do shake.

4 A river is, whose streams do glad
the city of our God;
The holy place, wherein the Lord
most high hath his abode.
5 God in the midst of her doth dwell;
nothing shall her remove:
The Lord to her an helper will,
and that right early, prove.

6 The heathen rag'd tumultuously, the kingdoms moved were:
The Lord God uttered his voice,
the earth did melt for fear.
7 The Lord of hosts upon our side
doth constantly remain:
The God of Jacob's our refuge, us safely to maintain.

8 Come, and behold what wondrous works have by the Lord been wrought; Come, see what desolations
he on the earth hath brought.
9 Unto the ends of all the earth
wars into peace he turns:
The bow he breaks, the spear he cuts,
in fire the chariot burns.

10 Be still, and know that I am God;
among the heathen I Will be exalted; I on earth will be exalted high.
11 Our God, who is the Lord of hosts,
is still upon our side;
The God of Jacob our refuge for ever will abide.

PSALM XLVII.

1 ALL people, clap your hands; to God
with voice of triumph shout:
2 For dreadful is the Lord most high, great King the earth throughout.
3 The heathen people under us
he surely shall subdue;
And he shall make the nations
under our feet to bow.

4 The lot of our inheritance
chuse out for us shall he,
Of Jacob, whom he loved well,
ev'n the excellency.
5 God is with shouts gone up, the Lord with trumpets sounding high.
6 Sing praise to God, sing praise, sing praise to our King sing ye. [praise,

7 For God is King of all the earth;
with knowledge praise express.
8 God rules the nations: God sits on his throne of holiness.
9 The princes of the people are assembled willingly; Ev'n of the God of Abraham
they who the people be.

For why? the shields that do defend the earth are only his:
They to the Lord belong; yea, he exalted greatly is.

PSALM XLVIII.

1 GREAT is the Lord, and greatly he is to be praised still,
Within the city of our God,
upon his holy hill.
2 Mount Sion stands most beautiful,
the joy of all the land;
The city of the mighty King on her north side doth stand.

3 The Lord within her palaces is for a refuge known.
4 For, lo, the kings that gather'd were together, by have gone.
5 But when they did behold the same,
they, wond'ring, would not stay;
But, being troubled at the sight,
they thence did haste away.

6 Great terror there took hold on them,
they were possess'd with fear;
Their grief came like a woman's pain,
when she a child doth bear.
7 Thou Tarshish ships with east wind
8 As we have heard it told, [break'st:
So, in the city of the Lord,
our eyes did it behold;
In our God's city, which his hand for ever stablish will.
9 We of thy loving-kindness thought,
Lord, in thy temple still.
10 O Lord, according to thy name, through all the earth's thy praise;
And thy right hand, O Lord, is full of righteousness always.

11 Because thy judgments are made known,
let Sion mount rejoice;
Of Judah let the daughters all send forth a cheerful voice.
12 Walk about Sion, and go round;
the high tow'rs thereof tell:
13 Consider ye her palaces, and mark her bulwarks well;

That ye may tell posterity.
14 For this God doth abide Our God for evermore; he will ev'n unto death us guide.

PSALM XLIX.

1 HEAR this, all people, and give ear,
all in the world that dwell;
2 Both low and high, both rich and poor.
3 My mouth shall wisdom tell:
My heart shall knowledge meditate.
4 I will incline mine ear
To parables, and on the harp my sayings dark declare.

5 Amidst those days that evil be,
why should I, fearing, doubt?
When of my heels th' iniquity shall compass me about.
6 Whoe'er they be that in their wealth their confidence do pitch,
And boast themselves, because they are become exceeding rich:

7 Yet none of these his brother can redeem by any way;
Nor can he unto God for him sufficient ransom pay, 8 (Their soul's redemption precious is,
and it can never be,) 9 That still he should for ever live, and not corruption see.

10 For why? he seeth that wise men die, and brutish fools also Do perish; and their wealth, when dead,
to others they let go.
11 Their inward thought is, that their house and dwelling-places shall Stand through all ages; they their lands by their own names do call.

12 But yet in honour shall not man abide continually;
But passing hence, may be compar'd unto the beasts that die.
13 Thus brutish folly plainly is their wisdom and their way;
Yet their posterity approve what they do fondly say.

14 Like sheep they in the grave are laid,
and death shall them devour;
And in the morning upright men shall over them have pow'r:
Their beauty from their dwelling shall consume within the grave.
15 But from hell's hand God will me free, for he shall me receive.

16 Be thou not then afraid when one enriched thou dost see,
Nor when the glory of his house advanced is on high:
17 For he shall carry nothing hence,
when death his days doth end;
Nor shall his glory after him into the grave descend.

18 Although he his own soul did bless whilst he on earth did live;
(And when thou to thyself dost well, men will thee praises give;) 19 He to his fathers' race shall go, they never shall see light.
20 Man honour'd wanting knowledge is like beasts that perish quite.

PSALM L.

1 THE mighty God, the Lord, hath spoken, and did call
The earth, from rising of the sun, to where he hath his fall.
2 From out of Sion hill, which of excellency
And beauty the perfection is,
God shined gloriously.

3 Our God shall surely come,
keep silence shall not he:
Before him fire shall waste, great storms shall round about him be.
4 Unto the heavens clear
he from above shall call,
And to the earth likewise, that he may judge his people all.

5 Together let my saints unto me gather'd be,
Those that by sacrifice have made a covenant with me.
6 And then the heavens shall his righteousness declare:
Because the Lord himself is he by whom men judged are.

7 My people Isr'el hear, speak will I from on high,
Against thee I will testify;
God, ev'n thy God, am I.
8 I for thy sacrifice
no blame will on thee lay,
Nor for burnt-off'rings, which to me thou offer'dst ev'ry day.

9 I'll take no calf nor goats from house or fold of thine:
10 For beasts of forests, cattle all
on thousand hills, are mine.
11 The fowls on mountains high are all to me well known;
Wild beasts which in the fields do lie,
ev'n they are all mine own.

12 Then, if I hungry were,
I would not tell it thee;
Because the world, and fulness all thereof, belongs to me.
13 Will I eat flesh of bulls?
or goats' blood drink will I?
14 Thanks offer thou to God, and pay thy vows to the most High.

15 And call upon me when in trouble thou shalt be;
I will deliver thee, and thou
my name shalt glorify.
16 But to the wicked man
God saith, My laws and truth
Should'st thou declare? how dar'st thou my cov'nant in thy mouth? [take 17 Sith thou instruction hat'st, which should thy ways direct;

And sith my words behind thy back thou cast'st, and dost reject.
18 When thou a thief didst see,
with him thou didst consent;
And with the vile adulterers partaker on thou went.

19 Thou giv'st thy mouth to ill,
thy tongue deceit doth frame;
20 Thou sitt'st, and 'gainst thy brother
thy mother's son dost shame. [speak'st, 21 Because I silence kept,
while thou these things hast wrought,
That I was altogether like thyself, hath been thy thought:

Yet I will thee reprove,
and set before thine eyes,
In order ranked, thy misdeeds, and thine iniquities.
22 Now, ye that God forget,
this carefully consider;
Lest I in pieces tear you all,
and none can you deliver.

23 Whoso doth offer praise me glorifies; and I Will shew him God's salvation, that orders right his way.

ANOTHER OF THE SAME.

1 THE mighty God, the Lord, hath spoke,
and call'd the earth upon,
Ev'n from the rising of the sun unto his going down.
2 From out of Sion, his own hill, where the perfection high Of beauty is, from thence the Lord hath shined gloriously.

3 Our God shall come, and shall no more be silent, but speak out:
Before him fire shall waste, great storms
shall compass him about.
4 He to the heavens from above,
and to the earth below, Shall call, that he his judgments may before his people shew.

5 Let all my saints together be unto me gathered;
Those that by sacrifice with me
a covenant have made.
6 And then the heavens shall declare his righteousness abroad:
Because the Lord himself doth come;
none else is judge but God.

7 Hear, O my people, and I'll speak;
O Israel by name,
Against thee I will testify;
God, ev'n thy God, I am.
8 I for thy sacrifices few reprove thee never will,
Nor for burnt-off'rings to have been before me offer'd still.

9 I'll take no bullock nor he-goats from house nor folds of thine:
10 For beasts of forests, cattle all
on thousand hills, are mine.
11 The fowls are all to me well known that mountains high do yield;
And I do challenge as mine own
the wild beasts of the field.

12 If I were hungry, I would not to thee for need complain;
For earth, and all its fulness, doth to me of right pertain.
13 That I to eat the flesh of bulls take pleasure dost thou think?
Or that I need, to quench my thirst,
the blood of goats to drink?

14 Nay, rather unto me, thy God,
thanksgiving offer thou:
To the most High perform thy word,
and fully pay thy vow:
15 And in the day of trouble great
see that thou call on me;
I will deliver thee, and thou
my name shalt glorify.

16 But God unto the wicked saith,
Why should'st thou mention make
Of my commands? how dar'st thou in thy mouth my cov'nant take?
17 Sith it is so that thou dost hate
all good instruction;
And sith thou cast'st behind thy back,
and slight'st my words each one.

18 When thou a thief didst see, then straight thou join'st with him in sin,
And with the vile adulterers
thou hast partaker been.
19 Thy mouth to evil thou dost give,
thy tongue deceit doth frame.
20 Thou sitt'st, and 'gainst thy brother
thy mother's son to shame. [speak'st,

21 These things thou wickedly hast done,
and I have silent been:
Thou thought'st that I was like thyself,
and did approve thy sin:
But I will sharply thee reprove, and I will order right Thy sins and thy transgressions in presence of thy sight.

22 Consider this, and be afraid,
ye that forget the Lord,
Lest I in pieces tear you all,
when none can help afford.
23 Who off'reth praise me glorifies:
I will shew God's salvation
To him that ordereth aright his life and conversation.

PSALM LI.

1 AFTER thy loving-kindness, Lord,
have mercy upon me:
For thy compassions great, blot out all mine iniquity.
2 Me cleanse from sin, and throughly wash
from mine iniquity:
3 For my transgressions I confess;
my sin I ever see.

4 'Gainst thee, thee only, have I sinn'd,
in thy sight done this ill;
That when thou speak'st thou may'st be and clear in judging still. [just, 5 Behold, I in iniquity was form'd the womb within;
My mother also me conceiv'd in guiltiness and sin.

6 Behold, thou in the inward parts with truth delighted art;
And wisdom thou shalt make me know within the hidden part.
7 Do thou with hyssop sprinkle me,
I shall be cleansed so;
Yea, wash thou me, and then I shall be whiter than the snow.

8 Of gladness and of joyfulness make me to hear the voice;
That so these very bones which thou hast broken may rejoice.
9 All mine iniquities blot out,
thy face hide from my sin.
10 Create a clean heart, Lord, renew a right sp'rit me within.

11 Cast me not from thy sight, nor take thy Holy Sp'rit away.
12 Restore me thy salvation's joy;
with thy free Sp'rit me stay.
13 Then will I teach thy ways unto those that transgressors be;
And those that sinners are shall then be turned unto thee.

14 O God, of my salvation God, me from blood-guiltiness Set free; then shall my tongue aloud sing of thy righteousness.
15 My closed lips, O Lord, by thee let them be opened;
Then shall thy praises by my mouth abroad be published.

16 For thou desir'st not sacrifice,
else would I give it thee;
Nor wilt thou with burnt-offering at all delighted be.
17 A broken spirit is to God
a pleasing sacrifice:
A broken and a contrite heart,
Lord, thou wilt not despise.

18 Shew kindness, and do good, O Lord,
to Sion, thine own hill:
The walls of thy Jerusalem build up of thy good will.
19 Then righteous off'rings shall thee please, and off'rings burnt, which they With whole burnt-off'rings, and with shall on thine altar lay. [calves,

PSALM LII.

1 WHY dost thou boast, O mighty of mischief and of ill? [man,
The goodness of Almighty God
endureth ever still.
2 Thy tongue mischievous calumnies
deviseth subtilely,
Like to a razor sharp to cut,
working deceitfully.

3 Ill more than good, and more than truth
thou lovest to speak wrong:
4 Thou lovest all-devouring words.
O thou deceitful tongue.
5 So God shall thee destroy for aye, remove thee, pluck thee out Quite from thy house, out of the land of life he shall thee root.

6 The righteous shall it see, and fear, and laugh at him they shall:
7 Lo, this the man is that did not make God his strength at all;

Digitized by Google

But he in his abundant wealth
his confidence did place;
And he took strength unto himself from his own wickedness.

8 But I am in the house of God
like to an olive green:
My confidence for ever hath upon God's mercy been.
9 And I for ever will thee praise, because thou hast done this:
I on thy name will wait; for good before thy saints it is.

PSALM LIII.

1 THAT there is not a God, the fool
doth in his heart conclude:
They are corrupt, their works are vile,
not one of them doth good.
2 The Lord upon the sons of men from heav'n did cast his eyes,
To see if any one there was that sought God, and was wise.

3 They altogether filthy are,
they all are backward gone;
And there is none that doeth good,
no, not so much as one.
4 These workers of iniquity,
do they not know at all,
That they my people eat as bread,
and on God do not call?

5 Ev'n there they were afraid, and stood with trembling, all dismay'd, Whereas there was no cause at all
why they should be afraid:
For God his bones that thee besieg'd hath scatter'd all abroad;
Thou hast confounded them, for they despised are of God.

6 Let Isr'el's help from Sion come:
when back the Lord shall bring
His captives, Jacob shall rejoice,
and Israel shall sing.

PSALM LIV.

1 SAVE me, O God, by thy great name,
and judge me by thy strength:
2 My prayer hear, O God; give ear unto my words at length.
3 For they that strangers are to me
do up against me rise; Oppressors seek my soul, and God set not before their eyes.

4 The Lord my God my helper is,
lo, therefore I am bold:
He taketh part with ev'ry one that doth my soul uphold.
5 Unto mine enemies he shall mischief and ill repay:
O for thy truth's sake cut them off,
and sweep them clean away.

6 I will a sacrifice to thee give with free willingness;
Thy name, O Lord, because 'tis good,
with praise I will confess.
7 For he hath me delivered from all adversities;
And his desire mine eye hath seen upon mine enemies.

PSALM LV.

1 LORD, hear my pray'r, hide not from my entreating voice: [thyself
2 Attend and hear me; in my plaint
I mourn and make a noise.
3 Because of th' en'my's voice, and for lewd men's oppression great,
On me they cast iniquity,
and they in wrath me hate.

4 Sore pain'd within me is my heart:
death's terrors on me fall.
5 On me comes trembling, fear and dread o'erwhelmed me withal.
6 O that I, like a dove, had wings, said I, then would I flee Far hence, that I might find a place where I in rest might be.

7 Lo, then far off I wander would,
and in the desert stay;
8 From windy storm and tempest I would haste to 'scape away.
9 O Lord, on them destruction bring,
and do their tongues divide;
For in the city violence and strife I have espy'd.

10 They day and night upon the walls
do go about it round:
There mischief is, and sorrow there in midst of it is found.
11 Abundant wickedness there is within her inward part;
And from her streets deceitfulness and guile do not depart.

12 He was no foe that me reproach'd, then that endure I could;
Nor hater that did 'gainst me boast,
from him me hide I would.
13 But thou, man, who mine equal, guide,
and mine acquaintance wast:
14 We join'd sweet counsels, to God's house in company we past.

15 Let death upon them seize, and down
let them go quick to hell;
For wickedness doth much abound
among them where they dwell.
16 I'll call on God: God will me save.
17 I'll pray, and make a noise
At ev'ning, morning, and at noon;
and he shall hear my voice.

18 He hath my soul delivered, that it in peace might be From battle that against me was;
for many were with me.
19 The Lord shall hear, and them afflict, of old who hath abode:
Because they never changes have,
therefore they fear not God.

20 'Gainst those that were at peace with he hath put forth his hand: [him
The covenant that he had made,
by breaking he profan'd.
21 More smooth than butter were his words,
while in his heart was war:
His speeches were more soft than oil, and yet drawn swords they are.

22 Cast thou thy burden on the Lord, and he shall thee sustain;
Yea, he shall cause the righteous man,
unmoved to remain.
23 But thou, O Lord my God, those men
in justice shalt o'erthrow,
And in destruction's dungeon dark at last shalt lay them low:

24 The bloody and deceitful men shall not live half their days:
But upon thee with confidence
I will depend always.

PSALM LVI.

1 SHEW mercy, Lord, to me, for man would swallow me outright;
He me oppresseth, while he doth against me daily fight.
2 They daily would me swallow up that hate me spitefully;
For they be many that do fight against me, O most High.

3 When I'm afraid I'll trust in thee:
4 In God I'll praise his word;
I will not fear what flesh can do,
my trust is in the Lord.
5 Each day they wrest my words; their 'gainst me are all for ill. [thoughts 6 They meet, they lurk, they mark my waiting my soul to kill. [steps,

7 But shall they by iniquity escape thy judgment so?
O God, with indignation down
do thou the people throw.
8 My wand'rings all what they have been thou know'st, their number took;
Into thy bottle put my tears:
are they not in thy book?

9 My foes shall, when I cry, turn back;
I know't, God is for me.
10 In God his word I'll praise; his word in God shall praised be.
11 In God I trust; I will not fear
what man can do to me.
12 Thy vows upon me are, O God:
I'll render praise to thee.

13 Wilt thou not, who from death me sav'd,
my feet from falls keep free,
To walk before God in the light of those that living be?

PSALM LVII.

1 BE merciful to me, O God;
thy mercy unto me
Do thou extend; because my soul
doth put her trust in thee:
Yea, in the shadow of thy wings
my refuge I will place, Until these sad calamities do wholly overpass.

2 My cry I will cause to ascend unto the Lord most high;
To God, who doth all things for me perform most perfectly.
3 From heav'n he shall send down, and me from his reproach defend That would devour me: God his truth and mercy forth shall send.

4 My soul among fierce lions is,
I firebrands live among,
Men's sons, whose teeth are spears and a sharp sword is their tongue. [darts, 5 Be thou exalted very high above the heav'ns, O God; Let thou thy glory be advanc'd o'er all the earth abroad.

6 My soul's bow'd down; for they a net have laid, my steps to snare:
Into the pit which they have digg'd for me, they fallen are.
7 My heart is fix'd, my heart is fix'd,
O God; I'll sing and praise.
8 My glory wake; wake psalt'ry, harp;
myself I'll early raise.

9 I'll praise thee 'mong the people, Lord;
'mong nations sing will I:
10 For great to heav'n thy mercy is,
thy truth is to the sky.
11 O Lord, exalted be thy name above the heav'ns to stand:
Do thou thy glory far advance above both sea and land.

PSALM LVIII.

1 DO ye, O congregation,
indeed speak righteousness?
O ye that are the sons of men,
judge ye with uprightness?
2 Yea, ev'n with your very hearts
ye wickedness have done;
And ye the vi'lence of your hands
do weigh the earth upon.

3 The wicked men estranged are,
ev'n from the very womb;
They, speaking lies, do stray as soon
as to the world they come.
4 Unto a serpent's poison like their poison doth appear;
Yea, they are like the adder deaf,
that closely stops her ear;

5 That so she may not hear the voice of one that charm her would,
No, not though he most cunning were,
and charm most wisely could.
6 Their teeth, O God, within their mouth break thou in pieces small;
The great teeth break thou out, O Lord,
of these young lions all.

7 Let them like waters melt away, which downward still do flow:
In pieces cut his arrows all,
when he shall bend his bow.
8 Like to a snail that melts away,
let each of them be gone;
Like woman's birth untimely, that they never see the sun.

9 He shall them take away before your pots the thorns can find,

Both living, and in fury great,
as with a stormy wind.
10 The righteous, when he vengeance sees,
he shall be joyful then;
The righteous one shall wash his feet
in blood of wicked men.

11 So men shall say, The righteous man reward shall never miss:
And verily upon the earth
a God to judge there is.

PSALM LIX.

1 MY God, deliver me from those that are mine enemies;
And do thou me defend from those that up against me rise.
2 Do thou deliver me from them
that work iniquity;
And give me safety from the men of bloody cruelty.

3 For, lo, they for my soul lay wait:
the mighty do combine Against me, Lord; not for my fault, nor any sin of mine.
4 They run, and, without fault in me, themselves do ready make:
Awake to meet me with thy help;
and do thou notice take.

5 Awake therefore, Lord God of hosts, thou God of Israel,
To visit heathen all: spare none that wickedly rebel.
6 At ev'ning they go to and fro;
they make great noise and sound,
Like to a dog, and often walk
about the city round.

7 Behold, they belch out with their mouth,
and in their lips are swords:
For they do say thus, Who is he that now doth hear our words?
8 But thou, O Lord, shalt laugh at them,
and all the heathen mock.
9 While he's in power I'll wait on thee;
for God is my high rock.

10 He of my mercy that is God betimes shall me prevent;
Upon mine en'mies God shall let me see mine heart's content.
11 Them slay not, lest my folk forget;
but scatter them abroad
By thy strong pow'r; and bring them
O thou our shield and God. [down,

12 For their mouth's sin, and for the words that from their lips do fly, Let them be taken in their pride;
because they curse and lie.
13 In wrath consume them, them consume, that so they may not be:
And that in Jacob God doth rule to th' earth's ends let them see.

14 At ev'ning let thou them return, making great noise and sound,
Like to a dog, and often walk
about the city round.
15 And let them wander up and down,
in seeking food to eat;
And let them grudge when they shall not be satisfy'd with meat.

16 But of thy pow'r, I'll sing aloud;
at morn thy mercy praise:
For thou to me my refuge wast,
and tow'r, in troublous days.
17 O God, thou art my strength, I will sing praises unto thee;
For God is my defence, a God of mercy unto me.

PSALM LX.

1 O LORD, thou hast rejected us,
and scatter'd us abroad;
Thou justly hast displeased been;
return to us, O God.
2 The earth to tremble thou hast made;
therein didst breaches make:
Do thou thereof the breaches heal,
because the land doth shake.

3 Unto thy people thou hard things hast shew'd, and on them sent;
And thou hast caused us to drink wine of astonishment.
4 And yet a banner thou hast giv'n to them who thee do fear;
That it by them, because of truth, displayed may appear.

5 That thy beloved people may deliver'd be from thrall, Save with the pow'r of thy right hand,
and hear me when I call.
6 God in his holiness hath spoke;
herein I will take pleasure:
Shechem I will divide, and forth
will Succoth's valley measure.

7 Gilead I claim as mine by right;
Manasseh mine shall be;
Ephraim is of mine head the strength;
Judah gives laws for me;
8 Moab's my washing-pot; my shoe
I'll over Edom throw;
And over Palestina's land
I will in triumph go.

9 O who is he will bring me to the city fortify'd?
O who is he that to the land
of Edom will me guide?
10 O God, which hadest us cast off,
this thing wilt thou not do?
Ev'n thou, O God, which didest not forth with our armies go?

11 Help us from trouble; for the help is vain which man supplies.
12 Through God we'll do great acts; he tread down our enemies. [shall

PSALM LXI.

1 O GOD, give ear unto my cry;
unto my pray'r attend.
2 From th' utmost corner of the land
my cry to thee I'll send.
What time my heart is overwhelm'd,
and in perplexity,
Do thou me lead unto the Rock
that higher is than I.

3 For thou hast for my refuge been a shelter by thy pow'r;
And for defence against my foes
thou hast been a strong tow'r.
4 Within thy tabernacle I
for ever will abide;
And under covert of thy wings
with confidence me hide.

5 For thou the vows that I did make,
O Lord my God, didst hear:
Thou hast giv'n me the heritage of those thy name that fear.
6 A life prolong'd for many days thou to the king shalt give;
Like many generations be the years which he shall live.

7 He in God's presence his abode for evermore shall have:
O do thou truth and mercy both prepare, that may him save.
8 And so will I perpetually sing praise unto thy name;
That having made my vows, I may each day perform the same.

PSALM LXII.

1 MY soul with expectation
depends on God indeed:
My strength and my salvation doth from him alone proceed.
2 He only my salvation is,
and my strong rock is he:
He only is my sure defence;
much mov'd I shall not be.

3 How long will ye against a man plot mischief? ye shall all Be slain; ye as a tott'ring fence shall be, and bowing wall.
4 They only plot to cast him down from his excellency:
They joy in lies; with mouth they bless,
but they curse inwardly.

5 My soul, wait thou with patience upon thy God alone;
On him dependeth all my hope and expectation.
6 He only my salvation is,
and my strong rock is he;
He only is my sure defence:
I shall not moved be.

7 In God my glory placed is,
and my salvation sure;
In God the rock is of my strength,
my refuge most secure.
8 Ye people, place your confidence in him continually;
Before him pour ye out your heart;
God is our refuge high.

9 Surely mean men are vanity,
and great men are a lie;
In balance laid, they wholly are more light than vanity.
10 Trust ye not in oppression,
in robb'ry be not vain;
On wealth set not your hearts, when as increased is your gain.

11 God hath it spoken once to me,
yea, this I heard again,
That power to Almighty God alone doth appertain.
12 Yea, mercy also unto thee belongs, O Lord, alone:
For thou according to his work rewardest ev'ry one.

PSALM LXIII.

1 LORD, thee my God, I'll early seek:
my soul doth thirst for thee;
My flesh longs in a dry parch'd land, wherein no waters be:
2 That I thy power may behold,
and brightness of thy face,
As I have seen thee heretofore within thy holy place.

3 Since better is thy love than life, my lips thee praise shall give.
4 I in thy name will lift my hands,
and bless thee while I live.
5 Ev'n as with marrow and with fat
my soul shall filled be;
Then shall my mouth with joyful lips
sing praises unto thee:

6 When I do thee upon my bed
remember with delight,
And when on thee I meditate in watches of the night.
7 In shadow of thy wings I'll joy;
for thou mine help hast been.
8 My soul thee follows hard; and me thy right hand doth sustain.

9 Who seek my soul to spill shall sink down to earth's lowest room.
10 They by the sword shall be cut off, and foxes' prey become.
11 Yet shall the king in God rejoice, and each one glory shall That swear by him: but stopp'd shall be the mouth of liars all.

PSALM LXIV.

1 WHEN I to thee my prayer make,
Lord, to my voice give ear;
My life save from the enemy,
of whom I stand in fear.
2 Me from their secret counsel hide who do live wickedly;
From insurrection of those men
that work iniquity.

3 Who do their tongues with malice whet,
and make them cut like swords;
In whose bent bows are arrows set,
ev'n sharp and bitter words:
4 That they may at the perfect man
in secret aim their shot; Yea, suddenly they dare at him to shoot, and fear it not.

5 In ill encourage they themselves, and their snares close do lay:
Together conference they have;
Who shall them see? they say.
6 They have search'd out iniquities, a perfect search they keep:

Of each of them the inward thought,
and very heart, is deep.

7 God shall an arrow shoot at them,
and wound them suddenly:
8 So their own tongue shall them con-all who them see shall fly. [found;
9 And on all men a fear shall fall,
God's works they shall declare;
For they shall wisely notice take what these his doings are.

10 In God the righteous shall rejoice, and trust upon his might;
Yea, they shall greatly glory all in heart that are upright.

PSALM LXV.

1 PRAISE waits for thee in Sion, Lord:
to thee vows paid shall be.
2 O thou that hearer art of pray'r,
all flesh shall come to thee.
3 Iniquities, I must confess, prevail against me do:
But as for our transgressions,
them purge away shalt thou.

4 Bless'd is the man whom thou dost chuse,
and mak'st approach to thee,
That he within thy courts, O Lord,
may still a dweller be:
We surely shall be satisfy'd with thy abundant grace,
And with the goodness of thy house,
ev'n of thy holy place.

5 O God of our salvation,
thou, in thy righteousness,
By fearful works unto our pray'rs thine answer dost express:
Therefore the ends of all the earth, and those afar that be Upon the sea, their confidence,
O Lord, will place in thee.

6 Who, being girt with pow'r, sets fast
by his great strength the hills.
7 Who noise of seas, noise of their waves,
and people's tumult, stills.
8 Those in the utmost parts that dwell are at thy signs afraid:
Th' outgoings of the morn and ev'n
by thee are joyful made.

9 The earth thou visit'st, wat'ring it;
thou mak'st it rich to grow
With God's full flood; thou corn pre-when thou provid'st it so. [par'st, 10 Her rigs thou wat'rest plenteously,
her furrows settelest:
With show'rs thou dost her mollify,
her spring by thee is blest.

11 So thou the year most lib'rally
dost with thy goodness crown;
And all thy paths abundantly on us drop fatness down.
12 They drop upon the pastures wide,
that do in deserts lie;
The little hills on ev'ry side rejoice right pleasantly.

13 With flocks the pastures clothed be,
the vales with corn are clad;
And now they shout and sing to thee,
for thou hast made them glad.

PSALM LXVI.

1 ALL lands to God, in joyful sounds,
aloft your voices raise.
2 Sing forth the honour of his name,
and glorious make his praise.
3 Say unto God, How terrible in all thy works art thou!
Through thy great pow'r thy foes to thee shall be constrain'd to bow.

4 All on the earth shall worship thee, they shall thy praise proclaim In songs: they shall sing cheerfully unto thy holy name.
5 Come, and the works that God hath with admiration see: [wrought In's working to the sons of men most terrible is he.

6 Into dry land the sea he turn'd, and they a passage had;
Ev'n marching through the flood on foot,
there we in him were glad.
7 He ruleth ever by his pow'r;
his eyes the nations see:
O let not the rebellious ones lift up themselves on high.

8 Ye people, bless our God; aloud
the voice speak of his praise:
9 Our soul in life who safe preserves,
our foot from sliding stays.
10 For thou didst prove and try us, Lord,
as men do silver try;
11 Brought'st us into the net, and mad'st bands on our loins to lie.

12 Thou hast caus'd men ride o'er our and though that we did pass [heads; Through fire and water, yet thou us to a wealthy place. [brought'st 13 I'll bring burnt-off'rings to thy house;
to thee my vows I'll pay, 14 Which my lips utter'd, my mouth spake,
when trouble on me lay.

15 Burnt-sacrifices of fat rams with incense I will bring;
Of bullocks and of goats I will present an offering.
16 All that fear God, come, hear, I'll tell what he did for my soul.
17 I with my mouth unto him cry'd,
my tongue did him extol.

18 If in my heart I sin regard,
the Lord me will not hear:
19 But surely God me heard, and to my prayer's voice gave ear.
20 O let the Lord, our gracious God, for ever blessed be,
Who turned not my pray'r from him,
nor yet his grace from me.

PSALM LXVII.

1 LORD, bless and pity us,
shine on us with thy face:
2 That th' earth thy way, and nations all may know thy saving grace.
3 Let people praise thee, Lord;
let people all thee praise.
4 O let the nations be glad,
in songs their voices raise:

Thou'lt justly people judge,
on earth rule nations all.
5 Let people praise thee, Lord; let them praise thee, both great and small.
6 The earth her fruit shall yield, our God shall blessing send.
7 God shall us bless; men shall him fear unto earth's utmost end.

ANOTHER OF THE SAME.

1 LORD, unto us be merciful,
do thou us also bless;
And graciously cause shine on us
the brightness of thy face:
2 That so thy way upon the earth to all men may be known;
Also among the nations all thy saving health be shewn.

3 O let the people praise thee, Lord;
let people all thee praise.
4 O let the nations be glad,
and sing for joy always:
For rightly thou shalt people judge,
and nations rule on earth.
5 Let people praise thee, Lord; let all the folk praise thee with mirth.

6 Then shall the earth yield her increase;
God, our God, bless us shall.
7 God shall us bless; and of the earth the ends shall fear him all.

PSALM LXVIII.

1 LET God arise, and scattered
let all his en'mies be;
And let all those that do him hate before his presence flee.
2 As smoke is driv'n, so drive thou them;
as fire melts wax away,
Before God's face let wicked men
so perish and decay.

3 But let the righteous be glad:
let them before God's sight
Be very joyful; yea, let them rejoice with all their might.
4 To God sing, to his name sing praise:
extol him with your voice,
That rides on heav'n, by his name JAH, before his face rejoice.

5 Because the Lord a father is unto the fatherless;
God is the widow's judge, within his place of holiness.
6 God doth the solitary set in fam'lies: and from bands
The chain'd doth free; but rebels do inhabit parched lands.

7 O God, what time thou didst go forth before thy people's face;
And when through the great wilderness thy glorious marching was;
8 Then at God's presence shook the earth,
then drops from heaven fell;
This Sinai shook before the Lord,
the God of Israel.

9 O God, thou to thine heritage
didst send a plenteous rain, Whereby thou, when it weary was,
didst it refresh again.
10 Thy congregation then did make their habitation there:
Of thine own goodness for the poor,
O God, thou didst prepare.

11 The Lord himself did give the word,
the word abroad did spread;
Great was the company of them
the same who published.
12 Kings of great armies foiled were,
and forc'd to flee away;
And women, who remain'd at home,
did distribute the prey.

13 Though ye have lien among the pots, like doves ye shall appear,
Whose wings with silver, and with gold whose feathers cover'd are.
14 When there th' Almighty scatter'd like Salmon's snow 'twas white. [kings, 15 God's hill is like to Bashan hill, like Bashan hill for height.

16 Why do ye leap, ye mountains high?
this is the hill where God Desires to dwell; yea, God in it for aye will make abode.
17 God's chariots twenty thousand are,
thousands of angels strong;
In's holy place God is, as in mount Sinai, them among.

18 Thou hast, O Lord, most glorious, ascended up on high;
And in triumph victorious led captive captivity:
Thou hast received gifts for men,
for such as did rebel;
Yea, ev'n for them, that God the Lord in midst of them might dwell.

19 Bless'd be the Lord, who is to us of our salvation God;
Who daily with his benefits us plenteously doth load.
20 He of salvation is the God, who is our God most strong;
And unto God the Lord from death
the issues do belong.

21 But surely God shall wound the head of those that are his foes;
The hairy scalp of him that still on in his trespass goes.
22 God said, My people I will bring again from Bashan hill;
Yea, from the sea's devouring depths them bring again I will;

23 That in the blood of enemies thy foot imbru'd may be,
And of thy dogs dipp'd in the same the tongues thou mayest see.

24 Thy goings they have seen, O God;
the steps of majesty
Of my God, and my mighty King, within the sanctuary.

25 Before went singers, players next on instruments took way;
And them among the damsels were that did on timbrels play.
26 Within the congregations
bless God with one accord:
From Isr'el's fountain do ye bless and praise the mighty Lord.

27 With their prince, little Benjamin, princes and council there Of Judah were, there Zabulon's and Napht'li's princes were.
28 Thy God commands thy strength; make strong
what thou wrought'st for us, Lord.
29 For thy house at Jerusalem kings shall thee gifts afford.

30 The spearmen's host, the multitude of bulls, which fiercely look,
Those calves which people have forth
O Lord our God, rebuke, [sent,
Till ev'ry one submit himself,
and silver pieces bring:
The people that delight in war disperse, O God and King.

31 Those that be princes great shall then come out of Egypt lands;
And Ethiopia to God
shall soon stretch out her hands.
32 O all ye kingdoms of the earth,
sing praises to this King;
For he is Lord that ruleth all,
unto him praises sing.

33 To him that rides on heav'ns of heav'ns, which he of old did found;
Lo, he sends out his voice, a voice in might that doth abound.
34 Strength unto God do ye ascribe;
for his excellency
Is over Israel, his strength is in the clouds most high.

35 Thou'rt from thy temple dreadful, Lord;
Isr'el's own God is he,
Who gives his people strength and pow'r:
O let God blessed be.

PSALM LXIX.

1 SAVE me, O God, because the floods
do so environ me,
That ev'n unto my very soul
come in the waters be.
2 I downward in deep mire do sink,
where standing there is none:
I am into deep waters come,
where floods have o'er me gone.

3 I weary with my crying am,
my throat is also dry'd;
Mine eyes do fail, while for my God
I waiting do abide:
4 Those men that do without a cause bear hatred unto me,
Than are the hairs upon my head
in number more they be:

They that would me destroy, and are mine en'mies wrongfully,
Are mighty: so what I took not,
to render forc'd was I.
5 Lord, thou my folly know'st, my sins not cover'd are from thee.
6 Let none that wait on thee be sham'd,
Lord God of hosts, for me.

O Lord, the God of Israel, let none, who search do make,
And seek thee, be at any time confounded for my sake.
7 For I have borne reproach for thee,
my face is hid with shame.
8 To brethren strange, to mother's sons, an alien I became.

9 Because the zeal did eat me up,
which to thine house I bear;
And the reproaches cast at thee upon me fallen are.
10 My tears and fasts, t' afflict my soul,
were turned to my shame.
11 When sackcloth I did wear, to them a proverb I became.

12 The men that in the gate do sit against me evil spake;
They also that vile drunkards were,
of me their song did make.
13 But, in an acceptable time,
my pray'r, Lord, is to thee:
In truth of thy salvation, Lord,
and mercy great, hear me.

14 Deliver me out of the mire, from sinking do me keep;
Free me from those that do me hate,
and from the waters deep.
15 Let not the flood on me prevail,
whose water overflows;
Nor deep me swallow, nor the pit
her mouth upon me close.

16 Hear me, O Lord, because thy love and kindness is most good; Turn unto me, according to thy mercies' multitude.
17 Nor from thy servant hide thy face:
I'm troubled, soon attend.
18 Draw near my soul, and it redeem;
me from my foes defend.

19 To thee is my reproach well known,
my shame, and my disgrace:
Those that mine adversaries be are all before thy face.
20 Reproach hath broke my heart; I'm full of grief: I look'd for one To pity me, but none I found;
comforters found I none.

21 They also bitter gall did give unto me for my meat:
They gave me vinegar to drink,
when as my thirst was great.
22 Before them let their table prove a snare; and do thou make Their welfare and prosperity a trap themselves to take.

23 Let thou their eyes so darken'd be,
that sight may them forsake;
And let their loins be made by thee continually to shake.
24 Thy fury pour thou out on them,
and indignation;
And let thy wrathful anger, Lord,
fast hold take them upon.

25 All waste and desolate let be their habitation;
And in their tabernacles all inhabitants be none.
26 Because him they do persecute, whom thou didst smite before;
They talk unto the grief of those whom thou hast wounded sore.

27 Add thou iniquity unto their former wickedness;
And do not let them come at all into thy righteousness.
28 Out of the book of life let them be raz'd and blotted quite;
Among the just and righteous
let not their names be writ.

29 But now become exceeding poor and sorrowful am I:
By thy salvation, O my God,
let me be set on high.
30 The name of God I with a song
most cheerfully will praise;
And I, in giving thanks to him,
his name shall highly raise.

31 This to the Lord a sacrifice more gracious shall prove Than bullock, ox, or any beast that hath both horn and hoof.
32 When this the humble men shall see,
it joy to them shall give:
O all ye that do seek the Lord,
your hearts shall ever live.

33 For God the poor hears, and will not his prisoners contemn.
34 Let heav'n, and earth, and seas, him
and all that move in them. [praise, For God will Judah's cities build,
and he will Sion save,
That they may dwell therein, and it
in sure possession have.

35 And they that are his servants' seed inherit shall the same;
So shall they have their dwelling there that love his blessed name.

PSALM LXX.

1 LORD, haste me to deliver;
with speed, Lord, succour me.
2 Let them that for my soul do seek
sham'd and confounded be:
Turn'd back be they, and sham'd,
that in my hurt delight.
3 Turn'd back be they, Ha, ha! that say,
their shaming to requite.

4 In thee let all be glad,
and joy that seek for thee:
Let them who thy salvation love
say still, God praised be.
5 I poor and needy am;
come, Lord, and make no stay:
My help thou and deliv'rer art;
O Lord, make no delay.

ANOTHER OF THE SAME.

1 MAKE haste, O God, me to preserve;
with speed, Lord, succour me.
2 Let them that for my soul do seek Sham'd and confounded be:
Let them be turned back, and sham'd,
that in my hurt delight.
3 Turn'd back be they, Ha, ha! that say,
their shaming to requite.

4 O Lord, in thee let all be glad,
and joy that seek for thee:
Let them who thy salvation love
say still, God praised be.
5 But I both poor and needy am;
come, Lord, and make no stay:
My help thou and deliv'rer art;
O Lord, make no delay.

PSALM LXXI.

1 O LORD, my hope and confidence is plac'd in thee alone;
Then let thy servant never be put to confusion.
2 And let me, in thy righteousness, from thee deliv'rance have:
Cause me escape, incline thine ear unto me, and me save.

3 Be thou my dwelling-rock, to which I ever may resort:
Thou gav'st commandment me to save,
for thou'rt my rock and fort.
4 Free me, my God, from wicked hands,
hands cruel and unjust:
5 For thou, O Lord God, art my hope,
and from my youth my trust.

6 Thou from the womb didst hold me up;
thou art the same that me
Out of my mother's bowels took;
I ever will praise thee.
7 To many I a wonder am;
but thou'rt my refuge strong.
8 Fill'd let my mouth be with thy praise and honour all day long.

9 O do not cast me off, when as old age doth overtake me;
And when my strength decayed is,
then do not thou forsake me.
10 For those that are mine enemies against me speak with hate;
And they together counsel take that for my soul lay wait.

11 They said, God leaves him; him pursue and take: none will him save.
12 Be thou not far from me, my God:
thy speedy help I crave.
13 Confound, consume them, that unto my soul are enemies:
Cloth'd be they with reproach and shame that do my hurt devise.

14 But I with expectation will hope continually;
And yet with praises more and more
I will thee magnify.
15 Thy justice and salvation
my mouth abroad shall shew, Ev'n all the day; for I thereof
the numbers do not know.

16 And I will constantly go on in strength of God the Lord;
And thine own righteousness, ev'n thine alone, I will record.
17 For ev'n from my youth, O God,
by thee I have been taught;
And hitherto I have declar'd
the wonders thou hast wrought.

18 And now, Lord, leave me not, when I old and gray-headed grow:
Till to this age thy strength and pow'r to all to come I shew.
19 And thy most perfect righteousness,
O Lord, is very high,
Who hast so great things done: O God,
who is like unto thee?

20 Thou, Lord, who great adversities, and sore, to me didst shew, Shalt quicken, and bring me again from depths of earth below.
21 My greatness and my pow'r thou wilt increase, and far extend:
On ev'ry side against all grief thou wilt me comfort send.

22 Thee, ev'n thy truth, I'll also praise,
my God, with psaltery:
Thou Holy One of Israel,
with harp I'll sing to thee.
23 My lips shall much rejoice in thee,
when I thy praises sound;
My soul, which thou redeemed hast,
in joy shall much abound.

24 My tongue thy justice shall proclaim, continuing all day long;
For they confounded are, and sham'd, that seek to do me wrong.

PSALM LXXII.

1 O LORD, thy judgments give the king,
his son thy righteousness.
2 With right he shall thy people judge,
thy poor with uprightness.
3 The lofty mountains shall bring forth unto the people peace;
Likewise the little hills the same shall do by righteousness.

4 The people's poor ones he shall judge,
the needy's children save;
And those shall he in pieces break who them oppressed have.
5 They shall thee fear, while sun and do last, through ages all. [moon 6 Like rain on mown grass he shall drop, or show'rs on earth that fall.

7 The just shall flourish in his days,
and prosper in his reign:
He shall, while doth the moon endure, abundant peace maintain.
8 His large and great dominion shall from sea to sea extend:
It from the river shall reach forth
unto earth's utmost end.

9 They in the wilderness that dwell bow down before him must;
And they that are his enemies shall lick the very dust.
10 The kings of Tarshish, and the isles, to him shall presents bring;
And unto him shall offer gifts
Sheba's and Seba's king.

11 Yea, all the mighty kings on earth
before him down shall fall;
And all the nations of the world do service to him shall.
12 For he the needy shall preserve,
when he to him doth call;
The poor also, and him that hath no help of man at all.

13 The poor man and the indigent
in mercy he shall spare;
He shall preserve alive the souls of those that needy are.
14 Both from deceit and violence their soul he shall set free;
And in his sight right precious and dear their blood shall be.

15 Yea, he shall live, and giv'n to him shall be of Sheba's gold:
For him still shall they pray, and he shall daily be extoll'd.
16 Of corn an handful in the earth on tops of mountains high,
With prosp'rous fruit shall shake, like on Lebanon that be. [trees

The city shall be flourishing, her citizens abound
In number shall, like to the grass that grows upon the ground.
17 His name for ever shall endure;
last like the sun it shall:
Men shall be bless'd in him, and bless'd all nations shall him call.

18 Now blessed be the Lord our God,
the God of Israel,
For he alone doth wondrous works,
in glory that excel.
19 And blessed be his glorious name
to all eternity:
The whole earth let his glory fill.
Amen, so let it be.

PSALM LXXIII.

1 YET God is good to Israel,
to each pure-hearted one.
2 But as for me, my steps near slipp'd,
my feet were almost gone.
3 For I envious was, and grudg'd the foolish folk to see,
When I perceiv'd the wicked sort enjoy prosperity.

4 For still their strength continueth firm;
their death of bands is free.
5 They are not toil'd like other men, nor plagu'd, as others be.
6 Therefore their pride, like to a chain, them compasseth about;
And, as a garment, violence
doth cover them throughout.

7 Their eyes stand out with fat; they have more than their hearts could wish.
8 They are corrupt; their talk of wrong both lewd and lofty is.
9 They set their mouth against the heav'ns in their blasphemous talk;
And their reproaching tongue throughout the earth at large doth walk.

10 His people oftentimes for this look back, and turn about;
Sith waters of so full a cup to these are poured out.
11 And thus they say, How can it be that God these things doth know?
Or, Can there in the Highest be knowledge of things below?

12 Behold, these are the wicked ones, yet prosper at their will
In worldly things; they do increase in wealth and riches still.
13 I verily have done in vain
my heart to purify;
To no effect in innocence washed my hands have I.

14 For daily, and all day throughout, great plagues I suffer'd have;
Yea, ev'ry morning I of new did chastisement receive.
15 If in this manner foolishly to speak I would intend,
Thy children's generation,
behold, I should offend.

16 When I this thought to know, it was too hard a thing for me;
17 Till to God's sanctu'ry I went,
then I their end did see.
18 Assuredly thou didst them set a slipp'ry place upon;
Them suddenly thou castedst down into destruction.

19 How in a moment suddenly to ruin brought are they!
With fearful terrors utterly they are consum'd away.
20 Ev'n like unto a dream, when one from sleeping doth arise;
So thou, O Lord, when thou awak'st, their image shalt despise.

21 Thus grieved was my heart in me,
and me my reins opprest:
22 So rude was I, and ignorant, and in thy sight a beast.
23 Nevertheless continually,
O Lord, I am with thee:
Thou dost me hold by my right hand,
and still upholdest me.

24 Thou, with thy counsel, while I live, wilt me conduct and guide;
And to thy glory afterward receive me to abide.
25 Whom have I in the heavens high but thee, O Lord, alone?
And in the earth whom I desire besides thee there is none.

26 My flesh and heart doth faint and fail,
but God doth fail me never:
For of my heart God is the strength and portion for ever.
27 For, lo, they that are far from thee for ever perish shall;
Them that a whoring from thee go thou hast destroyed all.

28 But surely it is good for me that I draw near to God:
In God I trust, that all thy works
I may declare abroad.

PSALM LXXIV.

1 O GOD, why hast thou cast us off?
is it for evermore?
Against thy pasture-sheep why doth thine anger smoke so sore?
2 O call to thy remembrance thy congregation,
Which thou hast purchased of old;
still think the same upon:

The rod of thine inheritance,
which thou redeemed hast,
This Sion hill, wherein thou hadst thy dwelling in times past.
3 To these long desolations thy feet lift, do not tarry;
For all the ills thy foes have done within thy sanctuary.

4 Amidst thy congregations thine enemies do roar:
Their ensigns they set up for signs of triumph thee before.
5 A man was famous, and was had in estimation,
According as he lifted up his axe thick trees upon.

6 But all at once with axes now and hammers they go to,
And down the carved work thereof
they break, and quite undo.
7 They fired have thy sanctuary,
and have defil'd the same,
By casting down unto the ground
the place where dwelt thy name.

8 Thus said they in their hearts, Let us destroy them out of hand:
They burnt up all the synagogues of God within the land.
9 Our signs we do not now behold:
there is not us among A prophet more, nor any one that knows the time how long.

10 How long, Lord, shall the enemy
thus in reproach exclaim?
And shall the adversary thus always blaspheme thy name?
11 Thy hand, ev'n thy right hand of might,
why dost thou thus draw back?
O from thy bosom pluck it out for our deliv'rance' sake.

12 For certainly God is my King, ev'n from the times of old,
Working in midst of all the earth
salvation manifold.
13 The sea, by thy great pow'r, to part asunder thou didst make:
And thou the dragons' heads, O Lord,
within the waters brake.

14 The leviathan's head thou brak'st in pieces, and didst give Him to be meat unto the folk in wilderness that live.
15 Thou clav'st the fountain and the flood,
which did with streams abound:
Thou dry'dst the mighty waters up unto the very ground.

16 Thine only is the day, O Lord, thine also is the night;
And thou alone prepared hast
the sun and shining light.
17 By thee the borders of the earth were settled ev'ry where:
The summer and the winter both by thee created were.

18 That th' enemy reproached hath,
O keep it in record;
And that the foolish people have blasphem'd thy name, O Lord.
19 Unto the multitude do not thy turtle's soul deliver:
The congregation of thy poor
do not forget for ever.

20 Unto thy cov'nant have respect; for earth's dark places be Full of the habitations of horrid cruelty.
21 O let not those that be oppress'd return again with shame:
Let those that poor and needy are give praise unto thy name.

22 Do thou, O God, arise and plead the cause that is thine own:
Remember how thou art reproach'd still by the foolish one.
23 Do not forget the voice of those that are thine enemies:
Of those the tumult ever grows that do against thee rise.

PSALM LXXV.

1 UNTO thee, O God, do we give thanks,
we do give thanks to thee;
Because thy wondrous works declare thy great name near to be.
2 I purpose, when I shall receive the congregation,
That I shall judgment uprightly render to ev'ry one.

3 Dissolved is the land, with all that in the same do dwell;
But I the pillars thereof do bear up, and stablish well.
4 I to the foolish people said,
Do not deal foolishly;
And unto those that wicked are,
Lift not your horn on high.

5 Lift not your horn on high, nor speak
6 with stubborn neck. But know,
That not from east, nor west, nor south, promotion doth flow.
7 But God is judge; he puts down one,
and sets another up.
8 For in the hand of God most high of red wine is a cup:

'Tis full of mixture, he pours forth, and makes the wicked all Wring out the bitter dregs thereof;
yea, and they drink them shall.
9 But I for ever will declare,
I Jacob's God will praise.
10 All horns of lewd men I'll cut off;
but just men's horns will raise.

PSALM LXXVI.

1 IN Judah's land God is well known,
his name's in Isr'el great:
2 In Salem is his tabernacle,
in Sion is his seat.
3 There arrows of the bow he brake,
the shield, the sword, the war.
4 More glorious thou than hills of prey, more excellent art far.

5 Those that were stout of heart are they slept their sleep outright; [spoil'd,
And none of those their hands did find,
that were the men of might.
6 When thy rebuke, O Jacob's God, had forth against them past,
Their horses and their chariots both were in a dead sleep cast.

7 Thou, Lord, ev'n thou art he that should be fear'd; and who is he
That may stand up before thy sight, if once thou angry be?
8 From heav'n thou judgment caus'd be the earth was still with fear, [heard; 9 When God to judgment rose, to save all meek on earth that were.

10 Surely the very wrath of man unto thy praise redounds:
Thou to the remnant of his wrath
wilt set restraining bounds.
11 Vow to the Lord your God, and pay:
all ye that near him be,
Bring gifts and presents unto him;
for to be fear'd is he.

12 By him the sp'rits shall be cut off of those that princes are:
Unto the kings that are on earth
he fearful doth appear.

PSALM LXXVII.

1 UNTO the Lord I with my voice,
I unto God did cry;
Ev'n with my voice, and unto me
his ear he did apply.
2 I in my trouble sought the Lord,
my sore by night did run,
And ceased not; my grieved soul did consolation shun.

3 I to remembrance God did call,
yet trouble did remain;
And overwhelm'd my spirit was,
whilst I did sore complain.
4 Mine eyes, debarr'd from rest and sleep,
thou makest still to wake;
My trouble is so great, that I unable am to speak.

5 The days of old to mind I call'd, and oft did think upon
The times and ages that are past full many years agone.
6 By night my song I call to mind,
and commune with my heart;
My sp'rit did carefully enquire how I might ease my smart.

7 For ever will the Lord cast off, and gracious be no more?
8 For ever is his mercy gone?
fails his word evermore?
9 Is't true that to be gracious
the Lord forgotten hath?
And that his tender mercies he hath shut up in his wrath?

10 Then did I say, That surely this is mine infirmity:
I'll mind the years of the right hand
of him that is most High.
11 Yea, I remember will the works performed by the Lord:
The wonders done of old by thee
I surely will record.

12 I also will of all thy works
my meditation make;
And of thy doings to discourse great pleasure I will take.
13 O God, thy way most holy is within thy sanctuary;
And what God is so great in pow'r
as is our God most high?

14 Thou art the God that wonders dost by thy right hand most strong:
Thy mighty pow'r thou hast declar'd
the nations among.
15 To thine own people with thine arm thou didst redemption bring;
To Jacob's sons, and to the tribes of Joseph that do spring.

16 The waters, Lord, perceived thee,
the waters saw thee well;
And they for fear aside did flee;
the depths on trembling fell.
17 The clouds in water forth were pour'd, sound loudly did the sky;
And swiftly through the world abroad thine arrows fierce did fly.

18 Thy thunder's voice alongst the heav'n a mighty noise did make;
By lightnings lighten'd was the world,
th' earth tremble did and shake.
19 Thy way is in the sea, and in the waters great thy path;
Yet are thy footsteps hid, O Lord;
none knowledge thereof hath.

20 Thy people thou didst safely lead,
like to a flock of sheep;
By Moses' hand and Aaron's thou didst them conduct and keep.

PSALM LXXVIII.

1 ATTEND, my people, to my law;
thereto give thou an ear;
The words that from my mouth proceed attentively do hear.
2 My mouth shall speak a parable,
and sayings dark of old;
3 The same which we have heard and and us our fathers told. [known,

4 We also will them not conceal from their posterity;
Them to the generation
to come declare will we:
The praises of the Lord our God,
and his almighty strength,
The wondrous works that he hath done,
we will shew forth at length.

5 His testimony and his law
in Isr'el he did place,
And charg'd our fathers it to shew
to their succeeding race;
6 That so the race which was to come might well them learn and know;
And sons unborn, who should arise,
might to their sons them shew;

7 That they might set their hope in God,
and suffer not to fall
His mighty works out of their mind, but keep his precepts all:
8 And might not, like their fathers, be a stiff rebellious race;
A race not right in heart; with God whose sp'rit not stedfast was.

9 The sons of Ephraim, who nor bows nor other arms did lack,
When as the day of battle was,
they faintly turned back.
10 They brake God's cov'nant, and refus'd in his commands to go; 11 His works and wonders they forgot, which he to them did show.

12 Things marvellous he brought to pass;
their fathers them beheld Within the land of Egypt done, yea, ev'n in Zoan's field.
13 By him divided was the sea,
he caus'd them through to pass;
And made the waters so to stand,
as like an heap it was.

14 With cloud by day, with light of fire
all night, he did them guide.
15 In desert rocks he clave, and drink,
as from great depths, supply'd.
16 He from the rock brought streams, like made waters to run down. [floods 17 Yet sinning more, in desert they provok'd the highest One.

18 For in their heart they tempted God,
and, speaking with mistrust,
They greedily did meat require to satisfy their lust.

19 Against the Lord himself they spake, and, murmuring, said thus,
A table in the wilderness can God prepare for us?

20 Behold, he smote the rock, and thence came streams and waters great;
But can he give his people bread?
and send them flesh to eat?
21 The Lord did hear, and waxed wroth;
so kindled was a flame
'Gainst Jacob, and 'gainst Israel up indignation came.

22 For they believ'd not God, nor trust in his salvation had;
23 Tho' clouds above he did command, and heav'n's doors open made, 24 And manna rain'd on them, and gave them corn of heav'n to eat.
25 Man angels' food did eat; to them
he to the full sent meat.

26 And in the heaven he did cause an eastern wind to blow;
And by his power he let out
the southern wind to go.
27 Then flesh as thick as dust he made to rain down them among;
And feather'd fowls, like as the sand which li'th the shore along.

28 At his command amidst their camp these show'rs of flesh down fell,
All round about the tabernacles and tents where they did dwell.
29 So they did eat abundantly, and had of meat their fill;
For he did give to them what was their own desire and will.

30 They from their lust had not estrang'd their heart and their desire;
But while the meat was in their mouths,
which they did so require, 31 God's wrath upon them came, and slew
the fattest of them all;
So that the choice of Israel,
o'erthrown by death, did fall.

32 Yet, notwithstanding of all this,
they sinned still the more;
And tho' he had great wonders wrought, believ'd him not therefore:
33 Wherefore their days in vanity
he did consume and waste;
And by his wrath their wretched years away in trouble past.

34 But when he slew them, then they did to seek him shew desire; Yea, they return'd, and after God right early did enquire.
35 And that the Lord had been their Rock
they did remember then;
Ev'n that the high almighty God had their Redeemer been.

36 Yet with their mouth they flatter'd him,
and spake but feignedly;
And they unto the God of truth with their false tongues did lie.
37 For tho' their words were good, their with him was not sincere; [heart Unstedfast and perfidious they in his cov'nant were.

38 But, full of pity, he forgave their sin, them did not slay; Nor stirr'd up all his wrath, but oft his anger turn'd away.
39 For that they were but fading flesh to mind he did recall;
A wind that passeth soon away,
and not returns at all.

40 How often did they him provoke within the wilderness!
And in the desert did him grieve with their rebelliousness!
41 Yea, turning back, they tempted God, and limits set upon Him, who in midst of Isr'el is the only Holy One.

42 They did not call to mind his pow'r, nor yet the day when he Deliver'd them out of the hand of their fierce enemy; 43 Nor how great signs in Egypt land
he openly had wrought;
What miracles in Zoan's field his hand to pass had brought.

44 How lakes and rivers ev'ry where he turned into blood;
So that nor man nor beast could drink of standing lake or flood.
45 He brought among them swarms of flies,
which did them sore annoy;
And divers kinds of filthy frogs
he sent them to destroy.

46 He to the caterpillar gave the fruits of all their soil;
Their labours he deliver'd up unto the locusts' spoil.
47 Their vines with hail, their sycamores
he with the frost did blast:
48 Their beasts to hail he gave; their flocks hot thunderbolts did waste.

49 Fierce burning wrath he on them cast,
and indignation strong,
And troubles sore, by sending forth ill angels them among.
50 He to his wrath made way; their soul from death he did not save;
But over to the pestilence
the lives of them he gave.

51 In Egypt land the first-born all he smote down ev'ry where;
Among the tents of Ham, ev'n these chief of their strength that were.
52 But his own people, like to sheep, thence to go forth he made;
And he, amidst the wilderness,
them, as a flock, did lead.

53 And he them safely on did lead,
so that they did not fear;
Whereas their en'mies by the sea quite overwhelmed were.
54 To borders of his sanctuary
the Lord his people led,
Ev'n to the mount which his right hand for them had purchased.

55 The nations of Canaan,
by his almighty hand,
Before their face he did expel out of their native land;
Which for inheritance to them
by line he did divide,
And made the tribes of Israel within their tents abide.

56 Yet God most high they did provoke, and tempted ever still;
And to observe his testimonies did not incline their will:
57 But, like their fathers, turned back,
and dealt unfaithfully:
Aside they turned, like a bow that shoots deceitfully.

58 For they to anger did provoke him with their places high;
And with their graven images
mov'd him to jealousy.
59 When God heard this, he waxed wroth, and much loath'd Isr'el then:
60 So Shiloh's tent he left, the tent which he had plac'd with men.

61 And he his strength delivered into captivity;
He left his glory in the hand of his proud enemy.
62 His people also he gave o'er unto the sword's fierce rage:
So sore his wrath inflamed was against his heritage.

63 The fire consum'd their choice young their maids no marriage had; [men; 64 And when their priests fell by the sword, their wives no mourning made.
65 But then the Lord arose, as one that doth from sleep awake;
And like a giant that, by wine refresh'd, a shout doth make:

66 Upon his en'mies' hinder parts
he made his stroke to fall;
And so upon them he did put a shame perpetual.
67 Moreover, he the tabernacle of Joseph did refuse;
The mighty tribe of Ephraim
he would in no wise chuse:

68 But he did chuse Jehudah's tribe to be the rest above;
And of mount Sion he made choice,
which he so much did love.
69 And he his sanctuary built like to a palace high,
Like to the earth which he did found to perpetuity.

70 Of David, that his servant was,
he also choice did make,
And even from the folds of sheep was pleased him to take:
71 From waiting on the ewes with young,
he brought him forth to feed Israel, his inheritance, his people, Jacob's seed.

72 So after the integrity
he of his heart them fed;
And by the good skill of his hands them wisely governed.

PSALM LXXIX.

1 O GOD, the heathen enter'd have thine heritage; by them Defiled is thy house: on heaps they laid Jerusalem.
2 The bodies of thy servants they have cast forth to be meat
To rav'nous fowls; thy dear saints' flesh they gave to beasts to eat.

3 Their blood about Jerusalem like water they have shed;
And there was none to bury them when they were slain and dead.
4 Unto our neighbours a reproach most base become are we;
A scorn and laughingstock to them that round about us be.

5 How long, Lord, shall thine anger last?
wilt thou still keep the same?
And shall thy fervent jealousy burn like unto a flame?
6 On heathen pour thy fury forth, that have thee never known,
And on those kingdoms which thy name have never call'd upon.

7 For these are they who Jacob have devoured cruelly;
And they his habitation
have caused waste to lie.
8 Against us mind not former sins;
thy tender mercies shew;
Let them prevent us speedily,
for we're brought very low.

9 For thy name's glory help us, Lord, who hast our Saviour been:
Deliver us; for thy name's sake,
O purge away our sin.
10 Why say the heathen, Where's their God?
let him to them be known;
When those who shed thy servants' blood are in our sight o'erthrown.

11 O let the pris'ner's sighs ascend before thy sight on high; Preserve those in thy mighty pow'r that are design'd to die.
12 And to our neighbours' bosom cause it sev'n fold render'd be,
Ev'n the reproach wherewith they have,
O Lord, reproached thee.

13 So we thy folk, and pasture-sheep, shall give thee thanks always;
And unto generations all we will shew forth thy praise.

PSALM LXXX.

1 HEAR, Isr'el's Shepherd! like a flock
thou that dost Joseph guide; Shine forth, O thou that dost between the cherubims abide.

2 In Ephraim's, and Benjamin's, and in Manasseh's sight,
O come for our salvation;
stir up thy strength and might.

3 Turn us again, O Lord our God,
and upon us vouchsafe
To make thy countenance to shine,
and so we shall be safe.
4 O Lord of hosts, almighty God, how long shall kindled be Thy wrath against the prayer made by thine own folk to thee?

5 Thou tears of sorrow giv'st to them
instead of bread to eat;
Yea, tears instead of drink thou giv'st to them in measure great.
6 Thou makest us a strife unto our neighbours round about;
Our enemies among themselves at us do laugh and flout.

7 Turn us again, O God of hosts,
and upon us vouchsafe
To make thy countenance to shine,
and so we shall be safe.
8 A vine from Egypt brought thou hast,
by thine outstretched hand;
And thou the heathen out didst cast,
to plant it in their land.

9 Before it thou a room didst make,
where it might grow and stand;
Thou causedst it deep root to take,
and it did fill the land.
10 The mountains vail'd were with its shade,
as with a covering;
Like goodly cedars were the boughs which out from it did spring.

11 Upon the one hand to the sea her boughs she did out send;
On th' other side unto the flood her branches did extend.
12 Why hast thou then thus broken down and ta'en her hedge away?
So that all passengers do pluck,
and make of her a prey.

13 The boar who from the forest comes doth waste it at his pleasure;
The wild beast of the field also devours it out of measure.
14 O God of hosts, we thee beseech, return now unto thine;
Look down from heav'n in love, behold,
and visit this thy vine:

15 This vineyard, which thine own right hand hath planted us among;
And that same branch, which for thyself
thou hast made to be strong.
16 Burnt up it is with flaming fire,
it also is cut down:
They utterly are perished,
when as thy face doth frown.

17 O let thy hand be still upon the Man of thy right hand,
The Son of man, whom for thyself thou madest strong to stand.
18 So henceforth we will not go back,
nor turn from thee at all:
O do thou quicken us, and we upon thy name will call.

19 Turn us again, Lord God of hosts,
and upon us vouchsafe
To make thy countenance to shine,
and so we shall be safe.

PSALM LXXXI.

1 SING loud to God our strength; with joy to Jacob's God do sing.
2 Take up a psalm, the pleasant harp, timbrel and psalt'ry bring.
3 Blow trumpets at new-moon, what day
our feast appointed is:
4 For charge to Isr'el, and a law of Jacob's God was this.

5 To Joseph this a testimony
he made, when Egypt land
He travell'd through, where speech I heard
I did not understand.
6 His shoulder I from burdens took,
his hands from pots did free.
7 Thou didst in trouble on me call,
and I deliver'd thee:

In secret place of thundering
I did thee answer make;
And at the streams of Meribah of thee a proof did take.
8 O thou, my people, give an ear,
I'll testify to thee;
To thee, O Isr'el, if thou wilt but hearken unto me.

9 In midst of thee there shall not be any strange god at all;
Nor unto any god unknown
thou bowing down shalt fall.
10 I am the Lord thy God, which did from Egypt land thee guide;
I'll fill thy mouth abundantly,
do thou it open wide.

11 But yet my people to my voice would not attentive be;
And ev'n my chosen Israel
he would have none of me.
12 So to the lust of their own hearts
I them delivered;
And then in counsels of their own they vainly wandered.

13 O that my people had me heard,
Isr'el my ways had chose!
14 I had their en'mies soon subdu'd, my hand turn'd on their foes.
15 The haters of the Lord to him submission should have feign'd;
But as for them, their time should have for evermore remain'd.

16 He should have also fed them with the finest of the wheat;
Of honey from the rock thy fill
I should have made thee eat.

PSALM LXXXII.

1 IN gods' assembly God doth stand;
he judgeth gods among.
2 How long, accepting persons vile, will ye give judgment wrong?
3 Defend the poor and fatherless;
to poor oppress'd do right.
4 The poor and needy ones set free;
rid them from ill men's might.

5 They know not, nor will understand;
in darkness they walk on:
All the foundations of the earth
out of their course are gone.
6 I said that ye are gods, and are sons of the Highest all:
7 But ye shall die like men, and as one of the princes fall.

8 O God, do thou raise up thyself,
the earth to judgment call:
For thou, as thine inheritance, shalt take the nations all.

PSALM LXXXIII.

1 KEEP not, O God, we thee entreat,
O keep not silence now:
Do thou not hold thy peace, O God,
and still no more be thou.
2 For, lo, thine enemies a noise
tumultuously have made;
And they that haters are of thee have lifted up the head.

3 Against thy chosen people they do crafty counsel take;
And they against thy hidden ones
do consultations make.
4 Come, let us cut them off, said they,
from being a nation,
That of the name of Isr'el may no more be mention.

5 For with joint heart they plot, in league against thee they combine.
6 The tents of Edom, Ishm'elites, Moab's, and Hagar's line;
7 Gebal, and Ammon, Amalek,
Philistines, those of Tyre;
8 And Assur join'd with them, to help
Lot's children they conspire.

9 Do to them as to Midian, Jabin at Kison strand;
10 And Sis'ra, which at En-dor fell,
as dung to fat the land.
11 Like Oreb and like Zeeb make their noble men to fall;
Like Zeba and Zalmunna like,
make thou their princes all;

12 Who said, For our possession
let us God's houses take.
13 My God, them like a wheel, as chaff before the wind, them make.
14 As fire consumes the wood, as flame doth mountains set on fire, 15 Chase and affright them with the storm and tempest of thine ire.

16 Their faces fill with shame, O Lord, that they may seek thy name.
17 Let them confounded be, and vex'd,
and perish in their shame:
18 That men may know that thou, to whom alone doth appertain
The name JEHOVAH, dost most high o'er all the earth remain.

PSALM LXXXIV.

1 HOW lovely is thy dwelling-place,
O Lord of hosts, to me!
The tabernacles of thy grace
how pleasant, Lord, they be!
2 My thirsty soul longs vehemently, yea faints, thy courts to see:
My very heart and flesh cry out,
O living God, for thee.

3 Behold, the sparrow findeth out an house wherein to rest;
The swallow also for herself hath purchased a nest;
Ev'n thine own altars, where she safe her young ones forth may bring,
O thou almighty Lord of hosts,
who art my God and King.

4 Bless'd are they in thy house that dwell,
they ever give thee praise.
5 Bless'd is the man whose strength thou art,
in whose heart are thy ways:
6 Who passing thorough Baca's vale,
therein do dig up wells;
Also the rain that falleth down
the pools with water fills.

7 So they from strength unwearied go still forward unto strength, Until in Sion they appear before the Lord at length.
8 Lord God of hosts, my prayer hear;
O Jacob's God, give ear.
9 See God our shield, look on the face of thine anointed dear.

10 For in thy courts one day excels a thousand; rather in My God's house will I keep a door, than dwell in tents of sin.
11 For God the Lord's a sun and shield:
he'll grace and glory give;
And will withhold no good from them that uprightly do live.

12 O thou that art the Lord of hosts,
that man is truly blest,
Who by assured confidence on thee alone doth rest.

PSALM LXXXV.

1 O LORD, thou hast been favourable to thy beloved land:
Jacob's captivity thou hast recall'd with mighty hand.
2 Thou pardoned thy people hast
all their iniquities;
Thou all their trespasses and sins hast cover'd from thine eyes.

3 Thou took'st off all thine ire, and turn'dst from thy wrath's furiousness.
4 Turn us, God of our health, and cause thy wrath 'gainst us to cease.
5 Shall thy displeasure thus endure against us without end?
Wilt thou to generations all thine anger forth extend?

Digitized by Google

6 That in thee may thy people joy, wilt thou not us revive?
7 Shew us thy mercy, Lord, to us do thy salvation give.
8 I'll hear what God the Lord will speak:
to his folk he'll speak peace,
And to his saints; but let them not return to foolishness.

9 To them that fear him surely near is his salvation;
That glory in our land may have her habitation.
10 Truth met with mercy, righteousness and peace kiss'd mutually:
11 Truth springs from earth, and righteous-looks down from heaven high. [ness

12 Yea, what is good the Lord shall give;
our land shall yield increase:
13 Justice, to set us in his steps, shall go before his face.

PSALM LXXXVI.

1 O LORD, do thou bow down thine ear,
and hear me graciously;
Because I sore afflicted am,
and am in poverty.
2 Because I'm holy, let my soul
by thee preserved be:
O thou my God, thy servant save,
that puts his trust in thee.

3 Sith unto thee I daily cry,
be merciful to me.
4 Rejoice thy servant's soul; for, Lord,
I lift my soul to thee.
5 For thou art gracious, O Lord,
and ready to forgive;
And rich in mercy, all that call upon thee to relieve.

6 Hear, Lord, my pray'r; unto the voice of my request attend:
7 In troublous times I'll call on thee;
for thou wilt answer send.
8 Lord, there is none among the gods that may with thee compare;
And like the works which thou hast done,
not any work is there.

9 All nations whom thou mad'st shall come and worship rev'rently Before thy face; and they, O Lord, thy name shall glorify.
10 Because thou art exceeding great,
and works by thee are done
Which are to be admir'd, and thou art God thyself alone.

11 Teach me thy way, and in thy truth,
O Lord, then walk will I; Unite my heart, that I thy name may fear continually.
12 O Lord my God, with all my heart to thee I will give praise;
And I the glory will ascribe unto thy name always:

13 Because thy mercy toward me
in greatness doth excel;
And thou deliver'd hast my soul
out from the lowest hell.
14 O God, the proud against me rise,
and vi'lent men have met,
That for my soul have sought; and thee before them have not set.

15 But thou art full of pity, Lord,
a God most gracious,
Long-suffering, and in thy truth and mercy plenteous.
16 O turn to me thy countenance, and mercy on me have;
Thy servant strengthen, and the son of thine own handmaid save.

17 Shew me a sign for good, that they which do me hate may see,
And be asham'd; because thou, Lord, didst help and comfort me.

PSALM LXXXVII.

1 UPON the hills of holiness
he his foundation sets.
2 God, more than Jacob's dwellings all, delights in Sion's gates.
3 Things glorious are said of thee,
thou city of the Lord.
4 Rahab and Babel I, to those that know me, will record:

Behold ev'n Tyrus, and with it
the land of Palestine,
And likewise Ethiopia;
this man was born therein.
5 And it of Sion shall be said,
This man and that man there
Was born; and he that is most High himself shall stablish her.

6 When God the people writes, he'll count that this man born was there.
7 There be that sing and play; and all my well-springs in thee are.

PSALM LXXXVIII.

1 LORD God, my Saviour, day and night
before thee cry'd have I.
2 Before thee let my prayer come;
give ear unto my cry.
3 For troubles great do fill my soul;
my life draws nigh the grave.
4 I'm counted with those that go down to pit, and no strength have.

5 Ev'n free among the dead, like them that slain in grave do lie;
Cut off from thy hand, whom no more thou hast in memory.
6 Thou hast me laid in lowest pit,
in deeps and darksome caves.
7 Thy wrath lies hard on me, thou hast me press'd with all thy waves.

8 Thou hast put far from me my friends, thou mad'st them to ablior me;
And I am so shut up, that I find no evasion for me.
9 By reason of affliction
mine eye mourns dolefully:
To thee, Lord, do I call, and stretch
my hands continually.

10 Wilt thou shew wonders to the dead?
shall they rise, and thee bless?
11 Shall in the grave thy love be told?
in death thy faithfulness?
12 Shall thy great wonders in the dark, or shall thy righteousness
Be known to any in the land of deep forgetfulness?

13 But, Lord, to thee I cry'd; my pray'r at morn prevent shall thee.
14 Why, Lord, dost thou cast off my soul,
and hid'st thy face from me?
15 Distress'd am I, and from my youth
I ready am to die;
Thy terrors I have borne, and am distracted fearfully.

16 The dreadful fierceness of thy wrath quite over me doth go:
Thy terrors great have cut me off,
they did pursue me so.
17 For round about me ev'ry day,
like water, they did roll;
And, gathering together, they have compassed my soul.

18 My friends thou hast put far from me,
and him that did me love;
And those that mine acquaintance were to darkness didst remove.

PSALM LXXXIX.

1 GOD's mercies I will ever sing;
and with my mouth I shall Thy faithfulness make to be known
to generations all.
2 For mercy shall be built, said I,
for ever to endure;
Thy faithfulness, ev'n in the heav'ns,
thou wilt establish sure.

3 I with my chosen One have made a cov'nant graciously;
And to my servant, whom I lov'd,
to David sworn have I;
4 That I thy seed establish shall
for ever to remain,
And will to generations all thy throne build and maintain.

5 The praises of thy wonders, Lord,
the heavens shall express;
And in the congregation of saints thy faithfulness.
6 For who in heaven with the Lord may once himself compare?
Who is like God among the sons of those that mighty are?

7 Great fear in meeting of the saints is due unto the Lord;
And he of all about him should with rev'rence be ador'd.
8 O thou that art the Lord of hosts,
what Lord in mightiness
Is like to thee? who compass'd round art with thy faithfulness.

9 Ev'n in the raging of the sea
thou over it dost reign;
And when the waves thereof do swell,
thou stillest them again.
10 Rahab in pieces thou didst break, like one that slaughter'd is;
And with thy mighty arm thou hast dispers'd thine enemies.

11 The heav'ns are thine, thou for thine own the earth dost also take; [own
The world, and fulness of the same, thy pow'r did found and make.
12 The north and south from thee alone their first beginning had;
Both Tabor mount and Hermon hill shall in thy name be glad.

13 Thou hast an arm that's full of pow'r:
thy hand is great in might;
And thy right hand exceedingly exalted is in height.
14 Justice and judgment of thy throne are made the dwelling-place; Mercy, accompany'd with truth,
shall go before thy face.

15 O greatly bless'd the people are the joyful sound that know;
In brightness of thy face, O Lord,
they ever on shall go.
16 They in thy name shall the day rejoice exceedingly;
And in thy righteousness shall they exalted be on high.

17 Because the glory of their strength,
doth only stand in thee;
And in thy favour shall our horn and pow'r exalted be.
18 For God is our defence; and he
to us doth safety bring:
The Holy One of Israel is our almighty King.

19 In vision to thy Holy One thou saidst, I help upon
A strong one laid; out of the folk
I rais'd a chosen one;
20 Ev'n David, I have found him out
a servant unto me;
And with my holy oil my King anointed him to be.

21 With whom my hand shall stablish'd be;
mine arm shall make him strong.
22 On him the foe shall not exact, nor son of mischief wrong.
23 I will beat down before his face
all his malicious foes;
I will them greatly plague who do with hatred him oppose.

24 My mercy and my faithfulness with him yet still shall be;
And in my name his horn and pow'r men shall exalted see.
25 His hand and pow'r shall reach afar,
I'll set it in the sea;
And his right hand established shall in the rivers be.

26 Thou art my Father, he shall cry,
thou art my God alone;
And he shall say, Thou art the Rock
of my salvation.
27 I'll make him my first-born, more high than kings of any land.
28 My love I'll ever keep for him, my cov'nant fast shall stand.

Digitized by Google

29 His seed I by my pow'r will make
for ever to endure;
And, as the days of heav'n, his throne
shall stable be and sure.
30 But if his children shall forsake
my laws, and go astray,
And in my judgments shall not walk,
but wander from my way:

31 If they my laws break, and do not keep my commandements;
32 I'll visit then their faults with rods,
their sins with chastisements.
33 Yet I'll not take my love from him, nor false my promise make.
34 My cov'nant I'll not break, nor change
what with my mouth I spake.

35 Once by my holiness I swarc, to David I'll not lie;
36 His seed and throne shall, as the sun,
before me last for aye.
37 It, like the moon, shall ever be establish'd stedfastly;
And like to that which in the heav'n doth witness faithfully.

38 But thou, displeased, hast cast off,
thou didst abhor and loathe;
With him that thine anointed is thou hast been very wroth.
39 Thou hast thy servant's covenant made void, and quite cast by;
Thou hast profan'd his crown, while it cast on the ground doth lie.

40 Thou all his hedges hast broke down, his strong holds down hast torn.
41 He to all passers-by a spoil, to neighbours is a scorn.
42 Thou hast set up his foes' right hand;
mad'st all his en'mies glad:
43 Turn'd his sword's edge, and him to in battle hast not made. [stand

44 His glory thou hast made to cease, his throne to ground down cast;
45 Shorten'd his days of youth, and him with shame thou cover'd hast.
46 How long, Lord, wilt thou hide thyself?
for ever, in thine ire?
And shall thine indignation burn like unto a fire?

47 Remember, Lord, how short a time
I shall on earth remain:
O wherefore is it so that thou hast made all men in vain?
48 What man is he that liveth here,
and death shall never see?
Or from the power of the grave
what man his soul shall free?

49 Thy former loving-kindnesses,
O Lord, where be they now?
Those which in truth and faithfulness to David sworn hast thou?
50 Mind, Lord, thy servant's sad reproach;
how I in bosom bear
The scornings of the people all,
who strong and mighty are.

51 Wherewith thy raging enemies reproach'd, O Lord, think on; Wherewith they have reproach'd the of thine anointed one. [steps 52 All blessing to the Lord our God let be ascribed then:
For evermore so let it be.
Amen, yea, and amen.

PSALM XC.

1 LORD, thou hast been our dwelling-in generations all. [place 2 Before thou ever hadst brought forth the mountains great or small;
Ere ever thou hadst form'd the earth,
and all the world abroad;
Ev'n thou from everlasting art to everlasting God.

3 Thou dost unto destruction man that is mortal turn;
And unto them thou say'st, Again,
ye sons of men, return.
4 Because a thousand years appear no more before thy sight
Than yesterday, when it is past, or than a watch by night.

5 As with an overflowing flood thou carry'st them away:
They like a sleep are, like the grass that grows at morn are they.
6 At morn it flourishes and grows, cut down at ev'n doth fade.
7 For by thine anger we're consum'd, thy wrath makes us afraid.

8 Our sins thou and iniquities dost in thy presence place,
And sett'st our secret faults before
the brightness of thy face.
9 For in thine anger all our days do pass on to an end;
And as a tale that hath been told,
so we our years do spend.

10 Threescore and ten years do sum up our days and years, we see;
Or if, by reason of more strength,
in some fourscore they be:
Yet doth the strength of such old men but grief and labour prove;
For it is soon cut off, and we fly hence, and soon remove.

11 Who knows the power of thy wrath?
according to thy fear
12 So is thy wrath: Lord, teach thou us
our end in mind to bear;
And so to count our days, that we
our hearts may still apply
To learn thy wisdom and thy truth, that we may live thereby.

13 Turn yet again to us, O Lord, how long thus shall it be?
Let it repent thee now for those that servants are to thee.
14 O with thy tender mercies, Lord, us early satisfy;
So we rejoice shall all our days,
and still be glad in thee.

15 According as the days have been,
wherein we grief have had,
And years wherein we ill have seen,
so do thou make us glad.
16 O let thy work and pow'r appear thy servants' face before;
And shew unto their children dear
thy glory evermore:

17 And let the beauty of the Lord
our God be us upon:
Our handy-works establish thou, establish them each one.

PSALM XCI.

1 HE that doth in the secret place
of the most High reside, Under the shade of him that is th' Almighty shall abide.
2 I of the Lord my God will say,
He is my refuge still,
He is my fortress, and my God,
and in him trust I will.

3 Assuredly he shall thee save,
and give deliverance
From subtile fowler's snare, and from the noisome pestilence.
4 His feathers shall thee hide; thy trust under his wings shall be:
His faithfulness shall be a shield and buckler unto thee.

5 Thou shalt not need to be afraid for terrors of the night;
Nor for the arrow that doth fly
by day, while it is light;
6 Nor for the pestilence, that walks
in darkness secretly;
Nor for destruction, that doth waste at noon-day openly.

7 A thousand at thy side shall fall, on thy right hand shall lie Ten thousand dead; yet unto thee
it shall not once come nigh.
8 Only thou with thine eyes shalt look,
and a beholder be;
And thou therein the just reward of wicked men shalt see.

9 Because the Lord, who constantly my refuge is alone,
Ev'n the most High, is made by thee
thy habitation;
10 No plague shall near thy dwelling come;
no ill shall thee befall:
11 For thee to keep in all thy ways his angels charge he shall.

12 They in their hands shall bear thee up, still waiting thee upon;
Lest thou at any time should'st dash thy foot against a stone.
13 Upon the adder thou shalt tread,
and on the lion strong;
Thy feet on dragons trample shall,
and on the lions young.

14 Because on me he set his love,
I'll save and set him free;
Because my great name he hath known,
I will him set on high.
15 He'll call on me, I'll answer him;
I will be with him still
In trouble, to deliver him,
and honour him I will.

16 With length of days unto his mind
I will him satisfy;
I also my salvation
will cause his eyes to see.

PSALM XCII.

1 IT O render thanks unto the Lord
it is a comely thing,
And to thy name, O thou most High,
due praise aloud to sing.
2 Thy loving-kindness to shew forth when shines the morning light;
And to declare thy faithfulness
with pleasure ev'ry night,

3 On a ten-stringed instrument,
upon the psaltery,
And on the harp with solemn sound,
and grave sweet melody.
4 For thou, Lord, by thy mighty works hast made my heart right glad;
And I will triumph in the works which by thine hands were made.

5 How great, Lord, are thy works! each of thine a deep it is: [thought 6 A brutish man it knoweth not;
fools understand not this.
7 When those that lewd and wicked are spring quickly up like grass,
And workers of iniquity
do flourish all apace;

It is that they for ever may destroyed be and slain:
8 But thou, O Lord, art the most High,
for ever to remain.
9 For, lo, thine enemies, O Lord, thine en'mies perish shall;
The workers of iniquity shall be dispersed all.

10 But thou shalt, like unto the horn of th' unicorn, exalt
My horn on high: thou with fresh oil anoint me also shalt.
11 Mine eyes shall also my desire see on mine enemies;
Mine ears shall of the wicked hear,
that do against me rise.

12 But like the palm-tree flourishing shall be the righteous one;
He shall like to the cedar grow
that is in Lebanon.
13 Those that within the house of God
are planted by his grace,
They shall grow up, and flourish all in our God's holy place.

14 And in old age, when others fade, they fruit still forth shall bring;
They shall be fat, and full of sap,
and aye be flourishing;
15 To shew that upright is the Lord:
he is a rock to me;
And he from all unrighteousness is altogether free.

PSALM XCIII.

1 THE Lord doth reign, and cloth'd is he
with majesty most bright;
His works do shew him cloth'd to be,
and girt about with might.
The world is also stablished,
that it cannot depart.
2 Thy throne is fix'd of old, and thou from everlasting art.

3 The floods, O Lord, have lifted up,
they lifted up their voice;
The floods have lifted up their waves,
and made a mighty noise.
4 But yet the Lord, that is on high,
is more of might by far Than noise of many waters is,
or great sea-billows are.

5 Thy testimonies ev'ry one in faithfulness excel;
And holiness for ever, Lord,
thine house becometh well.

PSALM XCIV.

1 O LORD God, unto whom alone
all vengeance doth belong;
O mighty God, who vengeance own'st, shine forth, avenging wrong.
2 Lift up thyself, thou of the earth
the sov'reign Judge that art;
And unto those that are so proud a due reward impart.

3 How long, O mighty God, shall they who lewd and wicked be,
How long shall they who wicked are thus triumph haughtily?
4 How long shall things most hard by them be uttered and told?
And all that work iniquity to boast themselves be bold?

5 Thy folk they break in pieces, Lord, thine heritage oppress:
6 The widow they and stranger slay,
and kill the fatherless.
7 Yet say they, God it shall not see,
nor God of Jacob know.
8 Ye brutish people! understand;
fools! when wise will ye grow?

9 The Lord did plant the ear of man, and hear then shall not he?
He only form'd the eye, and then shall he not clearly see?
10 He that the nations doth correct, shall he not chastise you?
He knowledge unto man doth teach,
and shall himself not know?

11 Man's thoughts to be but vanity
the Lord doth well discern.
12 Bless'd is the man thou chast'nest, Lord, and mak'st thy law to learn:
13 That thou may'st give him rest from of sad adversity, [days Until the pit be digg'd for those
that work iniquity.

14 For sure the Lord will not cast off those that his people be, Neither his own inheritance quit and forsake will he:
15 But judgment unto righteousness shall yet return again;
And all shall follow after it that are right-hearted men.

16 Who will rise up for me against those that do wickedly?
Who will stand up for me 'gainst those
that work iniquity?
17 Unless the Lord had been my help
when I was sore opprest, Almost my soul had in the house of silence been at rest.

18 When I had uttered this word,
(my foot doth slip away,) Thy mercy held me up, O Lord, thy goodness did me stay.
19 Amidst the multitude of thoughts which in my heart do fight,
My soul, lest it be overcharg'd,
thy comforts do delight.
20 Shall of iniquity the throne have fellowship with thee,
Which mischief, cunningly contriv'd, doth by a law decree?
21 Against the righteous souls they join,
they guiltless blood condemn.
22 But of my refuge God's the rock, and my defence from them.

23 On them their own iniquity
the Lord shall bring and lay,
And cut them off in their own sin;
our Lord God shall them slay.

PSALM XCV.

1 O COME, let us sing to the Lord:
come, let us ev'ry one
A joyful noise make to the Rock of our salvation.
2 Let us before his presence come with praise and thankful voice;
Let us sing psalms to him with grace,
and make a joyful noise.

3 For God, a great God, and great King, above all gods he is.
4 Depths of the earth are in his hand,
the strength of hills is his.
5 To him the spacious sea belongs,
for he the same did make;
The dry land also from his hands its form at first did take.

6 O come, and let us worship him,
let us bow down withal,
And on our knees before the Lord
our Maker let us fall.
7 For he's our God, the people we
of his own pasture are,
And of his hand the sheep; to-day,
if ye his voice will hear,

8 Then harden not your hearts, as in the provocation,
As in the desert, on the day
of the tentation:
9 When me your fathers tempt'd and and did my working see; [prov'd, 10 Ev'n for the space of forty years
this race hath grieved me.

I said, This people errs in heart,
my ways they do not know:
11 To whom I sware in wrath, that to my rest they should not go.

PSALM XCVI.

1 O SING a new song to the Lord:
sing all the earth to God.
2 To God sing, bless his name, shew still his saving health abroad.
3 Among the heathen nations his glory do declare;
And unto all the people shew his works that wondrous are.

4 For great's the Lord, and greatly he is to be magnify'd; Yea, worthy to be fear'd is he above all gods beside.
5 For all the gods are idols dumb,
which blinded nations fear;
But our God is the Lord, by whom the heav'ns created were.

6 Great honour is before his face,
and majesty divine;
Strength is within his holy place,
and there doth beauty shine.
7 Do ye ascribe unto the Lord,
of people ev'ry tribe,
Glory do ye unto the Lord,
and mighty pow'r ascribe.

8 Give ye the glory to the Lord
that to his name is due;
Come ye into his courts, and bring an offering with you.
9 In beauty of his holiness,
O do the Lord adore;
Likewise let all the earth throughout tremble his face before.

10 Among the heathen say, God reigns;
the world shall stedfastly
Be fix'd from moving; he shall judge
the people righteously.
11 Let heav'ns be glad before the Lord,
and let the earth rejoice;
Let seas, and all that is therein,
cry out, and make a noise.

12 Let fields rejoice, and ev'ry thing that springeth of the earth:
Then woods and ev'ry tree shall sing with gladness and with mirth 13 Before the Lord; because he comes,
to judge the earth comes he:
He'll judge the world with righteousness,
the people faithfully.

PSALM XCVII.

1 GOD reigneth, let the earth be glad,
and isles rejoice each one.
2 Dark clouds him compass; and in right with judgment dwells his throne.
3 Fire goes before him, and his foes
it burns up round about:
4 His lightnings lighten did the world;
earth saw, and shook throughout.

5 Hills at the presence of the Lord,
like wax, did melt away;
Ev'n at the presence of the Lord of all the earth, I say.
6 The heav'ns declare his righteousness, all men his glory see.
7 All who serve graven images,
confounded let them be.

Who do of idols boast themselves,
let shame upon them fall:
Ye that are called gods, see that ye do him worship all.
8 Sion did hear, and joyful was, glad Judah's daughters were;
They much rejoic'd, O Lord, because thy judgments did appear.

9 For thou, O Lord, art high above all things on earth that are;
Above all other gods thou art exalted very far.
10 Hate ill, all ye that love the Lord:
his saints' souls keepeth he;
And from the hands of wicked men
he sets them safe and free.

11 For all those that be righteous sown is a joyful light,
And gladness sown is for all those that are in heart upright.
12 Ye righteous, in the Lord rejoice;
express your thankfulness,
When ye into your memory
do call his holiness.

PSALM XCVIII.

1 O SING a new song to the Lord,
for wonders he hath done:
His right hand and his holy arm him victory hath won.
2 The Lord God his salvation hath caused to be known;
His justice in the heathen's sight
he openly hath shewn.

3 He mindful of his grace and truth to Isr'el's house hath been;
And the salvation of our God
all ends of th' earth have seen.
4 Let all the earth unto the Lord
send forth a joyful noise;
Lift up your voice aloud to him,
sing praises, and rejoice.

5 With harp, with harp, and voice of unto JEHOVAH sing: [psalms, 6 With trumpets, cornets, gladly sound before the Lord the King.
7 Let seas and all their fulness roar;
the world, and dwellers there;
8 Let floods clap hands, and let the hills together joy declare

9 Before the Lord; because he comes,
to judge the earth comes he;
He'll judge the world with righteous-his folk with equity. [ness,

PSALM XCIX.

1 TH' eternal Lord doth reign as king,
let all the people quake;

Digitized by Google

He sits between the cherubims,
let th' earth be mov'd and shake.
2 The Lord in Sion great and high above all people is;
3 Thy great and dreadful name (for it is holy) let them bless.

4 The king's strength also judgment loves;
thou settlest equity:
Just judgment thou dost execute in Jacob righteously.
5 The Lord our God exalt on high,
and rev'rently do ye
Before his footstool worship him:
the Holy One is he.

6 Moses and Aaron 'mong his priests,
Samuel, with them that call Upon his name: these call'd on God, and he them answer'd all.
7 Within the pillar of the cloud
he unto them did speak:
The testimonies he them taught,
and laws, they did not break.

8 Thou answer'dst them, O Lord our God;
thou wast a God that gave Pardon to them, though on their deeds thou wouldest vengeance have.
9 Do ye exalt the Lord our God, and at his holy hill
Do ye him worship: for the Lord our God is holy still.

PSALM C.

1 ALL people that on earth do dwell,
Sing to the Lord with cheerful voice.
2 Him serve with mirth, his praise forth
Come ye before him and rejoice. [tell,
3 Know that the Lord is God indeed;
Without our aid he did us make:
We are his flock, he doth us feed,
And for his sheep he doth us take.

4 O enter then his gates with praise, Approach with joy his courts unto:
Praise, laud, and bless his name always,
For it is seemly so to do.
5 For why? the Lord our God is good,
His mercy is for ever sure;
His truth at all times firmly stood,
And shall from age to age endure.

ANOTHER OF THE SAME.

1 O ALL ye lands, unto the Lord
make ye a joyful noise.
2 Serve God with gladness, him before come with a singing voice.
3 Know ye the Lord that he is God;
not we, but he us made:
We are his people, and the sheep within his pasture fed.

4 Enter his gates and courts with praise,
to thank him go ye thither:
To him express your thankfulness,
and bless his name together.
5 Because the Lord our God is good,
his mercy faileth never;
And to all generations his truth endureth ever.

PSALM CI.

1 I MERCY will and judgment sing
Lord, I will sing to thee.
2 With wisdom in a perfect way shall my behaviour be.
O when, in kindness unto me,
wilt thou be pleas'd to come?
I with a perfect heart will walk within my house at home.

3 I will endure no wicked thing before mine eyes to be:
I hate their work that turn aside,
it shall not cleave to me.
4 A stubborn and a froward heart depart quite from me shall;
A person giv'n to wickedness
I will not know at all.

5 I'll cut him off that slandereth his neighbour privily:
The haughty heart I will not bear,
nor him that looketh high.

6 Upon the faithful of the land mine eyes shall be, that they May dwell with me: he shall me serve that walks in perfect way.

7 Who of deceit a worker is in my house shall not dwell;
And in my presence shall he not remain that lies doth tell.
8 Yea, all the wicked of the land
early destroy will I;
All from God's city to cut off
that work iniquity.

PSALM CII.

1 O LORD, unto my pray'r give ear,
my cry let come to thee;
2 And in the day of my distress hide not thy face from me.
Give ear to me; what time I call,
to answer me make haste:
3 For, as an hearth, my bones are burnt,
my days, like smoke, do waste.

4 My heart within me smitten is,
and it is withered
Like very grass; so that I do forget to eat my bread.
5 By reason of my groaning voice
my bones cleave to my skin.
6 Like pelican in wilderness forsaken I have been;

I like an owl in desert am,
that nightly there doth moan;
7 I watch, and like a sparrow am on the house-top alone.
8 My bitter en'mies all the day
reproaches cast on me;
And, being mad at me, with rage against me sworn they be.

9 For why? I ashes eaten have like bread, in sorrows deep;
My drink I also mingled have with tears that I did weep.
10 Thy wrath and indignation did cause this grief and pain;
For thou hast lift me up on high,
and cast me down again.

11 My days are like unto a shade, which doth declining pass;
And I am dry'd and withered,
ev'n like unto the grass.
12 But thou, Lord, everlasting art, and thy remembrance shall Continually endure, and be
to generations all.

13 Thou shalt arise, and mercy have Upon thy Sion yet;
The time to favour her is come,
the time that thou hast set.
14 For in her rubbish and her stones thy servants pleasure take;
Yea, they the very dust thereof
do favour for her sake.

15 So shall the heathen people fear
the Lord's most holy name;
And all the kings on earth shall dread thy glory and thy fame.
16 When Sion by the mighty Lord built up again shall be,
In glory then and majesty to men appear shall he.

17 The prayer of the destitute
he surely will regard;
Their prayer will he not despise,
by him it shall be heard.
18 For generations yet to come
this shall be on record:
So shall the people that shall be created praise the Lord.

19 He from his sanctuary's height hath downward cast his eye;
And from his glorious throne in heav'n
the Lord the earth did spy;
20 That of the mournful prisoner
the groanings he might hear,
To set them free that unto death
by men appointed are:

21 That they in Sion may declare
the Lord's most holy name,
And publish in Jerusalem
the praises of the same;
22 When as the people gather shall in troops with one accord,
When kingdoms shall assembled be to serve the highest Lord.

23 My wonted strength and force he hath abated in the way,
And he my days hath shortened:
24 Thus therefore did I say,
My God, in mid-time of my days take thou me not away;
From age to age eternally
thy years endure and stay.

25 The firm foundation of the earth of old time thou hast laid;
The heavens also are the work which thine own hands have made.
26 Thou shalt for evermore endure,
but they shall perish all;
Yea, ev'ry one of them wax old,
like to a garment, shall:

Thou, as a vesture, shalt them change,
and they shall changed be:
27 But thou the same art, and thy years are to eternity.
28 The children of thy servants shall continually endure;
And in thy sight, O Lord, their seed shall be establish'd sure.

ANOTHER OF THE SAME.

1 LORD, hear my pray'r, and let my cry
have speedy access unto thee;
2 In day of my calamity
O hide not thou thy face from me.
Hear when I call to thee; that day
An answer speedily return:
3 My days, like smoke, consume away,
And, as an hearth, my bones do burn.

4 My heart is wounded very sore,
And withered, like grass doth fade:
I am forgetful grown therefore
To take and eat my daily bread.
5 By reason of my smart within,
And voice of my most grievous groans,
My flesh consumed is, my skin,
All parch'd, doth cleave unto my bones.

6 The pelican of wilderness,
The owl in desert, I do match;
7 And, sparrow-like, companionless,
Upon the house's top, I watch.
8 I all day long am made a scorn,
Reproach'd by my malicious foes:
The madmen are against me sworn,
The men against me that arose.

9 For I have ashes eaten up,
To me as if they had been bread;
And with my drink I in my cup
Of bitter tears a mixture made.
10 Because thy wrath was not appeas'd,
And dreadful indignation:
Therefore it was that thou me rais'd,
And thou again didst cast me down.

11 My days are like a shade alway,
Which doth declining swiftly pass;
And I am withered away,
Much like unto the fading grass,
12 But thou, O Lord, shalt still endure,
From change and all mutation free,
And to all generations sure Shall thy remembrance ever be.

13 Thou shalt arise, and mercy yet
Thou to mount Sion shalt extend:
Her time for favour which was set,
Behold, is now come to an end.
14 Thy saints take pleasure in her stones,
Her very dust to them is dear.
15 All heathen lands and kingly thrones
On earth thy glorious name shall fear.

16 God in his glory shall appear,
When Sion he builds and repairs.
17 He shall regard and lend his ear
Unto the needy's humble pray'rs:
Th' afflicted's pray'r he will not scorn.
18 All times this shall be on record:
And generations yet unborn
Shall praise and magnify the Lord.

19 He from his holy place look'd down,
The earth he view'd from heav'n on high,
20 To hear the pris'ner's mourning groan,
And free them that are doom'd to die;
21 That Sion, and Jerus'lem too,
His name and praise may well record,
22 When people and the kingdoms do Assemble all to praise the Lord.

23 My strength he weaken'd in the way,
My days of life he shortened.
24 My God, O take me not away
In mid-time of my days, I said:
Thy years throughout all ages last.
25 Of old thou hast established
The earth's foundation firm and fast:
Thy mighty hands the heav'ns have made.

26 They perish shall, as garments do,
But thou shalt evermore endure;
As vestures, thou shalt change them so;
And they shall all be changed sure:
27 But from all changes thou art free;
Thy endless years do last for aye.
28 Thy servants, and their seed who be,
Establish'd shall before thee stay.

PSALM CIII.

1 O THOU my soul, bless God the Lord;
and all that in me is
Be stirred up his holy name to magnify and bless.
2 Bless, O my soul, the Lord thy God, and not forgetful be
Of all his gracious benefits
he hath bestow'd on thee.

3 All thine iniquities who doth most graciously forgive:
Who thy diseases all and pains doth heal, and thee relieve.
4 Who doth redeem thy life, that thou to death may'st not go down;
Who thee with loving-kindness doth and tender mercies crown:

5 Who with abundance of good things
doth satisfy thy mouth;
So that, ev'n as the eagle's age,
renewed is thy youth.
6 God righteous judgment executes for all oppressed ones.
7 His ways to Moses, he his acts made known to Isr'el's sons.

8 The Lord our God is merciful, and he is gracious,
Long-suffering, and slow to wrath,
in mercy plenteous.
9 He will not chide continually, nor keep his anger still.
10 With us he dealt not as we sinn'd,
nor did requite our ill.

11 For as the heaven in its height
the earth surmounteth far:
So great to those that do him fear
his tender mercies are:
12 As far as east is distant from the west, so far hath he
From us removed, in his love, all our iniquity.

13 Such pity as a father hath unto his children dear;
Like pity shews the Lord to such as worship him in fear.
14 For he remembers we are dust,
and he our frame well knows.
15 Frail man, his days are like the grass, as flow'r in field he grows:

16 For over it the wind doth pass,
and it away is gone;
And of the place where once it was
it shall no more be known.
17 But unto them that do him fear
God's mercy never ends;
And to their children's children still his righteousness extends:

18 To such as keep his covenant,
and mindful are alway
Of his most just commandements,
that they may them obey.
19 The Lord prepared hath his throne
in heavens firm to stand;
And ev'ry thing that being hath his kingdom doth command.

20 O ye his angels, that excel in strength, bless ye the Lord;
Ye who obey what he commands,
and hearken to his word.
21 O bless and magnify the Lord,
ye glorious hosts of his;
Ye ministers, that do fulfil whate'er his pleasure is.

22 O bless the Lord, all ye his works, wherewith the world is stor'd
In his dominions ev'ry where.
My soul, bless thou the Lord.

PSALM CIV.

1 BLESS God, my soul. O Lord my God, thou art exceeding great;
With honour and with majesty
thou clothed art in state.
2 With light, as with a robe, thyself thou coverest about;
And, like unto a curtain, thou
the heavens stretchest out.

3 Who of his chambers doth the beams within the waters lay;
Who doth the clouds his chariot make,
on wings of wind make way.
4 Who flaming fire his ministers, his angels sp'rits, doth make.
5 Who earth's foundations did lay,
that it should never shake.

6 Thou didst it cover with the deep,
as with a garment spread:
The waters stood above the hills,
when thou the word but said.
7 But at the voice of thy rebuke
they fled, and would not stay;
They at thy thunder's dreadful voice did haste them fast away.

8 They by the mountains do ascend, and by the valley-ground Descend, unto that very place which thou for them didst found.
9 Thou hast a bound unto them set,
that they may not pass over,
That they do not return again
the face of earth to cover.

10 He to the valleys sends the springs, which run among the hills:
11 They to all beasts of field give drink, wild asses drink their fills.
12 By them the fowls of heav'n shall have
their habitation,
Which do among the branches sing with delectation.

13 He from his chambers watereth
the hills, when they are dry'd:
With fruit and increase of thy works
the earth is satisfy'd.
14 For cattle he makes grass to grow,
he makes the herb to spring
For th' use of man, that food to him he from the earth may bring;

15 And wine, that to the heart of man
doth cheerfulness impart, Oil that his face makes shine, and bread that strengtheneth his heart.
16 The trees of God are full of sap;
the cedars that do stand
In Lebanon, which planted were
by his almighty hand.

17 Birds of the air upon their boughs do chuse their nests to make;
As for the stork, the fir-tree she doth for her dwelling take.
18 The lofty mountains for wild goats
a place of refuge be;
The conies also to the rocks
do for their safety flee.

19 He sets the moon in heav'n, thereby the seasons to discern:
From him the sun his certain time
of going down doth learn.
20 Thou darkness mak'st, 'tis night, then of forests creep abroad. [beasts 21 The lions young roar for their prey, and seek their meat from God.

22 The sun doth rise, and home they flock, down in their dens they lie.
23 Man goes to work, his labour he doth to the ev'ning ply.
24 How manifold, Lord, are thy works!
in wisdom wonderful Thou ev'ry one of them hast made;
earth's of thy riches full:

25 So is this great and spacious sea, wherein things creeping are,
Which number'd cannot be; and beasts
both great and small are there.
26 There ships go; there thou mak'st to that leviathan great. [play 27 These all wait on thee, that thou may'st in due time give them meat.

28 That which thou givest unto them
they gather for their food;
Thine hand thou open'st lib'rally,
they filled are with good.
29 Thou hid'st thy face; they troubled are,
their breath thou tak'st away;
Then do they die, and to their dust return again do they.

30 Thy quick'ning spirit thou send'st forth, then they created be;
And then the earth's decayed face renewed is by thee.
31 The glory of the mighty Lord continue shall for ever:
The Lord JEHOVAH shall rejoice
in all his works together.

32 Earth, as affrighted, trembleth all,
if he on it but look;
And if the mountains he but touch,
they presently do smoke.
33 I will sing to the Lord most high,
so long as I shall live;
And while I being have I shall to my God praises give.

34 Of him my meditation shall sweet thoughts to me afford;
And as for me, I will rejoice in God, my only Lord.
35 From earth let sinners be consum'd, let ill men no more be.
O thou my soul, bless thou the Lord.
Praise to the Lord give ye.

PSALM CV.

1 GIVE thanks to God, call on his name;
to men his deeds make known.
2 Sing ye to him, sing psalms; proclaim his wondrous works each one.
3 See that ye in his holy name to glory do accord;
And let the heart of ev'ry one rejoice that seeks the Lord.

4 The Lord Almighty, and his strength, with stedfast hearts seek ye:
His blessed and his gracious face seek ye continually.
5 Think on the works that he hath done,
which admiration breed;
His wonders, and the judgments all which from his mouth proceed;

6 O ye that are of Abr'ham's race,
his servant well approv'n;
And ye that Jacob's children are,
whom he chose for his own.
7 Because he, and he only, is the mighty Lord our God;
And his most righteous judgments are in all the earth abroad.

8 His cov'nant he remember'd hath,
that it may ever stand:
To thousand generations
the word he did command.
9 Which covenant he firmly made with faithful Abraham,
And unto Isaac, by his oath,
he did renew the same:

10 And unto Jacob, for a law,
he made it firm and sure,
A covenant to Israel,
which ever should endure.

11 He said, I'll give Canaan's land for heritage to you; 12 While they were strangers there, and in number very few: [few,

13 While yet they went from land to land without a sure abode;
And while through sundry kingdoms they did wander far abroad;
14 Yet, notwithstanding, suffer'd he no man to do them wrong;
Yea, for their sakes, he did reprove kings, who were great and strong.

15 Thus did he say, Touch ye not those that mine anointed be,
Nor do the prophets any harm
that do pertain to me.
16 He call'd for famine on the land,
he brake the staff of bread:
17 But yet he sent a man before,
by whom they should be fed;

Ev'n Joseph, whom unnat'rally sell for a slave did they;
18 Whose feet with fetters they did hurt,
and he in irons lay;
19 Until the time that his word came to give him liberty;
The word and purpose of the Lord
did him in prison try.

20 Then sent the king, and did command that he enlarg'd should be:
He that the people's ruler was did send to set him free.
21 A lord to rule his family
he rais'd him, as most fit;
To him of all that he possess'd
he did the charge commit:

22 That he might at his pleasure bind
the princes of the land;
And he might teach his senators wisdom to understand.
23 The people then of Israel down into Egypt came;
And Jacob also sojourned
within the land of Ham.

24 And he did greatly by his pow'r increase his people there;
And stronger than their enemies
they by his blessing were.
25 Their heart he turned to envy
his folk maliciously,
With those that his own servants were to deal in subtilty.

26 His servant Moses he did send,
Aaron his chosen one.
27 By these his signs and wonders great in Ham's land were made known.
28 Darkness he sent, and made it dark;
his word they did obey.
29 He turn'd their waters into blood, and he their fish did slay.

30 The land in plenty brought forth frogs in chambers of their kings.
31 His word all sorts of flies and lice in all their borders brings.
32 He hail for rain, and flaming fire into their land he sent:
33 And he their vines and fig-trees smote;
trees of their coast he rent.

34 He spake, and caterpillars came,
locusts did much abound;
35 Which in their land all herbs consum'd, and all fruits of their ground.
36 He smote all first-born in their land,
chief of their strength each one.
37 With gold and silver brought them forth, weak in their tribes were none.

38 Egypt was glad when forth they went,
their fear on them did light.
39 He spread a cloud for covering,
and fire to shine by night.
40 They ask'd, and he brought quails:
with bread
of heav'n he filled them.
41 He open'd rocks, floods gush'd, and ran in deserts like a stream.

42 For on his holy promise he,
and servant Abr'ham, thought.
43 With joy his people, his elect with gladness, forth he brought.
44 And unto them the pleasant lands
he of the heathen gave;
That of the people's labour they inheritance might have.

45 That they his statutes might observe according to his word;
And that they might his laws obey.
Give praise unto the Lord.

PSALM CVI.

1 GIVE praise and thanks unto the Lord,
for bountiful is he;
His tender mercy doth endure
unto eternity.
2 God's mighty works who can express?
or shew forth all his praise?
3 Blessed are they that judgment keep,
and justly do always.

4 Remember me, Lord, with that love which thou to thine dost bear;
With thy salvation, O my God,
to visit me draw near:
5 That I thy chosen's good may see,
and in their joy rejoice;
And may with thine inheritance triumph with cheerful voice.

6 We with our fathers sinned have,
and of iniquity
Too long we have the workers been:
we have done wickedly.
7 The wonders great, which thou, O Lord,
didst work in Egypt land,
Our fathers, though they saw, yet them
they did not understand:

And they thy mercies' multitude kept not in memory;
But at the sea, ev'n the Red sea,
provok'd him grievously.
8 Nevertheless he saved them,
ev'n for his own name's sake;
That so he might to be well known his mighty power make.

9 When he the Red sea did rebuke, then dried up it was:
Through depths, as through the wilder-
he safely made them pass. [ness, 10 From hands of those that hated them
he did his people save;
And from the en'my's cruel hand to them redemption gave.

11 The waters overwhelm'd their foes;
not one was left alive.
12 Then they believ'd his word, and praise to him in songs did give.
13 But soon did they his mighty works forget unthankfully,
And on his counsel and his will
did not wait patiently;

14 But much did lust in wilderness,
and God in desert tempt.
15 He gave them what they sought, but to their soul he leanness sent.
16 And against Moses in the camp their envy did appear;
At Aaron they, the saint of God, envious also were.

17 Therefore the earth did open wide,
And Dathan did devour,
And all Abiram's company
did cover in that hour.
18 Likewise among their company a fire was kindled then;
And so the hot consuming flame burnt up these wicked men.

19 Upon the hill of Horeb they an idol-calf did frame,
A molten image they did make,
and worshipped the same.
20 And thus their glory, and their God, most vainly changed they Into the likeness of an ox that eateth grass or hay.

21 They did forget the mighty God, that had their saviour been,
By whom such great things brought to they had in Egypt seen. [pass 22 In Ham's land he did wondrous works, things terrible did he,
When he his mighty hand and arm stretch'd out at the Red sea.

23 Then said he, He would them destroy,
had not, his wrath to stay,
His chosen Moses stood in breach,
that them he should not slay.
24 Yea, they despis'd the pleasant land, believed not his word:
25 But in their tents they murmured, not heark'ning to the Lord.

26 Therefore in desert them to slay
he lifted up his hand:
27 'Mong nations to o'erthrow their seed,
and scatter in each land.
28 They unto Baal-peor did themselves associate;
The sacrifices of the dead
they did profanely eat.

29 Thus, by their lewd inventions,
they did provoke his ire;
And then upon them suddenly the plague brake in as fire.
30 Then Phin'has rose, and justice did,
and so the plague did cease;
31 That to all ages counted was to him for righteousness.

32 And at the waters, where they strove,
they did him angry make,
In such sort, that it fared ill
with Moses for their sake:
33 Because they there his spirit meek provoked bitterly,
So that he utter'd with his lips words unadvisedly.

34 Nor, as the Lord commanded them,
did they the nations slay:
35 But with the heathen mingled were,
and learn'd of them their way.
36 And they their idols serv'd, which did a snare unto them turn.
37 Their sons and daughters they to dev'ls in sacrifice did burn.

38 In their own children's guiltless blood their hands they did imbrue, Whom to Canaan's idols they
for sacrifices slew:
So was the land defil'd with blood.
39 They stain'd with their own way,
And with their own inventions
a whoring they did stray.

40 Against his people kindled was the wrath of God therefore, Insomuch that he did his own inheritance abhor.
41 He gave them to the heathen's hand;
their foes did them command.
42 Their en'mies them oppress'd, they were made subject to their hand.

43 He many times deliver'd them;
but with their counsel so They him provok'd, that for their sin
they were brought very low.
44 Yet their affliction he beheld,
when he did hear their cry:
45 And he for them his covenant
did call to memory;

After his mercies' multitude 46 he did repent: And made Them to be pitied of all those who did them captive lead.
47 O Lord our God, us save, and gather the heathen from among,
That we thy holy name may praise
in a triumphant song.

48 Bless'd be JEHOVAH, Isr'el's God,
to all eternity:
Let all the people say, Amen.
Praise to the Lord give ye.

PSALM CVII.

1 PRAISE God, for he is good: for still his mercies lasting be.
2 Let God's redeem'd say so, whom he from th' en'my's hand did free;

3 And gather'd them out of the lands, from north, south, east, and west.
4 They stray'd in desert's pathless way,
no city found to rest.

5 For thirst and hunger in them faints
6 their soul. When straits them press,
They cry unto the Lord, and he them frees from their distress.
7 Them also in a way to walk that right is he did guide,
That they might to a city go,
wherein they might abide.

8 O that men to the Lord would give praise for his goodness then,
And for his works of wonder done
unto the sons of men!
9 For he the soul that longing is doth fully satisfy;
With goodness he the hungry soul
doth fill abundantly.

10 Such as shut up in darkness deep,
and in death's shade abide,
Whom strongly hath affliction bound,
and irons fast have ty'd:
11 Because against the words of God
they wrought rebelliously,
And they the counsel did contemn
of him that is most High:

12 Their heart he did bring down with grief, they fell, no help could have.
13 In trouble then they cry'd to God,
he them from straits did save.
14 He out of darkness did them bring,
and from death's shade them take;
These bands, wherewith they had been asunder quite he brake. [bound

15 O that men to the Lord would give
praise for his goodness then,
And for his works of wonder done
unto the sons of men!
16 Because the mighty gates of brass in pieces he did tear,
By him in sunder also cut the bars of iron were.

17 Fools, for their sin, and their offence,
do sore affliction bear;
18 All kind of meat their soul abhors:
they to death's gates draw near.
19 In grief they cry to God; he saves them from their miseries.
20 He sends his word, them heals, and them from their destruction frees.

21 O that men to the Lord would give
praise for his goodness then,
And for his works of wonder done
unto the sons of men!
22 And let them sacrifice to him
off'rings of thankfulness;
And let them shew abroad his works
in songs of joyfulness.

23 Who go to sea in ships, and in great waters trading be, 24 Within the deep these men God's works and his great wonders see.
25 For he commands, and forth in haste
the stormy tempest flies, Which makes the sea with rolling waves aloft to swell and rise.

26 They mount to heav'n, then to the depths
they do go down again;
Their soul doth faint and melt away with trouble and with pain.
27 They reel and stagger like one drunk, at their wit's end they be:
28 Then they to God in trouble cry, who them from straits doth free.

29 The storm is chang'd into a calm at his command and will;
So that the waves, which rag'd before,
now quiet are and still.
30 Then are they glad, because at rest and quiet now they be:
So to the haven he them brings,
which they desir'd to see.

31 O that men to the Lord would give
praise for his goodness then,
And for his works of wonder done
unto the sons of men!
32 Among the people gathered
let them exalt his name; Among assembled elders spread his most renowned fame.

33 He to dry land turns water-springs,
and floods to wilderness;
34 For sins of those that dwell therein,
fat land to barrenness.
35 The burnt and parched wilderness to water-pools he brings;
The ground that was dry'd up before
he turns to water-springs:

36 And there, for dwelling, he a place doth to the hungry give,
That they a city may prepare commodiously to live.
37 There sow they fields and vineyards to yield fruits of increase. [plant, 38 His blessing makes them multiply, lets not their beasts decrease.

39 Again they are diminished, and very low brought down,
Through sorrow and affliction,
and great oppression.
40 He upon princes pours contempt,
and causeth them to stray,
And wander in a wilderness,
wherein there is no way.

41 Yet setteth he the poor on high from all his miseries,
And he, much like unto a flock,
doth make him families.
42 They that are righteous shall rejoice, when they the same shall see;
And, as ashamed, stop their mouth shall all iniquity.

43 Whoso is wise, and will these things observe, and them record, Ev'n they shall understand the love and kindness of the Lord.

PSALM CVIII.

1 MY heart is fix'd, Lord; I will sing,
and with my glory praise.
2 Awake up psaltery and harp;
myself I'll early raise.
3 I'll praise thee 'mong the people, Lord;
'mong nations sing will I:
4 For above heav'n thy mercy's great,
thy truth doth reach the sky.

5 Be thou above the heavens, Lord, exalted gloriously;
Thy glory all the earth above
be lifted up on high.
6 That those who thy beloved are delivered may be,
O do thou save with thy right hand,
and answer give to me.

7 God in his holiness hath said,
Herein I will take pleasure;
Shechem I will divide, and forth
will Succoth's valley measure.
8 Gilead I claim as mine by right;
Manasseh mine shall be;
Ephraim is of my head the strength;
Judah gives laws for me;

9 Moab's my washing-pot; my shoe
I'll over Edom throw;
Over the land of Palestine
I will in triumph go.
10 O who is he will bring me to
the city fortify'd?
O who is he that to the land
of Edom will me guide?

11 O God, thou who hadst cast us off,
this thing wilt thou not do?
And wilt not thou, ev'n thou, O God,
forth with our armies go?
12 Do thou from trouble give us help,
for helpless is man's aid.
13 Through God we shall do valiantly;
our foes he shall down tread.

PSALM CIX.

1 O THOU the God of all my praise,
do thou not hold thy peace;
2 For mouths of wicked men to speak against me do not cease:
The mouths of vile deceitful men against me open'd be;
And with a false and lying tongue
they have accused me.

3 They did beset me round about with words of hateful spight,
And though to them no cause I gave,
against me they did fight.
4 They for my love became my foes,
but I me set to pray.
5 Evil for good, hatred for love,
to me they did repay.

6 Set thou the wicked over him;
and upon his right hand Give thou his greatest enemy, ev'n Satan, leave to stand.
7 And when by thee he shall be judg'd, let him condemned be;
And let his pray'r be turn'd to sin,
when he shall call on thee.

8 Few be his days, and in his room his charge another take.
9 His children let be fatherless, his wife a widow make.
10 His children let be vagabonds,
and beg continually;
And from their places desolate seek bread for their supply.

11 Let covetous extortioners catch all he hath away:
Of all for which he labour'd hath let strangers make a prey.
12 Let there be none to pity him, let there be none at all That on his children fatherless will let his mercy fall.

13 Let his posterity from earth cut off for ever be,
And in the foll'wing age their name
be blotted out by thee.
14 Let God his father's wickedness still to remembrance call;
And never let his mother's sin be blotted out at all.

15 But let them all before the Lord appear continually,
That he may wholly from the earth
cut off their memory.
16 Because he mercy minded not,
but persecuted still
The poor and needy, that he might the broken-hearted kill.

17 As he in cursing pleasure took,
so let it to him fall;
As he delighted not to bless,
so bless him not at all.
18 As cursing he like clothes put on,
into his bowels so,
Like water, and into his bones,
like oil, down let it go.

19 Like to the garment let it be which doth himself array,
And for a girdle, wherewith he is girt about alway.
20 From God let this be their reward
that en'mies are to me,
And their reward that speak against my soul maliciously.

21 But do thou, for thine own name's sake,
O God the Lord, for me:
Sith good and sweet thy mercy is,
from trouble set me free.
22 For I am poor and indigent, afflicted sore am I,
My heart within me also is wounded exceedingly.

23 I pass like a declining shade,
am like the locust tost:
24 My knees through fasting weaken'd are,
my flesh hath fatness lost.
25 I also am a vile reproach unto them made to be;
And they that did upon me look did shake their heads at me.

26 O do thou help and succour me,
who art my God and Lord:

And, for thy tender mercy's sake,
safety to me afford:
27 That thereby they may know that this is thy almighty hand;
And that thou, Lord, hast done the they may well understand. [same,

28 Although they curse with spite, yet, bless thou with loving voice: [Lord,
Let them asham'd be when they rise;
thy servant let rejoice.
29 Let thou mine adversaries all with shame be clothed over;
And let their own confusion them, as a mantle, cover.

30 But as for me, I with my mouth will greatly praise the Lord;
And I among the multitude his praises will record.
31 For he shall stand at his right hand who is in poverty,
To save him from all those that would condemn his soul to die.

PSALM CX.

1 THE LORD did say unto my Lord,
Sit thou at my right hand,
Until I make thy foes a stool, whereon thy feet may stand.
2 The Lord shall out of Sion send the rod of thy great pow'r:
In midst of all thine enemies be thou the governor.

3 A willing people in thy day of pow'r shall come to thee,
In holy beauties from morn's womb;
thy youth like dew shall be.
4 The Lord himself hath made an oath, and will repent him never,
Of th' order of Melchisedec thou art a priest for ever.

5 The glorious and mighty Lord, that sits at thy right hand, Shall, in his day of wrath, strike through kings that do him withstand.
6 He shall among the heathen judge,
he shall with bodies dead
The places fill: o'er many lands
he wound shall ev'ry head.

7 The brook that runneth in the way with drink shall him supply;
And, for this cause, in triumph he shall lift his head on high.

PSALM CXI.

1 PRAISE ye the Lord: with my whole heart
I will God's praise declare, Where the assemblies of the just and congregations are.
2 The whole works of the Lord our God are great above all measure, Sought out they are of ev'ry one that doth therein take pleasure.

3 His work most honourable is,
most glorious and pure,
And his untainted righteousness for ever doth endure.
4 His works most wonderful he hath made to be thought upon:
The Lord is gracious, and he is full of compassion.

5 He giveth meat unto all those that truly do him fear;
And evermore his covenant
he in his mind will bear.
6 He did the power of his works unto his people shew,
When he the heathen's heritage upon them did bestow.

7 His handy-works are truth and right;
all his commands are sure:
8 And, done in truth and uprightness,
they evermore endure.
9 He sent redemption to his folk;
his covenant for aye
He did command; holy his name and rev'rend is alway.
10 Wisdom's beginning is God's fear:
good understanding they Have all that his commands fulfil:
his praise endures for aye.

PSALM CXII.

1 PRAISE ye the Lord. The man is bless'd that fears the Lord aright,
He who in his commandements
doth greatly take delight.
2 His seed and offspring powerful shall be the earth upon:
Of upright men blessed shall be the generation.

3 Riches and wealth shall ever be within his house in store;
And his unspotted righteousness endures for evermore.
4 Unto the upright light doth rise, though he in darkness be:
Compassionate, and merciful, and righteous, is he.

5 A good man doth his favour shew,
and doth to others lend:
He with discretion his affairs will guide unto the end.
6 Surely there is not any thing that ever shall him move:
The righteous man's memorial shall everlasting prove.

7 When he shall evil tidings hear,
he shall not be afraid:
His heart is fix'd, his confidence
upon the Lord is stay'd.
8 His heart is firmly stablished, afraid he shall not be,
Until upon his enemies
he his desire shall see.

9 He hath dispers'd, giv'n to the poor;
his righteousness shall be To ages all; with honour shall his horn be raised high.
10 The wicked shall it see, and fret,
his teeth gnash, melt away:
What wicked men do most desire shall utterly decay.

PSALM CXIII.

1 PRAISE God: ye servants of the Lord,
O praise, the Lord's name praise.
2 Yea, blessed be the name of God from this time forth always.
3 From rising sun to where it sets,
God's name is to be prais'd.
4 Above all nations God is high,
'bove heav'ns his glory rais'd.

5 Unto the Lord our God that dwells on high, who can compare?
6 Himself that humbleth things to see in heav'n and earth that are.
7 He from the dust doth raise the poor,
that very low doth lie;
And from the dunghill lifts the man
oppress'd with poverty;

8 That he may highly him advance, and with the princes set;
With those that of his people are the chief, ev'n princes great.
9 The barren woman house to keep he maketh, and to be
Of sons a mother full of joy.
Praise to the Lord give ye.

PSALM CXIV.

1 WHEN Isr'el out of Egypt went,
and did his dwelling change, When Jacob's house went out from those that were of language strange, 2 He Judah did his sanctuary, his kingdom Isr'el make:
3 The sea it saw, and quickly fled,
Jordan was driven back.

4 Like rams the mountains, and like lambs
the hills skipp'd to and fro.
5 O sea, why fled'st thou? Jordan, back why wast thou driven so?
6 Ye mountains great, wherefore was it that ye did skip like rams?
And wherefore was it, little hills,
that ye did leap like lambs?

7 O at the presence of the Lord,
earth, tremble thou for fear, While as the presence of the God of Jacob doth appear:
8 Who from the hard and stony rock
did standing water bring;
And by his pow'r did turn the flint into a water-spring.

PSALM CXV.

1 NOT unto us, Lord, not to us, but do thou glory take Unto thy name, ev'n for thy truth,
and for thy mercy's sake.
2 O wherefore should the heathen say,
Where is their God now gone?
3 But our God in the heavens is,
what pleas'd him he hath done.

4 Their idols silver are and gold, work of men's hands they be.
5 Mouths have they, but they do not
and eyes, but do not see; [speak; 6 Ears have they, but they do not hear;
noses, but savour not;
7 Hands, feet, but handle not, nor walk;
nor speak they through their throat.

8 Like them their makers are, and all on them their trust that build.
9 O Isr'el, trust thou in the Lord,
he is their help and shield.
10 O Aaron's house, trust in the Lord, their help and shield is he.
11 Ye that fear God, trust in the Lord, their help and shield he'll be.

12 The Lord of us hath mindful been,
and he will bless us still:
He will the house of Isr'el bless, bless Aaron's house he will.
13 Both small and great, that fear the Lord,
he will them surely bless.
14 The Lord will you, you and your seed, aye more and more increase.

15 O blessed are ye of the Lord, who made the earth and heav'n.
16 The heav'n, ev'n heav'ns, are God's, but earth to men's sons hath giv'n. [he 17 The dead, nor who to silence go,
God's praise do not record.
18 But henceforth we for ever will bless God. Praise ye the Lord.

PSALM CXVI.

1 I LOVE the Lord, because my voice
and prayers he did hear.
2 I, while I live, will call on him,
who bow'd to me his ear.
3 Of death the cords and sorrows did about me compass round;
The pains of hell took hold on me,
I grief and trouble found.

4 Upon the name of God the Lord
then did I call, and say, Deliver thou my soul, O Lord,
I do thee humbly pray.
5 God merciful and righteous is,
yea, gracious is our Lord.
6 God saves the meek: I was brought low,
he did me help afford.

7 O thou my soul, do thou return unto thy quiet rest;
For largely, lo, the Lord to thee
his bounty hath exprest.
8 For my distressed soul from death
deliver'd was by thee:
Thou didst my mourning eyes from my feet from falling, free. [tears,

9 I in the land of those that live will walk the Lord before.
10 I did believe, therefore I spake:
I was afflicted sore.
11 I said, when I was in my haste, that all men liars be.
12 What shall I render to the Lord for all his gifts to me?

Digitized by Google

13 I'll of salvation take the cup, on God's name will I call:
14 I'll pay my vows now to the Lord
before his people all.
15 Dear in God's sight is his saints' death.
16 Thy servant, Lord, am I;
Thy servant sure, thine handmaid's son:
my bands thou didst untie.

17 Thank-off'rings I to thee will give,
and on God's name will call.
18 I'll pay my vows now to the Lord
before his people all;
19 Within the courts of God's own house,
within the midst of thee,
O city of Jerusalem.
Praise to the Lord give ye.

PSALM CXVII.

1 O GIVE ye praise unto the Lord,
all nations that be;
Likewise, ye people all, accord
his name to magnify.
2 For great to us-ward ever are his loving-kindnesses:
His truth endures for evermore.
The Lord O do ye bless.

PSALM CXVIII.

1 O PRAISE the Lord, for he is good;
his mercy lasteth ever.
2 Let those of Israel now say,
His mercy faileth never.
3 Now let the house of Aaron say,
His mercy lasteth ever.
4 Let those that fear the Lord now say,
His mercy faileth never.

5 I in distress call'd on the Lord;
the Lord did answer me:
He in a large place did me set,
from trouble made me free.
6 The mighty Lord is on my side,
I will not be afraid;
For any thing that man can do
I shall not be dismay'd.

7 The Lord doth take my part with them that help to succour me:
Therefore on those that do me hate
I my desire shall see.
8 Better it is to trust in God than trust in man's defence; 9 Better to trust in God than make princes our confidence.

10 The nations, joining all in one,
did compass me about:
But in the Lord's most holy name
I shall them all root out.
11 They compass'd me about; I say,
they compass'd me about:
But in the Lord's most holy name
I shall them all root out.

12 Like bees they compass'd me about;
like unto thorns that flame
They quenched are: for them shall I destroy in God's own name.
13 Thou sore hast thrust, that I might fall, but my Lord helped me.
14 God my salvation is become,
my strength and song is he.

15 In dwellings of the righteous is heard the melody
Of joy and health: the Lord's right hand
doth ever valiantly.
16 The right hand of the mighty Lord
exalted is on high;
The right hand of the mighty Lord
doth ever valiantly.

17 I shall not die, but live, and shall the works of God discover.
18 The Lord hath me chastised sore, but not to death giv'n over.
19 O set ye open unto me
the gates of righteousness;
Then will I enter into them,
and I the Lord will bless.

20 This is the gate of God, by it
the just shall enter in.
21 Thee will I praise, for thou me heard'st, and hast my safety been.
22 That stone is made head corner-stone, which builders did despise:
23 This is the doing of the Lord,
and wondrous in our eyes.

24 This is the day God made, in it we'll joy triumphantly.
25 Save now, I pray thee, Lord; I pray, send now prosperity.
26 Blessed is he in God's great name that cometh us to save:
We, from the house which to the Lord pertains, you blessed have.

27 God is the Lord, who unto us hath made light to arise:
Bind ye unto the altar's horns with cords the sacrifice.
28 Thou art my God, I'll thee exalt;
my God, I will thee praise.
29 Give thanks to God, for he is good:
his mercy lasts always.

PSALM CXIX.

Aleph. The 1st Part.

1 BLESSED are they that undefil'd,
and straight are in the way;
Who in the Lord's most holy law
do walk, and do not stray.
2 Blessed are they who to observe his statutes are inclin'd;
And who do seek the living God with their whole heart and mind.

3 Such in his ways do walk, and they do no iniquity.
4 Thou hast commanded us to keep thy precepts carefully.
5 O that thy statutes to observe thou would'st my ways direct!
6 Then shall I not be sham'd, when I thy precepts all respect.

7 Then with integrity of heart thee will I praise and bless,
When I the judgments all have learn'd of thy pure righteousness.
8 That I will keep thy statutes all firmly resolved have I:
O do not then, most gracious God, forsake me utterly.

Beth. The 2d Part.

9 By what means shall a young man learn his way to purify?
If he according to thy word thereto attentive be.
10 Unfeignedly thee have I sought with all my soul and heart:
O let me not from the right path of thy commands depart.

11 Thy word I in my heart have hid,
that I offend not thee.
12 O Lord, thou ever blessed art, thy statutes teach thou me.
13 The judgments of thy mouth each one my lips declared have:
14 More joy thy testimonies' way than riches all me gave.

15 I will thy holy precepts make my meditation;
And carefully I'll have respect unto thy ways each one.
16 Upon thy statutes my delight shall constantly be set:
And, by thy grace, I never will thy holy word forget.

Gimel. The 3d Part.

17 With me thy servant, in thy grace, deal bountifully, Lord;
That by thy favour I may live,
and duly keep thy word.
18 Open mine eyes, that of thy law
the wonders I may see.
19 I am a stranger on this earth, hide not thy laws from me.

20 My soul within me breaks, and doth much fainting still endure, Through longing that it hath all times unto thy judgments pure.
21 Thou hast rebuk'd the cursed proud, who from thy precepts swerve.
22 Reproach and shame remove from me,
for I thy laws observe.
23 Against me princes spake with spite,
while they in council sat:
But I thy servant did upon thy statutes meditate.
24 My comfort, and my heart's delight, thy testimonies be;
And they, in all my doubts and fears,
are counsellors to me.

Daleth. The 4th Part.

25 My soul to dust cleaves: quicken me,
according to thy word.
26 My ways I shew'd, and me thou heard'st:
teach me thy statutes, Lord.
27 The way of thy commandements make me aright to know;
So all thy works that wondrous are
I shall to others shew.

28 My soul doth melt, and drop away,
for heaviness and grief:
To me, according to thy word,
give strength, and send relief.
29 From me the wicked way of lies let far removed be;
And graciously thy holy law
do thou grant unto me.

30 I chosen have the perfect way
of truth and verity:
Thy judgments that most righteous are before me laid have I.
31 I to thy testimonies cleave;
shame do not on me cast.
32 I'll run thy precepts' way, when thou my heart enlarged hast.

He. The 5th Part.

33 Teach me, O Lord, the perfect way of thy precepts divine,
And to observe it to the end
I shall my heart incline.
34 Give understanding unto me,
so keep thy law shall I; Yea, ev'n with my whole heart I shall observe it carefully.

35 In thy law's path make me to go;
for I delight therein.
36 My heart unto thy testimonies, and not to greed, incline.
37 Turn thou away my sight and eyes from viewing vanity;
And in thy good and holy way
be pleas'd to quicken me.

38 Confirm to me thy gracious word, which I did gladly hear, Ev'n to thy servant, Lord, who is devoted to thy fear.
39 Turn thou away my fear'd reproach;
for good thy judgments be.
40 Lo, for thy precepts I have long'd;
in thy truth quicken me.

Vau. The 6th Part.

41 Let thy sweet mercies also come and visit me, O Lord;
Ev'n thy benign salvation,
according to thy word.
42 So shall I have wherewith I may give him an answer just,
Who spitefully reproacheth me;
for in thy word I trust.

43 The word of truth out of my mouth take thou not utterly;
For on thy judgments righteous
my hope doth still rely.
44 So shall I keep for evermore thy law continually.
45 And, sith that I thy precepts seek,
I'll walk at liberty.

46 I'll speak thy word to kings, and I with shame shall not be mov'd; 47 And will delight myself always in thy laws, which I lov'd.
48 To thy commandments, which I lov'd, my hands lift up I will;
And I will also meditate upon thy statutes still.

Zain. The 7th Part.

49 Remember, Lord, thy gracious word thou to thy servant spake,

Digitized by Google

Which, for a ground of my sure hope, thou causedst me to take.
50 This word of thine my comfort is in mine affliction:
For in my straits I am reviv'd
by this thy word alone.

51 The men whose hearts with pride are did greatly me deride; [stuff'd
Yet from thy straight commandements
I have not turn'd aside.
52 Thy judgments righteous, O Lord, which thou of old forth gave,
I did remember, and myself
by them comforted have.

53 Horror took hold on me, because ill men thy law forsake.
54 I in my house of pilgrimage thy laws my songs do make.
55 Thy name by night, Lord, I did mind,
and I have kept thy law.
56 And this I had, because thy word
I kept, and stood in awe.

CHETH. The 8th Part.

57 Thou my sure portion art alone,
which I did choose, O Lord:
I have resolv'd, and said, that I would keep thy holy word.
58 With my whole heart I did entreat thy face and favour free:
According to thy gracious word
be merciful to me.

59 I thought upon my former ways,
and did my life well try;
And to thy testimonies pure
my feet then turned I.
60 I did not stay, nor linger long,
as those that slothful are;
But hastily thy laws to keep myself I did prepare.

61 Bands of ill men me robb'd; yet I thy precepts did not slight.
62 I'll rise at midnight thee to praise,
ev'n for thy judgments right.
63 I am companion to all those who fear, and thee obey.
64 O Lord, thy mercy fills the earth:
teach me thy laws, I pray.

TETH. The 9th Part.

65 Well hast thou with thy servant dealt,
as thou didst promise give.
66 Good judgment me, and knowledge for I thy word believe. [teach, 67 Ere I afflicted was I stray'd;
but now I keep thy word.
68 Both good thou art, and good thou dost:
teach me thy statutes, Lord.

69 The men that are puff'd up with pride against me forg'd a lie;
Yet thy commandements observe with my whole heart will I.
70 Their hearts, through worldly ease and as fat as grease they be: [wealth,
But in thy holy law I take delight continually.

71 It hath been very good for me that I afflicted was,
That I might well instructed be,
and learn thy holy laws.
72 The word that cometh from thy mouth is better unto me
Than many thousands and great sums of gold and silver be.

JOD. The 10th Part.

73 Thou mad'st and fashion'dst me: thy to know give wisdom, Lord. [laws 74 So who thee fear shall joy to see me trusting in thy word.
75 That very right thy judgments are
I know, and do confess;
And that thou hast afflicted me
in truth and faithfulness.

76 O let thy kindness merciful,
I pray thee, comfort me,
As to thy servant faithfully was promised by thee.

77 And let thy tender mercies come to me, that I may live; Because thy holy laws to me
sweet delectation give.

78 Lord, let the proud ashamed be;
for they, without a cause,
With me perversely dealt: but I will muse upon thy laws.
79 Let such as fear thee, and have known thy statutes, turn to me.
80 My heart let in thy laws be sound, that sham'd I never be.

CAPH. The 11th Part.

81 My soul for thy salvation faints;
yet I thy word believe.
82 Mine eyes fail for thy word: I say,
When wilt thou comfort give?
83 For like a bottle I'm become,
that in the smoke is set:
I'm black, and parch'd with grief; yet I thy statutes not forget.

84 How many are thy servant's days?
when wilt thou execute Just judgment on these wicked men that do me persecute?
85 The proud have digged pits for me,
which is against thy laws.
86 Thy words all faithful are: help me, pursu'd without a cause.

87 They so consum'd me, that on earth
my life they scarce did leave:
Thy precepts yet forsook I not,
but close to them did cleave.
88 After thy loving-kindness, Lord,
me quicken, and preserve:
The testimony of thy mouth
so shall I still observe.

LAMED. The 12th Part.

89 Thy word for ever is, O Lord,
in heaven settled fast;
90 Unto all generations thy faithfulness doth last:
The earth thou hast established,
and it abides by thee.
91 This day they stand as thou ordain'dst;
for all thy servants be.

92 Unless in thy most perfect law
my soul delights had found,
I should have perished, when as my troubles did abound.
93 Thy precepts I will ne'er forget;
they quick'ning to me brought.
94 Lord, I am thine; O save thou me:
thy precepts I have sought.

95 For me the wicked have laid wait, me seeking to destroy:
But I thy testimonies true
consider will with joy.
96 An end of all perfection
here have I seen, O God:
But as for thy commandement, it is exceeding broad.

MEM. The 13th Part.

97 O how love I thy law! it is my study all the day:
98 It makes me wiser than my foes;
for it doth with me stay.
99 Than all my teachers now I have more understanding far;
Because my meditation thy testimonies are.

100 In understanding I excel
those that are ancients;
For I endeavoured to keep all thy commandements.
101 My feet from each ill way I stay'd, that I may keep thy word.
102 I from thy judgments have not swerv'd:
for thou hast taught me, Lord.

103 How sweet unto my taste, O Lord, are all thy words of truth!
Yea, I do find them sweeter far than honey to my mouth.
104 I through thy precepts, that are pure,
do understanding get;
I therefore ev'ry way that's false with all my heart do hate.

NUN. The 14th Part.

105 Thy word is to my feet a lamp,
and to my path a light.
106 I sworn have, and I will perform, to keep thy judgments right.
107 I am with sore affliction
ev'n overwhelm'd, O Lord:
In mercy raise and quicken me,
according to thy word.

108 The free-will-off'rings of my mouth accept, I thee beseech:
And unto me thy servant, Lord,
thy judgments clearly teach.
109 Though still my soul be in my hand,
thy laws I'll not forget.
110 I err'd not from them, though for me
the wicked snares did set.

111 I of thy testimonies have above all things made choice,
To be my heritage for aye;
for they my heart rejoice.
112 I carefully inclined have my heart still to attend;
That I thy statutes may perform
alway unto the end.

SAMECH. The 15th Part.

113 I hate the thoughts of vanity,
but love thy law do I.
114 My shield and hiding-place thou art:
I on thy word rely.
115 All ye that evil-doers are from me depart away;
For the commandments of my God
I purpose to obey.

116 According to thy faithful word
uphold and stablish me,
That I may live, and of my hope ashamed never be.
117 Hold thou me up, so shall I be in peace and safety still;
And to thy statutes have respect continually I will.

118 Thou tread'st down all that love to false their deceit doth prove. [stray; 119 Lewd men, like dross, away thou therefore thy law I love. [putt'st; 120 For fear of thee my very flesh
doth tremble, all dismay'd;
And of thy righteous judgments, Lord,
my soul is much afraid.

AIN. The 16th Part.

121 To all men I have judgment done, performing justice right;
Then let me not be left unto my fierce oppressors' might.
122 For good unto thy servant, Lord, thy servant's surety be:
From the oppression of the proud
do thou deliver me.

123 Mine eyes do fail with looking long for thy salvation,
The word of thy pure righteousness
while I do wait upon.
124 In mercy with thy servant deal,
thy laws me teach and shew.
125 I am thy servant, wisdom give,
that I thy laws may know.

126 'Tis time thou work, Lord; for they made void thy law divine. [have 127 Therefore thy precepts more I love than gold, yea, gold most fine.
128 Concerning all things thy commands all right I judge therefore;
And ev'ry false and wicked way
I perfectly abhor.

PE. The 17th Part.

129 Thy statutes, Lord, are wonderful, my soul them keeps with care.
130 The entrance of thy words gives light, makes wise who simple are.
131 My mouth I have wide opened,
and panted earnestly,
While after thy commandements
I long'd exceedingly.

132 Look on me, Lord, and merciful do thou unto me prove,

Digitized by Google

As thou art wont to do to those thy name who truly love.
133 O let my footsteps in thy word aright still ordered be:
Let no iniquity obtain
dominion over me.

134 From man's oppression save thou me;
so keep thy laws I will.
135 Thy face make on thy servant shine;
teach me thy statutes still.
136 Rivers of waters from mine eyes did run down, when I saw How wicked men run on in sin, and do not keep thy law.

TSADDI. The 18th Part.

137 O Lord, thou art most righteous;
thy judgments are upright.
138 Thy testimonies thou command'st most faithful are and right.
139 My zeal hath ev'n consumed me, because mine enemies Thy holy words forgotten have,
and do thy laws despise.

140 Thy word's most pure, therefore on it thy servant's love is set.
141 Small, and despis'd I am, yet I thy precepts not forget.
142 Thy righteousness is righteousness which ever doth endure:
Thy holy law, Lord, also is the very truth most pure.

143 Trouble and anguish have me found,
and taken hold on me:
Yet in my trouble my delight
thy just commandments be.
144 Eternal righteousness is in thy testimonies all:
Lord, to me understanding give,
and ever live I shall.

KOPH. The 19th Part.

145 With my whole heart I cry'd, Lord,
I will thy word obey. [hear:
146 I cry'd to thee; save me, and I will keep thy laws alway.
147 I of the morning did prevent the dawning, and did cry:
For all mine expectation did on thy word rely.

148 Mine eyes did timeously prevent the watches of the night,
That in thy word with careful mind
then meditate I might.
149 After thy loving-kindness hear my voice, that calls on thee:
According to thy judgment, Lord,
revive and quicken me.

150 Who follow mischief they draw nigh;
they from thy law are far:
151 But thou art near, Lord; most firm all thy commandments are. [truth 152 As for thy testimonies all,
of old this have I try'd,
That thou hast surely founded them for ever to abide.

RESH. The 20th Part.

153 Consider mine affliction, in safety do me set:
Deliver me, O Lord, for I
thy law do not forget.
154 After thy word revive thou me;
save me, and plead my cause.
155 Salvation is from sinners far;
for they seek not thy laws.

156 O Lord, both great and manifold thy tender mercies be:
According to thy judgments just,
revive and quicken me.
157 My persecutors many are,
and foes that do combine;
Yet from thy testimonies pure
my heart doth not decline.

158 I saw transgressors, and was griev'd, for they keep not thy word.
159 See how I love thy law! as thou art kind, me quicken, Lord.
160 From the beginning all thy word hath been most true and sure; Thy righteous judgments ev'ry one for evermore endure.

SCHIN. The 21st Part.

161 Princes have persecuted me, although no cause they saw:
But still of thy most holy word
my heart doth stand in awe.
162 I at thy word rejoice, as one of spoil that finds great store.
163 Thy law I love; but lying all
I hate and do abhor.

164 Sev'n times a-day it is my care to give due praise to thee;
Because of all thy judgments, Lord, which righteous ever be.
165 Great peace have they who love thy offence they shall have none. [law; 166 I hop'd for thy salvation, Lord, and thy commands have done.

167 My soul thy testimonies pure observed carefully;
On them my heart is set, and them
I love exceedingly.
168 Thy testimonies and thy laws
I kept with special care;
For all my works and ways each one before thee open are.

TAU. The 22d Part.

169 O let my earnest pray'r and cry
come near before thee, Lord:
Give understanding unto me,
according to thy word.
170 Let my request before thee come:
after thy word me free.
171 My lips shall utter praise, when thou hast taught thy laws to me.

172 My tongue of thy most blessed word shall speak, and it confess;
Because all thy commandements are perfect righteousness.
173 Let thy strong hand make help to me:
thy precepts are my choice.
174 I long'd for thy salvation, Lord, and in thy law rejoice.

175 O let my soul live, and it shall give praises unto thee;
And let thy judgments gracious be helpful unto me.
176 I, like a lost sheep, went astray;
thy servant seek, and find:
For thy commands I suffer'd not to slip out of my mind.

PSALM CXX.

1 IN my distress to God I cry'd,
and he gave ear to me.
2 From lying lips and guileful tongue,
O Lord, my soul set free.
3 What shall be giv'n thee? or what shall be done to thee, false tongue?
4 Ev'n burning coals of juniper, sharp arrows of the strong.

5 Woe's me that I in Mesech am a sojourner so long;
That I in tabernacles dwell
to Kedar that belong.
6 My soul with him that hateth peace hath long a dweller been.
7 I am for peace; but when I speak, for battle they are keen.

PSALM CXXI.

1 I TO the hills will lift mine eyes,
from whence doth come mine aid.
2 My safety cometh from the Lord, who heav'n and earth hath made.
3 Thy foot he'll not let slide, nor will he slumber that thee keeps.
4 Behold, he that keeps Israel,
he slumbers not, nor sleeps.

5 The Lord thee keeps, the Lord thy on thy right hand doth stay: [shade 6 The moon by night thee shall not smite, nor yet the sun by day.
7 The Lord shall keep thy soul; he shall preserve thee from all ill.
8 Henceforth thy going out and in God keep for ever will.

PSALM CXXII.

1 I JOY'D when to the house of God,
Go up, they said to me.
2 Jerusalem, within thy gates our feet shall standing be.
3 Jerus'lem, as a city, is compactly built together:
4 Unto that place the tribes go up,
the tribes of God go thither:

To Isr'el's testimony, there to God's name thanks to pay.
5 For thrones of judgment, ev'n the of David's house, there stay. [thrones 6 Pray that Jerusalem may have peace and felicity:
Let them that love thee and thy peace have still prosperity.

7 Therefore I wish that peace may still within thy walls remain,
And ever may thy palaces prosperity retain.
8 Now, for my friends' and brethren's
Peace be in thee, I'll say. [sakes, 9 And for the house of God our Lord,
I'll seek thy good alway.

PSALM CXXIII.

1 O THOU that dwellest in the heav'ns,
I lift mine eyes to thee.
2 Behold, as servants' eyes do look their masters' hand to see,
As handmaid's eyes her mistress' hand;
so do our eyes attend
Upon the Lord our God, until to us he mercy send.

3 O Lord, be gracious to us, unto us gracious be;
Because replenish'd with contempt exceedingly are we.
4 Our soul is fill'd with scorn of those that at their ease abide,
And with the insolent contempt of those that swell in pride.

PSALM CXXIV.

1 HAD not the Lord been on our side,
may Israel now say;
2 Had not the Lord been on our side,
when men rose us to slay;
3 They had us swallow'd quick, when as their wrath 'gainst us did flame:
4 Waters had cover'd us, our soul had sunk beneath the stream.

5 Then had the waters, swelling high,
over our soul made way.
6 Bless'd be the Lord, who to their teeth us gave not for a prey.
7 Our soul's escaped, as a bird
out of the fowler's snare;
The snare asunder broken is,
and we escaped are.

8 Our sure and all-sufficient help is in JEHOVAH's name;
His name who did the heav'n create,
and who the earth did frame.

ANOTHER OF THE SAME.

1 NOW Israel
may say, and that truly,
If that the Lord
had not our cause maintain'd;
2 If that the Lord
had not our right sustain'd, When cruel men against us furiously Rose up in wrath,
to make of us their prey;

3 Then certainly they had devour'd us all,
And swallow'd quick,
for ought that we could deem;
Such was their rage,
as we might well esteem.
4 And as fierce floods before them all things drown,
So had they brought our soul to death quite down.

Digitized by Google

5 The raging streams, with their proud swelling waves,
Had then our soul
o'erwhelmed in the deep.
6 But bless'd be God,
who doth us safely keep,
And hath not giv'n
us for a living prey Unto their teeth,
and bloody cruelty.

7 Ev'n as a bird
out of the fowler's snare Escapes away,
so is our soul set free:
Broke are their nets,
and thus escaped we.
8 Therefore our help is in the Lord's great name, Who heav'n and earth
by his great pow'r did frame.

PSALM CXXV.

1 THEY in the Lord that firmly trust
shall be like Sion hill,
Which at no time can be remov'd, but standeth ever still.
2 As round about Jerusalem
the mountains stand alway,
The Lord his folk doth compass so,
from henceforth and for aye.

3 For ill men's rod upon the lot of just men shall not lie; Lest righteous men stretch forth their unto iniquity. [hands 4 Do thou to all those that be good thy goodness, Lord, impart;
And do thou good to those that are upright within their heart.

5 But as for such as turn aside
after their crooked way,
God shall lead forth with wicked men:
on Isr'el peace shall stay.

PSALM CXXVI.

1 WHEN Sion's bondage God turn'd back,
as men that dream'd were we.
2 Then fill'd with laughter was our mouth,
our tongue with melody:
They 'mong the heathen said, The Lord great things for them hath wrought.
3 The Lord hath done great things for us, whence joy to us is brought.

4 As streams of water in the south,
our bondage, Lord, recall.
5 Who sow in tears, a reaping time of joy enjoy they shall.
6 That man who, bearing precious seed,
in going forth doth mourn,
He doubtless, bringing back his sheaves, rejoicing shall return.

PSALM CXXVII.

1 EXCEPT the Lord do build the house,
the builders lose their pain:
Except the Lord the city keep,
the watchmen watch in vain.
2 'Tis vain for you to rise betimes, or late from rest to keep,
To feed on sorrow's bread; so gives he his beloved sleep.

3 Lo, children are God's heritage,
the womb's fruit his reward.
4 The sons of youth as arrows are,
for strong men's hands prepar'd.
5 O happy is the man that hath his quiver fill'd with those;
They unashamed in the gate shall speak unto their foes.

PSALM CXXVIII.

1 BLESS'D is each one that fears the Lord,
and walketh in his ways;
2 For of thy labour thou shalt eat, and happy be always.
3 Thy wife shall as a fruitful vine
by thy house' sides be found:
Thy children like to olive-plants about thy table round.
4 Behold, the man that fears the Lord,
thus blessed shall he be.
5 The Lord shall out of Sion give his blessing unto thee:
Thou shalt Jerus'lem's good behold whilst thou on earth dost dwell.
6 Thou shalt thy children's children see,
and peace on Israel.

PSALM CXXIX.

1 OFT did they vex me from my youth,
may Isr'el now declare;
2 Oft did they vex me from my youth,
yet not victorious were.
3 The plowers plow'd upon my back;
they long their furrows drew.
4 The righteous Lord did cut the cords of the ungodly crew.

5 Let Sion's haters all be turn'd back with confusion.
6 As grass on houses' tops be they,
which fades ere it be grown:
7 Whereof enough to fill his hand
the mower cannot find;
Nor can the man his bosom fill,
whose work is sheaves to bind.

8 Neither say they who do go by,
God's blessing on you rest:
We in the name of God the Lord do wish you to be blest.

PSALM CXXX.

1 LORD, from the depths to thee I cry'd.
2 My voice, Lord, do thou hear:
Unto my supplication's voice
give an attentive ear.
3 Lord, who shall stand, if thou, O Lord, should'st mark iniquity?
4 But yet with thee forgiveness is,
that fear'd thou mayest be.

5 I wait for God, my soul doth wait,
my hope is in his word.
6 More than they that for morning watch,
my soul waits for the Lord;
I say, more than they that do watch
the morning light to see.
7 Let Israel hope in the Lord, for with him mercies be;

And plenteous redemption is ever found with him.
8 And from all his iniquities
he Isr'el shall redeem.

PSALM CXXXI.

1 MY heart not haughty is, O Lord,
mine eyes not lofty be;
Nor do I deal in matters great,
or things too high for me.
2 I surely have myself behav'd with quiet sp'rit and mild,
As child of mother wean'd: my soul is like a weaned child.

3 Upon the Lord let all the hope of Israel rely,
Ev'n from the time that present is unto eternity.

PSALM CXXXII.

1 DAVID, and his afflictions all,
Lord, do thou think upon;
2 How unto God he sware, and vow'd to Jacob's mighty One.
3 I will not come within my house,
nor rest in bed at all;
4 Nor shall mine eyes take any sleep, nor eyelids slumber shall;

5 Till for the Lord a place I find,
where he may make abode;
A place of habitation
for Jacob's mighty God.
6 Lo, at the place of Ephratah of it we understood;
And we did find it in the fields,
and city of the wood.

7 We'll go into his tabernacles, and at his footstool bow.
8 Arise, O Lord, into thy rest,
th' ark of thy strength, and thou.
9 O let thy priests be clothed, Lord,
with truth and righteousness;
And let all those that are thy saints shout loud for joyfulness.

10 For thine own servant David's sake,
do not deny thy grace;
Nor of thine own anointed one turn thou away the face.
11 The Lord in truth to David sware,
he will not turn from it,
1 of thy body's fruit will make upon thy throne to sit.

12 My cov'nant if thy sons will keep,
and laws to them made known,
Their children then shall also sit for ever on thy throne.
13 For God of Sion hath made choice;
there he desires to dwell.
14 This is my rest, here still I'll stay;
for I do like it well.

15 Her food I'll greatly bless; her poor with bread will satisfy.
16 Her priests I'll clothe with health; her shall shout forth joyfully. [saints 17 And there will I make David's horn to bud forth pleasantly:
For him that mine anointed is a lamp ordain'd have I.

18 As with a garment I will clothe with shame his en'mies all:
But yet the crown that he doth wear upon him flourish shall.

PSALM CXXXIII.

1 BEHOLD, how good a thing it is,
and how becoming well, Together such as brethren are in unity to dwell!
2 Like precious ointment on the head.
that down the beard did flow, Ev'n Aaron's beard, and to the skirts did of his garments go.

3 As Hermon's dew, the dew that doth on Sion' hills descend:
For there the blessing God commands, life that shall never end.

PSALM CXXXIV.

1 BEHOLD, bless ye the Lord, all ye that his attendants are,
Ev'n you that in God's temple be,
and praise him nightly there.
2 Your hands within God's holy place lift up, and praise his name.
3 From Sion' hill the Lord thee bless, that heav'n and earth did frame.

PSALM CXXXV.

1 PRAISE ye the Lord, the Lord's name praise;
his servants, praise ye God.
2 Who stand in God's house, in the courts of our God make abode.
3 Praise ye the Lord, for he is good;
unto him praises sing:
Sing praises to his name, because it is a pleasant thing.

4 For Jacob to himself the Lord did chuse of his good pleasure,
And he hath chosen Israel
for his peculiar treasure.
5 Because I know assuredly
the Lord is very great,
And that our Lord above all gods
in glory hath his seat.

6 What things soever pleas'd the Lord, that in the heav'n did he,
And in the earth, the seas, and all the places deep that be.
7 He from the ends of earth doth make the vapours to ascend;
With rain he lightnings makes, and wind doth from his treasures send.

8 Egypt's first-born, from man to beast
9 who smote. Strange tokens he
On Phar'oh and his servants sent,
Egypt, in midst of thee.

10 He smote great nations, slew great kings:
11 Sihon of Heshbon king,
And Og of Bashan, and to nought did Canaan's kingdoms bring:

12 And for a wealthy heritage their pleasant land he gave,
An heritage which Israel,
his chosen folk, should have.
13 Thy name, O Lord, shall still endure, and thy memorial
With honour shall continu'd be
to generations all.

14 For why? the righteous God will judge
his people righteously; Concerning those that do him serve,
himself repent will he.
15 The idols of the nations of silver are and gold,
And by the hands of men is made their fashion and mould.

16 Mouths have they, but they do not eyes, but they do not see; [speak; 17 Ears have they, but hear not; and in their mouths no breathing be.
18 Their makers are like them; so are all that on them rely.
19 O Isr'el's house, bless God; bless God,
O Aaron's family.

20 O bless the Lord, of Levi's house ye who his servants are;
And bless the holy name of God,
all ye the Lord that fear.
21 And blessed be the Lord our God from Sion's holy hill,
Who dwelleth at Jerusalem.
The Lord O praise ye still.

PSALM CXXXVI.

1 GIVE thanks to God, for good is he:
for mercy hath he ever.
2 Thanks to the God of gods give ye:
for his grace faileth never.
3 Thanks give the Lord of lords unto:
for mercy hath he ever.
4 Who only wonders great can do:
for his grace faileth never.

5 Who by his wisdom made heav'ns high:
for mercy hath he ever.
6 Who stretch'd the earth above the sea:
for his grace faileth never.
7 To him that made the great lights shine:
for mercy hath he ever.
8 The sun to rule till day decline:
for his grace faileth never.

9 The moon and stars to rule by night:
for mercy hath he ever.
10 Who Egypt's first-born kill'd outright:
for his grace faileth never.
11 And Isr'el brought from Egypt land:
for mercy hath he ever.
12 With stretch'd-out arm, and with strong for his grace faileth never. [hand:

13 By whom the Red sea parted was:
for mercy hath he ever.
14 And through its midst made Isr'el pass:
for his grace faileth never.
15 But Phar'oh and his host did drown:
for mercy hath he ever.
16 Who through the desert led his own:
for his grace faileth never.

17 To him great kings who overthrew:
for he hath mercy ever.
18 Yea, famous kings in battle slew:
for his grace faileth never.
19 Ev'n Sihon king of Amorites:
for he hath mercy ever.
20 And Og the king of Bashanites:
for his grace faileth never.

21 Their land in heritage to have:
(for mercy hath he ever.)
22 His servant Isr'el right he gave:
for his grace faileth never.
23 In our low state who on us thought:
for he hath mercy ever.
24 And from our foes our freedom wrought:
for his grace faileth never.

25 Who doth all flesh with food relieve:
for he hath mercy ever.
26 Thanks to the God of heaven give:
for his grace faileth never.

ANOTHER OF THE SAME.

1 PRAISE God, for he is kind:
His mercy lasts for aye.
2 Give thanks with heart and mind
To God of gods alway:
For certainly
His mercies 'dure
Most firm and sure Eternally.

3 The Lord of lords praise ye,
Whose mercies still endure.
4 Great wonders only he Doth work by his great pow'r:
For certainly, &c.

5 Which God omnipotent,
By might and wisdom high,
The heav'n and firmament
Did frame, as we may see:
For certainly, &c.

6 To him who did outstretch
This earth so great and wide,
Above the waters' reach Making it to abide:
For certainly, &c.

7 Great lights he made to be;
For his grace lasteth aye:
8 Such as the sun we see,
To rule the lightsome day:
For certainly, &c.

9 Also the moon so clear,
Which shineth in our sight;
The stars that do appear,
To guide the darksome night:
For certainly, &c.

10 To him that Egypt smote,
Who did his message scorn;
And in his anger hot
Did kill all their first-born:
For certainly, &c.

11 Thence Isr'el out he brought;
For his grace lasteth ever.
12 With a strong hand he wrought,
And stretch'd-out arm deliver:
For certainly, &c.

13 The sea he cut in two;
For his grace lasteth still.
14 And through its midst to go
Made his own Israel:
For certainly, &c.

15 But overwhelm'd and lost
Was proud king Pharaoh,
With all his mighty host,
And chariots there also:
For certainly, &c.

16 To him who pow'rfully
His chosen people led,
Ev'n through the desert dry,
And in that place them fed:
For certainly, &c.

17 To him great kings who smote;
For his grace hath no bound.
18 Who slew, and spared not Kings famous and renown'd;
For certainly, &c.

19 Sihon the Am'rites' king;
For his grace lasteth ever:
20 Og also, who did reign
The land of Bashan over:
For certainly, &c.

21 Their land by lot he gave;
For his grace faileth never;
22 That Isr'el might it have
In heritage for ever:
For certainly, &c.

23 Who hath remembered
Us in our low estate;
24 And us delivered
From foes which did us hate:
For certainly, &c.

25 Who to all flesh gives food;
For his grace faileth never.
26 Give thanks to God most good,
The God of heav'n, for ever:
For certainly, &c.

PSALM CXXXVII.

1 BY Babel's streams we sat and wept,
when Sion we thought on.
2 In midst thereof we hang'd our harps
the willow-trees upon.
3 For there a song required they,
who did us captive bring:
Our spoilers call'd for mirth, and said,
A song of Sion sing.

4 O how the Lord's song shall we sing within a foreign land?
5 If thee, Jerus'lem, I forget, skill part from my right hand.
6 My tongue to my mouth's roof let cleave,
if I do thee forget, Jerusalem, and thee above
my chief joy do not set.

7 Remember Edom's children, Lord, who in Jerus'lem's day,
Ev'n unto its foundation,
Raze, raze it quite, did say.
8 O daughter thou of Babylon, near to destruction;
Bless'd shall he be that thee rewards,
as thou to us hast done.

9 Yea, happy surely shall he be thy tender little ones Who shall lay hold upon, and them shall dash against the stones.

PSALM CXXXVIII.

1 THEE will I praise with all my heart,
I will sing praise to thee
2 Before the gods: And worship will toward thy sanctuary.
I'll praise thy name, ev'n for thy truth,
and kindness of thy love;
For thou thy word hast magnify'd
all thy great name above.

3 Thou didst me answer in the day
when I to thee did cry;
And thou my fainting soul with strength
didst strengthen inwardly.
4 All kings upon the earth that are shall give thee praise, O Lord;
When as they from thy mouth shall hear thy true and faithful word.

5 Yea, in the righteous ways of God with gladness they shall sing:
For great's the glory of the Lord,
who doth for ever reign.
6 Though God be high, yet he respects all those that lowly be;
Whereas the proud and lofty ones afar off knoweth he.

7 Though I in midst of trouble walk,
I life from thee shall have:
'Gainst my foes' wrath thou'lt stretch thine hand;
thy right hand shall me save.
8 Surely that which concerneth me
the Lord will perfect make:
Lord, still thy mercy lasts; do not thine own hands' works forsake.

PSALM CXXXIX.

1 O LORD, thou hast me search'd and known.
2 Thou know'st my sitting down,
And rising up; yea, all my thoughts afar to thee are known.
3 My footsteps, and my lying down, thou compassest always;
Thou also most entirely art acquaint with all my ways.

4 For in my tongue, before I speak, not any word can be,
But altogether, lo, O Lord,
it is well known to thee.
5 Behind, before, thou hast beset,
and laid on me thine hand.
6 Such knowledge is too strange for me, too high to understand.

7 From thy Sp'rit whither shall I go?
or from thy presence fly?
8 Ascend I heav'n, lo, thou art there;
there, if in hell I lie.
9 Take I the morning wings, and dwell
in utmost parts of sea;
10 Ev'n there, Lord, shall thy hand me lead, thy right hand hold shall me.

11 If I do say that darkness shall me cover from thy sight,
Then surely shall the very night about me be as light.
12 Yea, darkness hideth not from thee,
but night doth shine as day:
To thee the darkness and the light are both alike alway.

13 For thou possessed hast my reins,
and thou hast cover'd me,
When I within my mother's womb inclosed was by thee.
14 Thee will I praise; for fearfully and strangely made I am; Thy works are marv'llous, and right well my soul doth know the same.

15 My substance was not hid from thee, when as in secret I Was made; and in earth's lowest parts was wrought most curiously.
16 Thine eyes my substance did behold,
yet being unperfect;
And in the volume of thy book
my members all were writ;

Which after in continuance were fashion'd ev'ry one,
When as they yet all shapeless were,
and of them there was none.
17 How precious also are thy thoughts,
O gracious God, to me!
And in their sum how passing great and numberless they be!

18 If I should count them, than the sand
they more in number be:
What time soever I awake,
I ever am with thee.
19 Thou, Lord, wilt sure the wicked slay:
hence from me bloody men.
20 Thy foes against thee loudly speak, and take thy name in vain.

21 Do not I hate all those, O Lord, that hatred bear to thee?
With those that up against thee rise can I but grieved be?
22 With perfect hatred them I hate,
my foes I them do hold.
23 Search me, O God, and know my heart,
try me, my thoughts unfold:

24 And see if any wicked way
there be at all in me;
And in thine everlasting way
to me a leader be.

PSALM CXL.

1 LORD, from the ill and froward man
give me deliverance,
And do thou safe preserve me from the man of violence:
2 Who in their heart mischievous things are meditating ever;
And they for war assembled are continually together.

3 Much like unto a serpent's tongue their tongues they sharp do make;
And underneath their lips there lies the poison of a snake.
4 Lord, keep me from the wicked's hands,
from vi'lent men me save;
Who utterly to overthrow my goings purpos'd have.

5 The proud for me a snare have hid,
and cords; yea, they a net
Have by the way-side for me spread;
they gins for me have set.
6 I said unto the Lord, Thou art
my God: unto the cry
Of all my supplications,
Lord, do thine ear apply.

7 O God the Lord, who art the strength
of my salvation:
A cov'ring in the day of war
my head thou hast put on.
8 Unto the wicked man, O Lord,
his wishes do not grant;
Nor further thou his ill device,
lest they themselves should vaunt.

9 As for the head and chief of those about that compass me, Ev'n by the mischief of their lips
let thou them cover'd be.
10 Let burning coals upon them fall,
them throw in fiery flame,
And in deep pits, that they no more may rise out of the same.

11 Let not an evil speaker be on earth established:
Mischief shall hunt the vi'lent man till he be ruined.
12 I know God will th' afflicted's cause maintain, and poor men's right.
13 Surely the just shall praise thy name;
th' upright dwell in thy sight.

PSALM CXLI.

1 O LORD, I unto thee do cry,
do thou make haste to me,
And give an ear unto my voice,
when I cry unto thee.
2 As incense let my prayer be directed in thine eyes;
And the uplifting of my hands
as th' ev'ning sacrifice.

3 Set, Lord, a watch before my mouth,
keep of my lips the door.
4 My heart incline thou not unto the ills I should abhor,
To practise wicked works with men
that work iniquity;
And with their delicates my taste
let me not satisfy.

5 Let him that righteous is me smite,
it shall a kindness be;
Let him reprove, I shall it count
a precious oil to me:
Such smiting shall not break my head;
for yet the time shall fall,
When I in their calamities to God pray for them shall.

6 When as their judges down shall be in stony places cast,
Then shall they hear my words; for they shall sweet be to their taste.
7 About the grave's devouring mouth
our bones are scatter'd round,
As wood which men do cut and cleave lies scatter'd on the ground.

8 But unto thee, O God the Lord, mine eyes uplifted be:
My soul do not leave destitute;
my trust is set on thee.
9 Lord, keep me safely from the snares which they for me prepare;
And from the subtile gins of them that wicked workers are.

10 Let workers of iniquity into their own nets fall, Whilst I do, by thine help, escape
the danger of them all.

PSALM CXLII.

1 I WITH my voice cry'd to the Lord,
with it made my request:
2 Pour'd out to him my plaint, to him
my trouble I exprest.
3 When in me was o'erwhelm'd my sp'rit,
then well thou knew'st my way;
Where I did walk a snare for me
they privily did lay.

4 I look'd on my right hand, and view'd, but none to know me were;
All refuge failed me, no man did for my soul take care.
5 I cry'd to thee; I said, Thou art
my refuge, Lord, alone;
And in the land of those that live thou art my portion.

6 Because I am brought very low,
attend unto my cry:
Me from my persecutors save,
who stronger are than I.
7 From prison bring my soul, that I thy name may glorify:
The just shall compass me, when thou with me deal'st bounteously.

PSALM CXLIII.

1 LORD, hear my pray'r, attend my suits;
and in thy faithfulness
Give thou an answer unto me,
and in thy righteousness.
2 Thy servant also bring thou not in judgment to be try'd:
Because no living man can be in thy sight justify'd.

3 For th' en'my hath pursu'd my soul,
my life to ground down tread:
In darkness he hath made me dwell,
as who have long been dead.
4 My sp'rit is therefore overwhelm'd in me perplexedly;
Within me is my very heart amazed wondrously.

5 I call to mind the days of old,
to meditate I use
On all thy works; upon the deeds
I of thy hands do muse.
6 My hands to thee I stretch: my soul thirsts, as dry land, for thee.
7 Haste, Lord, to hear, my spirit fails:
hide not thy face from me;

Lest like to them I do become that go down to the dust.
8 At morn let me thy kindness hear;
for in thee do I trust.
Teach me the way that I should walk:
I lift my soul to thee.
9 Lord, free me from my foes; I flee to thee to cover me.

10 Because thou art my God, to do thy will do me instruct:
Thy Sp'rit is good, me to the land of uprightness conduct.
11 Revive and quicken me, O Lord,
ev'n for thine own name's sake;
And do thou, for thy righteousness,
my soul from trouble take.

12 And of thy mercy slay my foes;
let all destroyed be
That do afflict my soul: for I a servant am to thee.

ANOTHER OF THE SAME.

1 OH, hear my prayer, Lord,
And unto my desire
To bow thine ear accord,
I humbly thee require;
And, in thy faithfulness,
Unto me answer make,
And, in thy righteousness,
Upon me pity take.

2 In judgment enter not
With me thy servant poor:
For why, this well I wot,
No sinner can endure
The sight of thee, O God:
If thou his deeds shalt try,
He dare make none abode Himself to justify.

3 Behold, the cruel foe
Me persecutes with spite,
My soul to overthrow:
Yea, he my life down quite Unto the ground hath smote,
And made me dwell full low
In darkness, as forgot,
Or men dead long ago.

4 Therefore my sp'rit much vex'd, O'erwhelm'd is me within;
My heart right sore perplex'd
And desolate hath been.
5 Yet I do call to mind
What ancient days record,
Thy works of ev'ry kind
I think upon, O Lord.

Digitized by Google

6 Lo, I do stretch my hands
To thee, my help alone;
For thou well understands
All my complaint and moan;
My thirsting soul desires,
And longeth after thee,
As thirsty ground requires
With rain refresh'd to be.

7 Lord, let my pray'r prevail,
To answer it make speed;
For, lo, my sp'rit doth fail:
Hide not thy face in need;
Lest I be like to those
That do in darkness sit,
Or him that downward goes Into the dreadful pit.

8 Because I trust in thee,
O Lord, cause me to hear
Thy loving-kindness free,
When morning doth appear:
Cause me to know the way
Wherein my path should be;
For why, my soul on high
I do lift up to thee.

9 From my fierce enemy
In safety do me guide,
Because I flee to thee,
Lord, that thou may'st me hide.
10 My God alone art thou,
Teach me thy righteousness:
Thy Sp'rit's good, lead me to
The land of uprightness.

11 O Lord, for thy name's sake,
Be pleas'd to quicken me;
And, for thy truth, forth take
My soul from misery.
12 And of thy grace destroy
My foes, and put to shame
All who my soul annoy;
For I thy servant am.

PSALM CXLIV.

1 O BLESSED ever be the Lord,
who is my strength and might,
Who doth instruct my hands to war,
my fingers teach to fight.
2 My goodness, fortress, my high tow'r, deliverer, and shield,
In whom I trust: who under me
my people makes to yield.

3 Lord, what is man, that thou of him dost so much knowledge take?
Or son of man, that thou of him
so great account dost make?
4 Man is like vanity; his days,
as shadows, pass away.
5 Lord, bow thy heav'ns, come down, touch the hills, and smoke shall they. [thou

6 Cast forth thy lightning, scatter them;
thine arrows shoot, them rout.
7 Thine hand send from above, me save;
from great depths draw me out;
And from the hand of children strange,
8 Whose mouth speaks vanity;
And their right hand is a right hand
that works deceitfully.

9 A new song I to thee will sing,
Lord, on a psaltery;
I on a ten-string'd instrument will praises sing to thee.
10 Ev'n he it is that unto kings salvation doth send;
Who his own servant David doth from hurtful sword defend.

11 O free me from strange children's hand,
whose mouth speaks vanity;
And their right hand a right hand is
that works deceitfully.
12 That, as the plants, our sons may be in youth grown up that are;
Our daughters like to corner-stones,
carv'd like a palace fair.

13 That to afford all kind of store
our garners may be fill'd;
That our sheep thousands, in our streets
ten thousands they may yield.
14 That strong our oxen be for work, that no in-breaking be,
Nor going out; and that our streets may from complaints be free.

15 Those people blessed are who be in such a case as this.
Yea, blessed all those people are,
whose God Jehovah is.

PSALM CXLV.

1 I'LL thee extol, my God, O King;
I'll bless thy name always.
2 Thee will I bless each day, and will thy name for ever praise.
3 Great is the Lord, much to be prais'd;
his greatness search exceeds.
4 Race unto race shall praise thy works,
and shew thy mighty deeds.

5 I of thy glorious majesty
the honour will record;
I'll speak of all thy mighty works,
which wondrous are, O Lord.
6 Men of thine acts the might shall show, thine acts that dreadful are;
And I, thy glory to advance,
thy greatness will declare.

7 The mem'ry of thy goodness great
they largely shall express;
With songs of praise they shall extol thy perfect righteousness.
8 The Lord is very gracious,
in him compassions flow;
In mercy he is very great,
and is to anger slow.

9 The Lord JEHOVAH unto all his goodness doth declare;
And over all his other works
his tender mercies are.
10 Thee all thy works shall praise, O Lord, and thee thy saints shall bless; 11 They shall thy kingdom's glory show,
thy pow'r by speech express:

12 To make the sons of men to know his acts done mightily,
And of his kingdom th' excellent and glorious majesty.
13 Thy kingdom shall for ever stand, thy reign through ages all.
14 God raiseth all that are bow'd down,
upholdeth all that fall.

15 The eyes of all things wait on thee,
the giver of all good;
And thou, in time convenient,
bestow'st on them their food:
16 Thine hand thou open'st lib'rally,
and of thy bounty gives Enough to satisfy the need of ev'ry thing that lives.

17 The Lord is just in all his ways, holy in his works all.
18 God's near to all that call on him,
in truth that on him call.
19 He will accomplish the desire of those that do him fear:
He also will deliver them,
and he their cry will hear.

20 The Lord preserves all who him love, that nought can them annoy:
But he all those that wicked are will utterly destroy.
21 My mouth the praises of the Lord to publish cease shall never:
Let all flesh bless his holy name for ever and for ever.

ANOTHER OF THE SAME.

1 O LORD, thou art my God and King;
Thee will I magnify and praise:
I will thee bless, and gladly sing
Unto thy holy name always.
2 Each day I rise I will thee bless,
And praise thy name time without end.
3 Much to be prais'd, and great God is;
His greatness none can comprehend.

4 Race shall thy works praise unto race,
The mighty acts shew done by thee.
5 I will speak of the glorious grace,
And honour of thy majesty;
Thy wondrous works I will record.
6 By men the might shall be extoll'd
Of all thy dreadful acts, O Lord:
And I thy greatness will unfold.

7 They utter shall abundantly
The mem'ry of thy goodness great;
And shall sing praises cheerfully,
Whilst they thy righteousness relate.
8 The Lord our God is gracious, Compassionate is he also;
In mercy he is plenteous,
But unto wrath and anger slow.

9 Good unto all men is the Lord;
O'er all his works his mercy is.
10 Thy works all praise to thee afford:
Thy saints, O Lord, thy name shall bless.
11 The glory of thy kingdom show
Shall they, and of thy power tell;
12 That so men's sons his deeds may know,
His kingdom's grace that doth excel.

13 Thy kingdom hath none end at all,
It doth through ages all remain.
14 The Lord upholdeth all that fall,
The cast-down raiseth up again.
15 The eyes of all things, Lord, attend,
And on thee wait that here do live,
And thou, in season due, dost send Sufficient food them to relieve.

16 Yea, thou thine hand dost open wide,
And ev'ry thing dost satisfy
That lives, and doth on earth abide,
Of thy great liberality.
17 The Lord is just in his ways all,
And holy in his works each one.
18 He's near to all that on him call,
Who call in truth on him alone.

19 God will the just desire fulfil
Of such as do him fear and dread:
Their cry regard, and hear he will,
And save them in the time of need.
20 The Lord preserves all, more and less,
That bear to him a loving heart:
But workers all of wickedness
Destroy will he, and clean subvert.

21 Therefore my mouth and lips I'll frame
To speak the praises of the Lord:
To magnify his holy name
For ever let all flesh accord.

PSALM CXLVI.

1 PRAISE God. The Lord praise, O my soul.
2 I'll praise God while I live;
While I have being, to my God in songs I'll praises give.
3 Trust not in princes, nor man's son,
in whom there is no stay:
4 His breath departs, to's earth he turns;
that day his thoughts decay.

5 O happy is that man and blest whom Jacob's God doth aid; Whose hope upon the Lord doth rest,
and on his God is stayed:
6 Who made the earth and heavens high,
who made the swelling deep,
And all that is within the same;
who truth doth ever keep:

7 Who righteous judgment executes for those oppress'd that be,
Who to the hungry giveth food;
God sets the pris'ners free.
8 The Lord doth give the blind their sight,
the bowed down doth raise:
The Lord doth dearly love all those that walk in upright ways.

9 The stranger's shield, the widow's stay,
the orphan's help, is he;
But yet by him the wicked's way turn'd upside down shall be.
10 The Lord shall reign for evermore:
thy God, O Sion, he Reigns to all generations.
Praise to the Lord give ye.

PSALM CXLVII.

1 PRAISE ye the Lord; for it is good praise to our God to sing:
For it is pleasant, and to praise
it is a comely thing.
2 God doth build up Jerusalem;
and he it is alone

That the dispers'd of Israel doth gather into one.

3 Those that are broken in their heart,
and grieved in their minds,
He healeth, and their painful wounds
he tenderly up-binds.
4 He counts the number of the stars;
he names them ev'ry one.
5 Great is our Lord, and of great power;
his wisdom search can none.

6 The Lord lifts up the meek; and casts the wicked to the ground.
7 Sing to the Lord, and give him thanks;
on harp his praises sound;
8 Who covereth the heav'n with clouds, who for the earth below
Prepareth rain, who maketh grass upon the mountains grow.

9 He gives the beast his food, he feeds
the ravens young that cry.
10 His pleasure not in horses' strength, nor in man's legs, doth lie.
11 But in all those that do him fear the Lord doth pleasure take;
In those that to his mercy do by hope themselves betake.

12 The Lord praise, O Jerusalem;
Sion, thy God confess:
13 For thy gates' bars he maketh strong;
thy sons in thee doth bless.
14 He in thy borders maketh peace;
with fine wheat filleth thee.
15 He sends forth his command on earth,
his word runs speedily.

16 Hoar-frost, like ashes, scatt'reth he;
like wool he snow doth give:
17 Like morsels casteth forth his ice;
who in its cold can live?
18 He sendeth forth his mighty word,
and melteth them again;
His wind he makes to blow, and then the waters flow amain.

19 The doctrine of his holy word to Jacob he doth shew;
His statutes and his judgments he gives Israel to know.
20 To any nation never he such favour did afford;
For they his judgments have not known.
O do ye praise the Lord.

PSALM CXLVIII.

1 PRAISE God. From heavens praise
the Lord,
in heights praise to him be.
2 All ye his angels, praise ye him;
his hosts all, praise him ye.
3 O praise ye him, both sun and moon,
praise him, all stars of light.
4 Ye heav'ns of heav'ns him praise, and above the heavens' height. [floods

5 Let all the creatures praise the name of our almighty Lord:
For he commanded, and they were created by his word.
6 He also, for all times to come,
hath them establish'd sure;
He hath appointed them a law,
which ever shall endure.

7 Praise ye JEHOVAH from the earth, dragons, and ev'ry deep:
8 Fire, hail, snow, vapour, stormy wind, his word that fully keep.
9 All hills and mountains, fruitful trees,
and all ye cedars high:
10 Beasts, and all cattle, creeping things,
and all ye birds that fly.

11 Kings of the earth, all nations, princes, earth's judges all:
12 Both young men, yea, and maidens too, old men, and children small.
13 Let them God's name praise; for his alone is excellent: [name
His glory reacheth far above the earth and firmament.

14 His people's horn, the praise of all his saints, exalteth he;
Ev'n Isr'el's seed, a people near to him. The Lord praise ye.

ANOTHER OF THE SAME.

1 THE Lord of heav'n confess,
On high his glory raise.
2 Him let all angels bless,
Him all his armies praise.
3 Him glorify,
Sun, moon, and stars;
4 Ye higher spheres,
And cloudy sky.

5 From God your beings are,
Him therefore famous make;
You all created were,
When he the word but spake.
6 And from that place,
Where fix'd you be
By his decree,
You cannot pass.

7 Praise God from earth below,
Ye dragons, and ye deeps:
8 Fire, hail, clouds, wind, and snow,
Whom in command he keeps.
9 Praise ye his name,
Hills great and small,
Trees low and tall;
10 Beasts wild and tame;

All things that creep or fly.
11 Ye kings, ye vulgar throng,
All princes mean or high;
12 Both men and virgins young,
Ev'n young and old,
13 Exalt his name;
For much his fame
Should be extoll'd.

O let God's name be prais'd
Above both earth and sky;
14 For he his saints hath rais'd,
And set their horn on high:
Ev'n those that be
Of Isr'el's race,
Near to his grace.
The Lord praise ye.

PSALM CXLIX.

1 PRAISE ye the Lord: unto him sing
a new song, and his praise
In the assembly of his saints in sweet psalms do ye raise.
2 Let Isr'el in his maker joy,
and to him praises sing:
Let all that Sion's children are be joyful in their King.

3 O let them unto his great name
give praises in the dance;
Let them with timbrel and with harp in songs his praise advance.
4 For God doth pleasure take in those that his own people be;
And he with his salvation
the meek will beautify.

5 And in his glory excellent let all his saints rejoice:
Let them to him upon their beds aloud lift up their voice.
6 Let in their mouth aloft be rais'd
the high praise of the Lord,
And let them have in their right hand
a sharp two-edged sword;

7 To execute the vengeance due upon the heathen all,
And make deserved punishment
upon the people fall.
8 And ev'n with chains, as pris'ners, bind their kings that them command;
Yea, and with iron fetters strong,
the nobles of their land.

9 On them the judgment to perform found written in his word:
This honour is to all his saints.
O do ye praise the Lord.

PSALM CL.

1 PRAISE ye the Lord. God's praise his sanctuary raise; [within And to him in the firmament of his pow'r give ye praise.
2 Because of all his mighty acts,
with praise him magnify:
O praise him, as he doth excel
in glorious majesty.

3 Praise him with trumpet's sound; his with psaltery advance: [praise 4 With timbrel, harp, string'd instruments, and organs, in the dance.
5 Praise him on cymbals loud; him praise on cymbals sounding high.
6 Let each thing breathing praise the Lord.
Praise to the Lord give ye.

I. Genesis i.

1 LET heav'n arise, let earth appear,
said the Almighty Lord:
The heav'n arose, the earth appear'd,
at his creating word.
2 Thick darkness brooded o'er the deep:
God said, "Let there be light:"
The light shone forth with smiling ray, and scatter'd ancient night.

3 He bade the clouds ascend on high;
the clouds ascend, and bear
A wat'ry treasure to the sky, and float upon the air.
4 The liquid element below was gather'd by his hand;
The rolling seas together flow,
and leave the solid land.

5 With herbs, and plants, and fruitful trees,
the new-form'd globe he crown'd,
Ere there was rain to bless the soil,
or sun to warm the ground.
6 Then high in heav'n's resplendent arch
he plac'd two orbs of light,
He set the sun to rule the day,
the moon to rule the night.

7 Next, from the deep, th' Almighty King did vital beings frame; Fowls of the air of ev'ry wing,
and fish of ev'ry name.
8 To all the various brutal tribes
he gave their wondrous birth;
At once the lion and the worm sprung from the teeming earth.

9 Then, chief o'er all his works below,
at last was Adam made:
His Maker's image bless'd his soul,
and glory crown'd his head.
10 Fair in th' Almighty Maker's eye
the whole creation stood.
He view'd the fabric he had rais'd;
his word pronounc'd it good.

II. Genesis xxviii. 20–22.

1 O GOD of Bethel! by whose hand
thy people still are fed;
Who through this weary pilgrimage hast all our fathers led:
2 Our vows, our pray'rs, we now present before thy throne of grace:
God of our fathers! be the God of their succeeding race.

3 Through each perplexing path of life
our wand'ring footsteps guide;
Give us each day our daily bread,
and raiment fit provide.
4 O spread thy cov'ring wings around,
till all our wand'rings cease,
And at our Father's lov'd abode
our souls arrive in peace.

5 Such blessings from thy gracious hand
our humble pray'rs implore;
And thou shalt be our chosen God,
and portion evermore.

III. Job i. 21.

1 NAKED as from the earth we came,
and enter'd life at first;
Naked we to the earth return,
and mix with kindred dust.
2 Whate'er we fondly call our own belongs to heav'n's great Lord;
The blessings lent us for a day
are soon to be restor'd.

3 'Tis God that lifts our comforts high,
or sinks them in the grave:
He gives; and, when he takes away,
he takes but what he gave.
4 Then, ever blessed be his name!
his goodness swell'd our store;
His justice but resumes its own;
'tis ours still to adore.

IV. Job iii. 17–20.

1 HOW still and peaceful is the grave!
where, life's vain tumults past,
Th' appointed house, by Heav'n's decree, receives us all at last.
2 The wicked there from troubling cease, their passions rage no more;
And there the weary pilgrim rests from all the toils he bore.

3 There rest the pris'ners, now releas'd from slav'ry's sad abode;
No more they hear th' oppressor's voice,
or dread the tyrant's rod.
4 There servants, masters, small and great,
partake the same repose;
And there, in peace, the ashes mix of those who once were foes.

5 All, levell'd by the hand of Death,
lie sleeping in the tomb;
Till God in judgment calls them forth,
to meet their final doom.

V. Job v. 6–12.

1 THOUGH trouble springs not from the dust,
nor sorrow from the ground;
Yet ills on ills, by Heav'n's decree,
in man's estate are found.
2 As sparks in close succession rise,
so man, the child of woe,
Is doom'd to endless cares and toils
through all his life below.

3 But with my God I leave my cause;
from him I seek relief;
To him, in confidence of pray'r,
unbosom all my grief.
4 Unnumber'd are his wondrous works,
unsearchable his ways;
'Tis his the mourning soul to cheer,
the bowed down to raise.

VI. Job viii. 11–22.

1 THE rush may rise where waters flow, and flags beside the stream;
But soon their verdure fades and dies
before the scorching beam:
2 So is the sinner's hope cut off;
or, if it transient rise,
'Tis like the spider's airy web,
from ev'ry breath that flies.

3 Fix'd on his house he leans; his house
and all its props decay:
He holds it fast; but, while he holds,
the tott'ring frame gives way.
4 Fair, in his garden, to the sun,
his boughs with verdure smile;
And, deeply fix'd, his spreading roots unshaken stand a while.

5 But forth the sentence flies from Heav'n, that sweeps him from his place;
Which then denies him for its lord,
nor owns it knew his face.
6 Lo! this the joy of wicked men, who Heav'n's high laws despise:
They quickly fall; and in their room
as quickly others rise.

7 But, for the just, with gracious care,
God will his pow'r employ;
He'll teach their lips to sing his praise,
and fill their hearts with joy.

VII. Job ix. 2–10.

1 HOW should the sons of Adam's race be pure before their God?
If he contends in righteousness,
we sink beneath his rod.
2 If he should mark my words and with strict enquiring eyes, [thoughts Could I for one of thousand faults
the least excuse devise?

3 Strong is his arm, his heart is wise;
who dares with him contend?
Or who, that tries th' unequal strife,
shall prosper in the end?
4 He makes the mountains feel his wrath,
and their old seats forsake;
The trembling earth deserts her place,
and all her pillars shake.

5 He bids the sun forbear to rise;
th' obedient sun forbears:
His hand with sackcloth spreads the skies,
and seals up all the stars.
6 He walks upon the raging sea;
flies on the stormy wind:
None can explore his wondrous way, or his dark footsteps find.

VIII. Job xiv. 1–15.

1 FEW are thy days, and full of woe,
O man, of woman born!
Thy doom is written, "Dust thou art
"and shalt to dust return."
2 Behold the emblem of thy state in flow'rs that bloom and die,
Or in the shadow's fleeting form,
that mocks the gazer's eye.

3 Guilty and frail, how shalt thou stand before thy sov'reign Lord?

Can troubled and polluted springs
a hallow'd stream afford?
4 Determin'd are the days that fly successive o'er thy head;
The number'd hour is on the wing that lays thee with the dead.

5 Great God! afflict not in thy wrath
the short allotted span,
That bounds the few and weary days
of pilgrimage to man.
6 All nature dies, and lives again:
the flow'r that paints the field,
The trees that crown the mountain's brow,
and boughs and blossoms yield,

7 Resign the honours of their form at Winter's stormy blast,
And leave the naked leafless plain a desolated waste.
8 Yet soon reviving plants and flow'rs anew shall deck the plain;
The woods shall hear the voice of Spring,
and flourish green again.

9 But man forsakes this earthly scene,
ah! never to return:
Shall any foll'wing spring revive the ashes of the urn?
10 The mighty flood that rolls along its torrents to the main,
Can ne'er recall its waters lost from that abyss again.

11 So days, and years, and ages past, descending down to night,
Can henceforth never more return back to the gates of light; 12 And man, when laid in lonesome grave, shall sleep in Death's dark gloom, Until th' eternal morning wake the slumbers of the tomb.

13 O may the grave become to me
the bed of peaceful rest, Whence I shall gladly rise at length,
and mingle with the blest!
14 Cheer'd by this hope, with patient mind,
I'll wait Heav'n's high decree,
Till the appointed period come,
when death shall set me free.

IX. Job xxvi. 6, to the end.

1 WHO can resist th' Almighty arm that made the starry sky?
Or who elude the certain glance
of God's all-seeing eye?
2 From him no cov'ring vails our crimes;
hell opens to his sight;
And all Destruction's secret snares lie full disclos'd in light.

3 Firm on the boundless void of space
he pois'd the steady pole,
And in the circle of his clouds bade secret waters roll.
4 While nature's universal frame its Maker's pow'r reveals,
His throne, remote from mortal eyes,
an awful cloud conceals.

5 From where the rising day ascends, to where it sets in night,
He compasses the floods with bounds,
and checks their threat'ning might.
6 The pillars that support the sky tremble at his rebuke;
Through all its caverns quakes the earth,
as though its centre shook.

7 He brings the waters from their beds,
although no tempest blows,
And smites the kingdom of the proud without the hand of foes.
8 With bright inhabitants above
he fills the heav'nly land,
And all the crooked serpent's breed
dismay'd before him stand.

9 Few of his works can we survey;
these few our skill transcend:
But the full thunder of his pow'r what heart can comprehend?

X. Prov. i. 20–31.

1 IN streets, and op'nings of the gates,
where pours the busy crowd,
Thus heav'nly Wisdom lifts her voice,
and cries to men aloud:
2 How long, ye scorners of the truth,
scornful will ye remain?
How long shall fools their folly love,
and hear my words in vain?

3 O turn, at last, at my reproof!
and, in that happy hour,
His bless'd effusions on your heart
my Spirit down shall pour.
4 But since so long, with earnest voice,
to you in vain I call,
Since all my counsels and reproofs
thus ineffectual fall;

5 The time will come, when humbled low,
in Sorrow's evil day,
Your voice by anguish shall be taught,
but taught too late, to pray.
6 When, like the whirlwind, o'er the deep comes Desolation's blast:
Pray'rs then extorted shall be vain,
the hour of mercy past.

7 The choice you made has fix'd your doom;
for this is Heav'n's decree,
That with the fruits of what he sow'd the sinner fill'd shall be.

XI. Prov. iii. 13–17.

1 O HAPPY is the man who hears Instruction's warning voice;
And who celestial Wisdom makes his early, only choice.
2 For she has treasures greater far than east or west unfold;
And her rewards more precious are than all their stores of gold.

3 In her right hand she holds to view
a length of happy days;
Riches, with splendid honours join'd,
are what her left displays.
4 She guides the young with innocence,
in pleasure's paths to tread,
A crown of glory she bestows upon the hoary head.

5 According as her labours rise,
so her rewards increase;
Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace.

XII. Prov. vi. 6–12.

1 YE indolent and slothful! rise,
View the ant's labours, and be wise;
She has no guide to point her way,
No ruler chiding her delay:
2 Yet see with what incessant cares
She for the winter's storm prepares;
In summer she provides her meat,
And harvest finds her store complete.

3 But when will slothful man arise?
How long shall sleep seal up his eyes?
Sloth more indulgence still demands;
Sloth shuts the eyes, and folds the hands.
4 But mark the end; want shall assail,
When all your strength and vigour fail;
Want, like an armed man, shall rush
The hoary head of age to crush.

XIII. Prov. viii. 22, to the end.

1 KEEP silence, all ye sons of men, and hear with rev'rence due; Eternal Wisdom from above
thus lifts her voice to you:
2 I was th' Almighty's chief delight from everlasting days, Ere yet his arm was stretched forth the heav'ns and earth to raise.

3 Before the sea began to flow,
and leave the solid land,
Before the hills and mountains rose,
I dwelt at his right hand.
4 When first he rear'd the arch of heav'n,
and spread the clouds on air,
When first the fountains of the deep
he open'd, I was there.

5 There I was with him, when he stretch'd his compass o'er the deep,
And charg'd the ocean's swelling waves within their bounds to keep.
6 With joy I saw th' abode prepar'd which men were soon to fill:
Them from the first of days I lov'd, unchang'd, I love them still.

7 Now therefore hearken to my words,
ye children, and be wise:
Happy the man that keeps my ways;
the man that shuns them dies.
8 Where dubious paths perplex the mind, direction I afford;
Life shall be his that follows me,
and favour from the Lord.

9 But he who scorns my sacred laws shall deeply wound his heart,
He courts destruction who contemns
the counsel I impart.

XIV. Eccles. vii. 2–6.

1 WHILE others crowd the house of mirth,
and haunt the gaudy show,
Let such as would with Wisdom dwell, frequent the house of woe.
2 Better to weep with those who weep,
and share th' afflicted's smart,
Than mix with fools in giddy joys that cheat and wound the heart.

3 When virtuous sorrow clouds the face,
and tears bedim the eye,
The soul is led to solemn thought,
and wafted to the sky.
4 The wise in heart revisit oft grief's dark sequester'd cell;
The thoughtless still with levity and mirth delight to dwell.

5 The noisy laughter of the fool is like the crackling sound Of blazing thorns, which quickly fall in ashes to the ground.

XV. Eccles. ix. 4, 5, 6, 10.

1 AS long as life its term extends,
Hope's blest dominion never ends;
For while the lamp holds on to burn,
The greatest sinner may return.
2 Life is the season God hath giv'n
To fly from hell, and rise to heav'n;
That day of grace fleets fast away,
And none its rapid course can stay.

3 The living know that they must die;
But all the dead forgotten lie:
Their mem'ry and their name is gone,
Alike unknowing and unknown.
4 Their hatred and their love is lost,
Their envy bury'd in the dust;
They have no share in all that's done
Beneath the circuit of the sun.

5 Then what thy thoughts design to do,
Still let thy hands with might pursue;
Since no device nor work is found,
Nor wisdom underneath the ground.
6 In the cold grave, to which we haste,
There are no acts of pardon past:
But fix'd the doom of all remains,
And everlasting silence reigns.

XVI. Eccles. xii. 1.

1 IN life's gay morn, when sprightly youth with vital ardour glows,
And shines in all the fairest charms which beauty can disclose;
2 Deep on thy soul, before its pow'rs are yet by vice enslav'd, Be thy Creator's glorious name and character engrav'd.

3 For soon the shades of grief shall cloud
the sunshine of thy days;
And cares, and toils, in endless round,
encompass all thy ways.
4 Soon shall thy heart the woes of age in mournful groans deplore,
And sadly muse on former joys,
that now return no more.

XVII. Isaiah i. 10–19.

1 RULERS of Sodom! hear the voice of heav'n's eternal Lord; Men of Gomorrah! bend your ear submissive to his word.

Digitized by Google

2 'Tis thus he speaks: To what intent are your oblations vain?
Why load my altars with your gifts, polluted and profane?

3 Burnt-off'rings long may blaze to heav'n, and incense cloud the skies;
The worship and the worshipper are hateful in my eyes.
4 Your rites, your fasts, your pray'rs, I scorn,
and pomp of solemn days:
I know your hearts are full of guile,
and crooked are your ways.

5 But cleanse your hands, ye guilty race,
and cease from deeds of sin;
Learn in your actions to be just,
and pure in heart within.
6 Mock not my name with honours vain,
but keep my holy laws;
Do justice to the friendless poor,
and plead the widow's cause.

7 Then though your guilty souls are stain'd with sins of crimson die, Yet, through my grace, with snow itself in whiteness they shall vie.

XVIII. Isaiah ii. 2–6.

1 BEHOLD! the mountain of the Lord in latter days shall rise
On mountain tops above the hills, and draw the wond'ring eyes.
2 To this the joyful nations round,
all tribes and tongues shall flow;
Up to the hill of God, they'll say,
and to his house we'll go.

3 The beam that shines from Zion hill shall lighten ev'ry land;
The King who reigns in Salem's tow'rs shall all the world command.
4 Among the nations he shall judge;
his judgments truth shall guide;
His sceptre shall protect the just,
and quell the sinner's pride.

5 No strife shall rage, nor hostile feuds disturb those peaceful years;
To ploughshares men shall beat their swords,
to pruning-hooks their spears.
6 No longer hosts encount'ring hosts shall crowds of slain deplore:
They hang the trumpet in the hall,
and study war no more.

7 Come then, O house of Jacob! come to worship at his shrine;
And, walking in the light of God,
with holy beauties shine.

XIX. Isaiah ix. 2–8.

1 THE race that long in darkness pin'd have seen a glorious light;
The people dwell in day, who dwelt in death's surrounding night.
2 To hail thy rise, thou better Sun!
the gath'ring nations come,
Joyous, as when the reapers bear
the harvest treasures home.

3 For thou our burden hast remov'd, and quell'd th' oppressor's sway, Quick as the slaughter'd squadrons fell in Midian's evil day.
4 To us a Child of hope is born;
to us a Son is giv'n;
Him shall the tribes of earth obey,
him all the hosts of heav'n.

5 His name shall be the Prince of Peace,
for evermore ador'd,
The Wonderful, the Counsellor,
the great and mighty Lord.
6 His pow'r increasing still shall spread,
his reign no end shall know;
Justice shall guard his throne above,
and peace abound below.

XX. Isaiah xxvi. 1–7.

1 HOW glorious Sion's courts appear,
the city of our God!
His throne he hath establish'd here,
here fix'd his lov'd abode.
2 Its walls, defended by his grace,
no pow'r shall e'er o'erthrow, Salvation is its bulwark sure against th' assailing foe.

3 Lift up the everlasting gates,
the doors wide open fling;
Enter, ye nations, who obey
the statutes of our King.
4 Here shall ye taste unmingled joys,
and dwell in perfect peace,
Ye, who have known JEHOVAH's name,
and trusted in his grace.

5 Trust in the Lord, for ever trust, and banish all your fears;
Strength in the Lord JEHOVAH dwells eternal as his years.
6 What though the wicked dwell on high,
his arm shall bring them low;
Low as the caverns of the grave their lofty heads shall bow.

7 Along the dust shall then be spread their tow'rs, that brave the skies:
On them the needy's feet shall tread,
and on their ruins rise.

XXI. Isaiah xxxiii. 13–18.

1 ATTEND, ye tribes that dwell remote,
ye tribes at hand, give ear; Th' upright in heart alone have hope,
the false in heart have fear.
2 The man who walks with God in truth,
and ev'ry guile disdains;
Who hates to lift oppression's rod,
and scorns its shameful gains;

3 Whose soul abhors the impious bribe that tempts from truth to stray.
And from th' enticing snares of vice who turns his eyes away:
4 His dwelling, 'midst the strength of rocks, shall ever stand secure;
His Father will provide his bread,
his water shall be sure.

5 For him the kingdom of the just afar doth glorious shine;
And he the King of kings shall see in majesty divine.

XXII. Isaiah xl. 27, to the end.

1 WHY pour'st thou forth thine anxious plaint, despairing of relief,
As if the Lord o'erlook'd thy cause,
and did not heed thy grief?
2 Hast thou not known, hast thou not heard, that firm remains on high
The everlasting throne of him who form'd the earth and sky?

3 Art thou afraid his pow'r shall fail when comes thy evil day?
And can an all-creating arm grow weary or decay?
4 Supreme in wisdom as in pow'r
the Rock of ages stands;
Though him thou canst not see, nor trace the working of his hands.

5 He gives the conquest to the weak, supports the fainting heart;
And courage in the evil hour
his heav'nly aids impart.
6 Mere human pow'r shall fast decay,
and youthful vigour cease;
But they who wait upon the Lord,
in strength shall still increase.

7 They with unweary'd feet shall tread
the path of life divine;
With growing ardour onward move,
with growing brightness shine.
8 On eagles' wings they mount, they soar, their wings are faith and love,
Till, past the cloudy regions here,
they rise to heav'n above.

XXIII. Isaiah xlii. 1–13.

1 BEHOLD my servant! see him rise exalted in my might!
Him have I chosen, and in him
I place supreme delight.
2 On him, in rich effusion pour'd,
my Spirit shall descend;
My truths and judgments he shall shew to earth's remotest end.

3 Gentle and still shall be his voice,
no threats from him proceed;
The smoking flax he shall not quench,
nor break the bruised reed.
4 The feeble spark to flames he'll raise;
the weak will not despise;
Judgment he shall bring forth to truth,
and make the fallen rise.

5 The progress of his zeal and pow'r shall never know decline, Till foreign lands and distant isles receive the law divine.
6 He who erected heav'n's bright arch,
and bade the planets roll,
Who peopled all the climes of earth,
and form'd the human soul,

7 Thus saith the Lord, Thee have I rais'd, my Prophet thee install;
In right I've rais'd thee, and in strength
I'll succour whom I call.
8 I will establish with the lands
a covenant in thee,
To give the Gentile nations light,
and set the pris'ners free:

9 Asunder burst the gates of brass;
the iron fetters fall;
And gladsome light and liberty are straight restor'd to all.
10 I am the Lord, and by the name of great JEHOVAH known;
No idol shall usurp my praise,
nor mount into my throne.

11 Lo! former scenes, predicted once, conspicuous rise to view;
And future scenes, predicted now,
shall be accomplish'd too.
12 Sing to the Lord in joyful strains!
let earth his praise resound, Ye who upon the ocean dwell,
and fill the isles around!

13 O city of the Lord! begin the universal song;
And let the scatter'd villages
the cheerful notes prolong.
14 Let Kedar's wilderness afar lift up its lonely voice;
And let the tenants of the rock
with accents rude rejoice;

15 Till 'midst the streams of distant lands
the islands sound his praise;
And all combin'd, with one accord,
JEHOVAH's glories raise.

XXIV. Isaiah xlix. 13–17.

1 YE heav'ns, send forth your song of praise!
earth, raise your voice below!
Let hills and mountains join the hymn,
and joy through nature flow.
2 Behold how gracious is our God!
hear the consoling strains,
In which he cheers our drooping hearts,
and mitigates our pains.

3 Cease ye, when days of darkness come,
in sad dismay to mourn,
As if the Lord could leave his saints forsaken or forlorn.
4 Can the fond mother e'er forget the infant whom she bore?
And can its plaintive cries be heard,
nor move compassion more?

5 She may forget: nature may fail
a parent's heart to move;
But Sion on my heart shall dwell in everlasting love.
6 Full in my sight, upon my hands
I have engrav'd her name:
My hands shall build her ruin'd walls,
and raise her broken frame.

XXV. Isaiah liii.

1 HOW few receive with cordial faith
the tidings which we bring!
How few have seen the arm reveal'd of heav'n's eternal King!

Digitized by Google

2 The Saviour comes! no outward pomp bespeaks his presence nigh;
No earthly beauty shines in him
to draw the carnal eye.

3 Fair as a beauteous tender flow'r amidst the desert grows,
So slighted by a rebel race
the heav'nly Saviour rose.
4 Rejected and despis'd of men, behold a man of woe!
Grief was his close companion still
through all his life below.

5 Yet all the griefs he felt were ours,
ours were the woes he bore:
Pangs, not his own, his spotless soul with bitter anguish tore.
6 We held him as condemn'd by Heav'n,
an outcast from his God,
While for our sins he groan'd, he bled,
beneath his Father's rod.

7 His sacred blood hath wash'd our souls
from sin's polluted stain;
His stripes have heal'd us, and his death
reviv'd our souls again.
8 We all, like sheep, had gone astray
in ruin's fatal road:
On him were our transgressions laid;
he bore the mighty load.

9 Wrong'd and oppress'd, how meekly he in patient silence stood!
Mute, as the peaceful harmless lamb,
when brought to shed its blood.
10 Who can his generation tell?
from prison see him led!
With impious show of law condemn'd, and number'd with the dead.

11 'Midst sinners low in dust he lay;
the rich a grave supply'd:
Unspotted was his blameless life;
unstain'd by sin he dy'd.
12 Yet God shall raise his head on high,
though thus he brought him low;
His sacred off'ring, when complete,
shall terminate his woe.

13 For, saith the Lord, my pleasure then shall prosper in his hand;
His shall a num'rous offspring be,
and still his honours stand.
14 His soul, rejoicing, shall behold
the purchase of his pain;
And all the guilty whom he sav'd shall bless Messiah's reign.

15 He with the great shall share the spoil,
and baffle all his foes;
Though rank'd with sinners, here he fell,
a conqueror he rose.
16 He dy'd to bear the guilt of men,
that sin might be forgiv'n:
He lives to bless them, and defend,
and plead their cause in heav'n.

XXVI. Isaiah lv.

1 HO! ye that thirst, approach the spring
where living waters flow:
Free to that sacred fountain all without a price may go.
2 How long to streams of false delight will ye in crowds repair?
How long your strength and substance on trifles, light as air? [waste

3 My stores afford those rich supplies that health and pleasure give:
Incline your ear, and come to me;
the soul that hears shall live.
4 With you a cov'nant I will make,
that ever shall endure;
The hope which gladden'd David's heart
my mercy hath made sure.

5 Behold he comes! your leader comes,
with might and honour crown'd;
A witness who shall spread my name to earth's remotest bound.
6 See! nations hasten to his call from ev'ry distant shore;
Isles, yet unknown, shall bow to him,
and Isr'el's God adore.

7 Seek ye the Lord while yet his ear is open to your call;
While offer'd mercy still is near,
before his footstool fall.
8 Let sinners quit their evil ways,
their evil thoughts forego,
And God, when they to him return, returning grace will shew.

9 He pardons with o'erflowing love:
for, hear the voice divine!
My nature is not like to yours,
nor like your ways are mine:
10 But far as heav'n's resplendent orbs beyond earth's spot extend,
As far my thoughts, as far my ways,
your ways and thoughts transcend.

11 And as the rains from heav'n distil,
nor thither mount again,
But swell the earth with fruitful juice,
and all its tribes sustain:
12 So not a word that flows from me shall ineffectual fall;
But universal nature prove obedient to my call.

13 With joy and peace shall then be led the glad converted lands:
The lofty mountains then shall sing,
the forests clap their hands.
14 Where briers grew 'midst barren wilds, shall firs and myrtles spring;
And nature, through its utmost bounds,
eternal praises sing.

XXVII. Isaiah lvii. 15–16.

1 THUS speaks the high and lofty one;
ye tribes of earth, give ear;
The words of your Almighty King with sacred rev'rence hear:
2 Amidst the majesty of heav'n
my throne is fix'd on high;
And through eternity I hear the praises of the sky:

3 Yet, looking down, I visit oft
the humble hallow'd cell;
And with the penitent who mourn
'tis my delight to dwell;
4 The downcast spirit to revive,
the sad in soul to cheer;
And from the bed of dust the man of heart contrite to rear.

5 With me dwells no relentless wrath against the human race;
The souls which I have form'd shall find a refuge in my grace.

XXVIII. Isaiah lviii. 5–9.

1 ATTEND, and mark the solemn fast which to the Lord is dear; Disdain the false unhallow'd mask which vain dissemblers wear.
2 Do I delight in sorrow's dress?
saith he who reigns above;
The hanging head and rueful look,
will they attract my love?

3 Let such as feel oppression's load thy tender pity share:
And let the helpless, homeless poor,
be thy peculiar care.
4 Go, bid the hungry orphan be with thy abundance blest; Invite the wand'rer to thy gate,
and spread the couch of rest.

5 Let him who pines with piercing cold
by thee be warm'd and clad;
Be thine the blissful task to make the downcast mourner glad.
6 Then, bright as morning, shall come in peace and joy, thy days; [forth,
And glory from the Lord above shall shine on all thy ways.

XXIX. Lament. iii. 37–40.

1 AMIDST the mighty, where is he who saith, and it is done?
Each varying scene of changeful life is from the Lord alone.
2 He gives in gladsome bow'rs to dwell, or clothes in sorrow's shroud;
His hand hath form'd the light, his hand hath form'd the dark'ning cloud.

3 Why should a living man complain beneath the chast'ning rod?
Our sins afflict us; and the cross must bring us back to God.
4 O sons of men! with anxious care your hearts and ways explore; Return from paths of vice to God:
return, and sin no more!

XXX. Hosea vi. 1–4.

1 COME, let us to the Lord our God with contrite hearts return;
Our God is gracious, nor will leave the desolate to mourn.
2 His voice commands the tempest forth,
and stills the stormy wave;
And though his arm be strong to smite,
'tis also strong to save.

3 Long hath the night of sorrow reign'd;
the dawn shall bring us light:
God shall appear, and we shall rise with gladness in his sight.
4 Our hearts, if God we seek to know, shall know him, and rejoice;
His coming like the morn shall be,
like morning songs his voice.

5 As dew upon the tender herb,
diffusing fragrance round;
As show'rs that usher in the spring,
and cheer the thirsty ground:
6 So shall his presence bless our souls,
and shed a joyful light;
That hallow'd morn shall chase away
the sorrows of the night.

XXXI. Micah vi. 6–9.

1 THUS speaks the heathen: How shall the Pow'r Supreme adore? [man With what accepted off'rings come his mercy to implore?
2 Shall clouds of incense to the skies with grateful odour speed?
Or victims from a thousand hills
upon the altar bleed?

3 Does justice nobler blood demand to save the sinner's life; Shall, trembling, in his offspring's side
the father plunge the knife?
4 No: God rejects the bloody rites which blindfold zeal began;
His oracles of truth proclaim the message brought to man.

5 He what is good hath clearly shewn,
O favour'd race! to thee;
And what doth God require of those who bend to him the knee?
6 Thy deeds, let sacred justice rule;
thy heart, let mercy fill:
And walking humbly with thy God,
to him resign thy will.

XXXII. Habak. iii. 17, 18.

1 WHAT though no flow'rs the fig-tree clothe,
though vines their fruit deny,
The labour of the olive fail,
and fields no meat supply?
2 Though from the fold, with sad surprise,
my flock cut off I see;
Though famine pine in empty stalls,
where herds were wont to be?

3 Yet in the Lord will I be glad,
and glory in his love;
In him I'll joy, who will the God of my salvation prove.
4 He to my tardy feet shall lend the swiftness of the roe;
Till, rais'd on high, I safely dwell
beyond the reach of woe.

5 God is the treasure of my soul,
the source of lasting joy;
A joy which want shall not impair,
nor death itself destroy.

XXXIII. Matth. vi. 9–14.

1 FATHER of all! we bow to thee, who dwell'st in heav'n ador'd;

Digitized by Google

But present still through all thy works,
the universal Lord.
2 For ever hallow'd be thy name
by all beneath the skies;
And may thy kingdom still advance,
till grace to glory rise.

3 A grateful homage may we yield,
with hearts resign'd to thee;
And as in heav'n thy will is done,
on earth so let it be.
4 From day to day we humbly own the hand that feeds us still:
Give us our bread, and teach to rest contented in thy will.

5 Our sins before thee we confess;
O may they be forgiv'n!
As we to others mercy shew,
we mercy beg from Heav'n.
6 Still let thy grace our life direct;
from evil guard our way;
And in temptation's fatal path permit us not to stray.

7 For thine the pow'r, the kingdom thine;
all glory's due to thee:
Thine from eternity they were,
and thine shall ever be.

XXXIV. Matth. xi. 25, to the end.

1 THUS spoke the Saviour of the world, and rais'd his eyes to heav'n:
To thee, O Father! Lord of all,
eternal praise be giv'n.
2 Thou to the pure and lowly heart hast heav'nly truth reveal'd;
Which from the self-conceited mind
thy wisdom hath conceal'd.

3 Ev'n so! thou, Father, hast ordain'd thy high decree to stand;
Nor men nor angels may presume
the reason to demand.
4 Thou only know'st the Son: from thee
my kingdom I receive;
And none the Father know but they who in the Son believe.

5 Come then to me, all ye who groan, with guilt and fears opprest; Resign to me the willing heart,
and I will give you rest.
6 Take up my yoke, and learn of me
the meek and lowly mind;
And thus your weary troubled souls repose and peace shall find.

7 For light and gentle is my yoke;
the burden I impose Shall ease the heart which groan'd before beneath a load of woes.

XXXV. Matth. xxvi. 26–29.

1 'TWAS on that night, when doom'd to
The eager rage of ev'ry foe, [know
That night in which he was betray'd,
The Saviour of the world took bread:
2 And, after thanks and glory giv'n
To him that rules in earth and heav'n,
That symbol of his flesh he broke,
And thus to all his foll'wers spoke:

3 My broken body thus I give
For you, for all; take, eat, and live;
And oft the sacred rite renew,
That brings my wondrous love to view.
4 Then in his hands the cup he rais'd,
And God anew he thank'd and prais'd;
While kindness in his bosom glow'd,
And from his lips salvation flow'd:

5 My blood I thus pour forth, he cries,
To cleanse the soul in sin that lies;
In this the covenant is seal'd,
And Heav'n's eternal grace reveal'd.
6 With love to man this cup is fraught,
Let all partake the sacred draught;
Through latest ages let it pour,
In mem'ry of my dying hour.

XXXVI. Luke i. 46–56.

1 MY soul and spirit, fill'd with joy,
my God and Saviour praise, Whose goodness did from poor estate
his humble handmaid raise,
2 Me bless'd of God, the God of might,
all ages shall proclaim;
From age to age his mercy lasts,
and holy is his name.

3 Strength with his arm th' Almighty
the proud his looks abas'd; [shew'd;
He cast the mighty to the ground,
the meek to honour rais'd.
4 The hungry with good things were fill'd,
the rich with hunger pin'd:
He sent his servant Isr'el help,
and call'd his love to mind;

5 Which to our fathers' ancient race his promise did ensure,
To Abrah'm and his chosen seed,
for ever to endure.

XXXVII. Luke ii. 8–15.

1 WHILE humble shepherds watch'd their flocks
in Bethleh'm's plains by night,
An angel sent from heav'n appear'd,
and fill'd the plains with light.
2 Fear not, he said, (for sudden dread had seiz'd their troubled mind;) Glad tidings of great joy I bring to you, and all mankind.

3 To you, in David's town, this day is born, of David's line,
The Saviour, who is Christ the Lord;
and this shall be the sign:
4 The heav'nly Babe you there shall find to human view display'd,
All meanly wrapt in swaddling-bands,
and in a manger laid.

5 Thus spake the seraph; and forthwith
appear'd a shining throng
Of angels, praising God; and thus address'd their joyful song:
6 All glory be to God on high,
and to the earth be peace;
Good-will is shewn by Heav'n to men,
and never more shall cease.

XXXVIII. Luke ii. 25–33.

1 JUST and devout old Simeon liv'd;
to him it was reveal'd,
That Christ, the Lord, his eyes should ere death his eyelids seal'd. [see, 2 For this consoling gift of Heav'n to Isr'el's fallen state,
From year to year with patient hope the aged saint did wait.

3 Nor did he wait in vain; for, lo!
revolving years brought round,
In season due, the happy day,
which all his wishes crown'd.
4 When Jesus, to the temple brought by Mary's pious care,
As Heav'n's appointed rites requir'd,
to God was offer'd there,

5 Simeon into those sacred courts
a hea'vnly impulse drew;
He saw the Virgin hold her Son,
and straight his Lord he knew.
6 With holy joy upon his face
the good old father smil'd;
Then fondly in his wither'd arms
he clasp'd the promis'd child:

7 And while he held the heav'n-born Babe, ordain'd to bless mankind,
Thus spoke, with earnest look, and heart
exulting, yet resign'd:
8 Now, Lord! according to thy word,
let me in peace depart;
Mine eyes have thy salvation seen,
and gladness fills my heart.

9 At length my arms embrace my Lord,
now let their vigour cease;
At last my eyes my Saviour see,
now let them close in peace.
10 This great salvation, long prepar'd,
and now disclos'd to view,
Hath prov'd thy love was constant still,
and promises were true.

11 That Sun I now behold, whose light shall heathen darkness chase;
And rays of brightest glory pour around thy chosen race.

XXXIX. Luke iv. 18, 19.

1 HARK, the glad sound, the Saviour
the Saviour promis'd long; [comes!
Let ev'ry heart exult with joy,
and ev'ry voice be song!
2 On him the Spirit, largely shed, exerts its sacred fire;
Wisdom and might, and zeal and love,
his holy breast inspire.

3 He comes! the pris'ners to relieve,
in Satan's bondage held;
The gates of brass before him burst,
the iron fetters yield.
4 He comes! from dark'ning scales of vice to clear the inward sight;
And on the eye-balls of the blind to pour celestial light.

5 He comes! the broken hearts to bind,
the bleeding souls to cure;
And with the treasures of his grace
t' enrich the humble poor.
6 The sacred year has now revolv'd, accepted of the Lord,
When Heav'n's high promise is fulfill'd, and Isr'el is restor'd.

7 Our glad hosannahs, Prince of Peace!
thy welcome shall proclaim;
And heav'n's exalted arches ring with thy most honour'd name.

XL. Luke xv. 13–25.

1 THE wretched prodigal behold
in mis'ry lying low,
Whom vice had sunk from high estate,
and plung'd in want and woe.
2 While I, despis'd and scorn'd, he cries, starve in a foreign land,
The meanest in my father's house is fed with bounteous hand:

3 I'll go, and with a mourning voice,
fall down before his face:
Father! I've sinn'd 'gainst Heav'n and nor can deserve thy grace. [thee, 4 He said, and hasten'd to his home,
to seek his father's love:
The father sees him from afar,
and all his bowels move.

5 He ran, and fell upon his neck, embrac'd and kiss'd his son:
The grieving prodigal bewail'd
the follies he had done.
6 No more, my father, can I hope to find paternal grace;
My utmost wish is to obtain a servant's humble place.

7 Bring forth the fairest robe for him,
the joyful father said;
To him each mark of grace be shewn,
and ev'ry honour paid.
8 A day of feasting I ordain;
let mirth and song abound:
My son was dead, and lives again:
was lost, and now is found!

9 Thus joy abounds in paradise
among the hosts of heav'n,
Soon as the sinner quits his sins, repents, and is forgiv'n.

XLI. John iii. 14–19.

1 AS when the Hebrew prophet rais'd
the brazen serpent high,
The wounded look'd, and straight were
the people ceas'd to die: [cur'd, 2 So from the Saviour on the cross
a healing virtue flows;
Who looks to him with lively faith is sav'd from endless woes.

3 For God gave up his Son to death,
so gen'rous was his love,
That all the faithful might enjoy eternal life above.
4 Not to condemn the sons of men
the Son of God appear'd;
No weapons in his hand are seen,
nor voice of terror heard:

5 He came to raise our fallen state,
and our lost hopes restore:

Faith leads us to the mercy-seat,
and bids us fear no more.
6 But vengeance just for ever lies on all the rebel race,
Who God's eternal Son despise, and scorn his offer'd grace.

XLII. John xiv. 1–7.

1 LET not your hearts with anxious be troubled or dismay'd; [thoughts
But trust in Providence divine, and trust my gracious aid.
2 I to my Father's house return;
there num'rous mansions stand,
And glory manifold abounds through all the happy land.

3 I go your entrance to secure,
and your abode prepare;
Regions unknown are safe to you,
when I, your friend, am there.
4 Thence shall I come, when ages close,
to take you home with me;
There we shall meet to part no more,
and still together be.

5 I am the way, the truth, the life:
no son of human race,
But such as I conduct and guide,
shall see my Father's face.

XLIII. John xiv. 25–28.

1 YOU now must hear my voice no more;
my Father calls me home;
But soon from heav'n the Holy Ghost, your Comforter, shall come.
2 That heav'nly Teacher, sent from God, shall your whole soul inspire;
Your minds shall fill with sacred truth,
your hearts with sacred fire.

3 Peace is the gift I leave with you;
my peace to you bequeath;
Peace that shall comfort you through life,
and cheer your souls in death.
4 I give not as the world bestows, with promise false and vain;
Nor cares, nor fears, shall wound the in which my words remain. [heart

XLIV. John xix. 30.

1 BEHOLD the Saviour on the cross,
a spectacle of woe!
See from his agonizing wounds
the blood incessant flow;
2 Till death's pale ensigns o'er his cheek and trembling lips were spread;
Till light forsook his closing eyes,
and life his drooping head!

3 'Tis finish'd—was his latest voice;
these sacred accents o'er,
He bow'd his head, gave up the ghost,
and suffer'd pain no more.
4 'Tis finish'd—The Messiah dies for sins, but not his own;
The great redemption is complete,
and Satan's pow'r o'erthrown.

5 'Tis finish'd—All his groans are past;
his blood, his pain, and toils,
Have fully vanquished our foes,
and crown'd him with their spoils.
6 'Tis finish'd—Legal worship ends,
and gospel ages run;
All old things now are pass'd away,
and a new world begun.

XLV. Romans ii. 4–8.

1 UNGRATEFUL sinners! whence this scorn
of God's long-suff'ring grace?
And whence this madness that insults
th' Almighty to his face?
2 Is it because his patience waits,
and pitying bowels move,
You multiply transgressions more,
and scorn his offer'd love?

3 Dost thou not know, self-blinded man!
his goodness is design'd
To wake repentance in thy soul, and melt thy harden'd mind?
4 And wilt thou rather chuse to meet
th' Almighty as thy foe,
And treasure up his wrath in store against the day of woe?

5 Soon shall that fatal day approach that must thy sentence seal,
And righteous judgments, now unknown,
in awful pomp reveal;
6 While they, who full of holy deeds to glory seek to rise, Continuing patient to the end,
shall gain th' immortal prize.

XLVI. Romans iii. 19–22.

1 VAIN are the hopes the sons of men upon their works have built;
Their hearts by nature are unclean,
their actions full of guilt.
2 Silent let Jew and Gentile stand, without one vaunting word;
And, humbled low, confess their guilt before heav'n's righteous Lord.

3 No hope can on the law be built of justifying grace;
The law, that shews the sinner's guilt,
condemns him to his face.
4 Jesus! how glorious is thy grace!
when in thy name we trust,
Our faith receives a righteousness that makes the sinner just.

XLVII. Romans vi. 1–7.

1 AND shall we then go on to sin, that grace may more abound?
Great God, forbid that such a thought should in our breast be found!
2 When to the sacred font we came,
did not the rite proclaim,
That, wash'd from sin, and all its stains,
new creatures we became?

3 With Christ the Lord we dy'd to sin;
with him to life we rise.
To life, which now begun on earth,
is perfect in the skies.
4 Too long enthrall'd to Satan's sway,
we now are slaves no more;
For Christ hath vanquish'd death and our freedom to restore. [sin,

XLVIII. Romans viii. 31, to the end.

1 LET Christian faith and hope dispel the fears of guilt and woe;
The Lord Almighty is our friend,
and who can prove a foe?
2 He who his Son, most dear and lov'd, gave up for us to die, Shall he not all things freely give that goodness can supply?

3 Behold the best, the greatest gift, of everlasting love!
Behold the pledge of peace below,
and perfect bliss above!
4 Where is the judge who can condemn,
since God hath justify'd?
Who shall charge those with guilt or for whom the Saviour dy'd? [crime

5 The Saviour dy'd, but rose again triumphant from the grave;
And pleads our cause at God's right
omnipotent to save. [hand, 6 Who then can e'er divide us more from Jesus and his love,
Or break the sacred chain that binds
the earth to heav'n above?

7 Let troubles rise, and terrors frown,
and days of darkness fall;
Through him all dangers we'll defy,
and more than conquer all.
8 Nor death nor life, nor earth nor hell,
nor time's destroying sway,
Can e'er efface us from his heart,
or make his love decay.

9 Each future period that will bless as it has bless'd the past;
He lov'd us from the first of time,
he loves us to the last.

XLIX. 1 Corinth. xiii.

1 THOUGH perfect eloquence adorn'd my sweet persuading tongue, Though I could speak in higher strains than ever angels sung;
2 Though prophecy my soul inspir'd, and made all myst'ries plain:
Yet, were I void of Christian love,
these gifts were all in vain.

3 Nay, though my faith with boundless ev'n mountains could remove, [pow'r
I still am nothing, if I'm void of charity and love.
4 Although with lib'ral hand I gave my goods the poor to feed, Nay, gave my body to the flames,
still fruitless were the deed.

5 Love suffers long; love envies not;
but love is ever kind;
She never boasteth of herself,
nor proudly lifts the mind.
6 Love harbours no suspicious thought,
is patient to the bad;
Griev'd when she hears of sins and
and in the truth is glad. [crimes,

7 Love no unseemly carriage shews, nor selfishly confin'd;
She glows with social tenderness,
and feels for all mankind.
8 Love beareth much, much she believes,
and still she hopes the best;
Love meekly suffers many a wrong,
though sore with hardship press'd.

9 Love still shall hold an endless reign
in earth and heav'n above,
When tongues shall cease, and prophets and ev'ry gift but love. [fail, 10 Here all our gifts imperfect are;
but better days draw nigh,
When perfect light shall pour its rays,
and all those shadows fly.

11 Like children here we speak and think,
amus'd with childish toys;
But when our pow'rs their manhood we'll scorn our present joys. [reach, 12 Now dark and dim, as through a glass,
are God and truth beheld;
Then shall we see as face to face,
and God shall be unvail'd.

13 Faith, Hope, and Love, now dwell on and earth by them is blest; [earth, But Faith and Hope must yield to Love,
of all the graces best.
14 Hope shall to full fruition rise,
and Faith be sight above:
These are the means, but this the end;
for saints for ever love.

L. 1 Corinth. xv. 52, to the end.

1 WHEN the last trumpet's awful voice
this rending earth shall shake,
When op'ning graves shall yield their and dust to life awake; [charge, 2 Those bodies that corrupted fell shall incorrupted rise,
And mortal forms shall spring to life immortal in the skies.

3 Behold what heav'nly prophets sung is now at last fulfill'd, That Death should yield his ancient and, vanquish'd, quit the field. [reign, 4 Let Faith exalt her joyful voice,
and thus begin to sing;
O Grave! where is thy triumph now?
and where, O Death! thy sting?

5 Thy sting was sin, and conscious guilt,
'twas this that arm'd thy dart;
The law gave sin its strength and force to pierce the sinner's heart:
6 But God, whose name be ever bless'd!
disarms that foe we dread,
And makes us conqu'rors when we die,
through Christ our living head.

7 Then stedfast let us still remain, though dangers rise around,
And in the work prescrib'd by God
yet more and more abound;
8 Assur'd that though we labour now,
we labour not in vain,
But, through the grace of heav'n's great
th' eternal crown shall gain. [Lord,

LI. 2 Corinth. v. 1–11.

1 SOON shall this earthly frame, dis-in death and ruins lie; [solv'd, But better mansions wait the just,
prepar'd above the sky.
2 An house eternal, built by God, shall lodge the holy mind,
When once those prison-walls have fall'n
by which 'tis now confin'd.

3 Hence, burden'd with a weight of clay,
we groan beneath the load,
Waiting the hour which sets us free,
and brings us home to God.
4 We know, that when the soul, uncloth'd, shall from this body fly,
'Twill animate a purer frame with life that cannot die.

5 Such are the hopes that cheer the just:
these hopes their God hath giv'n;
His Spirit is the earnest now,
and seals their souls for heav'n.
6 We walk by faith of joys to come,
faith grounded on his word;
But while this body is our home,
we mourn an absent Lord.

7 What faith rejoices to believe,
we long and pant to see;
We would be absent from the flesh,
and present, Lord! with thee.
8 But still, or here, or going hence,
to this our labours tend,
That, in his service spent, our life may in his favour end.

9 For, lo! before the Son, as judge,
th' assembled world shall stand,
To take the punishment or prize
from his unerring hand.
10 Impartial retributions then our diff'rent lives await;
Our present actions, good or bad, shall fix our future fate.

LII. Philip. ii. 6–12.

1 YE who the name of Jesus bear,
his sacred steps pursue;
And let that mind which was in him be also found in you.
2 Though in the form of God he was,
his only Son declar'd, Nor to be equally ador'd
as robb'ry did regard;

3 His greatness he for us abas'd,
for us his glory vail'd;
In human likeness dwelt on earth,
his majesty conceal'd:
4 Nor only as a man appears,
but stoops a servant low;
Submits to death, nay, bears the cross,
in all its shame and woe.

5 Hence God this gen'rous love to men with honours just hath crown'd,
And rais'd the name of Jesus far above all names renown'd:
6 That at this name, with sacred awe,
each humble knee should bow,
Of hosts immortal in the skies,
and nations spread below:

7 That all the prostrate pow'rs of hell might tremble at his word,
And ev'ry tribe, and ev'ry tongue,
confess that he is Lord.

LIII. 1 Thessal. iv. 13, to the end.

1 TAKE comfort, Christians, when your in Jesus fall asleep; [friends Their better being never ends;
why then dejected weep?
2 Why inconsolable, as those to whom no hope is giv'n?
Death is the messenger of peace,
and calls the soul to heav'n.

3 As Jesus dy'd, and rose again, victorious from the dead;
So his disciples rise, and reign with their triumphant Head.
4 The time draws nigh, when from the clouds
Christ shall with shouts descend,
And the last trumpet's awful voice
the heav'ns and earth shall rend.

5 Then they who live shall changed be,
and they who sleep shall wake;
The graves shall yield their ancient charge,
and earth's foundations shake.
6 The saints of God, from death set free, with joy shall mount on high;
The heav'nly hosts with praises loud shall meet them in the sky.

7 Together to their Father's house with joyful hearts they go;
And dwell for ever with the Lord,
beyond the reach of woe.
8 A few short years of evil past,
we reach the happy shore,
Where death-divided friends at last shall meet, to part no more.

LIV. 2 Tim. i. 12.

1 I'M not asham'd to own my Lord,
or to defend his cause,
Maintain the glory of his cross,
and honour all his laws.
2 Jesus, my Lord! I know his name, his name is all my boast;
Nor will he put my soul to shame,
nor let my hope be lost.

3 I know that safe with him remains,
protected by his pow'r,
What I've commited to his trust,
till the decisive hour.
4 Then will he own his servant's name before his Father's face,
And in the New Jerusalem
appoint my soul a place.

LV. 2 Tim. iv. 6, 7, 8, 18.

1 MY race is run; my warfare's o'er;
the solemn hour is nigh,
When, offer'd up to God, my soul shall wing its flight on high.
2 With heav'nly weapons I have fought the battles of the Lord;
Finish'd my course, and kept the faith,
depending on his word.

3 Henceforth there is laid up for me
a crown which cannot fade;
The righteous Judge at that great day,
shall place it on my head.
4 Nor hath the Sov'reign Lord decreed this prize for me alone;
But for all such as love like me
th' appearance of his Son.

5 From ev'ry snare and evil work his grace shall me defend,
And to his heav'nly kingdom safe shall bring me in the end.

LVI. Titus iii. 3–9.

1 HOW wretched was our former state,
when, slaves to Satan's sway,
With hearts disorder'd and impure, o'erwhelm'd in sin we lay!
2 But, O my soul! for ever praise,
for ever love his name,
Who turn'd thee from the fatal paths of folly, sin, and shame.

3 Vain and presumptuous is the trust which in our works we place, Salvation from a higher source flows to the human race.
4 'Tis from the mercy of our God that all our hopes begin;
His mercy sav'd our souls from death,
and wash'd our souls from sin.

5 His Spirit, through the Saviour shed, its sacred fire imparts, Refines our dross, and love divine rekindles in our hearts.
6 Thence rais'd from death, we live anew;
and, justify'd by grace,
We hope in glory to appear,
and see our Father's face.

7 Let all who hold this faith and hope in holy deeds abound;
Thus faith approves itself sincere,
by active virtue crown'd.

LVII. Heb. iv. 14, to the end.

1 JESUS, the Son of God, who once for us his life resign'd, Now lives in heaven, our great High and never-dying friend. [Priest, 2 Through life, through death, let us to with constancy adhere; [him Faith shall supply new strength, and shall banish ev'ry fear. [hope

3 To human weakness not severe is our High Priest above;
His heart o'erflows with tenderness,
his bowels melt with love.
4 With sympathetic feelings touch'd,
he knows our feeble frame;
He knows what sore temptations are,
for he has felt the same.

5 But though he felt temptation's pow'r, unconquer'd he remain'd;
Nor, 'midst the frailty of our frame,
by sin was ever stain'd.
6 As, in the days of feeble flesh,
he pour'd forth cries and tears;
So, though exalted, still he feels what ev'ry Christian bears.

7 Then let us, with a filial heart, come boldly to the throne
Of grace supreme, to tell our griefs, and all our wants make known:
8 That mercy we may there obtain for sins and errors past,
And grace to help in time of need,
while days of trial last.

LVIII. Another Version of the same passage.

1 WHERE high the heav'nly temple stands,
The house of God not made with hands,
A great High Priest our nature wears,
The guardian of mankind appears.
2 He who for men their surety stood,
And pour'd on earth his precious blood,
Pursues in heav'n his mighty plan,
The Saviour and the friend of man.

3 Though now ascended up on high,
He bends on earth a brother's eye;
Partaker of the human name,
He knows the frailty of our frame.
4 Our fellow-suff'rer yet retains
A fellow-feeling of our pains;
And still remembers in the skies
His tears, his agonies, and cries.

5 In ev'ry pang that rends the heart,
The Man of sorrows had a part;
He sympathizes with our grief,
And to the suff'rer sends relief.
6 With boldness, therefore, at the throne,
Let us make all our sorrows known;
And ask the aids of heav'nly pow'r
To help us in the evil hour.

LIX. Heb. xii. 1–13.

1 BEHOLD what witnesses unseen encompass us around;
Men, once like us, with suff'ring try'd,
but now with glory crown'd.
2 Let us, with zeal like theirs inspir'd,
begin the Christian race,
And, freed from each encumb'ring weight,
their holy footsteps trace.

3 Behold a witness nobler still,
who trod affliction's path,
Jesus, at once the finisher and author of our faith.
4 He for the joy before him set,
so gen'rous was his love,
Endur'd the cross, despis'd the shame,
and now he reigns above.

5 If he the scorn of wicked men with patience did sustain, Becomes it those for whom he dy'd to murmur or complain?
6 Have ye like him to blood, to death,
the cause of truth maintain'd?
And is your heav'nly Father's voice forgotten or disdain'd?

7 My son, saith he, with patient mind endure the chast'ning rod:

Digitized by Google

Believe, when by afflictions try'd, that thou art lov'd by God.
8 His children thus most dear to him,
their heav'nly Father trains, Through all the hard experience led of sorrows and of pains.

9 We know he owns us for his sons,
when we correction share;
Nor wander as a bastard race,
without our Father's care.
10 A Father's voice with rev'rence we on earth have often heard;
The Father of our spirits now demands the same regard.

11 Parents may err; but he is wise,
nor lifts the rod in vain;
His chast'nings serve to cure the soul
by salutary pain.
12 Affliction, when it spreads around,
may seem a field of woe;
Yet there, at last, the happy fruits of righteousness shall grow.

13 Then let our hearts no more despond,
our hands be weak no more;
Still let us trust our Father's love,
his wisdom still adore.

LX. Heb. xiii. 20, 21.

1 FATHER of peace, and God of love!
we own thy pow'r to save,
That pow'r by which our Shepherd rose victorious o'er the grave.
2 Him from the dead thou brought'st again,
when, by his sacred blood,
Confirm'd and seal'd for evermore,
th' eternal cov'nant stood.

3 O may thy Spirit seal our souls, and mould them to thy will,
That our weak hearts no more may stray,
but keep thy precepts still;
4 That to perfection's sacred height
we nearer still may rise,
And all we think, and all we do,
be pleasing in thine eyes.

LXI. 1 Peter i. 3–5.

1 BLESS'D be the everlasting God,
the Father of our Lord;
Be his abounding mercy prais'd,
his majesty ador'd.
2 When from the dead he rais'd his Son,
and call'd him to the sky,
He gave our souls a lively hope that they should never die.

3 To an inheritance divine
he taught our hearts to rise;
'Tis uncorrupted, undefil'd,
unfading in the skies.
4 Saints by the pow'r of God are kept till the salvation come:
We walk by faith as strangers here;
but Christ shall call us home.

LXII. 2 Peter iii. 3–14.

1 LO! in the last of days behold
a faithless race arise:
Their lawless lust their only rule;
and thus the scoffer cries:
2 Where is the promise, deem'd so true, that spoke the Saviour near?
E'er since our fathers slept in dust,
no change has reach'd our ear.

3 Years roll'd on years successive glide, since first the world began,
And on the tide of time still floats, secure, the bark of man.
4 Thus speaks the scoffer; but his words conceal the truth he knows, That from the waters' dark abyss
the earth at first arose.

5 But when the sons of men began with one consent to stray,
At Heav'n's command a deluge swept the godless race away.
6 A diff'rent fate is now prepar'd for Nature's trembling frame:
Soon shall her orbs be all enwrapt in one devouring flame.

7 Reserv'd are sinners for the hour
when to the gulf below, Arm'd with the hand of sov'reign pow'r,
the Judge consigns his foe.
8 Though now, ye just! the time appears protracted, dark, unknown,
An hour, a day, a thousand years,
to heav'n's great Lord are one.

9 Still all may share his sov'reign grace,
in ev'ry change secure;
The meek, the suppliant contrite race,
shall find his mercy sure.
10 The contrite race he counts his friends, forbids the suppliant's fall; Condemns reluctant, but extends the hope of grace to all.

11 Yet as the night-wrapp'd thief who lurks to seize th' expected prize, Thus steals the hour when Christ shall and thunder rend the skies. [come, 12 Then at the loud, the solemn peal,
the heav'ns shall burst away;
The elements shall melt in flame
at Nature's final day.

13 Since all this frame of things must end,
as Heav'n has so decreed,
How wise our inmost thoughts to guard,
and watch o'er ev'ry deed;
14 Expecting calm th' appointed hour,
when, Nature's conflict o'er,
A new and better world shall rise,
where sin is known no more.

LXIII. 1 John iii. 1–4.

1 BEHOLD th' amazing gift of love
the Father hath bestow'd
On us, the sinful sons of men, to call us sons of God!
2 Conceal'd as yet this honour lies,
by this dark world unknown,
A world that knew not when he came,
ev'n God's eternal Son.

3 High is the rank we now possess;
but higher we shall rise;
Though what we shall hereafter be is hid from mortal eyes:
4 Our souls, we know, when he appears,
shall bear his image bright;
For all his glory, full disclos'd, shall open to our sight.

5 A hope so great, and so divine,
may trials well endure;
And purge the soul from sense and sin,
as Christ himself is pure.

LXIV. Rev. i. 5–9.

1 TO him that lov'd the souls of men,
and wash'd us in his blood,
To royal honours rais'd our head,
and made us priests to God;
2 To him let ev'ry tongue be praise,
and ev'ry heart be love!
All grateful honours paid on earth,
and nobler songs above!

3 Behold, on flying clouds he comes!
his saints shall bless the day;
While they that pierc'd him sadly mourn
in anguish and dismay.
4 I am the First, and I the Last;
time centres all in me;
Th' Almighty God, who was, and is,
and evermore shall be.

LXV. Rev. v. 6, to the end.

1 BEHOLD the glories of the Lamb
amidst his Father's throne; Prepare new honours for his name,
and songs before unknown.
2 Lo! elders worship at his feet;
the church adores around,
With vials full of odours rich,
and harps of sweetest sound.

3 These odours are the pray'rs of saints, these sounds the hymns they raise;
God bends his ear to their requests,
he loves to hear their praise.
4 Who shall the Father's record search, and hidden things reveal?
Behold the Son that record takes,
and opens ev'ry seal!

5 Hark how th' adoring hosts above with songs surround the throne!
Ten thousand thousand are their tongues;
but all their hearts are one.
6 Worthy the Lamb that dy'd, they cry, to be exalted thus;
Worthy the Lamb, let us reply,
for he was slain for us.

7 To him be pow'r divine ascrib'd, and endless blessings paid;
Salvation, glory, joy, remain for ever on his head!
8 Thou hast redeem'd us with thy blood,
and set the pris'ners free;
Thou mad'st us kings and priests to God,
and we shall reign with thee.

9 From ev'ry kindred, ev'ry tongue,
thou brought'st thy chosen race;
And distant lands and isles have shar'd
the riches of thy grace.
10 Let all that dwell above the sky,
or on the earth below,
With fields, and floods, and ocean's to thee their homage show. [shores,

11 To Him who sits upon the throne,
the God whom we adore,
And to the Lamb that once was slain,
be glory evermore.

LXVI. Rev. vii. 13, to the end.

1 HOW bright these glorious spirits shine!
whence all their white array?
How came they to the blissful seats of everlasting day?
2 Lo! these are they from suff'rings great,
who came to realms of light,
And in the blood of Christ have wash'd those robes which shine so bright.

3 Now, with triumphal palms, they stand before the throne on high,
And serve the God they love, amidst the glories of the sky.
4 His presence fills each heart with joy,
tunes ev'ry mouth to sing:
By day, by night, the sacred courts
with glad hosannahs ring.

5 Hunger and thirst are felt no more,
nor suns with scorching ray;
God is their sun, whose cheering beams diffuse eternal day.
6 The Lamb which dwells amidst the shall o'er them still preside; [throne Feed them with nourishment divine, and all their footsteps guide.

7 'Mong pastures green he'll lead his flock, where living streams appear:
And God the Lord from ev'ry eye shall wipe off ev'ry tear.

LXVII. Rev. xxi. 1–9.

1 LO! what a glorious sight appears to our admiring eyes!
The former seas have pass'd away,
the former earth and skies.
2 From heav'n the New Jerus'lem comes,
all worthy of its Lord;
See all things now at last renew'd, and paradise restor'd!

3 Attending angels shout for joy,
and the bright armies sing;
Mortals! behold the sacred seat of your descending King!
4 The God of glory down to men removes his bless'd abode;
He dwells with men; his people they,
and he his people's God.

5 His gracious hand shall wipe the tears from ev'ry weeping eye:
And pains and groans, and griefs and
and death itself, shall die. [fears, 6 Behold, I change all human things!
saith he, whose words are true;
Lo! what was old is pass'd away,
and all things are made new!

7 I am the First, and I the Last,
through endless years the same;
I AM, is my memorial still,
and my eternal name.
8 Ho, ye that thirst! to you my grace shall hidden streams disclose,
And open full the sacred spring,
whence life for ever flows.

9 Bless'd is the man that overcomes;
I'll own him for a son;
A rich inheritance rewards
the conquests he hath won.
10 But bloody hands and hearts unclean,
and all the lying race,
The faithless, and the scoffing crew,
who spurn at offer'd grace;

11 They, seiz'd by justice, shall be doom'd in dark abyss to lie,
And in the fiery burning lake
the second death shall die.
12 O may we stand before the Lamb,
when earth and seas are fled,
And hear the Judge pronounce our name,
with blessings on our head!

HYMNS.

HYMN I.

1 WHEN all thy mercies, O my God!
my rising soul surveys, Transported with the view, I'm lost in wonder, love, and praise.
2 O how shall words, with equal warmth,
the gratitude declare
That glows within my ravish'd heart!
but Thou canst read it there.

3 Thy Providence my life sustain'd, and all my wants redrest,
When in the silent womb I lay,
and hung upon the breast.
4 To all my weak complaints and cries thy mercy lent an ear, Ere yet my feeble thoughts had learn'd to form themselves in pray'r.

5 Unnumber'd comforts to my soul
thy tender care bestow'd, Before my infant heart conceiv'd from whom these comforts flow'd.
6 When in the slipp'ry paths of youth with heedless steps I ran;
Thine arm, unseen, convey'd me safe,
and led me up to man:

7 Through hidden dangers, toils, and deaths,
it gently clear'd my way;
And through the pleasing snares of vice,
more to be fear'd than they.
8 When worn with sickness, oft hast thou with health renew'd my face;
And, when in sins and sorrows sunk,
reviv'd my soul with grace.

9 Thy bounteous hand with worldly bliss hath made my cup run o'er;
And, in a kind and faithful friend,
hath doubled all my store.
10 Ten thousand thousand precious gifts
my daily thanks employ;
Nor is the least a cheerful heart,
that tastes these gifts with joy.

11 Through ev'ry period of my life thy goodness I'll proclaim;
And after death, in distant worlds,
resume the glorious theme.
12 When nature fails, and day and night
divide thy works no more,
My ever grateful heart, O Lord,
thy mercy shall adore.

13 Through all eternity to thee
a joyful song I'll raise;
For, oh! eternity's too short to utter all thy praise.

HYMN II.

1 THE spacious firmament on high,
With all the blue ethereal sky,
And spangled heav'ns, a shining frame,
Their great Original proclaim.
2 The unweary'd sun, from day to day,
Does his Creator's pow'r display;
And publishes to ev'ry land
The work of an Almighty hand.

3 Soon as the ev'ning shades prevail,
The moon takes up the wondrous tale,
And, nightly to the list'ning earth,
Repeats the story of her birth;
4 While all the stars that round her burn,
And all the planets in their turn,
Confirm the tidings as they roll,
And spread the truth from pole to pole.

5 What though in solemn silence all Move round the dark terrestrial ball?
What though no real voice, nor sound,
Amidst their radiant orbs be found?
6 In Reason's ear they all rejoice,
And utter forth a glorious voice;
For ever singing, as they shine,
"The hand that made us is divine."

HYMN III.

1 WHEN rising from the bed of death,
o'erwhelm'd with guilt and fear,
I see my Maker face to face,
O how shall I appear!
2 If yet while pardon may be found,
and mercy may be sought,
My heart with inward horror shrinks,
and trembles at the thought;

3 When thou, O Lord! shalt stand disclos'd in majesty severe,
And sit in judgment on my soul,
O how shall I appear!
4 But thou hast told the troubled mind,
who doth her sins lament,
That timely grief for errors past shall future woe prevent.

5 Then see the sorrows of my heart,
ere yet it be too late;
And hear my Saviour's dying groans,
to give those sorrows weight.
6 For never shall my soul despair of mercy at thy throne,
Who knows thine only Son has dy'd thy justice to atone.

HYMN IV.

1 BLEST morning! whose first dawning rays beheld the Son of God Arise triumphant from the grave,
and leave his dark abode.
2 Wrapt in the silence of the tomb
the great Redeemer lay, Till the revolving skies had brought the third, th' appointed day.

3 Hell and the grave combin'd their force to hold our Lord in vain; Sudden the Conqueror arose, and burst their feeble chain.
4 To thy great name, Almighty Lord!
we sacred honours pay,
And loud hosannahs shall proclaim the triumphs of the day.

5 Salvation and immortal praise to our victorious King!
Let heav'n and earth, and rocks and seas,
with glad hosannahs ring.
6 To Father, Son, and Holy Ghost,
the God whom we adore,
Be glory, as it was, and is,
and shall be evermore.

HYMN V.

1 THE hour of my departure's come;
I hear the voice that calls me home;
At last, O Lord! let trouble cease,
And let thy servant die in peace.
2 The race appointed I have run;
The combat's o'er, the prize is won;
And now my witness is on high,
And now my record's in the sky.

3 Not in mine innocence I trust;
I bow before thee in the dust;
And through my Saviour's blood alone
I look for mercy at thy throne.
4 I leave the world without a tear,
Save for the friends I held so dear;
To heal their sorrows, Lord, descend,
And to the friendless prove a friend.

5 I come, I come, at thy command,
I give my spirit to thy hand;
Stretch forth thine everlasting arms,
And shield me in the last alarms.
6 The hour of my departure's come;
I hear the voice that calls me home:
Now, O my God! let trouble cease;
Now let thy servant die in peace.

All people, clap your hands; to God . 47
After thy loving-kindness, Lord, . . 51
All lands to God, in joyful sounds, . . 66
Attend, my people, to my law, . . . 78
All people that on earth do dwell, . . 100

B

Blessed is he that wisely doth . . . 41
Be merciful to me, O God, . . . 57
Bless God, my soul. O Lord my God, . 104
Blessed are they that undefil'd, . . 119
Bless'd is each one that fears the Lord, . 128
Behold, how good a thing it is, . . 133
Behold, bless ye the Lord, all ye . . 134
By Babel's streams we sat and wept, . 137

D

Do ye, O congregation, . . . . 58
David, and his afflictions all, . . . 132

E

Except the Lord do build the house, . 127

F

For evil-doers fret thou not . . . 37

G

Give ear unto me when I call, . . . 4
Give ear unto my words, O Lord, . . 5
Give ye unto the Lord, ye sons . . 29
God will I bless all times: his praise . 34
God is our refuge and our strength, . 46
Great is the Lord, and greatly he . . 48
God's mercies I will ever sing; . . 89
God reigneth, let the earth be glad, . 97
Give thanks to God, call on his name, . 105
Give praise and thanks unto the Lord, . 106
Give thanks to God, for good is he: . 136

H

How excellent in all the earth, . . 8
Help, Lord, because the godly man . . 12
How long wilt thou forget me, Lord, . 13
Hear this, all people, and give ear, . 49
Hear, Isr'el's Shepherd! like a flock . 80
How lovely is thy dwelling-place, . . 84
He that doth in the secret place . . 91
Had not the Lord been on our side, . 124

I, J

In thy great indignation, . . . . 6
I in the Lord do put my trust: . . . 11
Jehovah hear thee in the day . . . 20
Judge me, O Lord, for I have walk'd . 26
In thee, O Lord, I put my trust, . . 31
In thy great indignation, . . . . 38
I said, I will look to my ways, . . . 39
I waited for the Lord my God, . . . 40
Judge me, O God, and plead my cause, . 43
In Judah's land God is well known, . . 76
In gods' assembly God doth stand, . . 82
I mercy will and judgment sing, . . 101
I love the Lord, because my voice . . 116
In my distress to God I cry'd, . . 120
I to the hills will lift mine eyes, . . 121
I joy'd, when to the house of God, . . 122
I with my voice cry'd to the Lord, . . 142
I'll thee extol, my God, O King, . . 145

K

Keep not, O God, we thee entreat, . . 83

L

Lord, in thy wrath, rebuke me not, . 6
Lord, thee I'll praise with all my heart, . 9
Lord, keep me; for I trust in thee. . . 16
Lord, hear the right, attend my cry, . 17
Lord, I will thee extol, for thou . . 30
Like as the hart for water-brooks, . . 42
Lord, hear my pray'r, hide not thyself . 55
Lord, thee my God, I'll early seek: . . 63
Lord, bless and pity us, . . . . 67
Lord, unto us be merciful, . . . . 67
Let God arise, and scattered . . . 68
Lord, haste me to deliver, . . . . 70
Lord God, my Saviour, day and night . 88
Lord, thou hast been our dwelling-place . 90
Lord, hear my pray'r, and let my cry . 102
Lord, from the depths to thee I cry'd. . 130
Lord, from the ill and froward man . . 140
Lord, hear my pray'r, attend my suits; . 143

M

My God, my God, why hast thou me . 22
My heart brings forth a goodly thing; . 45
My heart inditing is . . . . . 45
My God, deliver me from those . . 59
My soul with expectation . . . . 62
Make haste, O God, me to preserve; . 70
My heart is fix'd, Lord; I will sing, . 108
My heart not haughty is, O Lord, . . 131

N

Not unto us, Lord, not to us, . . . 115
Now Israel may say, . . . . . 124

O

O Lord, how are my foes increas'd? . 3
O Lord, my God, in thee do I . . . 7
O blessed is the man to whom . . . 32
O God, we with our ears have heard, . 44
O Lord, thou hast rejected us, . . . 60
O God, give ear unto my cry, . . . 61
O Lord, my hope and confidence . . 71
O Lord, thy judgments give the king, . 72
O Lord, why hast thou cast us off? . . 74
O God, the heathen enter'd have . . 79
O Lord, thou hast been favourable . . 85
O Lord, do thou bow down thine ear, . 86
O Lord God, unto whom alone . . . 94
O come, let us sing to the Lord, . . 95
O sing a new song to the Lord: . . 96
O sing a new song to the Lord, . . 98
O all ye lands, unto the Lord . . . 100
O Lord, unto my pray'r give ear, . . 102
O thou my soul, bless God the Lord, . 103
O thou the God of all my praise, . . 109
O give ye praise unto the Lord, . . 117
O praise the Lord, for he is good: . . 118
O thou that dwellest in the heav'ns, . 123
Oft did they vex me from my youth, . 129
O Lord, thou hast me search'd and known. 139
O Lord, I unto thee do cry, . . . . 141
Oh, hear my prayer, Lord, . . . . 143
O blessed ever be the Lord, . . . . 144
O Lord, thou art my God and King; . 145

P

Plead, Lord, with those that plead, and fight 35
Praise waits for thee in Sion, Lord: . 63
Praise God, for he is good: for still . 107
Praise ye the Lord: with my whole heart 111
Praise ye the Lord. The man is bless'd . 112
Praise God: ye servants of the Lord, . 113
Praise ye the Lord, the Lord's name praise, 135
Praise God, for he is kind: . . . . 136
Praise God: the Lord praise, O my soul. . 146
Praise ye the Lord; for it is good . . 147
Praise God. From heavens praise the Lord, 148
Praise ye the Lord: unto him sing . . 149
Praise ye the Lord. God's praise within 150

S

Save me, O God, by thy great name, . 54
Shew mercy, Lord, to me, for man . . 56
Save me, O God, because the floods . . 69
Sing loud to God our strength; with joy 81

That man hath perfect blessedness, . 1
That there is not a God, the fool . . 14
Thee will I love, O Lord, my strength, . 18
The heav'ns God's glory do declare, . 19
The king in thy great strength, O Lord, . 21
The Lord's my shepherd, I'll not want. . 23
The earth belongs unto the Lord, . . 24
To thee I lift my soul: . . . . 25
To thee I lift my soul, O Lord: . . 25
The Lord's my light and saving health, . 27
To thee I'll cry, O Lord, my rock; . . 28
The wicked man's transgression . . 36
The mighty God, the Lord, . . . 50
The mighty God, the Lord, hath spoke, . 50
That there is not a God, the fool . . 53
To thee, O God, do we give thanks, . 75
To render thanks unto the Lord, . . 92
The Lord doth reign, and cloth'd is he . 93
Th' eternal Lord doth reign as king; . 99
The Lord did say unto my Lord, . . 110
They in the Lord that firmly trust . . 125
Thee will I praise with all my heart, . 138

U, W

Unto the Lord, I with my voice, . . 77
Upon the hills of holiness . . . . 87
Why rage the heathen? and vain things . 2
Wherefore is it that thou, O Lord, . . 10
Within thy tabernacle, Lord, . . . 15
Why dost thou boast, O mighty man, . 52
When I to thee my prayer make, . . 64
When Isr'el out of Egypt went, . . 114
When Sion's bondage God turn'd back, . 126

Y

Ye righteous, in the Lord rejoice; . . 33
Yet God is good to Israel, . . . . 73
